1776. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a report relating to factors which may tend to affect adversely our competitive enterprise system during a period of defense mobilization, pursuant to section 708 (e) of Public Law No. 774, Eighty-first Congress, approved September 8, 1950; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1777. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a letter relative to the case of Maria Tome Da Silva Lawver, file No. A-6008146 CR 25896, requesting that it be withdrawn from those before the Congress and returned to the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1778. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a letter relative to the case of Henryk Oselka, file No. A-6802109 CR 26013, requesting that it be withdrawn from those before the Congress and returned to the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1779. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Defense, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize certain construction at military and naval installations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar as follows:

Mr. HOBBS: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 9828. A bill to authorize relief of authorized certifying officers of terminated war agencies in liquidation by the Department of Labor; without amendment (Rept. No. 3183). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. D'EWART:

H. R. 9890. A bill authorizing the restoration to tribal ownership of certain lands upon the Crow Indian Reservation, Mont., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. MILLER of California:

H. R. 9891. A bill to eliminate the retroactive application of the income tax to employees of the United States working in the possessions or in the Canal Zone; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McMILLAN of South Carolina:

H. R. 9892. A bill to exempt from the District of Columbia Sales Tax Act sales of food for human consumption in hotels, restaurants, cafes, bars, and other establishments where the sales price of the food furnished an individual patron is more than $1.25; to the Committe on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. VINSON:

H. R. 9893. A bill to authorize certain construction at military and naval installations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. BUCHANAN:

H. Res. 880. Resolution providing for the payment of 6 months' gratuity and $350 funeral expenses to William Earle Griffin, son of Helen M. Griffin, late an employee of the House; to the Committee on House Administration.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BATTLE:

H. R. 9894. A bill for the relief of Thomas I. Ward; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. D'EWART:

H. R. 9895. A bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to Alice E. Williams Sisk; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. KENNEDY:

H. R. 9896. A bill for the relief of Elias Miltiades Iordanopoulos; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LYNCH:

H. R. 9897. A bill for the relief of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RODINO:

H. R. 9898. A bill for the relief of Sumiko Yamamoto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1950

(Legislative day of Monday, November 27, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, in times of stillness as we pause in the midst of rushing cares, we hear like bells at evening pealing the call of the better angels of our nature: We come seeking wide horizons around our noisy lives. Midst all the busy shuttles of legislation, as here is woven the fabric of law and order, shielding the life of our democracy and of free peoples everywhere, may we not be so enmeshed in the immediate mechanics of our solemn task as to lose sight of the total pattern shown in the mount of vision. As we have undertaken on this continent a government of, by and for the people, may we not lack the spiritual quality and a constant sense of the divine sovereignty, without which no such government can long endure.

So make us faithful ministers of this stricken generation. We ask it in the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Monday, December 11, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting a nomination was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Snader, its assistant reading clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 9184) to provide for the separation of subsidy from airmail pay, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) to continue for a temporary period certain provisions of the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended, and it was signed by the Vice President.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate today.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS DURING SENATE SESSION

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Finance was authorized to sit during the sessions of the Senate during the remainder of this week for the purpose of considering the proposed excess-profits-tax legislation.

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Armed Services was granted permission to hold a session this afternoon.

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare was granted permission to meet during the session of the Senate today.

NATIONAL HISTORICAL PUBLICATION COMMITTEE

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under section 503 of Public Law 754, Eighty-first Congress, the President of the Senate is required to appoint a Member of the Senate to the National Historical Publication Committee. In pursuance of that duty the Chair appointed the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY].

CREDENTIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the credentials of WARREN G. MAGNUSON, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Washington, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Olympia.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, WARREN G. MAGNUSON was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Washington a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State of Washington to be affixed at Olympia this 7th day of December A. D. 1950.

ARTHUR B. LANGLIE,
Governor of Washington.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] EARL COE,
Secretary of State.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the credentials of CHARLES W. TOBEY, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of New Hampshire, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

THE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950 CHARLES W. TOBEY was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of New Hampshire a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness His Excellency, our Governor, Sherman Adams, and our seal hereto affixed at Concord this 1st day of December in the year of our Lord 1950.

SHERMAN ADAMS,
Governor.

By the Governor, with advice of the council.
[SEAL] ENOCH D. FULLER,
Secretary of State.

Mr. O'CONOR presented the credentials of JOHN MARSHALL BUTLER, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Maryland, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF MARYLAND,
Annapolis, Md.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, JOHN MARSHALL BUTLER was duly chosen by the qualified voters of the State of Maryland, a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for a term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness His Excellency, our Governor, William Preston Lane, Jr., and our seal hereto affixed at Annapolis, this 5th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1950.

W. PRESTON LANE, Jr.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] VIVIAN V. SIMPSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. SMITH of North Carolina presented the credentials of CLYDE R. HOEY, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of North Carolina, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
CITY OF RALEIGH,
EXECUTIVE OFFICES,

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, CLYDE R. HOEY was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of North Carolina a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness: His Excellency our Governor, W. Kerr Scott, and our seal hereto affixed at Raleigh this 28th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1950.

W. KERR SCOTT,
Governor of North Carolina.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] THAD EURE,
Secretary of State.

Mr. MAYBANK presented the credentials of OLIN D. JOHNSTON, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of South Carolina, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Columbia, December 7, 1950.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, OLIN D. JOHNSTON was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of South Carolina a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness His Excellency, our Governor, J. Strom Thurmond, and our seal hereto affixed at Columbia, S. C., this 7th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1950.

J. STROM THURMOND,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] O. FRANK THORNTON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. LANGER presented the credentials of MILTON R. YOUNG, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of North Dakota, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950 MILTON R. YOUNG was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of North Dakota a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness His Excellency, our Governor, Fred G. Aandahl, and our seal hereto affixed at Bismarck, N. Dak., this 28th day of November A. D. 1950.

FRED G. AANDAHL,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

Mr. CORDON presented the credentials of WAYNE MORSE, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Oregon, a Senator from that State for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION

To All to Whom These Presents Shall Come, Greeting:

Know ye, That it appearing from the official canvass of the votes cast at the regular general election held within and for the State of Oregon, on Tuesday, the 7th day of November 1950 A. D., WAYNE MORSE, of Lane County, State of Oregon, received the highest number of votes cast for the office of United States Senator in Congress at said election;

Now, therefore, I, Douglas McKay, Governor of the State of Oregon, by virtue and in pursuance of the authority vested in me under the laws of the State of Oregon, do hereby grant this certificate of election and declare said WAYNE MORSE, of Lane County, State of Oregon, to be duly elected to the office of United States Senator in Congress for the State of Oregon, for a term of 6 years beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State of Oregon to be hereto affixed. Done at the capitol at Salem, Oreg., this 4th day of December A. D. 1950.

DOUGLAS MCKAY,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] EARL T. NEWBRY,
Secretary of State.

Mr. JENNER presented the credentials of HOMER E. CAPEHART, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Indiana, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF INDIANA, INDIANAPOLIS.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, HOMER E. CAPEHART was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Indiana a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness His Excellency, our Governor, Henry F. Schricker, and our seal hereto affixed at Indianapolis, Ind., this 22d day of November A. D. 1950.

HENRY F. SCHRICKER,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] CHARLES F. FLEMING,
Secretary of State.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. O'CONOR. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hill	Morse
Brewster	Hoey	Mundt
Bricker	Holland	Murray
Bridges	Hunt	Neely
Butler	Ives	Nixon
Byrd	Jenner	O'Conor
Cain	Johnson, Colo.	O'Mahoney
Capehart	Johnson, Tex.	Pepper
Carlson	Kefauver	Robertson
Chapman	Kem	Russell
Chavez	Kerr	Saltonstall
Clements	Kilgore	Schoeppel
Connally	Knowland	Smith, Maine
Cordon	Langer	Smith, N. J.
Donnell	Leahy	Smith, N. C.
Douglas	Lehman	Stennis
Dworshak	Long	Taft
Eastland	Lucas	Taylor
Ecton	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Ellender	McCarthy	Thomas, Utah
Flanders	McClellan	Thye
Frear	McFarland	Tobey
Fulbright	McKellar	Tydings
George	McMahon	Watkins
Gillette	Magnuson	Wherry
Gurney	Malone	Wiley
Hayden	Martin	Young
Hendrickson	Maybank
Hickenlooper	Millikin

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON] is necessarily absent.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is present.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this time Senators may introduce bills, submit resolutions, make insertions in the RECORD, and transact other routine business, without debate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The Vice President laid before the Senate the following letters, which were referred as indicated:

SUSPENSION OF DEPORTATION OF CERTAIN ALIENS

A letter from the Acting Attorney General, transmitting, pursuant to law, copies of orders of the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service suspending deportation of certain aliens, together with a complete statement of the facts and pertinent provisions of law as to each alien, and the reasons for ordering such suspension (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

GRANTING OF STATUS OF PERMANENT RESIDENCE TO CERTAIN ALIENS

A letter from the Acting Attorney General, transmitting, pursuant to law, copies of the orders of the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service granting the application for permanent residence filed by certain aliens, together with a complete statement of the facts and pertinent provisions of law as to each applicant, and the reasons for granting the applications (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938, RELATING TO MARKETING QUOTA FOR PEANUTS

A letter from the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORT ON COOPERATION IN CONTROL AND ERADICATION OF FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE, UNITED STATES-MEXICO

A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on cooperation of the United States with Mexico in the control and eradication of foot-and-mouth disease, for the month of October 1950 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORT ON DIVERGENCE BETWEEN PLANT AND COMPANY CONCENTRATION, 1947

A letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting a report of the Commission entitled "The Divergence Between Plant and Company Concentration, 1947" (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Petitions, etc., were laid before the Senate and referred as indicated.

By the VICE PRESIDENT:

A resolution adopted by the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, at Chicago, Ill., favoring the enactment of legislation which would impose Federal income taxes on the profits of all cooperatives engaged in any business enterprise competitive to free enterprise; to the Committee on Finance.

A resolution adopted by the Maryland Action Guild, Baltimore, Md., urging the appointment of a congressional committee to investigate Communist influence in the Federal Government, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

A resolution adopted by the Manresa Club of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Baltimore, Md., commending the investigation on export controls by a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

A letter in the nature of a petition from the National Council of Jewish Women, Inc., New York, N. Y., signed by Mrs. Irving M. Engel, praying for the enactment of legislation to repeal the Internal Security Act of 1950; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The petition of Vergil D. McMillan, of Indianapolis, Ind., relating to civil rights, etc.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Telegrams in the nature of memorials from Leonard Simutis, secretary, Lithuanian Roman Catholic Federation, Chicago, Ill.; L. L. Bennett, master, fourth degree Knights of Columbus, of northern Michigan; Peter M. Robare, grand knight of Knights of Columbus, of northern Michigan, and Father David Spelgate, managing editor of the northern Michigan edition of Your Sunday Visitor, all of Marquette, Mich., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing financial aid to Yugoslavia; ordered to lie on the table.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY—RESOLUTION OF FARMERS UNION CENTRAL EXCHANGE, INC., ST. PAUL, MINN.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, I have received a letter from E. A. Syftestad, general manager of the Farmers Union Central Exchange, St. Paul, Minn. In his letter to me he encloses a copy of a resolution which had been adopted by the stockholders of the Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc. I mention this for the reason that it is the third consecutive resolution on the same question, namely, the St. Lawrence seaway, that the Farmers Union Central Exchange has adopted. In yesterday's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD I read the remarks of the very able and distinguished Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] in reference to the St. Lawrence seaway. For that reason, I think the resolution is most pertinent, and, therefore, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Syftestad's letter and the resolution be appropriately referred and printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter and resolution were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FARMERS UNION CENTRAL EXCHANGE, INC.,
St. Paul, Minn., December 4, 1950.

Re Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway.

Hon. EDWARD THYE,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR THYE: We recognize that the Congress of the United States has many matters of great importance to consider now and immediately after January 1. It is very likely, however, that the very important subject of the development of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway will again come up for consideration very soon.

Undoubtedly you are interested in any action which the stockholders of the Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc., may have taken on this matter; therefore, we enclose herewith a certified copy of resolutions adopted by the stockholders at their annual meetings on March 15, 1948, March 10, 1949, and March 2, 1950.

As to identification of the Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc., this is to inform you that the central exchange is a wholesale farm-supply cooperative with headquarters in St. Paul, Minn., and operates in the States of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and Montana, serving farmers with many of their major farm supplies through locally owned cooperative associations. There are about 500 of these associations in the respective States serving approximately 175,000 individual farm families.

Yours very truly,

FARMERS UNION CENTRAL EXCHANGE, INC.,
E. A. SYFTESTAD, General Manager.

CERTIFICATE OF RESOLUTIONS PASSED AT ANNUAL MEETINGS OF STOCKHOLDERS OF FARMERS UNION CEIITRAL EXCHANGE, INC., MARCH 15, 1948, MARCH 10, 1949, AND MARCH 2, 1950

MARCH 15, 1948, SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS, GREAT LAKES-ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

"Whereas the Congress of the United States has recommitted legislation to create the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway; and

"Whereas this legislation is of great importance to the farmers in general and of the Northwest in particular: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That we urge our Representatives and Senators in Congress from these Northwest States to demand that the Congress reconsider this action and that every effort be made to speedily enact this act into law."

MARCH 10, 1949, EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS, GREAT LAKES-ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

"Whereas the people of this Nation are entitled to the cheapest and most economical transportation possible whether under private or public ownership or operation; and

"Whereas it is of great importance to the people in g neral and the Northwest in particular to establish the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That we ask our National Congress to enact and rapidly effectuate the completion of this very worthwhile project."

MARCH 2, 1950, NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS, GREAT LAKES-ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

"We feel that the people in the Northwest will be immensely benefited by the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway and urge efforts by our President and Congress to effect its completion."

I, Ruby M. Heraty, assistant secretary of the Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc., do hereby certify that the foregoing are true and complete copies of resolutions adopted at annual meetings of stockholders of Farmers Union Central Exchange, Inc., March 15, 1948; March 10, 1949; and March 2, 1950.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said corporation this 16th day of November 1950.

RUBY M. HERATY,
Assistant Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference, and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, an official copy of resolutions adopted by the thirty-first annual convention of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, at Lincoln, Nebr., on November 22, 1950.

I would like to point out that these resolutions, approved by the house of voting delegates of the Nebraska Farm Bureau, represents the official policy of this State federation on matters of public policy as it affects agriculture. This does not mean that all of these resolutions will coincide with resolutions of the American Farm Bureau Federation, since the resolutions adopted by the national organization represents the majority opinion of all the States affiliated. At any point where the Nebraska resolutions might be in conflict with a statement or resolution of the American Farm Bureau Federation on national policy, the American Farm Bureau resolutions take precedence over these State resolutions.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT THIRTY-FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION, NEBRASKA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION, NOVEMBER 22, 1950

AGRICULTURE

I

We ask that more emphasis be placed on the bacteria count for grade A milk instead of barn and milk-house requirements.

II

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation highly resents the abuse of the franking privilege and the use of public tax moneys by any governmental department or agency and particularly the United States Department of Agriculture to promulgate and propagandize any program which has its conception entirely within its framework, but which is not law.

We feel that the primary purpose of a department of Government is to administer agricultural legislation enacted by Congress and is completely outside its jurisdiction when it seeks to influence public opinion or establish policies.

III

Recognizing the tremendous damage being done through the spread of brucellosis to the health of the citizens of Nebraska and the great economic loss to the livestock industry, we feel that an aggressive campaign should be instituted to eradicate this and other diseases from the livestock herds of the State.

We believe that the movement of diseased cattle into the State or within the State should be prohibited, except for slaughter.

We urge the members of the Farm Bureau to help in the passage of legislation to eradicate brucellosis.

IV

We favor flood control by organized drainage areas beginning with a complete soil and water conservation program carried out on the farms of the area. We feel that through this method there will be less need for large flood control structures and part of the funds originally intended for such use can be used to assist farmers in the area in carrying out soil and water conservation on their farms. We recommend that large dams when shown to be necessary be used for irrigation and generation of electric power when feasible.

Nebraska Farm Bureau is cognizant of the overlapping functions and duplication of effort within the Department of Agriculture. We pledge our efforts to secure a clear cut definition of the responsibilities of the various agencies within the Department, recognizing that such definition, under present law, can come only from the Secretary of Agriculture.

We feel that the land-grant colleges should be charged with the responsibility of research, disseminating of factual information, and the training of personnel; that the Soil Conservation Service under the general supervision and with the approval of the local and State association of soil conservation districts should be charged with the responsibility of furnishing all technical services, approval of practices for payment and rates of payment, and the checking of compliance; that the Production and Marketing Administration should be the actual paying agency under any federally subsidized soil-conservation program.

VI

We recommend that PMA make the agricultural program more uniform by using crop acres to set allotments when allotments are necessary rather than crop history of the farm, taking into consideration sound cropping and past conservation practices.

VII

We recommend that legislation be enacted enabling a tax not to exceed one-half cent a bushel on wheat and one-quarter of a cent a bushel on corn at the producers' market; the moneys raised to be used to develop new markets and uses for these commodities. We recommend that such fund be administered by a committee appointed by the governor of the State from a list furnished by the general farm organizations and the dean of the college of agriculture; a majority of whom must be producers of the commodities. We further recommend that this program be coordinated with States having similar programs.

VIII

We urge the continuation of the practice and the faithful carrying out of the plan of electing county PMA officials at caucus meetings and by secret ballot.

IX

We resolve that the State committee of PMA be elected by delegates from every county in the State. Said delegates to be elected at county caucus meeting by secret ballot. The above State committee to be elected on a staggered yearly basis for a 3-year term.

X

We request that the entire State shall be a brand area, that all branded cattle sold in the State be inspected by an authorized inspector, a record be kept of such sales and a bill of sale of each consecutive brand follow such cattle for use when resold. Each State will carry its separate identification.

XI

That Congress enact legislation to require that after 2 years' time no brand be placed on cattle except that when such brand has been registered in the name of the owner of the brand through a State agency and a permit granted by that agency for the use of that brand, no brands be duplicated within any State, that all marketing agencies be required to record the brand (or brands) of all cattle reaching the market when such brand, or brands, are not registered in the name of the seller, and that requirements be established for publishing and posting in public places of all registered brands. Each State will carry its separate brand identification.

XII

We request a more intense research made by State veterinarians in regards to the new disease referred to as virulant virus affecting swine and cattle in the past year causing intense or total loss.

XIII

We feel that full parity prices to producers for agricultural products are fair and just both to the producer and to the consumer and we will work toward achieving the goal of receiving such prices in the free market place with a minimum of Government intervention. We further believe that support prices should be flexible to allow supply and demand to at least partially determine price.

Neither agriculture nor industry nor labor should look to the Government for guaranteed profitable incomes, a condition which would ultimately result in a deterioration of individual initiative and a lower standard of living for all.

We favor support prices on farm products on a variable scale from 75 to 90 percent of parity as being a reasonable insurance against a disastrous price decline in agriculture which would seriously affect the economy of the entire Nation.

We look upon any program which fosters the philosophy of high prices to farmers and cheap food to the consumer or one whereby agricultural producers must look to Congressional appropriations for a substantial part of his farm income as being unsound in principle and a long step down the road to socialism.

XIV

Nebraska Farm Bureau urges any improvement in the quality of dairy and poultry products marketed by the producer. We believe any cream law or regulation should be based on a premium paid for a premium product. We feel that creameries, processors, and carriers are just as responsible for poor quality cream as the producer, therefore we urge our cream stations and creameries to comply with our State cream regulations.

XV

We recommend that legislation revising the Nebraska seed law be enacted to reduce the amount of tolerance of noxious weed seeds allowed in lots of field seeds offered for sale.

SCHOOLS

XVI

We recommend an investigation into the leasing of school lands with special emphasis on the fact that school lands should not be subleased.

XVII

Realizing that the Nebraska school reorganization law (L. B. 27) has been in effect such a short time we recommend that it be given a fair trial before any major changes are made.

XVIII

We wish to commend the State Department of Education for the encouragement of teaching conservation in our schools.

XIX

We feel that normal training should be encouraged in our high schools.

XX

We feel that where the salaries of county superintendents of schools are inadequate that county boards should investigate the possibility of increasing the salary of the county superintendent of schools in order to attract better qualified personnel.

XXI

We are opposed to any additional State aid to schools except such as may be necessary to relieve the present inequalities of our present tax system.

XXII

We do not favor the principle of Federal aid to schools. We feel that schools are primarily the responsibility of local and State Governments. In the event that said legislation should be enacted, we strongly believe that such disbursements should be made on a grant-in-aid basis through State and county governments to insure a maximum of local control, also such aid should be made available only where county and State Governments are not able to provide pupils with an opportunity for education equal to that in other States.

XXIII

Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation favors legislation in favor of a uniform course of study throughout all schools in the State of Nebraska for the elementary grades one through eight.

ROADS

XXIV

Realizing that Nebraska's roads are one of her great problems, we desire an efficiency program within the highway department. This includes the questions of business management methods, a State highway commission, division of responsibilities (1. policy making, 2. administration, and 3. technical fields), separation of nonhighway activity from the department, and a more complete analysis of costs and disposition of funds. We desire a highway plan that includes State roads, city and village streets, and county roads. Such a plan is necessary before funds are made available, in order to arrive at the proper ratio of finances and development in the priorities of future expansion of Nebraska's road system.

(a) We recommend the division of the Department of Roads and Irrigation into three parts: (1) Department of Roads, (2) Department of Irrigation, (3) Safety Patrol and Motor Vehicle License.

(b) We recommend that the State highway department be reorganized on a business-like basis, preferably under a five-man commission selected by districts. The Commission should be appointed for staggered terms by the Governor, approved by and responsible to the legislature. Such commission shall employ a business manager for the administration of the policy of such commission. We further urge that the legislature or its legislative council cause a private audit to be made of the highway department by the time the business manager takes office. Such audit shall show breakdown of costs by items and purposes and a system of record keeping installed such that the breakdown of costs can be easily secured and summarized and made available periodically.

(c) We request that the Governor appoint a peoples road committee to formulate a long-time road program cognizant of the needs of both rural and urban people whose livelihood is vitally dependent on adequate roads.

Each organized farm group shall be represented on the committee with the representative picked from a list of names submitted by the organization itself. Rural people shall be represented on the committee in approximate proportion to their percentage of the total population.

With approximately 90 percent of the roads in the State classed as rural roads any program developed should give adequate attention to the problem of getting the farmer out of the mud as well as to the development of village and city streets and State highways.

We feel the committee in the study of types of roads needed and in the specifications recommended for each type, should consider the Nebraska taxpayer's ability to pay.

XXV

The resolutions committee requests that the President of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation and the State Farm Bureau Board call a special meeting of the voting delegates whenever advisable during the session of the legislature for the purpose of studying the progress made by the legislature in reorganizing the highway department and the road program.

XXVI

We request legislation making it necessary for the legislature to approve any money spent by the highway department for off-highway construction.

XXVII

We urge that the surfacing of mail routes provided by the mail route surfacing law be executed according to the written law.

XXVIII

We urge that a uniform detailed audit be made of all county commissioner and supervisor financial records showing costs by items and purposes. Continuation of such a procedure with required compilation, publication, and dissemination to all other counties of the information received would provide valuable information to compare costs of equipment, maintenance, and materials for county boards in bringing down costs of county government.

XXIX

We recommend that section 39-703, Revised Statutes of Nebraska be strengthened to protect our highway and roads from water being diverted into the road ditch due to leveling and terracing land in any place except the natural flow of water. Water now being diverted should be put back into the natural channel that enters the highway. Adequate penalty for failure to comply with the law should be provided.

XXX

We favor uniform per-axle truckloads over the State and Nation and that severe penalties be invoked for violations. We further urge that portable and local private scales be used for checking such loads.

XXXI

We urge the standardization of traffic regulations, traffic signals, and road markers over the United States.

XXXII

We endorse the principle of the installation of drop inlets through roads where needed as a sound method of conserving soil and water as well as effecting large savings in bridge and road construction and maintenance cost. We further urge our State and local road officials and engineers in consultation with SCS technicians to thoroughly study the terrain and determine where such drop inlets may be feasibly used and install them in the light of such determination.

XXXIII

We believe that all purchases and contracts for supplies and contractual services and all sales of such personal property which has become obsolete and unusable by county governments in amounts exceeding $500 should be subject to competitive bidding in all counties.

TAXES

XXXIV

We do not believe the practice of exempting charitable institutions from taxation on property owned and used for monetary gain is sound policy and are concerned about the effect such exemption has on local districts and competing business. We urge a serious study be given to the problem and favor the taxation of any such property used for monetary gain.

XXXV

Gasoline used for agricultural purposes is a product used in agricultural production.

We do not believe in production taxation on agriculture when other industry of this State has none. Therefore we favor the continuation of the principle of the present law providing for gas tax refunds for agricultural purposes.

XXXVI

We insist there be no licensing of farm tractors.

XXXVII

We feel that Federal matching of funds is wasteful and request that the Nebraska and American Farm Bureau take action toward reducing Federal matching.

XXXVIII

We favor the continuation of the practice of earmarking State funds for specified purposes.

XXXIX

We recommend that the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation go on record in favor of a sales and/or income tax. This tax to be a partial replacement tax for personal property tax and real-estate tax.

MISCELLANEOUS

XL

Philosopies of communism and other isms are far closer to the American people than they sometimes realize. Those individuals that support these philosophies prey upon and infiltrate our governmental, educational, spiritual, and organizational institutions of this Nation under the guise of exercising freedom of speech and movement. Such individuals exercising these constitutional privileges ignore another constitutional provision providing for the general welfare of the country.

In view of this cunning but deliberate attempt to sell democracy and the American system short, we urge all citizens, all organizations, all institutions, and all branches of Government to appraise themselves of this condition; do all that they can to determine who these individuals are; and upon this determination, we further urge each according to his or its own ability to combat the evils of this philosophy by exposing their identity and bringing to the attention of everyone the advantages of the American way of life.

XLI

We favor retention of and extension of the principle of a free medical profession and will continue to actively oppose any move toward socialized medicine.

As a means to prevent the appearance of socialized medicine, we recommend that means be provided to educate more men and women into the medical profession. We feel this will provide more competition for practice which will have a tendency to provide more doctors for rural areas and reduce the burden of overcharging for services. We feel that this in turn will relieve the pressure for socialized medicine caused by the high cost of medical service.

XLII

We again recommend that each county select a person who is interested in legislation and send him or her to Lincoln sometime during the coming legislative session to become acquainted with legislative procedure and aid the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation in carrying out its legislative program.

XLIII

We feel that there is a great deal to be done to improve the producer-consumer relationship. At this time the consumer is not getting a true picture of the portion of his market dollar which goes to the farmer nor the relationship between farm prices and consumer costs. We further feel that too much publicity is given to the farmer's gross income and not enough to his net income.

XLIV

We believe that the Federal Land Bank should be prohibited from selling any land which has oil or mineral rights attached thereto when acquired by said Federal Land Bank without also passing such oil or mineral rights to the purchaser.

XLV

We favor a reasonable increase of the salary of the State senators, because of increased cost of living and increased responsibilities.

XLVI

Since there is no discrimination in favor of agriculture in drafting for the armed services, we feel that agriculture, industry, and labor should all produce to the limit of their ability.

With our young farmers in the service, it will be necessary to work long hours and no possibility of special overtime compensation. We recommend that labor return to a 48-hour week during the emergency.

XLVII

We believe that steps should be taken toward balancing the budget by less duplication of governmental bureaus, less waste of material and money.

We also recommend consolidation of all agencies and departments, resulting in more efficient management.

XLVIII

The last two sessions of the legislature has suspended the school mill levy limit on personal and real property as an emergency measure. We feel that it is no longer an emergency, and we ask that the mill levy limit be restored and we face the school situation as a permanent condition. At the same time we request the excessive property tax levy be replaced by some other form of taxation.

XLIX

Under present world conditions there is an indication we may have compulsory military training. If this condition comes about, we urge that the training be coordinated with further education by being given in our colleges under supervision of the Armed Forces.

L

Dumping of rubbish, beer cans and bottles on our highways has been causing unsightly highways and a great deal of damage. We feel this cannot be controlled by law, but is rather a matter of pride and education. Consequently we recommend that the Associated Women make this highway beautification one of their 1951 projects.

LI

We do not approve of the present social security for farm laborers in its present form for the reason that it can be avoided easily and that the laborer can lose his equity so easily. We also do not favor social security for farm operators.

LII

We feel that the Postal Department should pay its own way, but we do not favor any increase in rates until the abuses of the franking privilege be rectified. If increase in rates are made, we suggest the first raise would be in third class bulk mail to decrease the mail that is not read. We oppose any decrease in the size of parcel post packages, for it would work a hardship on rural people.

LIII

We recommend a Missouri Valley Commission composed of citizens elected from the State affected by the project be set up for development including soil conservation, power, irrigation, and flood control of the Missouri Basin and watershed.

LIV

Realizing that our newspapers and radio stations give us publicity only in accordance to the interest we manifest, we request our Farm Bureau members to be alert regarding articles concerning farm problems and publicity and to write in their approval or disapproval to editors of their State and county papers and radio stations.

LV

The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation wishes to express its appreciation to the press and radio of Nebraska for its increase in coverage of our activities; for the fine cooperation of many of the farm editors and reporters of both newspapers and radio.

LVI

We feel that bringing DP's into the United States is a worthy cause. However, we ask that there be better screening of the DP's, their employers and sponsors. We also ask that there be more and better supervision from their sponsors after they have been located in the United States, both as to position and suitability of the individual.

LVII

We the Associated Women's Committee of the Nebraska Farm Bureau wish to express our deep and sincere thanks to the following persons who so greatly contributed to the success of our convention: To Mrs. Herman Kayser for the floral arrangements; and furthermore to the Reverend McCamley for the music; and to Mrs. Gilbert Erickson, who acted as pianist. There are the wishes of the Associated Women's Committee.

LVIII

We reaffirm the policies expressed in resolutions adopted in previous annual meetings that are now in effect except insofar as they have been modified or supplemented by the resolutions adopted at this annual meeting.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Finance:

H. R. 9840. A bill to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons; with an amendment (Rept. No. 2620).

By Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

S. 4229. A bill to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 25, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended; with amendments (Rept. No. 2621).

By Mr. O'CONOR, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. 4240. A bill to amend the act incorporating the American Legion so as to redefine eligibility for membership therein; without amendment (Rept. No. 2623); and

S. 4241. A bill to amend the act incorporating the American Legion so as to redefine (a) the powers of said corporation, (b) the right to the use of the name "The American Legion" and "American Legion"; without amendment (Rept. No. 2624).

INVESTIGATION OF FIELD OF LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS—REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, I report favorably, without amendment, the resolution (S. Res. 367) extending the authority for an investigation of the field of labor-management relations, and I submit a report (No. 2622) thereon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received, and, under the rule, the resolution will be referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

The resolution (S. Res. 367) was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, December 12, 1950, he presented to the President of the United States the enrolled joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) to continue for a temporary period certain provisions of the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. 4246. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Universal Civilian Defense Training Corps for the purpose of training high-school students in civilian defense, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

S. 4247. A bill to authorize the sale of certain vessels under the jurisdiction and control of the Maritime Administration to ship-owning cooperatives, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McCARRAN:

S. 4248. A bill for the relief of Joseph Fleury Paluy;

S. 4249. A bill for the relief of Sister Carmen Teva Ramos; and

S. 4250. A bill for the relief of Klemens Kalman Schlosser; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

COMPENSATION TO CERTAIN PAGES

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 373), which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to the respective pages borne on the payroll of the Senate on the 7th day of October 1950, a sum equal to the compensation they would have respectively received by law if they had been retained on such payroll from the 8th day of October 1950, to the 23d day of November 1950: Provided, That the above order shall apply only to those pages who were reinstated on the payroll during the month of November 1950.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 9184) to provide for the separation of subsidy from air-mail pay, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

MASONIC ADDRESS BY SENATOR MAYBANK

[Mr. MAYBANK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by him before Landmark Lodge, No. 76, Ancient Free Masons, at the one hundredth anniversary meeting of the lodge, in Charleston, S. C., December 11, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

REARMAMENT AND UNITED STATES POLICY IN EUROPE—ADDRESS BY GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY, RETIRED

[Mr. MAYBANK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address regarding rearmament and United States foreign policy, delivered by Gen. L. D. Clay, United States Army, retired, at the Southern Governors' Conference, Charleston, S. C., November 27, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY DR. RUTH M. STEESE AT DEDICATION OF SOLDIERS' MONUMENT, MIFFLINBURG, PA.

[Mr. MARTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Dr. Ruth M. Steese, national chairman of the committee on historic shrines, of the Dames of the Loyal Legion of the United States, at the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument at Mifflinburg, Pa., on November 11, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

PEIPING'S EXPANSIONISM — EDITORIAL FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES

[Mr. NEELY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Peiping's Expansionism," published in the New York Times of December 8, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

MUST THINK OF OURSELVES—EDITORIAL FROM THE TOPEKA DAILY CAPITAL

[Mr. SCHOEPPEL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Must Think of Ourselves," published in the Topeka Daily Capital for December 6, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

CHOOSE THE FORTRESS AMERICA—EDITORIAL FROM THE TOPEKA STATE JOURNAL

[Mr. SCHOEPPEL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Choose the Fortress America," published in the Topeka State Journal for December 4, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE WAR IN KOREA—LETTER FROM AN IDAHO PARENT

[Mr. DWORSHAK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "A Parent Speaks Out," published in the Idaho Daily Statesman, of Boise, Idaho, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE CHINESE PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT—LETTER FROM CHARLES EDISON

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, this morning I received a letter which I think is of considerable importance. It comes from the Honorable Charles Edison, former Governor of the State of New Jersey, and also Assistant Secretary of the Navy under President Roosevelt. In connection with my brief remarks at this point, I shall ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed in the body of the RECORD.

Mr. President, the purpose of the letter from Mr. Edison to me is simply this: He reports that he is troubled by a statement by Mr. Attlee with regard to recognition of the present Communist government of China, and he quotes Mr. Attlee's statement, as it was reported in the press. Then he gives his own comments on it. I believe that Mr. Edison's views are of great value to all of us. He has made a very careful study of this question. Therefore, I now ask unanimous consent that his letter be printed in full in the body of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WEST ORANGE, N. J.,
December 7, 1950.

Hon. H. ALEXANDER SMITH,
Committee on Foreign Relations,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR ALEX: The World-Telegram on December 6, reported Mr. Attlee as saying: "We are asking how we can recognize and have diplomatic relations with the government of China when its policies are in contradiction with the United Nations objective in Korea and when its nationals are engaged in conflict with our forces. My answer to such criticism is quite straightforward. The Chinese peoples government has control of the mainland territory, which we know as China. It commands the obedience of 400,000,000 Chinese who inhabit that territory.

"Those are facts, however unpleasant they may be. Are we to cut ourselves off from all contact with one-sixth of the inhabitants of the world—from all chances of making our views known to their rulers."

My answer to Mr. Attlee's statement is also straightforward. Those are not facts. The Chinese peoples' government is not a government existing in its own right. In spite of Mr. Attlee's doubts on the subject it is purely and simply an arm of the Russian Government. The so-called rulers of the 400,000,000 Chinese people are in fact Russian Government officials. Neither is it a fact that these foreign rulers command or get the uncontested obedience of the 400,000,000 non-Communist Chinese. Temporary dominance is not effective control. The Russians are all too well aware of their tenuous hold on parts of the territory we call China. Hence their determined insistence on further betrayal of the Chinese people by England, United States, and other UN countries. Only when this is accomplished will the Russians themselves feel secure or will they in fact be in control of the mainland territory which we know as China. So long as strong Nationalist forces exist on Formosa, so long as a million or more organized forces of resistance, Nationalist or otherwise, exist on the mainland, so long as hope lives in the hearts of the Chinese people that the free peoples of the world will not abandon them, just so long will Russia feel unsafe in the east, and fear to strike in the west. The preservation and activation of these forces, is Europe's one best hope of self-defense.

If there is need to contact one-sixth of the inhabitants of the world, this cannot be accomplished through a false-front of communism. If Mr. Attlee feels that the so-called rulers of these inhabitants must be contacted to make our views known to these rulers, then avenues exist apart from such false fronts. Let him make our views known at headquarters in Moscow. It seems incredible that, as the price of merely expressing those views, the power to sabotage the realization of our views must be strengthened by the creation, recognition, and appeasement of a fictitious Communist-front called the Chinese Peoples Government. The security of the United States must not be further eroded by agreement with any such thinking.

Sincerely yours,

CHARLES EDISON.

ONLY THE FIRST BATTLE—EDITORIAL FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a most important editorial entitled "Only the First Battle," which appeared in the New York Times of Friday, December 8.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ONLY THE FIRST BATTLE

In the confusion and dismay over the retreat in Korea one pertinent fact seems to be forgotten. The action there represents a policy of international resistance to aggression that is just beginning to take shape, and those who are ready to write off the policy at this stage would have ditched the airplane because the first models could not fly. The first organized effort to enforce peace has run into trouble, but we should be defeatist indeed if we gave up what is bound to be a long war in the first battle. The initial test has shown up the aggressors, and their fury is the best evidence that even in its weakness the United Nations frightens them. Better than some of its discouraged supporters they see in its attempt to implement the collective will a potential power that could frustrate all their plans if it were not nipped in the bud.

The retreat in Korea would be unmitigated disaster only if it meant retreat from the principle we have been trying to establish on that heroic battlefield. The free world and the United States above all has now invested blood in the United Nations; it will be spent in vain unless this first sacrifice to international patriotism impels us to strengthen the instrument forged for the purpose of stopping aggression forever.

Mao Tse-tung is said to have a 500-year plan, representing the stages and ages it will take to achieve real communism in China. By any reckoning the 5 years of the United Nations is a short time in which to realize an idea more revolutionary than communism, and so freighted with the hopes of mankind that it is certain to win in the long run if the first defeat puts us in determined mood for another round. Some delegates at Lake Success act as if Korea is the end when actually, if they are resolved to go forward, it is only the beginning.

RELIEF FOR YUGOSLAVIA—TELEGRAM FROM THE DIOCESAN COUNCIL OF CATHOLIC WOMEN OF SUPERIOR, WIS.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate approved, with amendments, Senate bill 4234, providing for Yugoslavia drought relief.

Before acting on the bill, the Senate adopted the McMahon-Connally amendment providing that nothing in the act should be interpreted as an endorsement of measures by the Yugoslavian Government in suppression of religious, political, or economic liberty. I am particularly delighted that this amendment was adopted because I know that my colleagues appreciate the fact that throughout this country there is a tremendous feeling of disgust at the religious suppression which has occurred in Yugoslavia. Countless clergymen have been martyred by imprisonment and execution because of the religious beliefs they so steadfastly adhered to in the face of oppression by the state. The American people have always championed the cause of religious freedom throughout the civilized world. We have always believed that there is the right of every religion to have its tenets practiced in perfect freedom by its members and by the clergymen of that faith.

It was only natural, therefore, that a wave of revulsion swept through America over the imprisonment of Archbishop Stepanic, as well as other heroes of the church. The Senate in passing the Yugoslavia bill made known quite clearly its position on this issue when we adopted the McMahon-Connally amendment.

Mr. President, as an indication of grass-roots opinion in Wisconsin, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point the text of a telegram which I received from the Diocesan Council of Catholic Women of Superior, through Mrs. Thomas Patterson, president. I also received similar telegrams from other religious organizations throughout my State.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUPERIOR, WIS., December 11, 1950.

Senator ALEXANDER WILEY,
Washington, D. C.:

This organization, appalled by indisputable facts of widespread violation of human rights and brutal persecution of religion in Yugoslavia, demands that aid be given only on basis of proven need and with insistance on reestablishment of decency and justice as sole moral justification for any present or future aid. Otherwise shall be parties to another betrayal of the real and trustworthy friends and allies we have behind iron curtain.

MRS. THOMAS R. PATTERSON,
President, Superior Diocesan Council of Catholic Women.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there any further routine matters? If not, the Senate has before it the bill (H. R. 2734), on which there are a considerable number of committee amendments.

EXCESS-PROFITS TAXES—VIEWS OF BOEING AIRPLANE CO.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to speak for 3 minutes or less in offering a letter for the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Washington may proceed.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, the Senate Finance Committee presently has before it the excess-profits-tax question, and House bill 9827 which deals with that question.

Probably every American and certainly every Member of the Senate understands and agrees that heavier taxes must be assumed and paid by the Nation. My only concern is with the character and fairness of the tax legislation which is anticipated.

I am particularly concerned with any new taxes which are to be imposed on the Nation's aircraft industry. Any tax which prevents or does not encourage that vital industry to continue its research and to produce the finest aircraft in the greatest possible volume is a tax which will defeat its purpose and will injure the Nation's defense or war potential.

I have recently benefited from some conversations with the management of the Boeing Airplane Co., which operates in the States of Washington and Kansas. All of us know of this company's excellence and of the magnificent contributions its airplanes have made to both peace and war.

In its considered view, Boeing believes that House bill 9827 can be improved, and that by amendment it ought to recognize and reflect the special requirements of the aircraft industry.

Mr. J. O. Yeasting, vice president and controller of the Boeing Airplane Co., has committed his company's suggestions and recommendations to paper, and submitted them by letter, under date of December 11, 1950, to my colleague, the senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL], to the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. CARLSON], and to myself.

This letter is of unusual interest because it presents some of the extremely complex problems which confront and involve the aircraft industry, and it offers several solutions.

I have forwarded a copy of the Boeing letter to the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee [Mr. GEORGE] and to its ranking minority member [Mr. MILLIKIN]. I now ask unanimous consent that the Boeing letter, by Mr. Yeasting, be made a part of my remarks at this point, in order that its provocative comments may become available to every Senator.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOEING AIRPLANE CO.,
Seattle, Wash., December 11, 1950.

Hon. HARRY P. CAIN,
United States Senate.

Hon. FRANK CARLSON,
United States Senate.

Hon. WARREN G. MAGNUSON,
United States Senate.

Hon. ANDREW F. SCHOEPPEL,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATORS: Inasmuch as all four of you have generously given your attention to the problems of Boeing, with plants in both Washington and Kansas, and the aircraft industry in general, we feel that we should endeavor to outline for you the current situation of Boeing, and of the aircraft industry, as it relates to the excess-profits-tax matter.

First of all, we recognize and understand the spirit prevailing, both in the House, as reflected by the passage of H. R. 9827, and in the Senate Finance Committee, that the question is not "Shall there be an excess-profits tax?" but, rather, "What kind of an excess-profits-tax law can be enacted with the maximum amount of fairness, equity, and justice to all concerned?"

As an aircraft manufacturer, we are qualified to deal only with the aspects of H. R. 9827 as it affects the aircraft industry. We further recognize that our consideration must be given to the effect of the law to be enacted upon the entire aircraft industry, rather than merely upon Boeing. I have personally participated in the industry conferences which led to the presentation made by Admiral D. C. Ramsey before the Senate Finance Committee on December 7, a copy of which is enclosed herewith. While there were, naturally, some differences of opinion in the industry discussions, the industry presented a united front, as indicated in the testimony of Admiral Ramsey, and the companies represented unanimously approved the suggestions made for relief.

Since the industry conferences on December 4, at which time these suggestions were approved, I have remained in Washington and have, with associates, devoted my entire attention to the problem of fair and proper relief for the aircraft industry. Before returning to Seattle I would like to review the situation for you, as I believe it now exists.

In developing the industry presentation we were faced with, first, the necessity of proving that a serious need for relief for the aircraft industry actually exists, and, second, the desirability, if not necessity, of developing a sound, fair, and equitable method of providing relief. In reviewing the testimony given by Admiral Ramsey I believe an excellent job was done of establishing the necessity for some reasonable relief if the aircraft industry is to fulfill its complete responsibility in the defense effort. The major points are briefly summarized as follows:

1. That aircraft industry net earnings, as a percentage of sales, have been far less than the average for industry generally throughout the last 8 years (aircraft 1.3 percent as compared to 5.4 percent for industry in general).

2. The base period of 1946–49 was a period of severe depression for the aircraft industry (while the same period is generally recognized as having been a prosperous one for industry in general). Instead of having a profit for the 4-year period the 15 companies had an average annual loss of $1,200,000.

3. The aircraft industry is extremely complex. What was a good airplane yesterday is totally inadequate today. Speed of flight has doubled, altitude accessibility has increased tremendously. the jet engine has increased power availability and the construction of airplanes for high speeds and altitudes has created enormously difficult problems extremely expensive to solve.

4. The imperative need for research and plant improvement require adequate funds from profit. Without extensive research we cannot hope to provide the Nation with superior aviation leadership; without adequate funds for necessary plant improvement we cannot hope to produce new and needed aircraft with the kind of efficiency and at a cost fair to the Government and the taxpayers. Present-day machinery must be purchased at a cost much higher than the original cost of machinery being replaced.

We are not alone in our recognition of the need for reasonable relief for the aircraft industry. In the public hearings before the House Ways and Means Committee the Secretary of the Treasury stated as follows (p. 77 of the committee report):

"Mr. MARTIN. I have a question or two here with reference to the national defense. I am particularly interested in a program that will avoid crippling essential defense industries. Do you have any suggestions for special relief in the case of the aircraft industry, which suffered a loss in the period 1946–48?

"Secretary SNYDER. That has been among our worst cases that we have had to consider, and we think that special consideration must be given.

"Mr. MARTIN. Have you any suggestions regarding that point? I have not found any in your statement.

"Secretary SNYDER. We did not put that in there because it is a matter that we will have to talk out with you as a special case.

"Mr. MARTIN. It is very essential that we give that consideration; is it not?

"Secretary SNYDER. There is no question about it. We are fully in accord with that."

Admiral Ramsey's testimony further established the fact that aircraft-industry profits, resulting from Government business, are controlled by the Government through renegotiation, price redetermination, and the Vinson-Trammel Act. Just as utility profits are controlled, in the public interest, by State and Federal regulatory bodies, so are aircraft-industry profits controlled, also in the public interest, by the methods mentioned.

As to whether the testimony completely established the relative soundness, fairness, and equity of the suggested alternate methods for relief I am not so certain. The time limit for the presentation of the actual testimony itself, and the limited time available for preparation thereof, are undoubtedly largely responsible for this. It is our opinion, however, and I believe the industry generally agrees, that the first suggested relief provision, based on the application of a 14-year average percentage of net income to gross receipts, is more sound and equitable than the alternate suggestions.

I wish to develop this premise briefly. Perhaps the simplest way to do this is to compare the percentage of net income to gross receipts approach with the other suggested relief provisions now before the Senate Finance Committee for their consideration. Let me say, at the outset, that I favor the percentage of net income to sales approach suggested by the aircraft industry not because it benefits Boeing more as against the other companies, nor because Boeing would fail to receive some benefit, probably in line with the average of the industry, from the other relief methods. I favor this approach because, after much study, I sincerely believe it to be the most equitable throughout the industry and to be premised on by far the soundest basic principles. The other suggested relief provisions consist of three points, namely:

1. The recent loss adjustment provision in H. R. 9827.

2. The growth formula.

3. The World War II credit for the year 1945 plus 50 percent thereof.

Each of these provisions, if adopted, would do some good for some companies. None of them would give relief for all companies and of necessity all three must be incorporated or extreme injustice will be done.

The recent loss adjustment provision provides limited relief for some companies but it follows the unsound principle of placing the companies with the poorest earnings record in the 1946–49 period in a favored position. For example, assume that two companies had equal net worth at January 1, 1946. Assume the first company sustained substantial losses during 1946 and 1947 and broke even during 1948 and 1949. For comparison, assume the second company broke even in all 4 years. The first company, sustaining the heavy losses, ends up with a substantially higher excess profits tax credit than does the second company, which broke even. This assumes that the first company had substantial earnings in 1945 (all aircraft manufacturing companies did) and was, therefore, able to take advantage of the net loss carry-back privilege. We are not critical of the relief thus granted for so far as we are aware no company in the aircraft industry even with this provision will have adequate relief, but it is our belief that this is not a sound approach to the problem.

The second relief provision enumerated above provides for making the growth formula as contained in H. R. 9827 available to the aircraft industry. If this provision were included in the law Boeing would obtain some relief thereunder as we would be able to use 85 percent of our 1949 earnings as a base. Again, we are not critical of the relief so granted but we do not believe it is a truly sound and equitable approach to the excess profits tax credit to which Boeing or other companies are entitled, primarily for two reasons:

(a) Very few in the aircraft industry actually come within the concept of what we believe is intended as the basic principle of the growth formula. Historically, the aircraft industry is subject to severe peaks and valleys. At the present time the industry is coming out of a depression valley and on the upswing of the cycle.

(b) Within the industry, the cycle varies by several years as between various companies. The mere fact that this provision would only give some of the companies relief indicates that it is somewhat a happenstance if a company obtains relief therefrom.

The third relief provision enumerated above permits use of the World War II credit, plus 50 percent thereof. As with the other provisions, there are some arguments in its favor. But here it must be remembered that the World War II earnings credit was based on the years 1936–39. During the intervening years there have been inevitable changes in the industry structure. New companies have entered the picture and some of the older companies have had varying records. An arbitrary increase in the World War II credit simply perpetuates any injustices done under that law and fails to recognize changes in the interim.

All of us in the aircraft industry are convinced that some relief is vitally necessary. It is our understanding that with respect to the 15 major companies, referred to by Admiral Ramsey on page 3 of his testimony, if each company were allowed a choice between any of the three relief provisions discussed above they would obtain some benefit, from one or other. Certainly it would be better to be granted some such relief than no relief at all, even if that relief, in our opinion at least, is inadequate as we face the problems ahead of us.

We do earnestly believe, however, that the recommendations of the Aircraft Industries Association for a relief provision based on the taxpayer's percentage of average net income to gross receipts during the 14-year period 1936–49, provides a more logical and consistent approach to the problem and is fairer and more equitable throughout the entire aircraft industry.

We think it sound and consistent with the excess-profits-tax-law theory to give consideration to the taxpayers earning record. In the aircraft industry, equitable consideration requires that a relatively long period be used in establishing such a record because of the long-term contracts involved, the many years required to design and develop new models and bring them to production stage, and because of the violent fluctuations in earnings as between years. We think the 14-year period selected is fair and equitable. We do feel that perhaps it would be wise to establish minimum- and maximum-profit percentages. First, this would protect the interests of the Government from percentages considered too high, and second, it would be fairer to any companies whose past difficulties had created percentages abnormally low.

The industry recommendation further provides that the percentage profits should be applied to a volume of gross receipts not exceeding one-half of the highest annual gross receipts of the taxpayer during the 14-year period. We agree that some proper limitation on volume to which the full percentage is applied is in order. Study of this point this past week has convinced me that there is a more equitable means of establishing limits. The 50-percent limit may work undue hardship on a company that previously never had large volume but has recently or in the future does develop a new model or a product which is outstanding in performance Our tax laws should encourage, not discourage, such developments. Also, in this industry during a period of emergency every encouragement should be given to increasing volume of output. Some continuing increase in excess-profits-tax credit with increasing volume will offer such encouragement. On the other hand, we think the increase in credit should not continue in direct relation to increasing volume. The taxpayers requirement for research, for privately financed facilities, etc., will tend to increase with increasing volume but probably not in direct ratio, particularly as extremely high volumes are reached.

It is, therefore, our belief that the most equitable approach from the standpoint of the industry and from the standpoint of our national interests would be to provide for an excess-profits-tax credit based on using the taxpayer's profit ratio based on the 14-year period 1936–49 (with minimum and maximum limits) applied to the volume of business during the taxable year on a reducing basis as such volume increases.

For purposes of illustration, the foregoing is reduced to a specific proposal using percentages and figures which are considered fair and reasonable.

PROPOSED BASIS FOR COMPUTING EXCESS-PROFITS-TAX CREDIT FOR AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY

Apply to taxpayer's gross receipts during the taxable year the percentages set forth below and to the gross receipts as so adjusted apply the taxpayer's percentage of average taxable net income to gross receipts in the 14-year period 1936–49 provided that such later percentages shall not be less than 4 nor more than 7:

Gross receipts:	Percentage
First $100,000,000	100
Next $150,000,000	85
Next $250,000,000	60
Next $500,000,000	25
Over $1,000,000,000	5

The minimum and maximum credits for specific volumes of gross receipts resulting from application of the above are set forth below:

Total gross receipts	Minimum credit	Maximum credit
$100,000,000	$4,000,000	$7,000,000
250,000,000	9,100,000	15,925,000
500,000,000	15,100,000	26,425,000
1,000,000,000	20,100,000	35,175,000
2,000,000,000	22,100,000	38,675,000

The Boeing Co. had sales of $286,000,000 in 1949 and should approximate this figure in 1950. Our average profit rate for the 14 years 1936–49 was 5.66 percent. With a sales volume of $280,000,000 our credit under the above formula would be $13,895,300 whereas under the growth formula our credit would be a little under $8,000,000. I wish to point out that we consider the larger credit not only equitable but also necessary if we are to do the job ahead of us in the best possible manner. Nonetheless, if in the judgment of those writing the tax law a credit of $8,000,000 or any other amount is all that Boeing is entitled to, we still think that it should be arrived at by a fair and logical approach through the application of a formula such as that suggested above, on a more restrictive basis.

We believe you gentlemen are entitled to know more specifically how the various proposals would affect Boeing. You are also entitled to know what we consider Boeing's minimum needs to be for the years immediately ahead. To this end we are setting forth below certain basic information and computations made therefrom.

Boeing Airplane Co. (and component corporations)—excess profits tax data

Year	Gross receipts (sales)	Taxable income	Excess profits tax credit
1936	$2,292,772	$241,091
1937	5,545,439	355,199
1938	2,006,345	(68,855)
1939	11,846,894	(1,775,225)
1940	19,390,718	(1,164,468)	$1,298,471
1941	97,210,314	20,874,994	1,506,177
1942	372,108,863	35,920,518	1,775,878
1943	493,188,161	31,921,408	2,359,798
1944	608,082,413	27,083,408	2,443,563
1945	420,979,217	22,695,796	2,787,311
1946	13,984,063	(8,610,174)
1947	21,701,852	561,769
1948	126,931,453	3,006,900
1949	286,751,519	9,376,636
Total	2,482,020,023	140,418,997

Percent taxable income to gross receipts 1936–49 (percent)	5.66
Net worth Dec. 31, 1949	$46,320,898
Excess profits tax credit under H. R. 9827 (as passed by House):
Average earnings (85 percent of 3 best years 1946–49)	$3,667,836
Invested capital method	$4,005,672
Excess profits tax credit under various relief provisions as proposed:
World War II (1945) credit plus 50 percent thereof	$4,180,966
Growth formula (85 percent of 1949 income)	$7,970,140
Profit ratio to gross receipts as proposed in Admiral Ramsey's testimony with assumed gross receipts of $280,000,000 (85 percent of 5.66 percent of $280,000,000)	$13,470,800
Profit ratio to gross receipts as proposed herein with assumed gross receipts of $280,000,000 (5.66 percent of adjusted gross receipts of $245,500,000)	$13,895,300

It will be noted that with sales of $286,000,000 in 1949 our taxable income was only $9,376,000. This abnormally low margin was primarily due to the fact that we were still writing off losses on the Stratocruiser project ($7,850,000 in 1949). During the year 1950, based on a projection of our published earnings statement for the first 9 months, our sales volume should approximate that of 1949 whereas our taxable income should be a little more than double that of 1949. In this connection it is significant to point out that very little if any of our income in 1950 is attributable to business obtained since the start of the Korean situation. The profits on such business will not be reflected to any substantial degree until late 1951.

For purposes of further illustration we will assume then a sales volume of $280,000,000 for 1950 and income before taxes of $19,000,000. The net income after taxes under several of the excess profits tax credits mentioned above (assuming the excess profits tax was in effect for the full year at rates provided in H. R. 9827) would be as follows:

Excess profits tax credit	Taxable income	Total tax	Net income	Effective tax rate
				Percent
$4,005,672	$19,000,000	$12,730,000	$6,270,000	67.0
$7,970,140	19,000,000	11,859,000	7,141,000	62.4
$13,470,800	19,000,000	10,209,000	8,791,000	53.7
$13,895,300	19,000,000	10,081,000	8,919,000	53.1

When considering our contention that with a sales volume of $280,000,000 we need a credit of upwards of $13,000,000 we must first remember that the above figures are representative of a high level earnings period. As previously pointed out the aircraft industry is subject to violent fluctuations. Obviously we must strengthen our financial position in good periods of business so that we can withstand the shock when the period of emergency is over, drastically reduce our output, stay in business in order to be ready for the next emergency should it come, and continue the caliber of research and development that will always assure the United States of America of being the No. 1 air power in the world.

Secondly we must consider the need for protecting our equity capital. The aircraft industry cannot afford to fall too far behind industry in general in the matter of dividend payments. Boeing has just over 1,000,000 shares of stock outstanding and the dividend payments per share since the formation of the present Boeing Airplane Co. in 1934 are set forth below:

1934	----
1935	----
1936	----
1937	0.40
1938	----
1939	----
1940	----
1941	----
1942	1.00
1943	2.00
1944	2.00
1945	1.00
1946	1.00
1947	1.00
1948	1.00
1949	2.00
1950	3.00

The $3 dividend in 1950 represents approximately 6 percent on our present net worth and can certainly not be considered "lush" in light of industry payments in general and further in light of the substandard return received by our stockholders throughout the years.

Thirdly, we must consider our needs for capital equipment. As pointed out in the testimony of Admiral Ramsey, the Boeing Co. in 1950 has committed over $7,500,000 for new capital equipment. Furthermore, we have deferred the acquisition of an additional $10,000,000 of facilities urgently needed because of the drain on our working-capital position and the uncertainty as to the future. This $10,000,000 covers principally our need for a flight-test hangar, additional engineering and office area, and additional warehousing area. At the present time it further appears that within the next 2 years we will be required to expend an additional $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 for newer and heavier equipment to handle the job ahead.

This means that in a period of 2 or 3 years we should spend upward of $25,000,000 for new plant facilities. While aircraft plant improvements are subject to certification and 5-year amortization, they are likewise subject to rapid obsolescence and may be rendered useless overnight by contract terminations. You will note that Boeing's sales dropped from $421,000,000 to $14,000,000 in 1 year. Furthermore, certification does not provide the funds with which to acquire the facilities. Adequate profits will help provide the needed cash and justify the risk involved. Without adequate profits, some of the needed facilities cannot be acquired and our efficiency will suffer thereby. This will be the taxpayers' loss since our contracts are subject to price redetermination and renegotiation. The higher our efficiency, the more money the taxpayers save.

In light of the foregoing, we believe you will agree that an excess-profits-tax credit for Boeing of $4,000,000 or even $8,000,000 is not only inequitable in view of the job being done and the problems ahead of us but also would not be for the best interests of the Nation. Further, we do not believe that Boeing's position in the industry is peculiar, but is, in fact, quite typical of the industry.

Sincerely yours,

J. O. YEASTING,
Vice President-Controller.

Mr. CAIN. Mr. President, our chief hope is that any new tax legislation will stimulate production and will make greater achievements possible. I am satisfied that the Boeing point of view ought to be and will be explored and considered before any final action on tax legislation is taken.

The Boeing Airplane Co. is a great institution in its own right. Its first concern is with the Nation's need. It has tried to be helpful to all Members of the Senate. I believe that it has been constructively helpful.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CALL OF THE CALENDAR ON FRIDAY

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I desire to announce to the Senate, for the purpose of the RECORD, that on Friday of this week the calendar will be called from the beginning. This was agreed upon this morning at the Democratic conference. I thought I should make the announcement at this time.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I am wondering whether it would make a great deal of difference to the Senate and to the majority leader whether the calendar were called on Friday or on Monday. I make the inquiry for the reason that we have on this side of the aisle our so-called calendar committee, and that committee is not up with the calendar. There are certain reports they would like to study.

Mr. LUCAS. I can only say to the Senator from Nebraska that we went on record this morning in the conference, and I would have to call another conference in order to undo what was done this morning. It was agreed upon this morning in conference. I may say I do not think the calendar is too heavy.

Mr. WHERRY. I was about to ask in regard to that.

Mr. LUCAS. I feel sure that the two Senators on the Republican side, who are always looking after the interests of the taxpayers, will be ready by that time.

Mr. WHERRY. My reason for suggesting that it be postponed until Monday was that the two Senators in question are not ready, and one of them will be absent Friday. It would even be a little difficult for us to be ready by Monday. If, however, the majority leader insists upon a call of the calendar on Friday, we shall do the best we can to be ready. I merely made the suggestion in order to let the Senator know that if it would not cause too great inconvenience, it would be greatly appreciated on this side if the call of the calendar could be postponed until Monday.

Mr. LUCAS. I may say to the Senator that we seldom take up matters of this kind in conference, but we did so this morning, and it was unanimously agreed that we should have the call on Friday; so I presume we shall have to go through with it. Then, too, I think an appropriation bill will be before the Senate probably on Monday.

Mr. WHERRY. Very well.

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. O'CONOR. I ask unanimous consent that Dr. John M. Blair and Mr. Lawrence Stratton, of the Federal Trade Commission, be permitted to be on the floor during the consideration of the pending bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, the pending bill, H. R. 2734, is directed toward the prevention of acquisition of assets by one corporation of another corporation, where, under existing statutes, such a corporation is prohibited from acquiring the stock of another. Its purpose is to plug a loophole which has existed since 1914, when the Federal Trade Commission was given power to prevent stock acquisitions by corporations.

It is our definite belief that the passage of this bill will go far to curb further growth of monopoly. In achieving this desirable objective, the interests of small business as an important competitive factor in the American economy will be advanced.

Nature of the loophole: When the Clayton Act became law it was thought to be a very effective measure. But a loophole in this new and seemingly formidable measure was soon discovered. In place of, or in addition to, the purchase of stock, assets could be acquired; that is, physical plant, inventories, and so forth. While the law was very specific in prohibiting the purchase of stock, it said nothing about assets.

Shortly after the end of World War I corporations began to take advantage of this loophole. If they purchased assets in the first instance, dispensing entirely with the acquisition of stock, they were obviously acting with perfect legality, free from any action by the Federal Trade Commission. Many large corporations adopted the deliberate policy of purchasing assets when interstate commerce, and thus the Federal law, were involved, and of making stock acquisitions only when the transaction was confined within the borders of a single State and had no effect on interstate commerce.

In some cases, however, acquisitions of assets were not feasible, unless the stock could be purchased first; and this raised a problem. If a firm went through this double play, buying up the stock first and then using the stock to obtain the assets, was it not violating the law? The Federal Trade Commission thought so.

The law certainly did not specify that those who broke its provisions could gain immunity from its penalties by subsequently purchasing something else not mentioned in the law. Yet, in a 5-to-4 decision, with Justices Brandeis, Taft, Holmes, and Stone dissenting, the Court held, in 1926, that where a corporation had gone through this double play the Commission was powerless to take effective action. Specifically, the Court held that the Commission's only authority in a case of this kind was to order a divestiture of the stock of the acquired corporation, which, of course, had been automatically made valueless by the transfer of assets. The Court, in effect, said that the Commission was quite free to use the power which Congress had conferred upon it, so long as it confined the use of that power to ordering the divestiture of pieces of paper which happened to be worthless.

As a result of several court decisions, the Commission was completely deprived of effective power to halt acquisitions of stock when they are followed by acquisitions of assets. Today, when the Commission takes action to halt the acquisition of stock, it usually finds that before it can enter its order the acquiring company has bought up the assets, thus removing the case from the Commission's jurisdiction.

The twofold nature of the loophole, as the law stands today, may thus be summarized as follows:

First. If the acquiring company purchases assets in the first instance, dispensing entirely with the acquisition of stock, it is, and always has been completely free from the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission.

Second. In those cases where acquisitions of stock precede acquisitions of assets the Commission, again, has no effective power, owing to judicial decisions. Because of this situation, the Commission has stated that whenever it "tries to prevent acquisitions which take the form of purchases of stock, it usually finds that is chasing a vanishing will-o-the-wisp."

The current merger movement: The immediate need for the passage of H. R. 2734 stems from the widespread merger activity which has been taking place since World War II. During the period 1940–47 more than 2,500 formerly independent manufacturing and mining companies disappeared as a result of mergers and acquisitions. It should be emphasized that this is a minimum estimate since it is based upon a sample drawn principally from reports of acquisitions of the larger corporations, as published in the leading financial manuals. The asset value of these 2,500 firms amounted to $5,200,000,000, or roughly 5.5 percent of the total of all manufacturing corporations in the country. Although data for the last 2 years are not available, there has been no apparent decrease in the intensity of the movement.

These mergers have had the effect of strengthening the position of big business in several ways. In the first place, several of the traditionally small-business industries have been affected. The two leading industries, in terms of number of acquisitions, have been textiles and apparel, and food and kindred products—both predominantly small-business fields. Moreover, in certain small-business industries, notably steel drums, tight cooperage, and wines, virtually all or a substantial part of the industry has been taken over by large corporations. Finally, the outstanding characteristic of the movement has been that of large corporations buying out small companies.

Thus, the preponderant number of firms have been acquired by the very largest corporations. Nearly one-third, 30 percent, of the companies merged since 1940 have been absorbed by corporations with assets exceeding $50,000,000. Another 40 percent of the total have been taken over by corporations with assets ranging from $5,000,000 to $49,000,000. Hence, more than 70 percent of the total number of firms acquired during this period have been absorbed by larger corporations with assets in excess of $5,000,000. At the other end of the scale, the distinictly small firms, those with less than $1,000,000 of assets, have made only 11 percent of the acquisitions.

The other half of this picture of large corporations taking over small firms shows that fully 93 percent of all the firms bought out since 1940 held assets of less than $5,000,000, and 71 percent had less than $1,000,000 of assets. On the other hand, only 4 percent of the total number of acquired firms had assets of more than $10,000,000.

Of the Nation's 200 largest manufacturing corporations, 123 have made corporate acquisitions since 1940, accounting, in the aggregate, for approximately 27 percent of all the firms bought up. Some 33 of the top 200 corporations have bought out an average of more than 5 companies each, and 13 have purchased more than 10 companies each.

The evidence thus points clearly to the conclusion that, insofar as its impact on concentration is concerned, the outstanding characteristic of the current merger movement has been the absorption of smaller independent enterprises by larger concerns.

EFFECTS OF MERGERS ON ECONOMIC CONCENTRATIONS

In appraising the over-all effect of mergers on economic concentration, it must be kept in mind that they tend to become cumulative over a period of time. Each year's mergers are superimposed upon an economic structure of concentration which has been built up over many years. In other words, insofar as the long-range impact on concentration is concerned, the 2,500 industrial mergers which have taken place between 1940 and 1947 are additive to the mergers which had taken place in previous years. In the preceding 20-year period, from 1919 through 1939, approximately 9,000 formerly independent manufacturing concerns had disappeared as a result of mergers and acquisitions, making a total of 11,500 disappearances between 1919 and 1947.

The long-range increase in economic concentration which has taken place in this country can be attributed in considerable part to this great number of mergers and acquisitions. The steel industry constitutes one of the few fields in which it has been possible to estimate the extent to which long-term growth of large corporations has been due to this cause. Between 1915 and 1945, approximately two-thirds of the growth of one company was due to mergers and acquisitions. The corresponding figures for other leading steel companies are as follows: One company, one-third; another company, one-sixth; another company, one-fourth; another company, one-fifth; another company, one-tenth; another company, two-fifths; and still another company was the product of the greatest merger in history, involving the consolidation at one fell swoop of more than 180 formerly independent companies.

As would be expected, the concentration level in the steel industry has steadily risen. Back in 1860 the four largest producers in the iron and steel industry owned 25 percent of the rolling mill capacity in the country. At the end of World War I, the top four steel producers held more than 55 percent of the steel capacity, and by 1945 the figure had risen to slightly more than 64 percent.

The long-term increase in concentration in the steel industry is by no means an isolated case. The economy as a whole has also shown a similar increase also due in considerable part to mergers and acquisitions. This long-term increase is revealed by several independent measures of concentration compiled by various authorities, covering the period 1909–42.

Thus, the 200 largest nonfinancial corporations increased their relative importance from ownership of one-third of the assets of all nonfinancial corporations in 1909 to 48 percent in 1929 and to 55 percent in the early thirties. The sharp upward sweep in the 20 years before the crash of 1929 is confirmed by another series showing that the percentage of the total net incomes of all nonfinancial corporations earned by the 200 largest nonfinancial corporations increased from 33 percent in 1920 to 43 percent in 1929.

Another series shows the percentage of all working capital of manufacturing corporations held by 316 large manufacturers. This provides a useful link to the other series and confirms the general upward trend in concentration. In 1926 these large manufacturing corporations held 35 percent of the total working capital. By 1938 the figure had risen to 47 percent.

Mr. President, the extent to which the American economy has become concentrated and centralized in the hands of a few giant corporations was strikingly revealed before this committee in figures presented by Dr. Wilfred I. King, professor emeritus of economics at New York University. The figures which he presented reveal an extraordinary level of concentration. Thus, his figures show that in 1946, the latest year for which such data are available, one-tenth of 1 percent of the total number of all American corporations—the giant firms with assets of $100,000,000 and over—owned 49 percent of the assets of all American corporations; 2 percent of the number of corporations owned 78 percent; 8 percent of the number owned 89 percent of the assets; and 12 percent owned 92 percent of the assets. They are, of course, the giant corporations. At the other end of the scale, thinking now, of small concerns, 45 percent of the number of corporations—the small firms with assets of $50,000 or less—owned less than 1 percent of the assets.

The figures presented by Dr. King also show that in the field of manufacturing alone, the 25 largest corporations in 1948 owned 27 percent of the total assets of all manufacturing corporations, or a little more than an average of 1 percent of the assets for each of the 25 corporations. That is, each company owned approximately 1 percent of all assets.

The enactment of the bill will limit further growth of monopoly and thereby aid in preserving small business as an important competitive factor in the American economy.

In order that a full understanding may be had of the background existing when the Congress felt compelled to enact antitrust legislation, certain facts should be recited.

Original purpose of the Clayton Act: The action by the Supreme Court in actually breaking up the Standard Oil and Tobacco Trusts in 1911 had convinced Congress that the Government was already armed under the Sherman Act with the power to break up existing monopolies. But this was not sufficient for the legislative temper of those earlier days. Congress wanted to go one step further and prevent the very creation of monopoly. Instead of waiting until a monopoly had been formed and then trying to dissolve it under the Sherman Act, Congress wanted to prevent the development of monopoly in the first place—to nip it in the bud.

Whatever the reasons for the ultimate shortcomings of these provisions of law, the intent of Congress in passing them was quite clear. It was dissatisfied with the Sherman Act and intended that these new powers should supplement that act in such a way as to enable the Government to prevent the very development and creating of monopoly. Thus, in a report dated July 2, 1914, which accompanied the Clayton Act, the Senate Judiciary Committee said:

> Broadly stated, the bill, in its treatment of unlawful restraints and monopolies, seeks to prohibit and make unlawful certain trade practices which, as a rule, singly and in themselves, are not covered by the act of July 2, 1890 [the Sherman Act] or other existing antitrust acts and thus, by making these practices illegal, to arrest the creation of trusts, conspiracies, and monopolies in their incipiency and before consummation.

This intent to stop practices which result in monopoly is also evident from the congressional debates on the bill. Thus, former Senator Walsh, of Montana, stated on the Senate floor:

> It was intended [in this bill] to reach the practices that were not the practices of things that have developed into trusts and monopolies, but were practices of trade, which if persevered in and continued and developed, would eventually result in the creation of a monopoly or trust.

In 1914 President Wilson, in speaking of the passage of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Clayton Act, stated that their purpose was to kill monopoly in the seed.

Shortly after World War I, the Supreme Court itself gave expression to this point of view by referring to the unsatisfactory results of dissolving combinations under the Sherman Act, "so far as the purpose to maintain free competition was concerned," and in that connection said that "the Clayton Act sought to reach the agreements embraced in its sphere in their incipiency." It also said that "the Clayton Act, as its title and the history of its enactment shows, was intended to supplement the purpose and effect of other antitrust legislation, principally the Sherman Act of 1890."

Examples of the present ineffectiveness of the law: A typical instance of the futility of attempting to enforce section 7 as it now stands is the case one firm which the Federal Trade Commission in 1944 charged with violating section 7 by purchasing the stock of a competitor. During the course of hearings—which, of course, are the constitutional right of any accused firm—the attorneys announced on November 21, 1945, that their firm had just purchased the assets of the competitor and accordingly requested the Commission to dismiss the complaint. Since the Commission had no alternative but to comply, it dismissed the complaint in March 1946.

Another recent example is provided by the case of another corporation. Through a number of stock acquisitions in competing corporations it had become in 1945 the largest wholesale grocery in the country, with assets of $20,000,000 and annual sales of $100,000,000. It occupied a leading position in the wholesale grocery trade in numerous important trade areas, including Chicago, Baltimore, and Canton, Ohio. Since its acquisitions took the form of the purchase of stock, the Commission issued a complaint in 1946, charging a violation of section 7. But while the case was in the process of being tried, the corporation acquired the assets of its subsidiary concerns, which it had previously controlled only through stock ownership, and dissolved the subsidiaries. Again the Commission had no alternative but to dismiss the case, which it did in February 1947.

Reasons for original failure of Congress to include assets: The present impotence of section 7 raises the question as to why Congress, in granting the Commission power to prevent purchases of stock, did not also give it the power to move against acquisitions of assets. Inasmuch as purchases of assets are more binding and lasting, and thus more destructive to competition, the omission seems particularly paradoxical. The answer lies in the fact that at the time when Congress enacted the Clayton Act, most acquisitions took the form of stock purchases. By comparison, acquisitions of assets were almost unknown.

The economic background behind the passage of the Clayton Act in 1914 was the great merger movement which began at the very end of the nineteenth century and extended through 1907. During this period, which witnessed the birth of such huge consolidations, most mergers were effected through the purchase of stock.

Effect of the loophole on antitrust policies: The antitrust laws condemn attempts to control the market by means of mutual understanding or agreement among competitors; but if the same objective is achieved through the purchase of physical property, it is lawful in the absence of monopoly, and the antitrust agencies are powerless to act. The existence of the loophole thus places a premium upon the attainment of monopolistic ends by the completely final method of consolidation, as against the more vulnerable method of conspiracies among independent firms. In other words, the weaker, less effective, cooperative methods of eliminating competition are prohibited, but the permanent and more effective method of consolidation under a single management is permissible. Moreover, the more effective is the enforcement of the law against collusion among competitors, the greater is the incentive to achieve the same ends through purchase, consolidation, and merger.

Any antitrust policy, to be effective, must prohibit the achievement of monopolistic ends, regardless of whether they are attained by collusive agreement among independent firms or by consolidation, acquisition, and merger. To block off one of these two roads to monopoly, while leaving the other open, merely increases the traffic on the latter.

Inapplicability to companies in a failing or bankrupt condition: The argument has been made that the proposed bill, if passed, would have the effect of preventing a company which is in a failing or bankrupt condition from selling out. Of course, that would be a serious situation, and it is entitled to our consideration. In our report accompanying H. R. 2734, the committee states:

> The committee are in full accord with the proposition that any firm in such a condition should be free to dispose of its stock or assets. The committee, however, do not believe that the proposed bill will prevent sales of this type (p. 7).

We then go on to point out that decisions of the Supreme Court have made it abundantly clear that the Clayton Act does not apply in bankruptcy or receivership cases. Moreover, the Court has held, with respect to this specific section, that a company does not have to be actually in a state of bankruptcy to be exempt from its provisions; it is sufficient that it is heading in that direction with the probability that bankruptcy will ensue. On this specific point the Supreme Court, in the case of International Shoe Co. v. Federal Trade Commission (280 U. S. 281) said:

> A corporation with resources so depleted and the prospect of rehabilitation so remote that it faced the grave probability of a business failure with resulting loss to its stockholders and injury to the communities where its plants were operated, we hold that the purchase of its capital stock by a competitor (there being no other prospective purchaser), not with a purpose to lessen competition, but to facilitate the accumulated business of the purchaser and with the effect of mitigating seriously injurious consequences otherwise probably, is not in contemplation of law prejudicial to the public, and does not substantially (303) lessen competition or restrain commerce within the intent of the Clayton Act. To regard such a transaction as a violation of law, as this Court suggested in United States v. U. S. Steel Corp. (251 U. S. 417, 446–447), would "seem a distempered view of purchase and result." See also Press Ass'n v. United States (245 Fed. 91, 93–94) (Id. pp. 302–303).

Some might fear that the passage of House bill 2734 would have the effect of stopping all mergers and acquisitions. Such is not the case. House bill 2734 would not put an end to all future mergers and acquisitions. Its applicability is limited in several ways:

First. It applies only to corporations in interstate commerce.

Second. The bill applies only to acquisitions which substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. In other words their effect upon competition must be substantial. Any action by the Federal Trade Commission designed to halt mergers of an inconsequential nature would not be in accordance with the language of the bill and would not be upheld by the courts.

Third. As already mentioned, the bill would not apply to a company in a failing or bankrupt condition.

Fourth. The present language of section 7 as it relates to mergers by sale of stock is more restrictive than the language in the amended bill. Yet no case has been found where a small corporation had any difficulty or was criticized by the Federal Trade Commission for selling its business by selling its stock to another small corporation. The small corporations have not had to avoid the present language of section 7 by selling their assets in place of their stock, when they wanted to dispose of their business.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court and the Federal courts have not applied the present strict language of section 7, even in cases of stock acquisition, so as to prevent a small corporation from selling its business or of merging with another small business. The Supreme Court has only applied the present language of section 7, even in the case of stock acquisitions, to large transactions which would substantially lessen competition, or tend to create a monopoly. In the case of International Shoe Company against Federal Trade Commission, supra, decided January 26, 1930, the International Shoe Co., having a Nation-wide business, purchased the stock of a smaller shoe company also having a Nation-wide business. As to a part of the business of the two corporations, they were not in direct competition. The Federal Trade Commission sought to order a divestiture of the stock and prevent the merger. The Supreme Court held that the merger was not of sufficient size or importance, even though there was some competition between the two corporations, to substantially lessen competition or to create a monopoly. The Court has this to say:

> Mere acquisition by one corporation of the stock of a competitor even though it results in some lessening of competition, is not forbidden; the act deals only with such acquisitions as probably will result in lessening competition to a substantial degree, Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co. (258 U. S. 346, 357); that is to say, to such a degree as will injuriously affect the public.

The language in the amendment, it will be noted, follows closely the purpose of the Clayton Act as defined by the Supreme Court in the International Shoe case.

Fifth. The bill modifies the present law so as to remove any possibility of an interpretation that would prohibit inconsequential acquisitions of stock or assets. Section 7, as it now stands, prohibits a corporation engaged in commerce from acquiring the stock of another corporation engaged also in commerce "where the effect of such acquisition may be to substantially lessen competition between the corporation whose stock is so acquired and the corporation making the acquisition."

Since acquisition of a controlling stock interest in a rival company necessarily eliminates effective competition between the acquiring and the acquired corporations, this language, but for limiting interpretations by the courts, might have prevented any use of stock purchases to unite small corporations engaged in the same line of business even though these corporations were so small and their other competitors so numerous that the acquisition would have made no perceptible change in the intensity of competition in any line of commerce in which such corporations were engaged. The present bill eliminates the test of the lessening of competition between the acquiring and the acquired corporations, retaining only the test of the general effect on competition.

Owing in considerable part to mergers and acquisitions, the Nation is now confronted with an extraordinary level of economic concentration. In a report on the concentration of productive facilities the Federal Trade Commission found that in 1947 the 113 largest manufacturing corporations owned 46 percent of the net capital assets of all manufacturing enterprises, both corporate and noncorporate. The three largest firms held 100 percent of the net capital assets in the aluminum industry; 95 percent in the tin-can industry; 92 percent in linoleum; 88 percent in copper smelting and refining; 78 percent in cigarettes; 72 percent in distilled liquors; 71 percent in plumbing equipment and supplies; 70 percent in rubber tires; 68 percent in biscuits and crackers; 67 percent in agriculture machinery; 64 percent in meat products; 57 percent in glass and glassware; 56 percent in dairy products; and similar high proportions in other industries.

In concluding this brief résumé of the history of the legislation there is one particular point which I think warrants comment. Some may be concerned over its effect on small business that it might prevent two small firms from merging.

On this point I think it is worth while to bear in mind the following considerations: First, as I have already indicated, the facts reveal that the great bulk of the mergers which have taken place in recent years have consisted of the absorption of a small company by a large company; the cases of two small companies merging are few and far between.

Second, the bill is aimed at preventing only those mergers which substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. Obviously, those mergers which enable small companies to compete more effectively with giant corporations generally do not reduce competition but rather intensify it.

Third, by a specific action, Congress has made it abundantly clear that it is not the purpose of this law to prevent mergers of this type. Thus, the original wording of section 7 of the Clayton Act, which, with regard to stock, is now on the statute books, prohibits a corporation from acquiring a competitor "where the effect may be to substantially lessen competition between the corporation whose stock is acquired and the corporation making the acquisition." Had this language been rigidly interpreted, it would have had the effect of preventing any company from buying the stock of any competitor, since the acquisition by one firm of a competitor not only "substantially lessens" but completely eliminates the competition which had formerly existed between them.

In the bill before us this stringent prohibition has been completely deleted. Instead of making the test of the law the effect of an acquisition on competition between the acquired and the acquiring companies, the proposed bill substitutes the more general test of the effect on competition generally in any line of commerce in any section of the country. And to come within the prohibition of the bill the effect on that competition must be "substantial."

Lest it be thought that this bill is the result of snap judgment or hurried consideration, let me say that over a period of years attempts have been made to remedy the existing defect in the law. Most active in this endeavor have been the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] and the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], the latter having striven for the passage of amendatory legislation while a member of the House of Representatives. Over the years the Senator from Wyoming has been most active in seeking to correct this glaring loophole in the law. Both Senators have consistently argued for such legislation in the interest of small business, and in order to thwart the growth of monopoly.

As would be expected from this lengthy legislative history, the record on this bill is voluminous, consisting of three printed volumes of hearings before subcommittees of the House Judiciary Committee in the Seventy-ninth, Eightieth, and Eighty-first Congresses; approximately 700 typewritten pages of transcript of hearings before the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee of the Eightieth Congress; a printed volume of hearings before the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee of the Eighty-first Congress; three printed reports of the House Judiciary Committee; one printed report of the Senate Judiciary Committee; and very important material printed before the Temporary National Economic Committee in the form of printed hearings and mimeographs.

Finally, Mr. President, in addition to its repeated approval by congressional committees, the bill has received widespread support from other sources. President Truman has specifically recommended its enactment. In the economic report of the President of January 8, 1947, the President, in speaking for the need in strengthening of the antitrust laws, stated that—

> Among the steps to be taken is the extension of section 7 of the Clayton Act to prohibit mergers by the acquisition of assets as well as by the acquisition of stock control.

Similarly, President Roosevelt, in a message to the Congress on April 29, 1938, recommended "more rigid scrutiny through the Federal Trade Commission of corporate mergers, consolidations, and acquisitions than that now provided by the Clayton Act."

In addition, the measure was unanimously recommended by the Temporary National Economic Committee. Finally, the Federal Trade Commission has been recommending its passage since 1927, now almost a quarter of a century ago. The most recent report of the Federal Trade Commission on this subject—The Merger Movement: A Summary Report—concludes with the following words, which should be constantly borne in mind in its consideration:

> No great stretch of the imagination is required to foresee that if nothing is done to check the growth in concentration, either the giant corporations will ultimately take over the country or the Government will be impelled to step in and impose some form of direct regulation in the public interest. In either event, collectivism will have triumphed over free enterprise and the theory of competition will have been relegated to the limbo of well-intentioned but ineffective ideals. This is a warning which the Commission has repeated time and again, and one which some of those who have the most to gain by the preservation of competition seem determined to ignore.
>
> The Commission believes that the economic forces on which it has been basing its warnings require that a definite choice be made. Either this country is going down the road to collectivism or it must stand and fight for competition as the protector of all that is embodied in free enterprise.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a few questions?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very pleased to yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. First, I should like to express my appreciation of the great care which has been evidenced by the distinguished Senator in the presentation of this extremely important question. As he recalls, there was a difference of opinion in the Judiciary Committee, and I had the privilege of submitting minority views, which appear alongside the report of the committee itself.

I should like to ask the Senator a few questions so as to develop his views somewhat further.

I am correct, am I not, in stating that the majority report, on page 2, states that—

> The purpose of the proposed legislation is to prevent corporations from acquiring another corporation by means of the acquisition of its assets, where under the present law it is prohibited from acquiring the stock of said corporation.

Mr. O'CONOR. The report so states.

Mr. DONNELL. That is the purpose of the bill; is it not?

Mr. O'CONOR. Yes.

Mr. DONNELL. Or, as stated elsewhere in the report, at page 3:

> The purpose * * * is to limit future increases in the level of economic concentration resulting from corporate mergers and acquisitions.

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator has, of course, correctly read from the report. The excerpts, of course, should be read in connection with the entire report, which emphasizes the fact that the bill is aimed only at acquisitions which substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. With that qualification the Senator is entirely correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I agree with the Senator's statement.

May I ask the Senator whether or not the majority report at any point asserts, either in haec verba or in substance that acquisitions by one corporation of assets of another corporation or of other corporations have caused any great increase in the level of concentration?

Mr. O'CONOR. It does so state, I may say to the Senator from Missouri, in this way: The report shows—and charts are available which later on I might, if desired, display to the Senate—a trend upward in the number of mergers and acquisitions. Such a trend is attributable to the fact that the Clayton Act has had this loophole in it for the past 36 years.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I call the attention of the distinguished Senator to page 3 of the report. The page contains a portion entitled "The Level of Economic Concentration." I ask the Senator whether or not that is the portion of the report which discusses both the level of economic concentration and the cause, or the facts out of which such economic concentration has arisen?

Mr. O'CONOR. That is the section where the point is principally emphasized; yes.

Mr. DONNELL. Would the Senator have any objection if I asked leave at this time for unanimous consent that the portion of the report appearing on page 3, beginning with the words, "The level of economic concentration" and ending at the conclusion of page 3, be inserted in the RECORD?

Mr. O'CONOR. I would be delighted to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the matter referred to may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that course will be followed.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE LEVEL OF ECONOMIC CONCENTRATION

The purpose of the proposed bill, H. R. 2734, is to limit future increases in the level of economic concentration resulting from corporate mergers and acquisitions. The bill would accomplish this purpose by enabling the Federal Trade Commission to prevent those acquisitions which substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. Since 1914 the Commission has had the power to prevent such acquisitions when they are effected through the purchase of stock. The objective of Congress in passing section 7 of the Clayton Act has been circumvented by the acquisition of assets rather than, or in addition to, the purchase of stock. The proposed bill would eliminate this practice by extending the application of the Clayton Act to acquisitions of assets.

While there exist many differences of opinion on other aspects of the monopoly problem, there is substantial agreement that the level of economic concentration is extremely high.

The extent to which the American economy has become concentrated and centralized in the hands of a few giant corporations was strikingly revealed before this Committee in figures presented by Dr. Wilfred I. King, professor emeritus of economics at New York University. The figures which he presented reveal an extraordinary level of concentration. Thus, his figures show that in 1946, the latest year for which such data are available, one-tenth of 1 percent of the total number of all American corporations—the giant firms with assets of $100,000,000 and over—owned 49 percent of the assets of all American corporations; 2 percent of the number of corporations owned 78 percent; 8 percent of the number owned 89 percent of the assets; and 12 percent owned 92 percent of the assets. At the other end of the scale, 45 percent of the number of corporations—the small firms with assets of $50,000 or less—owned less than 1 percent of the assets.

The figures presented by Dr. King also show that in the field of manufacturing alone, the 25 largest corporations in 1948 owned 27 percent of the total assets of all manufacturing corporations, or a little more than an average of 1 percent of the assets for each of the 25 corporations.

The enactment of the bill will limit further growth of monopoly and thereby aid in preserving small business as an important competitive factor in the American economy.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the Senator from Maryland if in that portion of page 3 which is entitled "The Level of Economic Concentration," there is anywhere set forth any assertion to the effect that acquisitions by one corporation of another corporation or of other corporations have caused any great injuries in the level of economic concentration?

Mr. O'CONOR. I will say to the Senator from Missouri that mergers are one of the principal causes of the long-term upward trend in concentration which has taken place in our economy.

Mr. DONNELL. But if the Senator will permit me to inquire further, there is no express statement in the portion of the report which I have placed in the RECORD to the effect that the acquisitions by one corporation of assets of another corporation or of other corporations have caused any great injuries in the level of economic concentrations?

Mr. O'CONOR. I may qualify or make this additional observation, which is that the report is not very lengthy, that it covers only a little more than seven pages, and obviously, with the hundreds of pages of testimony that have been taken, we could not put everything in the report.

Mr. DONNELL. I now ask the Senator whether or not included in the testimony before the committee was the article by Drs. John Lintner and J. Keith Butters entitled "Effect of Mergers on Industrial Concentration, 1940–47"?

Mr. O'CONOR. There was such an article.

Mr. DONNELL. May I inquire of the Senator from Maryland whether I am correct in stating that the material in that article was originally prepared as a part of the background for a monograph which is one part of the study of Effects of Federal Taxation on Business Mergers, which has been conducted by the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration under a grant from the Merrill Foundation for the Advancement of Financial Knowledge?

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I call to the Senator's attention, for his convenience at this point, the first page of the minority views submitted by myself, and ask the Senator whether the authors of the article referred to, namely, Drs. Lintner and Butters, point out the general recognition of the fact that—

The high degree of industrial concentration which characterizes our economy today stems largely from the two waves of merger activity in the late nineteenth century which were typified by the formation of the Standard Oil trust in 1879 and, later, of the billion-dollar United States Steel Corp. at the turn of the century.

Does the Senator coincide with what I have therein described as the general recognition of the language set forth in the article by Drs. Lintner and Butters?

Mr. O'CONOR. I quite agree with the Senator from Missouri that that was the viewpoint expressed by the gentlemen to whom the Senator from Missouri has referred.

Mr. DONNELL. May I inquire further of the Senator whether the article by these gentlemen further points out that—

The major merger movement of the 1920's still further increased prevailing levels of concentration.

That appears in the article, does it not?

Mr. O'CONOR. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt to make an observation at this point?

Mr. DONNELL. Certainly.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. During the hearings of the Temporary National Economic Committee, as I recall, there was considerable testimony with respect to the progress of mergers. My mind carries me back to the evidence of the merger that was going on in the distillery industry. My recollection is, and it is borne out by a chart which I find in the report of the Federal Trade Commission on the merger movement, the report being dated 1948. The chart shows the acquisitions since 1933 by the Schenley Distilleries Corp. This monopoly was established almost completely by mergers of the kind which the pending bill would prohibit. I am sure there are other instances.

Of course, the history of the concentration in the steel industry, not at all confined to the earlier years, has been history of acquisition by the United States Steel Corp. when it started, and by the Republic Steel Corp. and other later corporations, of competing concerns, so that today in the steel industry there has been built up what amounts to a monopolistic situation by which the entire production and distribution of steel in the United States are directed by common consent.

Mr. O'CONOR. I may say in furtherance of the very pertinent statement by the Senator from Wyoming, that everything we heard bore out that statement; and, further, that it was not confined to any one particular industry. The example cited by the Senator deals with the distilled spirits industry. We took typical cases of companies in various other lines, such as farm implements, manufacturing, steel, and dairy products, and found that the situation in those industries was roughly similar to that described by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. May I ask the Senator what has been going on in the retail-grocery business, what has been going on in the bakery industry, what has been going on in retail distribution of various kinds? Is not the record before the committee and the record before the Federal Trade Commission conclusive upon the point that mergers are still continuing? I take it that those of us who sponsor the bill—and I introduced a similar bill, in several Congresses—do not contend that mergers constitute the sole cause of concentration of economic power. They constitute only one cause, but they constitute so important a cause that the gaping hole in the Clayton Act, in my judgment, should be plugged to prevent mergers which are designed or which have a tendency to create monopoly, and which do substantially lessen competition; and it should be within the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission to prohibit such mergers.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Before posing the question, let me state that I wish it distinctly understood that in my minority views I am stating that—

It is true that (a) since 1940 there has occurred what Drs. Lintner and Butters term "the resurgence of large-scale merger activity in the United States"; (b) according to them, in "manufacturing and mining alone the financial manuals list approximately 2,000 formerly independent companies which disappeared as a result of mergers and acquisitions by other companies in the 8-year period, 1940–47"; and (c) to quote further from the above-mentioned article: "The companies so absorbed held assets, at the date of sale or merger, estimated by the Federal Trade Commission to amount to approximately $5,000,000,000."

Before posing the question I should also like to state that, indeed, the Federal Trade Commission, in its 1948 report on the merger movement, says:

The importance of external expansion in promoting concentration has never been more clearly revealed than in the acquisition movement that is taking place at the present time—a movement which is strengthening the position of big business in several ways.

I desire to ask the Senator, if I may, whether he observed that Messrs. Lintner and Butters developed points, however, which seem to them "to essentially reverse the major conclusion on the contribution of mergers to increasing general concentration."

Mr. O'CONOR. I quite agree with the Senator's statement that that was their individual view.

Mr. DONNELL. Does the Senator agree with this statement:

The apparent contradiction between many of the findings of Messrs. Lintner and Butters and those of the Federal Trade Commission is explained, so Messrs. Lintner and Butters inform us, for the most part "by the fact that the Commission analyzed primarily data on the numbers of mergers whereas our [i. e., Messrs. Lintner and Butters'] "analysis also takes full account of the size of the merged companies."

Mr. O'CONOR. I must answer in the negative on that point. The junior Senator from Illinois has some observation to make concerning that article.

Mr. DONNELL. However, will the Senator agree that I have correctly quoted those gentlemen?

Mr. O'CONOR. Undoubtedly.

Mr. DONNELL. I also ask whether the article by those two gentlemen points out that—

For all manufacturing and mining companies during the 8-year period, 1940–47, mergers were a much less important source of growth for large companies than for smaller companies.

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator has correctly quoted the article.

Mr. DONNELL. Does the Senator from Maryland agree with that statement of fact by those two gentlemen?

Mr. O'CONOR. No; I do not.

Mr. DONNELL. Let me ask the Senator also whether those two gentlemen, Messrs. Lintner and Butters, in their article also state:

Technical measures of concentration in the asset holdings of manufacturing and mining companies show only a slight increase in concentration as a result of merger activity during 1940–47.

Mr. O'CONOR. The article so stated.

Mr. DONNELL. Let me also ask whether the article further states as follows:

(a) The total assets acquired through merger or purchase during the 1940–47 period by all manufacturing firms with assets of over $100,000,000 at the time of acquisition amount to $780,000,000, or only 2.1 percent of the total assets of all firms with assets of over $100,000,000 at the end of 1946.

(b) The corresponding figure for all firms with assets of over $50,000,000 at the end of 1946 is 2.8 percent.

(c) The ratio generally used to measure relative concentration or inequality—when computed for the asset distribution of all companies—increased, on account of mergers, by less than 1 percent during the 1940–47 period.

(d) When computed separately for both the 500 and the 1,000 largest manufacturing companies, however, the index was actually reduced by the merger activity of these firms.

Does the Senator agree that is the statement by those gentlemen, regardless of whether he agrees with it?

Mr. O'CONOR. That is their statement. However, I may say again that a statement in rebuttal of that article will be made.

Mr. DONNELL. Does the Senator agree that these two gentlemen, Messrs. Lintner and Butters, further state in their article:

Since particular importance attaches to the distribution of assets among the largest companies we also computed the index of concentration for the 500 and the 1,000 largest manufacturing companies as of the end of 1946. In both instances relative concentration was reduced as a result of all the acquisitions of these companies over the 8-year period. The index for the 1,000 largest was reduced from 0.639 to 0.632. For the 500 largest the decrease was substantially greater, from 0.550 to 0.534, or by about 3 percent as compared to the increases of about 1 percent for all manufacturing and mining as a whole.

That appears in their article, does it not?

Mr. O'CONOR. It does.

Mr. DONNELL. Let me also ask the Senator this further question. Do not these two gentlemen say in their article:

In general, our findings indicate that, because of their large absolute size, other factors, such as retained earnings and the relative availability of outside capital, have potentially much greater effects on concentrations than mergers have had since 1940.

Mr. O'CONOR. The statement is correctly read by the Senator.

Mr. DONNELL. Is it not correct that the concluding two paragraphs of the article by Messrs. Lintner and Butters read as follows?—

In conclusion, the Federal Trade Commission correctly appraised the recent merger movement in describing its outstanding characteristic insofar as its impact on concentration is concerned as "* * * the absorption of smaller, independent enterprises by larger concerns." But it drew an erroneous inference as to the significance of this characteristic. Rather than promoting concentration, this very characteristic explains why the recent merger movement has had such slight effect on over-all levels of concentration.

The same characteristic also distinguishes the recent merger movement from its major predecessors, which were characterized by combinations in which very large corporations acquired other very large corporations. In fact, the combination of very large companies was the dominant characteristic of the great waves of mergers of from 50 to 75 years ago which gave "American industry its characteristic twentieth century concentration of control." Such combinations also played an important role in the extraordinarily active merger movement of the 1920's. In striking contrast, in the recent merger movement combinations between very large companies have been negligible in number.

I have correctly quoted, have I not, from the article by those two gentlemen?

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator has correctly quoted it.

Mr. DONNELL. I may state that if the Official Reporter per chance should use, in making his report of this questioning, certain words which appear in the minority views, I call to the attention of the Official Reporter, most respectfully, that where certain italization appears, it is noted in the minority views that the emphasis is supplied by me.

Let me ask, finally, in regard to the article by Drs. Lintner and Butters, whether the Senator will inform us whether those two gentlemen say:

To sum up, mergers have been responsible for such a small percentage of the total growth of large firms since 1940 that their effect on over-all levels of industrial concentration has been very small. (Senate subcommittee hearings on H. R. 2734, p. 374.)

Mr. O'CONOR. That is the conclusion reached by the gentlemen in question; yes.

Mr. DONNELL. Now I should like to ask the Senator another question, Mr. President. We have, of course, the Sherman Act, which was passed in 1890. That is correct; is it not?

Mr. O'CONOR. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. July 2, 1890, as I note from the book, is the date of that act. It is a fact, is it not, that there has been expanding interpretation of the Sherman Act during many years of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. O'CONOR. That is true.

Mr. DONNELL. I am wondering whether the Senator would care to express an opinion as to the correctness of this brief and succinct statement by Mr. Gilbert Montague, who appeared before the committee, his testimony being reported, so far as this point is concerned, at page 198:

For many years the Supreme Court has been expanding its interpretation of the Sherman Act. Today that act empowers the Attorney General to apply to the court for an injunction ab initio, or criminal sentence, or divestiture decree in respect of any economic concentration, be it existing or incipient, whether a person, firm, or corporation, or group of them, which has power to raise prices, or to exclude competition, in any section of the country, even though it is only incipient, and never exercises such power.

This was the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court in American Tobacco Co. v. United States (328 U. S. 781 (1946)), which reiterated the rule that was unanimously stated in the final decision of United States v. Aluminum Co. of America (148 F. 2d 416 (1945)).

Does the Senator care to express himself, either as being in agreement, in whole or in part, or in disagreement with the quoted statement of Mr. Montague?

Mr. O'CONOR. I do not, of course, wish to challenge the accuracy of the statement, but I cannot agree entirely with the conclusions reached by Mr. Montague. It is true that in recent years the Supreme Court has amplified the law; but it is also true that the Court has pointed out on a number of occasions, as the President of the United States has pointed out, and as the Senator from Wyoming and other Senators have pointed out, that it is desirable—and that is the aim of this bill—to strike at impending combinations in their incipiency, rather than to wait until a monopoly has been established and then attempt to break it up.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Does not the Senator agree with Mr. Montague that today the Sherman Act, under the existing decisions, I may say, empowers the Attorney General to apply to the Court for an injunction ab initio, in respect of any economic concentration, be it existing or incipient?

Mr. O'CONOR. The Sherman Act, as it stands today, is not an effective instrument against mergers and acquisitions, unless the merger brings into the hands of one company virtually complete control over an industry, and even there its effectiveness is doubtful.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield so that I may ask a question of the Senator from Missouri, who quoted from Mr. Montague?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am glad to yield for that purpose.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Does the Senator from Missouri believe that it was the opinion of Mr. Montague that the power of the Supreme Court to issue injunctions to prevent ab initio monopolistic combinations should be used?

Mr. DONNELL. I have no means of knowing the intent or desire of Mr. Montague. All I know is what he has stated as to the effect of decisions; and I was very much struck by the clarity of thought of Mr. Montague as he gave his statement upon the stand.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. He is a very good lawyer. I have known him for many years. I have engaged in debate with him upon occasion. So, may I now, with the indulgence of the Senator from Maryland, ask the Senator whether it is his belief that the power of the Supreme Court described by Mr. Montague should be used to prevent monopolistic mergers?

Mr. DONNELL. In my judgment, it should.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Then, if the Senator believes that monopolistic mergers should be prevented by such injunction, what objection can there be to providing the people with the additional protection contained in the pending bill?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, if the Senator from Maryland will permit me, my answer to that, in part, is that the Sherman Act proceeds through the courts. Injunction is a remedy given by a court of equity. The bill at hand undertakes, however, to enlarge the powers, not of a court but of an administrative body, namely, the Federal Trade Commission. I have endeavored in my minority views to point out that where a court can effectively administer the law of the land, there is, generally speaking, no justification for so enlarging the powers of an administrative body to enable it to perform the duties of the court.

So, Mr. President, in answer to the Senator from Wyoming, I may say, first, that the powers of the law under the Sherman Act should be invoked, whenever there is either an actual or an incipient or a threatened violation of law; and, in the second place, in answer to the second question of the Senator from Wyoming, there is every reason to rely upon the courts, rather than to vest in an administrative body this vast power, which to my mind, in the cases cited, can be administered properly by the courts.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield for a further question?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the Senator whether we had the privilege also of hearing from Hon. William T. Kelley, general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, during the hearing before our committee.

Mr. O'CONOR. We did.

Mr. DONNELL. Referring to page 21 of the hearings, I ask the Senator whether Mr. Kelley said this:

> It was more than 20 years after the passage of the Sherman Act before the Supreme Court fashioned it into an effective instrument for the physical dissolution of industrial monopoly which had taken the form of consolidated corporate power.

Mr. O'CONOR. That is a correct reading of Mr. Kelley's testimony.

Mr. DONNELL. In other words, I take it the Senator would agree with me and with the statement of Mr. Montague as to the expanding interpretation of the Sherman Act which has been in progress during these years, and would agree with Mr. Kelley, whose experience has been very vast, I have no doubt, that it was more than 20 years after passage of the Sherman Act before the Supreme Court fashioned it into the effective instrument to which Mr. Kelley refers.

Mr. O'CONOR. In answer to the Senator, I may say that that is a correct statement of Mr. Kelley's experience and of his knowledge of the subject. I may add that Mr. Kelley testified very strongly in favor of this bill. He does not feel that the Sherman Act, as it stands, will halt mergers, even though they substantially lessen competition. In other words, the gentleman to whom the Senator refers is a stanch advocate of this proposed change in the law, and, as he is general counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, we think he is in excellent position to voice an opinion as to the need of improvement of the law.

Mr. DONNELL. I may say, if the Senator will permit, that I thoroughly concur in his observation as to the opportunity which Mr. Kelley has of forming an opinion; and I may say that Mr. Kelley's vast experience, of course, is very impressive. I might, if I may do so without presumption, say that I think there is a natural human tendency on the part of a person who is connected with a governmental commission to look with more favor upon an extension of the power of the commission than he might do if he were not connected with such a commission. I mean no reflection upon Mr. Kelley in so stating.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield for a further question?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very pleased to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the Senator whether, in the Sherman Act, there are two sections, one of which, section 1, reads in part:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or other, or conspiracy, or restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal.

Mr. O'CONOR. That language appears in the act.

Mr. DONNELL. Does not the Senator take the view that the provision of section 1, which I have read, declaring illegal every contract, and so forth, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, includes within its scope any tendency toward the acquisition of assets tending to substantially lessen, hinder, or prevent competition?

Mr. O'CONOR. I find it difficult to agree with the Senator. In the Sherman Act cases to which the Senator has referred an essential element of the illegal monopoly or monopolization charged in these cases is the existence of a combination or conspiracy to acquire and maintain the power to exclude competitors to a substantial extent.

For example, in the Tobacco case, the Court stated that "an indispensable ingredient of each of the offenses charged in the formation is a combination or conspiracy."

But while the offense of combination or conspiracy can, of course, be reached under the Sherman Act, that law is ineffective with respect to mergers and acquisitions. Moreover, I wish again to emphasize that the method proposed by the pending bill is preferable in that it will reach incipient combinations before they achieve the stature of a monopoly.

Mr. DONNELL. But if the Senator will yield further, he does agree, does he not, that the Sherman Act, under the construction of the Court in these various cases over the years, would enable an asset acquisition if it involved any substantial lessening or hindering or suppression of competition to be restrained by injunction or to be punished if consummated?

Mr. O'CONOR. Again I find it difficult to agree with the Senator.

Mr. DONNELL. Will the Senator state whether or not in the case of Shotkin v. General Electric Company ((171 Fed. 2d) 230 U. S.) the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Tenth Circuit, decided December 30, 1948, the defendants were charged under sections 1, 2, 3, 7, and 15 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, and the court said:

> Regardless of the intent of the parties, if the inherent tendency of the combination, agreement, or concert is to lessen, hinder, or suppress competition in interstate commerce, it comes within the sweep of the act.

Mr. O'CONOR. That is one of the cases referred to by the Senator from Missouri which was emphasized during the hearings on the bill, and I am confident that the exact language, which, of course, I do not have before me, is as read by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DONNELL. I assure the Senator that it is.

Mr. President, may I at this point have unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD certain language from the minority views which I have filed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NIXON in the chair). Without objection, the matter may be inserted.

Mr. DONNELL. I read from the minority views as follows:

It is our opinion that the court, in the language so quoted—

And I may interpolate that I am referring to the language quoted from the Shotkin opinion—

It is our opinion that the court, in the language so quoted, is referring not to section 2 of the Sherman Act (which is the section relative to monopolization) but to section 1, which is the section which relates to contracts, combinations, or conspiracies in restraint of trade. The reason for this opinion is that the language so quoted is the concluding part of a paragraph the earlier portion of which reads:

"In determining whether a contract, combination, or concert constitutes restraint of trade or commerce in violation of the act, the intention of the parties may or may not be material, depending on whether the necessary effect of the agreement or concert or acts done is to directly restrain such trade or to create a monopoly. A specific intent to restrain such trade or commerce or to build up a monopoly in order for an agreement or concert to come within the scope of the act is not always necessary" (Swift & Co. v. United States (196 U. S. 375, 25 S. Ct. 276, 49 L. Ed. 518); United States v. Griffith (334 U. S. 100, 68 S. Ct. 941)).

The Senator from Maryland has been very patient indeed in responding to the questions which I have propounded, and I should like to ask him a few further questions.

He has referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of International Shoe Company v. Federal Trade Commission (280 U. S. 281) which holds that—

Under circumstances where a corporation with resources so depleted and the prospect of rehabilitation so remote that it faced the grave probability of a business failure with resulting loss to its stockholders and injury to the communities where its plants were operated, we hold that the purchase of its capital stock by a competitor (there being no other prospective purchaser), not with a purpose to lessen competition, but to facilitate the accumulated business of the purchaser and with the effect of mitigating seriously injurious consequences otherwise probable, is not in contemplation of law prejudicial to the public, and does not substantially (303) lessen competition or restrain commerce within the intent of the Clayton Act.

Mr. O'CONOR. I may say in answer to the Senator from Missouri that the particular reason for referring to that decision, or at least to portions of the decision which the committee's report adverts, was to emphasize the fact that the act had no applicability to companies in a failing or bankrupt condition. However, I may say that I think the examples cited by the able Senator from Missouri do not give any cause for alarm, because until and unless the sale of assets would have the effect of substantially lessening competition or tending to create a monopoly, the provisions of the proposed measure would not apply and the Federal Trade Commission would not interfere. In other words, the individual, such as has been described by the Senator from Missouri, should have no apprehension, if this bill were enacted into law.

Mr. DONNELL. I thank the Senator from Maryland. Will he yield for a further question?

Mr. O'CONOR. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Does not the Senator think that those who enacted the Clayton Act, in making it applicable to the acquisition of stock and not applicable to the acquisition of assets, may have been largely influenced by reason of the fact that a secret acquisition of control of a business could be effected through the purchase of the stock of such business, and it might therefore be desirable in ferreting out the existence of such secret acquisition or control of the business that an administrative body, such as the Federal Trade Commission, equipped with investigators, rather than a court, invested with power to issue an order to cease and desist, should be utilized? Does not the Senator think that that fact may have largely influenced the Congress of the United States in enacting in the Clayton Act a prohibition against the acquisition of stock and leaving out a prohibition against the acquisition of assets?

Mr. O'CONOR. That might have been one of the moving considerations, but it also should be borne in mind that the history of consolidations, mergers, and acquisitions prior to that time was one of stock, not asset purchases. At that time asset acquisitions were almost unheard of. The Congress in 1914 acted against the common or prevailing form of acquisitions, namely, the purchase of stock. But thereafter corporations found another method to accomplish the same purpose, namely, through the acquisition of assets, thus nullifying the effect of the law.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'CONOR. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is it not true that after the Clayton Act prohibited the acquisition of stock, the effect of which would be substantially to lessen or restrict competition, a large company would buy the physical plant of another company, leaving to the other company merely the paper shell of the corporate structure?

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator is undoubtedly correct. Many instances of that kind were found, and that seemed to be a growing practice as years went on. When one loophole was blocked, immediately another was found.

Mr. DOUGLAS. And this process has been carried on in the dairy business. The Borden company and other companies have used it.

Mr. O'CONOR. If it will not interfere with the questioning by the Senator from Missouri I should like to refer to the charts which I have before me.

Mr. DONNELL. If the Senator would permit me to continue for only a moment with the particular point to which I referred, I think it would be more connected in the reading of the RECORD than if it were to follow the line of information which the Senator from Maryland is about to give us.

Mr. O'CONOR. Very well.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator will note that in the senatorial debate on the Clayton Act, as it appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 51, part 14, at page 14316, former Senator Cummins is quoted as saying:

I do not believe that is the proper construction of the antitrust law; otherwise there could be no sale of business. I think there can be, but wherever the law permits the sale of the business then it ought to be open and public, and a corporation ought not to acquire control of a business simply through the purchase of the stock of a company which continues under its own name and, so far as the public knows, is independent in its management. That is what I think this section is intended in the main to prevent.

The Senator will recall that the quotation which I have read was set forth in my minority view as having been said by former Senator Cummins.

Mr. O'CONOR. I know it is set forth in the minority views, and I know it was referred to at one point during the hearings. I again refer the Senator from Missouri to the fact that in the Senate debate, as of the time the law was enacted, former Senator Walsh, of Montana, made the point:

It was intended [in this bill] to reach the practices that were not the practices of things that have developed into trusts and monopolies, but were practices of trade, which if persevered in and continued and developed, would eventually result in the creation of a monopoly or trust.

I think it is abundantly clear, therefore, that that was the intention of those who passed the law 36 years ago. I certainly do not believe that they intended to pass a law which has become a nullity.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am glad to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Would the Senator permit me to ask unanimous consent that at this point a certain portion of page 18 of the committee report may be printed in the RECORD? I refer to a portion of my minority view on this proposed legislation.

Mr. O'CONOR. I am happy to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. The portion of my minority view which I should like to have set forth at this point in the RECORD reads:

Secret stock acquisitions might readily deceive the public into believing that two corporations were competing with each other when actually one was owned by the other. Congress may, therefore, have thought at the time the Clayton Act was passed that a summary, quick type of procedure by an administrative agency, which also has the power and authority to investigate, was necessary to deal properly with such secret stock acquisitions, and that, because assets acquisitions are generally known by the public, the courts could, under the Sherman Act, adequately deal with assets acquisitions.

In Federal Trade Commission v. Western Meat Company, Thatcher Manufacturing Company v. Federal Trade Commission (272 U. S. 554, 560 (1926)), the Supreme Court said (561):

"The purpose of the act (the Clayton Act) was to prevent continued holding of stock and the peculiar evils incident thereto. If purchase of property has produced an unlawful status a remedy is provided through the courts. (Sherman Act, ch. 647, 26 Stat. 209; Act To Create a Federal Trade Commission, ch. 311, sec. 11, 38 Stat. 717, 724; Clayton Act, ch. 323, secs. 4, 15, 16, 38 Stat. 730, 736, 737; United States v. American Tobacco Co. (221 U. S. 106).) The Commission is without authority under such circumstances."

Assets acquisitions were obviously not likely to be secret.

I take it that the Senator from Maryland desires to introduce something further on this subject.

Mr. O'CONOR. Yes; in view particularly of the observations made by the able Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS].

Mr. DONNELL. I greatly appreciate the courtesy of the Senator from Maryland. After he finishes with the point he has in mind I shall have some minor questioning to pursue.

Mr. O'CONOR. I think it would be of interest at this juncture to have a quick glance at several charts which have been prepared at our request showing the general facts regarding the recent trends of mergers, illustrating the trends with specific examples.

For example, in regard to the question of the size of companies which have been doing the most acquiring, we made the assertion before that it has been the large companies which have been most active. The first chart before us shows, for example, that between the years 1940 and 1947 the greatest number of acquisitions—604 acquisitions to be exact—were made by the largest size of corporations, those with assets of $50,000,000 of over.

A slightly smaller number, or 590 acquisitions, to be specific, were made by the next largest size of corporations, those with assets of between $10,000,000 and $49,000,000. The total number of such acquiring corporations was 257.

A lesser number, or 264, to be exact, were made by the third largest size of corporations, those with assets of between $5,000,000 and $9,000,000. There were a total of 365 acquisitions by corporations in this group.

The smallest number of all was made by the smallest size of corporations, those with assets of under a million dollars.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am happy to yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yet those corporations represented the overwhelming proportion of the total number of corporations?

Mr. O'CONOR. Unquestionably so. As indicated in our previous statement, when the Senator was elsewhere—and I think repetition might not be out of order at this point—one-tenth of 1 percent of the total number of all American corporations, the giant firms with assets of $100,000,000 and over, but smallest in number, own 49 percent of the assets of all corporations.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am happy to yield to the junior Senator from Missouri.

Mr. KEM. The Senator from Maryland referred to the case of the small-business man, and the anxiety of the committee to assist him in his operations. I wonder if the committee has given any consideration—and I am sure they have—to the situation of the small-business man who wants to retire. I refer to a businessman who wants to sell his business and go to California, Florida, or perhaps Maryland to spend the rest of his days.

Mr. DONNELL. Or to Missouri.

Mr. KEM. Or to Missouri. Would he not be in a rather difficult position under present tax laws, which would take such a large part of the income of a prospective purchaser, that it would be extremely difficult for a purchaser to pay for the business out of the income of the business? Is that not correct?

Mr. O'CONOR. I can appreciate the point made by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. KEM. If the man who wants to retire is foreclosed from the possibility of selling the assets of his business to a competitor, as he can do under the present law, is he not in an almost impossible position with reference to retirement, which he has as his ambition?

Mr. O'CONOR. I may say to the Senator from Missouri that I do not think he would be foreclosed from selling his business to a competitor. I say that because, unless the proposed sale of assets of the corporation would have the effect of substantially lessening competition or tending to create a monopoly, the pending bill, if enacted into law, would not interfere with such a sale.

Mr. KEM. The Senator from Maryland would agree, would he not, that the possible market would be restricted by the enactment of this bill?

Mr. O'CONOR. No; I do not think so.

Mr. KEM. Because a small-business man can now sell to a large competitor, whereas, from what the Senator says, if the bill became law, he would be foreclosed from doing so.

Mr. O'CONOR. Not necessarily. It would all depend upon whether or not the sale would have the effect of substantially lessening competition.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question at that point?

Mr. O'CONOR. I yield.

Mr. DONNELL. Whether the Senator agrees with the interrogation of my distinguished colleague from Missouri or not, the fact is, is it not, that a similar apprehension was forcibly expressed to our committee by Mr. James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, Chicago, Ill., who testified before the subcommittee and stated, at page 295 of the hearings:

The second reason why we oppose this legislation is that the measure would injure small business. This measure represents, in substance, a renewal of the effort that has been made for years to induce Congress to so amend the antitrust laws that the opportunities of small companies to sell their businesses would, in effect, be restricted.

This measure, in effect, is based upon the premise that business development results only from the building of new plants, facilities, etc., and that such development should never follow the lawful acquisition of the assets of a competitive company.

This philosophy is particularly unfortunate in its application to thousands of smaller business firms.

Frequently a small business, on account of Government taxation policies, internal difficulties, business conditions, death, ill health, age, and many other sound considerations, is required to sell its assets, and in many cases, the only market for such sale is among competitiors. This measure would, in effect, prevent the sale of said assets to a competitor.

The measure would, in effect, freeze the assets of many small-business firms and prevent their expansion or further development. The result, of course, would be directly contrary to the expressed intention of the advocates of the measure, i. e., to protect small business against larger concerns.

Mr. O'CONOR. The gentleman to whom the senior Senator from Missouri has referred did, of course, make the statement quoted. But I wish to point out that many representatives of small business, including all of the small-business organizations which have testified on the bill have given it their unqualified support.

Mr. DONNELL. If the Senator will permit me to do so, I should like to read into the RECORD at this point an excerpt from page 22 of the report of the committee, being a portion of the minority views:

Mrs. Katherine Parsons, associate director of the employers' advisory division, Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, when testifying before the subcommittee, stated (hearings, p. 93):

"As the venture capital of individuals becomes scarcer small- and medium-sized corporations faced with the necessity of selling found that the market for their businesses was restricted to some larger corporation, usually a competitor.

"It is an indisputable fact that this legislation will now remove this principal remaining market for small- and medium-sized businesses in the event that sale becomes necessary. The physical properties would have to be disposed of piecemeal at salvage prices. The good will and reputation that the company may have built up over the years would bring in nothing to the stockholders."

Further, on the same page:

The Commerce and Industry Association of New York, Inc., in a memorandum printed in the hearings (p. 55), stated:

"The small corporate business is usually a family enterprise, or a so-called closed corporation; in either case the stock is closely held by relatively few individuals. Personal incentive and ability are the principal ingredients for its success; and in the absence of extreme, pressing circumstances the small business is not bought or sold. The factors motivating such sales are quickly enumerated; death or illness or the retirement of a principal shareholder, bad business conditions in the face of small operating capital, personal or immediate tax problems, are the ones most frequently responsible.

"When small business runs afoul of such circumstances, the only market usually available is among competitors in the same field. This bill would forbid competitors to purchase, and a small business would find it was unable to offer itself as a going concern to the highest bidder; virtually, it would of necessity be disposed of as at a forced sale; good will and the repute it may have earned as a going business would be lost to its stockholders."

I thank the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, just a word with respect to the other charts, so that they may be used by Senators.

The next chart concerns size of the companies which have been acquired. It will be remembered that the other chart to which I referred dealt with the size of the acquiring or purchasing corporations. As will be seen, it was the smaller companies which, over this period of time, have been acquired in greatest number. That is to say, in the 8-year period from 1940 to 1947, small companies, as shown in the first column, represent the overwhelming number of companies which were bought up. Only a few of the very large corporations were acquired, there being only 15 such mergers in the entire 8-year period.

As illustrative of the widespread nature of the merger movement, we have examined the merger activity in a number of industries, one of which is milk and dairy products. We find, as shown on this chart, a large number of mergers by this particular company over the years from 1940 to 1948, including horizontal acquisitions, vertical acquisitions, and those in a third category, which are termed "conglomerate."

The next chart shows a number of acquisitions in the grocery and food products field, including recent acquisitions by one of the largest of the Nation's firms.

The next chart deals with packaged foods, and shows acquisitions by one of the great corporations in that field.

The next chart shows acquisitions in the field of distilled spirits by one of the large corporations in that industry. Since 1933 there have been many mergers in that field. Other distilleries have been acquired; also wineries, tight-cooperage firms, and other conoerns.

The next chart, Mr. President, shows the extent to which one of the great farm-machinery corporations of the country by a continuous series of acquisitions since 1902 up to the present time has been absorbing possible competitors.

The remaining charts show the acquisitions which have been made by certain large chemical and steel companies.

I believe the charts may be of use to Senators in consideration of the pending bill.

Mr. President, I now yield the floor.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one further question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the Senator to permit me to read at this time into the RECORD an observation made by Mrs. Katherine Parsons, associate director of the employers' advisory division, Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, who testified before the subcommittee, as follows:

The proponents of the bill in their anxiety to frustrate the alleged monopolistic tendencies of a few giant corporations would freeze at their present size all corporate enterprise. The bald language of the bill prevents mergers and acquisitions between small- and medium-size corporations, destroys the hope of these corporations ever to expand so as to meet the very competition of the big fellows about which the bill's supporters complain.

Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to ask him in respect to one or two other phases of the matter also?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very happy to do so.

Mr. DONNELL. The bill in section 7 provides:

That no corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

I ask the Senator whether or not in any decision he knows of, the expression, "in any line of commerce in any section of the country" has been defined?

Mr. O'CONOR. I will answer by referring to the discussion of that subject contained in the committee report.

Mr. DONNELL. I ask the Senator if he will permit me at this time to read into the RECORD a portion of page 20 of the minority views?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. I read as follows:

The term "any section of the country" is not defined in the bill but would have to be determined by the Federal Trade Commission or the court. A similar phrase in an amendment to S. 1008 was criticized by Congressman CELLER (who introduced H. R. 2734) in House debate as follows:

"The phrase 'to restrain commerce in any section of the country' is new phraseology. I have not heard that before in any antitrust legislation or in any Federal Trade Commission legislation. It would give rise to all manner of questions, of controversies, and of disputes; there would be nothing but confusion. It would mean a field day for the lawyers. I am a lawyer and I would like to have a field day, but I do not think we should on the floor of this House, willy-nilly pass legislation without mature reflection and deliberation, that we should not accept words that would make for confusion, words which have not been passed upon by the courts." (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, 1949, vol. 95, pt. 7, p. 9061.)

I also ask the Senator if he will permit me to read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at this point another portion of the minority views?

Mr. O'CONOR. Yes; I am very glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. I read as follows, Mr. President:

A further reason why the uncertainty of the outcome of the adjudication above mentioned is especially great is that the effect of such acquisition which is determinative of the validity or invalidity of the transaction is whether or not it "may be" substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

The bill does not specify, as a ground of invalidity, an actual existence of power to lessen competition or a tendency to create a monopoly, but specifies merely that there "may be" a substantial lessening of competition or a tendency to create a monopoly. The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co. (334 U. S. 37, at p. 46) stated:

"The statute requires no more than that the effect of the prohibited price discriminations 'may be substantially to lessen competition * * * or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition.' After a careful consideration of this provision of the Robinson-Patman Act, we have said that 'the statute does not require that the discriminations must in fact have harmed competition, but only that there is a reasonable possibility that they "may" have such an effect.'" Corn Products Co. v. Federal Trade Commission (324 U. S. 726, 742).

The Court, however, in footnote 14 on page 46, stated:

"This language is to be read also in the light of the following statement in the same case, discussing the meaning of section 2 (a), as contained in the Robinson-Patman Act, in relation to section 3 of the Clayton Act:

"'It is to be observed that section 2 (a) does not require a finding that the discriminations in price have in fact had an adverse effect on competition. The statute is designed to reach such discriminations 'in their incipiency,' before the harm to competition is effected. It is enough that they 'may' have the prescribed effect. Cf. Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co. (258 U. S. 346, 356–357). But as was held in the Standard Fashion case, supra, with respect to the like provisions of section 3 of the Clayton Act, prohibiting tying clause agreements, the effect of which 'may be to substantially lessen competition, the use of the word "may" was not to prohibit discriminations having "the mere possibility" of those consequences, but to reach those which would probably have the defined effect on competition.'" 324 U. S. at 738; see also United States v. Lexington Mill Co. (232 U. S. 399, 411).

The Court, however, subsequent to said quoted footnote says, in the Morton Salt Co. case (l. c. 47):

"As we have pointed out, however, the Commission is authorized by the act to bar discriminatory prices upon the 'reasonable possibility' that different prices for like goods to competing purchasers may have the defined effect on competition."

In Standard Oil Company of California et al. v. United States (337 U. S. l. c. 300) the Court said:

"The Standard Fashion case, the first of the five holding that the act had been violated, settled one question of interpretation of section 3. The Court said:

"'Section 3 condemns sales or agreements where the effect of such sale or contract of sale "may" be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create monopoly * * *. But we do not think that the purpose in using the word "may" was to prohibit mere possibility of the consequences described. It was intended to prevent such agreements as would under the circumstances disclosed probably lessen competition, or create an actual tendency to monopoly.' (258 U. S. at 356–57." See also Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co. (334 U. S. 37, 46, n. 14).)

Then I read the next paragraph in the minority views, as follows:

From the foregoing there will be observed the difficulty which the Supreme Court has had in determining the meaning of the word "may." The word "may" probably does not mean the "mere possibility" but may mean either the "reasonable possibility" or, at most, the "probability" under "the circumstances disclosed."

Mr. President, I ask the Senator's pardon for reading one more portion of the minority views.

Mr. O'CONOR. I am glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. DONNELL. What I wish to read is as follows:

Obviously it will, prior to final adjudication, be in many specific cases difficult if not impossible to be certain whether or not the effect of a specific acquisition of assets may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly.

The extent by which a lessening of competition may constitute a substantial lessening thereof is also indeterminate in advance of final adjudication. The Supreme Court of the United States has held that in a case in which 6.7 percent of the total sales in a particular area are controlled by a company, such control is such that its effect "may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce," as used in section 3 of the Clayton Act (Standard Oil Company of California et al. v. United States (337 U. S. 293 (1949))).

I thank the Senator for having permitted me to read those matters into the RECORD.

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator is very welcome.

Mr. President, I now yield the floor, and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for a quorum call be rescinded and that further proceedings under the call be suspended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Is this the first call?

Mr. O'CONOR. It is.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I desire to make a few comments upon the bill which is now before the Senate. First, let me compliment most highly the very able Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], who has been in charge of the measure. I think he has done a remarkable piece of work in presenting the bill, in committee and on the floor of the Senate. My attention was called to the need of such a measure during the hearings of the so-called Temporary National Economic Committee, which in 1938 undertook a searching and painstaking study of our economy and on March 31, 1941, filed its report. In that report was contained a unanimous recommendation for the enactment of a bill like this. The record which was made by the Federal Trade Commission, and by others who had studied this question when they appeared before the Temporary National Economic Committee, left no doubt of the fundamental fact that an innocent defect in the drafting of section 7 of the Clayton Act back in 1914 had resulted in creating a great opportunity for escape by flagrant violators of the law.

It is true that the Supreme Court of the United States decided in several important cases that although the Clayton Act was designed to enable the Federal Trade Commission to prevent monopolistic mergers, authority of the act was not extended to a prohibition of such a merger by acquisition of the assets of competing corporations; but I want the record clearly to show the manner in which this great door of escape was created. Some of the most distinguished Supreme Court jurists this country has ever had disagreed with the decisions of the Supreme Court in this matter. Three of our most distinguished Chief Justices took the position which the sponsors of this bill have taken namely, Chief Justice William Howard Taft, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, and Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone. I think it is impossible to find more competent authority upon the law than those three eminent Chief Justices of the United States. In addition to them, we find dissenting from the decisions, the legalistic decisions which denatured section 7 of the Clayton Act, decisions which in effect said that violators of the clear letter of the law could get away with their loot, Justice Cardozo and Justice Brandeis. So five of the most eminent names in the history of the Supreme Court can be cited in support of the principle of this bill.

THE ESCAPE DOOR FOR MONOPOLY

One of the cases brought by the Federal Trade Commission was a famous one against Swift & Co., another was brought against Western Meat Co., and another against the Thatcher Manufacturing Co. The decisions may be found in 272 United States Reports at pages 559 to 562, and in 291 United States Reports, pages 587 to 608.

In these decisions cited in these two reports there was a clearly unlawful purchase of stock, but the defendant corporation had exercised the power it secured by the purchase of the stock to acquire actual title and possession of the assets of a competing corporation before the proceeding had been brought by the Federal Trade Commission. The Supreme Court said that the Commission had no authority to order divestiture of the assets because, in the opinion of the Court, the proceeding should have been initiated before the power to transfer the assets was exercised.

Is it any wonder that Chief Justice Taft dissented from that opinion? Is it any wonder that Justice Brandeis dissented? Justice Brandeis, in his dissent, said:

In my opinion, the purpose of section 7 of the Clayton Act was not as stated by the Court—

He was referring, of course, to the Supreme Court—merely to prevent continued holding of the stock and the peculiar evils incident thereto.

It was also to prevent the peculiar evils resulting therefrom.

That was one case. Another case, decided in 1934, will be found in Two Hundred and Ninety-first United States Reports, pages 587 to 608. The dissenters in this case were Chief Justice Hughes, Justice Stone, who afterwards became Chief Justice, and Justices Brandeis and Cardozo. The holding was not only that the Federal Trade Commission must have issued its complaint before the illegally acquired stock had been used to make the illegal act effective by the acquisition of the assets, but it must also have gone through the whole procedure of trial and decision and must have issued its order of divestiture before the assets were transferred. In other words, in that case, with the eminent and noble Justices dissenting, the Supreme Court, in a wholly legalistic decision, held that although the stock had been illegally acquired, in plain violation of the law, and although it had been used to acquire the assets which completed the monopolistic merger, nevertheless, if the merger were completed before the decree of divestiture was issued, the people's Government had no power to act to protect the people.

Mr. President, it seems to me now, as it has seemed to me for a long time, that an injustice of this kind cries to high heaven for remedy. It is that remedy which is provided in the bill which the Judiciary Committee has reported to the Senate and which it is now asking the Senate to pass.

I can see no argument whatsoever which would justify our refusal at this time to enact this bill into law. It has been said that the concentration of economic power proceeds from other causes as well as from monopolistic mergers. Of course, that is true. It has been said that monopolistic mergers were more characteristic of a day that has gone than of the present day. That, Mr. President, it seems to me, is not in accordance with the facts.

THE MODERN RECORD OF MERGERS

In 1947 the Department of Commerce conducted a survey of mergers which had been effectuated by the acquisition of assets. Let me interrupt myself at this point to say that I take it the record is perfectly clear that what this bill purports to do is to correct an omission in the original Clayton Act. When the authors of the Clayton Act and the Congress which passed it enacted the bill into law they thought they were giving the Federal Trade Commission administrative authority to prevent monopolistic mergers, so as to save the people and the competitive system from the danger and the sad results of having to go through the long procedure of correcting the evil after it had transpired. The Department of Commerce made a study of 1,800 recorded acquisitions which took place between January 1, 1940, and December 31, 1946. This survey was limited solely to the field of manufacturing and mining. It did not cover retail or wholesale trade; it did not cover service enterprises and other areas, where chain stores, supermarkets, and the like, have admittedly grown with startling rapidity during the past 15 years.

The record is full of monopolistic mergers of that kind. They were not dealt with in this study of the Department of Commerce. The study did not include even those mergers in manufacturing and mining which for one reason or another failed to be noticed in the press or recorded in standard investment manuals. Nevertheless, nearly two-thirds of all the mergers studied were effected by the purchase of assets. The characteristic feature of the 1,800 cases was the absorption of little firms by big firms, resulting in eliminating little business and magnifying big business.

Does any Senator need to have any argument presented to prove that this process has been going on? Year after year, and in Congress after Congress, we have appointed small-business committees. We appoint committees in our endeavor to get more business for small enterprises. During World War II the Small Business Committee, over which the distinguished Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] presided with great effect, devoted the major part of its time to inducing the defense services to recognize the capacity of small business firms to do the job. I think the Senator from Montana will bear me out when I say that his records show that the accumulation of orders given by the Government to big business was so great that the big business firms could not transact the business necessary to produce the arms which the Government needed.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I do indeed.

Mr. MURRAY. I wish to thank the Senator for his complimentary remarks. What he says is absolutely true. In one instance we found a huge corporation getting contracts from Washington when it was already filled up with orders to such a degree that it would not be able to start filling the contracts for a couple of years. In the correspondence we discovered a letter which read to the effect:

> Which war do you want these for? Do you want these for this war or the next war?

That would indicate that it was deemed impossible for the corporation to fulfill the contracts. Yet there were 30 small independent corporations which were willing to take the contracts. They had the ability to fulfill them. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. My recollection of what the committee under the Senator's direction was doing is vivid. I am very glad to have the Senator confirm what I have stated, and to have him add his very interesting comment on the letter.

Mr. MURRAY. Does not the Senator from Wyoming believe that we are about 50 years late in starting the movement to prevent this kind of consolidation?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I absolutely disagree with the Senator from Montana. We are not 50 years late in starting the movement. Perhaps we are 50 years late in completing it. I hope we shall not be any later than we are now.

Mr. MURRAY. I was prompted to make the remark, because when I first went to Montana, which was around the turn of the century, in the city of Butte there were 40 individual corporations, each with its own staff of engineers, lawyers, and so forth. The town was very prosperous. The merchants in the town carried the finest quality of merchandise. It had a beautiful club. However, as a result of consolidation Butte has come to the point where today there is only one single corporation operating there, and that through absentee management. It can be seen what happens to a community when consolidations are permitted to wipe out independent concerns.

DEGREE OF CONCENTRATION

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator. There is no doubt about the effect of such consolidations. However, I was referring to the results of the survey made by the Department of Commerce. Of the 1,800 cases it was found that in one-third of the mergers the assets of a merged company had been purchased by firms which had assets in excess of $50,000,000. Another 40 percent were purchased by firms or corporations which had assets ranging from $5,000,000 to $45,000,000. In other words, of these monopolistic mergers, 73⅓ percent were made effective by corporations with assets of $5,000,000 or more. The most significant fact was that one-third of the mergers were accomplished by giant corporations with assets of $50,000,000 or more.

In the face of the facts, it is no wonder that in the reports on the excess profits tax in World War II it was shown that concentration in the United States had proceeded to such an extent that of approximately 56,000 firms which filed excess profits tax returns in the year 1944, only 1,880 corporations with excess profits tax revenue of more than one million dollars, after all exemptions and all allowances, had more than 68 percent of the tax liability of all 56,000 corporations.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. THYE. The question which comes to my mind is simply this: Let us assume that the pending bill is enacted into law and let us assume further that a small corporation has met with financial difficulties, producing circumstances which they are unable to meet or overcome, thus practically forcing the corporation into bankruptcy, and leaving bankruptcy proceedings the only apparent course open to them. If the pending bill were enacted into law could another corporation legitimately make an offer to purchase not only the physical assets of the corporation under consideration, but the corporation's stock as well?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes, indeed.

Mr. THYE. How could that be done without being in violation of the proposed act?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. In my opinion, and in the opinion of the committee which filed the report, a bankruptcy sale would not be affected at all by a sale of assets by a corporation which was in bad financial condition. The language of the bill goes only to those acquisitions which substantially lessen competition or which tend to effect a monopoly.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. THYE. If I may pursue my questioning further——

Mr. KEFAUVER. What I am about to say is on the same point.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is in response to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KEFAUVER. As the distinguished Senator from Wyoming has so clearly stated, where it is necessary for the preservation of resources or for the settlement of an estate, section 7 of the Clayton Act, as now written, if the case involved a stock transaction, would not prohibit a sale for that purpose.

If the Senator will permit me I should like to invite his attention to the case of International Shoe Co. v. The Federal Trade Commission (280 U. S. 281), particularly to the paragraph which I read:

> A corporation with resources so depleted and the prospect of rehabilitation so remote that it faced the grave probability of a business failure with resulting loss to its stockholders and injury to the communities where its plants were operated, we hold that the purchase of its capital stock by a competitor (there being no other prospective purchaser), not with a purpose to lessen competition, but to facilitate the accumulated business of the purchaser and with the effect of mitigating seriously injurious consequences otherwise probably, is not in contemplation of law prejudicial to the public, and does not substantially (303) lessen competition or restrain commerce within the intent of the Clayton Act. To regard such a transaction as a violation of law, as this court suggested in United States v. U. S. Steel Corp. (251 U. S. 417, 446–447), would "seem a distempered view of purchase and result." See also Press Ass'n v. United States (245 Fed. 91, 93–94) (Id. pp. 302–303).

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, the question still lingers in my mind. Assume that a corporation buys the physical assets of another corporation and then proceeds to attempt to acquire the stock. If it is succesful and makes the purchase, is there a possibility that at some later time someone may bring suit, charging a violation of the law? That is the question which comes to my mind.

BANKRUPTCY NOT INVOLVED

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If I correctly understand the Senator's question, I think there is not the slightest ground for fear. In the first place, the Clayton Act, as it was written, and as it now stands upon the statute books, makes it illegal for one corporation to acquire the stock of another corporation competing with it when the result is substantially to lessen competition or to create a monopoly. But smart promoters, taking advantage of the fact that the drafters of that law directed the prohibition to the acquisition of the stock, said, "Let us not bother with the purchase of the stock. Let us create our monopoly by buying the assets." The purpose of the pending bill is not to create difficulty for small business, but to protect small business from being gobbled up by big business. I will say to the Senator that this measure is not a complete solution.

Mr. THYE. Then, as I understand, there is nothing in the bill which would prevent a corporation which might be classed as big business from going downstream and buying out a little mill which had been in operation for 50 years or more, but which was forced to discontinue operations because of changes in conditions, modern highways, and better transportation facilities. The local milling business which previously existed is absolutely destroyed, and the small miller is very desirous of selling. Would there be anything in the law which would prevent big business, if we may so classify it, from coming in and buying the small mill, paying off the stockholders and buying the physical equipment, closing down the mill, and proceeding to do the milling at the big business center?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. There would be nothing which would prevent that.

Mr. THYE. We see that change in operation throughout the land almost yearly.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course we do.

Mr. THYE. I present the question to the Senator in order that there may not be destroyed the opportunity of the small business corporation to sell to a large business corporation because the large business corporation can conduct the operation more efficiently.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very glad that the Senator has pointed out this example, because it lends force to the point I was about to make.

THE FINAL ACT OF A LONG DRAMA

We in this generation are seeing the final act of a long drama. I have before me on the desk the messages of Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States at the beginning of this century, in which he foresaw some of the things that were coming. Let me read just a paragraph from Theodore Roosevelt's seventh annual message. This message was delivered to the Senate and the House on the 3d of December 1907. He was speaking about big business, national business. He said, among other things:

If an incorporation law is not deemed advisable—

President Theodore Roosevelt believed in a Federal charter law. He was one of the authorities from whom I drew the inspiration to introduce, as I have introduced over and over and over again, a Federal charter bill.

If an incorporation law is not deemed advisable, a license act for big interstate corporations might be enacted; or a combination of the two might be tried. The supervision established might be analogous to that now exercised over national banks. At least, the antitrust act should be supplemented by specific prohibitions of the methods which experience has shown have been of most service in enabling monopolistic combinations to crush out competition. The real owners of a corporation should be compelled to do business in their own name. The right to hold stock in other corporations should hereafter be denied to interstate corporations, unless on approval by the Government officials, and a prerequisite to such approval should be the listing with the Government of all owners and stockholders, both by the corporation owning such stock and by the corporation in which such stock is owned.

So he went on and on, analyzing this question, but I am laying particular emphasis on the sentence—

At least, the antitrust act should be supplemented by specific prohibitions of the methods which experience has shown have been of most service in enabling monopolistic combinations to crush out competition.

Those were the words of Theodore Roosevelt in 1907. I have other very excellent Republican authority.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. BREWSTER. I assume that the Senator from Wyoming is familiar with the action taken by the administration in the last war, when, I think at the instigation of Secretary Stimson, the President requested the Attorney General to suspend prosecutions under the antitrust acts.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, yes.

Mr. BREWSTER. Does the Senator from Wyoming feel that that action was wise and warranted in connection with the war effort at that time?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Because of the war effort I raised no voice against it. Whether it was wise I had serious doubt at the time, but who was I to protest at that moment?

Mr. BREWSTER. I shared the feeling of the Senator. I have certainly had some qualms, as one concerned about this problem from the day I first came to Washington. I have been concerned about the continued concentration of economic power which has occurred under the administration of those with whom the Senator from Wyoming is more intimately associated and sympathetic than am I.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I know that the Senator from Maine is a Senator of wide intimacy and of great knowledge. I do not question those attributes of his, nor do I claim any superiority over him.

Mr. BREWSTER. I shared the qualms of the Senator from Wyoming. However, the Senator from Maine entertained the feeling that the President, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and others in the Cabinet had both a very intimate knowledge and a very great responsibility. I think we all had reason to withhold our fire.

Does it seem to the Senator from Wyoming that it would be wise, now that we are on the eve of the proclamation of a national emergency, requiring total mobilization, to place possible further impediments in the situation when, by the first of next week, the administration may suggest that we suspend the operation of many of our existing restrictions?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think that this bill, if enacted, would offer no impediment that would be worthy of the name to national defense production, because I can see no reason to believe that the production of the materials needed for the war would be in any degree dependent upon the acquisition by one corporation of the assets of another. I think there is no reason to believe, for example, that United States Steel should be made greater than it is, or that General Motors should be made greater than it is, or that either of these should have the power now to expand their great economic empires by the acquisition of the stock of corporations and the assets of corporations that might possibly be competing with them.

Mr. BREWSTER. How would the Senator from Wyoming distinguish the situation we face now from the situation which we faced in 1942?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I distinguish it exactly as the Senator from Maine distinguishes it. If I understood him correctly just a moment ago, he said that he had great qualms about the validity and the desirability of suspending prosecutions under the antitrust laws. So did I. I did not think it was necessary then, and the Senator from Maine did not think it was necessary.

Mr. BREWSTER. Not quite that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Well, the Senator had great qualms.

Mr. BREWSTER. I said I shared the Senator's qualms, but I added that I felt, out of deference to the knowledge and responsibility of the administration at that time, who were responsible—and I think the Senator at one time was associated with me on the Truman committee when we were conducting very intensive studies——

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I was not a member of that committee, but on a few occasions I was accorded the privilege of participating with the committee in the examination of certain witnesses.

Mr. BREWSTER. That, I think, is what comes to my mind. I felt that the President, the Commander in Chief, and the Cabinet must have had very grave reasons before they took an action which was so much in conflict with the entire philosophy certainly of the administration hitherto. The records, the platforms, the whole policies of the Democratic Party were against monopoly, and yet when the President and Mr. Stimson and Mr. Knox, the latter two being distinguished Republicans, associated with the Cabinet, secured the adoption of that recommendation to the Attorney General, it seemed to me very strong evidence that the enforcement of the act at that time was calculated to put impediments in the way of an all-out war effort.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION NOT INVOLVED

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Surely it is obvious to the Senator from Maine that the exchange of letters between the Attorney General and the Secretary of War did not have the force and effect of law. It was merely an administrative decision that for the purposes of the war the terms of the Sherman Act and other antitrust laws would not be called into play. Now I say it is clear that a similar letter, if it were necessary, could cover the Clayton Act, as amended, just as well as it covered the Clayton Act as it then stood upon the statute books.

Mr. BREWSTER. That, of course, is true. I presume that all laws can be suspended. Whether or not this bill, if enacted, would add anything to the problems, whether it would be as easy to nullify four laws as it would be to nullify three, I do not know.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I can only say to the Senator from Maine that in my opinion the passage of the pending bill will add nothing to the problem, but it will add a great deal to our purpose if we have the purpose of reestablishing a competitive and a really free economy in the United States when this emergency is passed.

Mr. President, I wish to read to the Senator a quotation by Henry Luce which I ran across several years ago in Fortune magazine. He was then the head, probably the principal owner, of Time, Life, and Fortune. This is what he said in that article in Fortune magazine:

> Business can now unwind at a profit, just as it wound up at a profit; and if neither business nor Government make a move in this direction, if bigness is to remain the standard concept of the economy, then the American businessman, the American politician, and, in short, all American citizens, must prepare themselves for a different order of things, in which the powers of the Government are not limited, in which the right to risk and profit is not clear, and in which the making, the selling, and even the buying of the products of the biggest show on earth are all mysteriously directed from abroad.

I can cite to the Senator quotations even from Theodore Roosevelt back as far as 1907 and 1908 when he was recommending that we should recognize the fact that modern business was becoming bigger and bigger, and that the solution was to clothe the Federal Government with greater supervisory powers, with greater powers of control. I think that is a danger to be avoided.

Mr. BREWSTER. Would the Senator from Wyoming also recognize that the same Theodore Roosevelt did distinguish between giant corporations as to good ones and bad ones?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Certainly.

Mr. BREWSTER. Therefore mere bigness was not his standard of virtue or of vice. That, I think, was very clearly established, as I was a disciple of his, along, perhaps, with the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let me read from Theodore Roosevelt so that there may be no doubt, so that those who will compliment us by reading the RECORD of what we say will know precisely what Theodore Roosevelt said, and not what the Senator and I interpret him as having said. This is from Theodore Roosevelt's eighth annual message dated at the White House December 8, 1908:

> There should be regulation by the National Government of the great interstate corporations, including a simple method of account keeping, publicity, supervision of the issue of securities, abolition of rebates, and of special privileges. There should be short-time franchises for all corporations engaged in public business, including the corporations which get power from water rights—

And so forth. He was going a long way.

Mr. BREWSTER. He went some distance beyond that when he recommended the repeal of judicial decisions.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. BREWSTER. I am sure the Senator recognizes that.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. BREWSTER. The Senator from Maine is seeking to make the point that he certainly recognizes that the administration, if we enter into an all-out effort within the next few days, which seems quite likely, could just as well suspend this law if the pending bill should become law, as others.

A COMPETITIVE ECONOMY IS OUR GOAL

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes, of course. I should like to see the law on the statute books so that when the present great emergency has passed we may have some hope of returning to a competitive economy instead of looking to the sort of economy that Henry Luce pointed to in the article in Fortune magazine—a collectivist economy. This is our danger, it seems to me. Collectivism is moving forward apace throughout the world, and industrial collectivism leads inevitably to political collectivism. That I would like to avoid.

Mr. BREWSTER. If there had been more vigorous enforcement of existing law, I might welcome additions. However, if there was any force to the action and the policy adopted by the administration in the last war, now, on the eve of this crisis to attempt to add further to the administrative responsibilities of dissipating any possible concentration of assets, as this measure proposes, seems to the Senator from Maine a most unhappy time to have a further mandate by the Congress in this direction, particularly in the closing hours of what must be recognized as a Congress which has had at the hands of the people a suggestion of a somewhat different responsibility and control. This post-election, "lame duck" Congress seems to me to be a most unhappy time to press for action on an issue of this character, which, as the Senator from Wyoming and other Senators well know, has been agitated here for a very long time, but has not hitherto been favorably considered by the Congress.

However, now, in the closing hours of the session, with a war crisis imminent, and with all the possibilities of mobilization, which we must consider, it seems to me not to be the part of wisdom to press for action on this issue. It has been my very earnest hope that the advocates of this measure might feel disposed to postpone the further consideration of it until somewhat more peaceful times.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I am sure the Senator will not misunderstand me when I say that I regard that argument as merely a defeatist argument, without any real substance.

I will say to the Senator that every great President since the turn of the century—as a matter of fact, every President—has pointed with fear and trembling at this concentration of economic power, because they saw in it the complete elimination of the competitive economy which we have liked to believe has been the mainspring of America. I believe it has been. I have quoted President Theodore Roosevelt. I can quote President Taft. In 1910, William Howard Taft sent to the Congress of the United States a message in which he recommended a national incorporation law. He was influenced by recognition of the fact that even at that time, 40 years ago, national business was becoming so great that it was overpowering the States. State lines mean nothing now, Mr. President, to any of the giant corporations which carry on the business of the country.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President——

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask the Senator to permit me to finish this statement, please.

I shall read now from a message which President Taft delivered to Congress on January 7, 1910. Perhaps I shall quote somewhat at length from it:

> There has been a marked tendency in business in this country for 40 years last past toward combination of capital and plant in manufacture, sales, and transportation. The moving causes have been several. First, it has rendered possible great economy; second, by a union of former competitors it has reduced the probability of excessive competition; and, third, if the combination has been extensive enough and certain methods in the treatment of competitors and customers have been adopted, the combiners have secured a monopoly and complete control of prices for rates.

President Taft was fairly assessing the situation. His mind was not blind to monopoly.

In speaking of these combinations, he further said:

> If they attempt by use of their preponderating capital and by a sale of goods temporarily at unduly low prices to drive out of business their competitors—

Mr. President, why do you suppose the then President of the United States said that? Was it not because he knew, of his own personal experience, not only as the Chief Executive of the Nation, but as a distinguished and able judge, that monopolistic corporations had been doing precisely that?

He further said at that time:

or if they attempt, by exclusive contracts with their patrons or threats of nondealing except upon such contracts—

A system which is in use today, whereby monopolies further their aims—or by other methods of a similar character—

So President Taft said—

to use the largeness of their resources and the extent of their output compared with the total output as a means of compelling custom and frightening off competition, then they disclose a purpose to restrain trade and to establish monopoly.

There is a devastating analysis of the evils of monopoly.

We have before us at this time a bill which proposes the simple closing of a gap through which monopoly has been escaping.

I have cited decisions which show how perfectly amazing was the illegality which was condoned by legalistic opinions of the Supreme Court. I have referred to President Theodore Roosevelt and to President William Howard Taft. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] in his opening speech referred to President Woodrow Wilson. As a matter of fact, the Clayton Act was enacted during the administration of Woodrow Wilson, and it carries out precisely the recommendation contained in the message of 1907 from Theodore Roosevelt, namely, that there should be an amendment to the antitrust law which would contain that prohibition.

So there is no partisanship in connection with this matter. Great Republican leaders have condemned monopoly and have sought to create remedies to prevent it from taking control of our entire economy, and a great Democratic President asked a Democratic Congress to enact such a measure. Then, when the act was under interpretation by the Supreme Court of the United States the great Chief Justice of that Court, who once was the nominee of the Republican Party for President, the late Charles Evans Hughes, took precisely the view which I took when I introduced the companion bill to the House measure, now before us. He took precisely the view which I took when I first recommended the bill. Another great Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Harlan Fiske Stone, who was Attorney General in the Cabinet of another Republican President, took exactly the same point of view.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I wish to preface my question by a few remarks. I think I can agree fully with the generality that power anywhere has a tendency to corrupt, whether it be in labor unions or in the field of money wealth. We have even seen it in the church, at times, as history demonstrates. We have seen it everywhere.

I was very much impressed by the interchange of questions and comments between the Senator from Wyoming and the Senator from Maine, because this very day a concrete proposition has come to me from my own State, in the case of three small manufacturing plants, because they cannot get orders from the Government in this war period; and if they are unable to obtain orders, and have to close down, the result will be to put out of employment approximately 1,500 persons. So in that case, again, we find the element of power exercising a controlling influence.

The Government is exercising this power in letting contracts. As I recall the answer given to the Senator from Minnesota, if the plants receiving contracts cannot, in the interest of national defense, obtain tools and equipment from the plants which are unable to obtain contracts, the national defense, as a result, will be prejudiced. To me, that presents a challenge to the entire country, because, if those who, as we might say, have an "in" in Washington, are to get the contracts in the event an emergency arises which necessitates our spending, as it is contemplated, $75,000,000,000, even though we may not actually go to war, it will mean that the only recourse left to the three small plants to which I have referred will be for them to go into bankruptcy; in which event, the receiver would sell the concerns for whatever he could get for them. If the plant which gets the contract needs the assets of those smaller companies to promote the general welfare, yet, if it would have a tendency toward monopoly, it would be impossible for the company holding the contract to purchase the assets of those smaller companies.

In the present state of things, such a situation requires serious consideration on the part of all. According to reports which I have heard over the radio and read in the press, we are likely to have an important declaration very soon. Again, according to the statement of Prime Minister Attlee to the President, if it is true—and I shall not repeat it, because it is of a very serious nature, though I may say it was repeated recently on the radio—we are now in the most challenging period of our national history. Therefore, in the case of plants which are capable of producing the things which are needed in this emergency, we should not place obstacles in their way when they seek government contracts for the production of things needed by the Government in order to meet the emergency. Have I made myself clear?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Perfectly clear. But let me say to the Senator that when World War II started, the 100 largest corporations in the United States, in the first 6 months—and the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] will correct me if I am in error—received about 90 percent of all the defense contracts which were made.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question at that point?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. In a moment. But, I was going to say, through the operation of the Special Committee to Study and Survey Problems of Small Business Enterprises, of which the Senator from Montana was the head, and through the operation of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, that percentage was greatly changed. By the end of the war, the percentage of contracts held by the 100 largest firms was practically cut in two. I now yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. WILEY. I am glad to hear the Senator's statement, but I also saw recently that the plants which had been tooled up 5 years ago were now out of date so far as meeting the need of the present weapons and other things to meet the present challenge, whatever it may amount to, and I can readily conceive that a plant which does not have the "in" will not get a contract. There may be good people who own it. If the company which receives the contract were permitted to buy the tools and other assets of the smaller companies, I believe it would be in the public interest; but here, in a time of emergency and of challenge to our very existence, they are prevented from doing so.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I may say in all sincerity that I do not know what greater "in" the Wisconsin corporations referred to by the Senator could possibly have than the support of the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, who is now interrogating me.

Mr. WILEY. Will the Senator please say that "again and again and again"? If he will, I shall appreciate it very much.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I say it again, again, and again. I suggest to the Senator that all in the world he has to do is to take the names of those three corporations to the Secretary of Defense and to the head of procurement, and they will be recognized, or I am no prophet.

Mr. WILEY. Will the Senator yield again for a moment?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator just said that at the beginning of World War II, 95 percent of the contracts were centered in about 100 corporations.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. WILEY. I think the able Senator will find that the percentage now is about the same.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think not; but if so, let us overturn it. Let the Senator and I join——

Mr. WILEY. The Senator has not answered my question. I am talking about stockholders who have invested their money in certain concerns which, by reason of shortages in steel, aluminum, and other materials, are unable to obtain what they need; yet a company which gets a Government contract is able to get those necessary things. The people to whom I referred a few moments ago, who are citizens of this Republic, are going to be wiped out, if this measure is passed, for it will be found that they will be prohibited from selling their assets to the company which, under Government contract, desires to manufacture the things needed by the Government.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I deny the Senator's conclusion because, if an actual emergency is declared, and I sincerely believe it ought to be declared——

Mr. WILEY. Amen.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The priority powers contained in the Defense Production Act of 1950 can be used to give those three companies the precise priorities which they need.

Mr. WILEY. Not unless they can obtain the Government contracts.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The allocations can be used, and if a national emergency is declared, as I think it ought to be, there will be a ceiling over wages and a ceiling over prices——

Mr. WILEY. Is the Senator in favor of that?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. As I said a moment ago, all in the world the Senator from Wisconsin has to do is to take the names of those three corporations to the Government, and they will, I am sure, receive consideration.

Mr. WILEY. The situation I have pictured is merely an illustration not only of what has been going on for weeks but of what is happening today.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am afraid that not enough contracts have been let; but I may say to the Senator that the Committee on Appropriations is now in session. I ought to be in the committee meeting, instead of here.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator is more illuminating here than he would be in the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator from Wisconsin has never heard me in the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILEY. Let us first get the answer.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No; I said over and over again that in such a case as this, in my opinion this law would not be an impediment. It would not be an impediment.

Mr. WILEY. It would be a repetition of what occurred following the declaration of World War II.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. KEFAUVER. As a matter of fact, would not this bill, if enacted into law, be of assistance to small business enterprises, to keep them from being gobbled up? We all know that some of the great corporations, which are the producers of some of our basic products have a substantial monopoly over some products. Unfortunately, if those big corporations are led to think that perhaps by depriving small business of contracts and subcontractors, or by depriving them of necessary raw materials, they are going to be able to force them to sell their outfits, then the temptation would be present to do so; whereas, if the smaller firms had the protection of this bill, it seems to me the temptation would not be so great for the big corporation to bring about conditions under which the small fellow would be forced to sell out to him. That is to say, strong antitrust laws, during a time of great scarcity or allocation of materials have always been protections to small business, in my opinion.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I quite agree with the Senator from Tennessee, who, when he was a member of the Judiciary Committee of the House, was a tower of strength in the House in support of this proposed legislation.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. His bill, as I recall it, which he introduced in the House several years ago, had the support of a majority of the Members of the House committee. This measure has been endorsed, recommended, and approved over and over again by all who have seen the progress of concentration.

I was referring a moment ago to various Presidents who have recommended action along this line. I referred to President Theodore Roosevelt, to President William Howard Taft, and to President Woodrow Wilson. The same recommendation was made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was also made by President Harry S. Truman. During the administration of President Herbert Hoover, the latter, noting this great trend toward monopoly, named a special research committee on social trends, of which he appointed Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, as I recall, chairman. There was a chapter in its great report, written by Dr. Charles E. Merriam, of Chicago, in which there was presented a table showing a comparison of certain corporations in cities and States with respect to gross revenues and number of employees. The purpose of the table was to show how corporations were obtaining greater economic power than that of the cities and States themselves.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert this table in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Comparison of certain corporations, States, and cities with respect to gross revenues and number of employees

Corporation or political unit	Gross revenues [1] [3]	Employees [2]
United States Steel Corporation	$1,201,377,367	211,055
Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co	1,053,692,882	49,000
General Motors Corporation	996,687,332	172,938
Pennsylvania Railroad system	616,638,650	166,607
New York City	611,571,726	87,509
Standard Oil Co. of Indiana	465,752,175	44,520
General Electric Co	396,242,631	78,380
American Telephone & Telegraph Co	292,014,871	324,343
New York State	272,940,372	28,798
Chicago	241,748,819	41,983
Detroit	154,619,790	19,436
Los Angeles	152,166,523	16,975
Philadelphia	133,522,058	21,997
California	116,919,827	17,495
New Jersey	91,068,090	8,385
Boston	79,095,089	20,606
Ohio	78,527,215	6,426
Illinois	69,901,391	13,134
North Carolina	41,401,317	6,506
Maryland	28,165,361	6,962
Maine	18,014,201	2,500

[1] Corporation gross revenues include income from all sources for the year 1930. Figures from annual reports or from Standard Corporation Records. State figures are revenue receipts for 1929 and are from U. S. Bureau of the Census, Financial Statistics of States. City figures are revenue receipts for 1928 and are from U. S. Bureau of the Census, Financial Statistics of Cities.

[2] Figures on municipal and State employees are for 1930 with the exception of the States of New York and New Jersey, which are for 1928. The figures are not necessarily comparable because some of the items include only those in the classified service; some include educational employees and others do not.

[3] These figures include a part of county receipts and receipts of special districts as allocated by the Bureau of the Census.

Comparison of certain corporations, States, and cities—gross revenues and number of employees, 1942

Rank in 1942 gross revenues	Corporation or political unit	Gross revenues	Employees	Rank in 1928–30, gross revenues
(1)	General Motors Corp	$2,250,548,859	314,144	(3)
(2)	United States Steel	1,862,951,692	335,866	(1)
(3)	American Telephone & Telegraph	1,469,263,216	327,107	(8)
(4)	Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co	1,378,147,240	----	(2)
(5)	General Electric Co	913,656,277	139,939	(7)
(6)	Pennsylvania R. R. System	838,474,622	151,604	(4)
(7)	New York State	720,306,000	55,873	(9)
(8)	New York City	714,653,000	[1] 132,975	(5)
(9)	California	517,261,000	[2] 29,010	(14)
(10)	Standard Oil of Indiana	464,558,256	----	(6)
(11)	Illinois	368,572,000	20,999	(18)
(12)	Ohio	358,380,000	[3] 20,277	(17)
(13)	New Jersey	202,685,000	13,898	(15)
(14)	North Carolina	132,662,000	14,616	(19)
(15)	Chicago	114,763,000	[4] 31,318	(10)
(16)	Detroit	104,981,000	[5] 23,758	(11)
(17)	Philadelphia	81,405,000	[6] 19,699	(13)
(18)	Boston	77,620,000	[7] 12,606	(16)
(19)	Maryland	76,887,000	[8] 9,253	(20)
(20)	Maine	40,342,000	[9] 6,196	(21)
(21)	Los Angeles	39,832,000	[10] 19,070	(12)

[1] General government, 100,626; public-service enterprises, 32,349.

[2] General government, 28,486; public-service enterprises, 524.

[3] General government, 18,928; public-service enterprises, 1,349.

[4] General government, 27,807; public-service enterprises, 3,509.

[5] General government, 16,629; public-service enterprises, 7,129.

[6] General government, 18,696; public-service enterprises, 1,003.

[7] General government, 12,075; public-service enterprises, 531.

[8] General government, 9,176; public-service enterprises, 77.

[9] General government, 5,940; public-service enterprises, 256.

[10] General government, 10,997; public-service enterprises, 8,073.

Notes on public employment: Figures exclude schools, work relief, and contract-work employment. Unless otherwise indicated, employment total relates to general government only.

Source: Standard and Poor's, corporation records; and publications of the U. S. Bureau of the Census.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY. Does not the Senator believe that as a result of our experience in the last war the procurement agencies of the Government will be inclined to help the small business concerns which have been referred to by the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think that is correct.

Mr. MURRAY. We discovered, as result of the mobilization of small business in the war, that we obtained the greatest production that could have been anticipated. It was really as the result of production that we won the war, and it was accomplished by bringing in the smaller concerns to participate in the war-production program. The Smaller War Plants Corporation made a great contribution, because they could aid a dozen small corporations to join together and take a major contract, and in that way, through the huge contributions made by small concerns there was wonderful production during the war.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I feel confident that the same result which was obtained largely through the leadership of the Senator from Montana during World War II will now be obtained. I think the lesson of World War II has been learned. We are now considering a new appropriation bill, and I know that the members of the Appropriations Committee will make that clear to the Defense Establishment.

Mr. MURRAY. The proposed legislation which the Senator is now supporting will have nothing other than a beneficial effect on small business concerns; is not that a fact?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is so beyond any doubt. The point of the matter may be emphasized by the fact that in the study of the Department of Commerce to which I referred a little while ago nearly 25 percent of the 18 mergers by acquisition of assets represented what was known as conglomerate mergers; that is to say, corporations buying other corporations dealing in unrelated businesses. For example, the Universal Match Co. purchased a number of candy corporations. This widespread entry of corporations into unrelated lines of manufacture is, in part, a result of the extraordinary accumulation of liquid assets in corporate treasuries because of their operations during the war, and because we have not taken the steps necessary to prevent this constant concentration which closes the door to enterprise by the citizens of the States which are represented by every Senator upon this floor; and by voting against this bill I am confident Senators would be voting against the interests of their own constituents, to say nothing of the competitive economy in which we all really and sincerely believe.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. As one of the able lawyers of this great body I should like to have the Senator's opinion on the record in relation to this matter, because the bill came from our committee, and while we can agree in large part with the philosophy expressed and with a great many of the conclusions, I should like to have his opinion on the point I am about to mention. If this amendment to the present law should be enacted, in the Senator's opinion, would the President, in case he should declare a state of emergency to exist, have the power to suspend the operation of the law as amended?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Just as much so as President Franklin D. Roosevelt had by the exchange of letters between the Department of Justice and the War Department during World War II.

Mr. WILEY. That is not the answer I was looking for.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course it is not. But the Senator, as a great lawyer—and I return his compliment—knows as well as I do that in a national emergency we do things in the national defense which are necessary to the national defense, but we do them without sacrificing our loyalty to the principle of a free economy and political freedom. Abraham Lincoln himself did such things in order to preserve the Union; and the Supreme Court, after the fact, said that some of those actions were without strict authority of law.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator has indeed created a situation here which I think calls for earnest consideration by every Senator, because he has said, in substance, that there is no authority in law for the act of the Executive, and if the plant to which I have referred does, in the public interest, something which is contrary to law and after the show is over it is likely to be called to the bar of justice, it seems to me we have created a weak situation psychologically which does not add to the security of our national defense.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I will say to the Senator, in all sincerity, that I believe the answers which I have given to him, and the answer which was given to him by the Senator from Tennessee, were completely apt. I do not believe there is any danger such as has been described by the Senator.

The record of the courts in construing the Clayton Act as it now stands with respect to the acquisition of stock is clear that the law cannot be used to cover such a case as that which the Senator describes, and the amendment of the law by prohibiting the acquisition of assets as well as stock would not in any way increase the difficulties nor increase the concern of the corporations of which the Senator speaks.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, before the Senator leaves the floor——

Mr. WILEY. Just a moment, please. If events should occur which we think may occur, I think the Senator's statement on the RECORD will be of considerable comfort to people who must make a decision as to whether they will do so and so. I thank the Senator for his very explicit and illuminating opinion.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator's inquiries have been most helpful.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, before the Senator from Wyoming yields the floor, and while the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] is present, I should like to make the observation, and ask the Senator from Wyoming if it is not correct, that in the Defense Production Act, which Congress passed not so long ago, there is provided a detailed method for working out exceptions to all antitrust laws in the event the national defense effort makes it necessary that it be done, and would not that act apply equally to matters under the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Certainly.

Mr. KEFAUVER. So that if it becomes necessary to work out a formula in any particular case in which the application of an antitrust act, whether it be the Clayton Act or the Sherman Act, was thought to be impeding the war effort, a system has been worked out by law for suspending the operation of such acts in certain cases, and that system has been set up in the National Defense Production Act, which Congress recently passed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator for calling attention to that fact.

Mr. KEFAUVER obtained the floor.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, do I understand the Senator from Tennessee to say that the language of the act to which he refers is so general that it confers upon the Executive the power to suspend practically any law?

Mr. KEFAUVER. In any case in which the mobilization effort requires the suspension of the antitrust laws, there is a procedure, established by law, through which such suspension can be made. This procedure is set forth in the Defense Production Act.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I think a group of people in my State followed that procedure. They were brought to the bar of justice, and the judge, who was a former Member of the Senate, soaked them.

Mr. KEFAUVER. The act to which I referred was passed only recently, and I understand that there have been only a few cases under it.

Mr. WILEY. Perhaps we are referring to two different situations.

Mr. KEFAUVER. If the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin will examine the Defense Production Act, he will find that a mechanism is provided by law under which in certain circumstances and in the interest of the defense effort the antitrust laws can be suspended.

Mr. WILEY. I suggest that the Senator obtain the statute and put it into the RECORD at this point. I believe it would be helpful, particularly to persons who are interested at the present time and to those who may become interested in the subject at a future time, so that no one will get his fingers burned.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I shall insert in the RECORD the section of the Defense Production Act referred to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. WILEY. Perhaps the Senator could read it into the RECORD.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I shall put it into the RECORD as soon as I obtain a copy of the act.

Mr. WILEY. I thought the Senator was talking about some previous legislation because I have a distinct recollection that in my State an agreement had been entered into by and with the consent of the Attorney General, but that afterward the United States district court, presided over by a former Member of this body, held that the Attorney General had no such authority. The decision went against the persons who had in good faith gone ahead in the interest of what they thought was the public welfare, and they found themselves in the doghouse, so to speak.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I think that is the kind of situation to which this section of the Defense Production Act was addressed. The case to which the Senator from Wisconsin refers must have arisen before the passage of the Defense Production Act. However, I shall get the exact language and insert it in the RECORD.

Mr. WILEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, while we are talking about the effect upon the war effort and how this subject fits into general defense activities, and while we are also discussing the attitude of great statesmen of the past in connection with the matter of monopolies—statesmen of both political parties—I think I could start my short statement with no better quotation than one from the great American President, Abraham Lincoln. He said:

> I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the Republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless.

Mr. President, it was the attitude of such great men as Abraham Lincoln which some 30 years after the quoted statement was made, brought about the passage of the Sherman Act and the later antitrust laws.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. WILEY. Is it not true that since those days, because of inheritance taxes in the States, and because of other systems of taxation which are in force today, it is very seldom that large fortunes remain intact for more than three generations?

Mr. KEFAUVER. In answer to the Senator I should like to say that of course inheritance taxes have done a great deal to divide wealth. Nevertheless, since the time Abraham Lincoln made the statement which I quoted, the control of industry of our Nation has become more and more concentrated in the hands of fewer and fewer persons and corporations. The trend has been continuous in that direction. I could cite statistics to show that in the 1920's certain basic industries were controlled by large corporations to the extent of 40 percent, later 50 percent, and later still 60 percent or more. Today, control of industries which manufacture a great many of our basic products—steel, copper, lead, and many other products upon which our very economy depends—is held by a handful of corporations. So the trend in the control of many industries has been opposite to what the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin has indicated.

Reverting back to the question of exemption from the antitrust laws during the mobilization period, I refer to Public Law 774, Eighty-first Congress, chapter 932, second session. The act came to the Senate as H. R. 9176. It was approved September 8, 1950. I refer particularly to section 708.

Section 708 (a) provides:

> The President is authorized to consult with representatives of industry, business, financing, agriculture, labor, and other interests, with a view to encouraging the making by such persons with the approval by the President of voluntary agreements and programs to further the objectives of this act.

Subsections (b) and (c) particularly bear upon this question. Perhaps I should read them:

> (b) No act or omission to act pursuant to this act which occurs while this act is in effect, if requested by the President pursuant to a voluntary agreement or program approved under subsection (a) and found by the President to be in the public interest as contributing to the national defense shall be construed to be within the prohibitions of the antitrust laws or the Federal Trade Commission Act of the United States. A copy of each such request intended to be within the coverage of this section, and any modification or withdrawal thereof, shall be furnished to the Attorney General and the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission when made, and it shall be published in the Federal Register unless publication thereof would, in the opinion of the President, endanger the national security.
>
> (c) The authority granted in subsection (b) shall be delegated only (1) to officials who shall for the purpose of such delegation be required to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, unless otherwise required to be so appointed, and (2) upon the condition that such officials consult with the Attorney General and with the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission not less than 10 days before making any request or finding thereunder, and (3) upon the condition that such officials obtain the approval of the Attorney General to any request thereunder before making the request. For the purpose of carrying out the objectives of title I of this act, the authority granted in subsection (b) of this section shall not be delegated except to a single official of the Government.

It seems to me that these subsections answer the question which I think the Senator from Wisconsin had in mind, namely, that when there is agreement on the question of relinquishing or relaxing the antitrust laws under certain circumstances, a procedure has been established, by law, for granting exemption.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I wish to go back to the Senator's original statement, in which he said something about the centralization of wealth. The distinguished Senator no doubt has a list of the big corporations about which he speaks as controlling a great portion of the wealth of the country. I wonder if he also has a list showing the number of stockholders in those corporations, indicating, as I have seen lately, that the so-called big corporations of the country are controlled in large part by the little fellow who owns very few shares. The stock is pretty well disseminated throughout the country. I wonder if that conclusion is correct, or if the Senator has any figures which would prove that I am right or wrong.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I do not have a list of the number of stockholders, although I believe that in some of the studies which have been made the number is available.

I think that we are approaching a point where a fundamental decision must be made in regard to this problem of economic concentration. Shall we permit the economy of the country to gravitate into the hands of a few corporations, even though they may have very widespread stockholder distribution, with central-office managers remote from the places where their products are made, and the destiny of the people determined by the decisions of persons whom they never see, or even know of? Or on the other hand are we going to preserve small business, local operations, and free enterprise?

The Senator from Wisconsin refers to the matter of wide distribution of stockholder interest. I think he would probably agree that the larger the number of stockholders and the wider the distribution of stock throughout the country, the easier it is for a few persons, the directors, or officers, with a comparatively small block of the stock, to control the operations of the corporation. In other words, while the small-stock holder may receive some revenue from the stock ownership, that does not mean that he has any voice or influence in the control of the corporation. Obviously, the little fellow with 10 shares in a 1,000,000-share corporation has little to do with its control.

Mr. President, in my opinion the bill which we are now considering is one of the most important bills which has come before Congress at this session. I think it is one of the most important bills which has been discussed in many Congresses, when we look to the real future economic welfare and political welfare of the United States. Approval of this measure is the one most effective thing Congress can do to stop the growth of monopoly which is dangerously threatening the competitive-enterprise system to which our country is devoted.

This bill is not complicated. I shall not attempt to discuss its details. It proposes simply to plug the loopholes of sections 7 and 11 of the Clayton Act. The Clayton Act was passed in 1914, on the theory that it should be the purpose of the Federal Government to prevent monopolistic mergers by making them illegal in the first instance. The purpose was to prevent monopoly rather than merely to punish it after it had taken place.

The Clayton Act was overwhelmingly approved in 1914. In discussing the reasons for the passage of the Clayton Act as a supplement to the Sherman Act, I think there can be no question that Members of the Senate and the House of Representatives at that time felt that they wanted to try to close the door before the horse got out.

For example, in the report of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary on the Clayton Act on July 22, 1914, the following statement occurs:

> Broadly speaking, the bill in its treatment of unlawful restraints and monopolies seeks to prohibit and make unlawful certain trade practices which, as a rule, singly and in and of themselves, are not covered by the act of July 2, 1890—

That was, of course, the Sherman Act—> or other existing antitrust acts; and thus, by making these practices illegal, to arrest the creation of trusts, conspiracies, and monopolies in their incipiency and before consummation.

The intent of Congress at the time the Clayton Act was passed is definite and indisputable. An examination of the reports of the House and Senate committees and of the debates fully confirms this point. The Congress which passed the Clayton Act had in mind the monopolistic mergers which were then taking place by one corporation purchasing the capital stock of another. This is prohibited in section 7. Section 11 of the same act provides that if, after a hearing, the Federal Trade Commission finds that section 7 has been violated, the Commission shall issue a cease-and-desist order and direct the divestment of the stock involved.

Within a few years after the passage of the Clayton Act corporations conceived a means of bypassing the plain intent of the act by purchasing the physical assets of their competitors rather than the capital stock. As a practical matter, these two sections became a dead letter in 1926, as a result of the Supreme Court decision in the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Western Meat Company (257 U. S., 554), in which the Court held that where a corporation had illegally acquired the stock of competing corporations and had used the control so acquired to obtain transfer to it of the assets of such corporations, the authority of the Commission was limited to a divestiture of the valueless stock of the former competing corporation.

As has been stated by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], this decision was by a 5-to-4 vote, with Justices Brandeis, Taft, Holmes, and Stone dissenting.

The loophole was further widened by the decision of the court in the case of Arrow-Hart and Hegeman Electric Co. v. Federal Trade Commission (291 U. S., 587). This decision was also by a 5-to-4 division of the Supreme Court.

Mr. President, during the period of almost 9 years, now, that the junior Senator from Tennessee has been concerned with this proposed legislation, various and sundry arguments have been made against its enactment.

During many years the most familiar argument we had before the committee in the House of Representatives was, "Well, what is the matter with the Federal Trade Commission? It had a 5-to-4 decision against it by the Supreme Court back in the twenties. Some of the substantial members of the Supreme Court dissented from the majority view, such Justices as Brandeis, Taft, Holmes, and Stone. Why does it not bring another case and get the matter up before the Supreme Court again, and with the different personnel of the Supreme Court, and a more libera', perhaps, interpretation of Federal laws, secure a reversal of the previous decision, and then close the loophole?"

I am certain that every Member of the Senate will agree with me, and particularly my friend, the great and distinguished lawyer from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL], that the Federal Trade Commission has done exactly what it should have done; it has brought the matter to the attention of the Congress and recommended that this loophole be plugged by legislative enactment; it has not sought to change the law by judicial interpretation. Furthermore, even if the Court had reversed itself, the problem which we are discussing today would still be before us. A reversal would have enabled the Commission to halt only those acquisitions in which stock is purchased and then used to secure the transfer of the assets. But if the Commission were so empowered the acquiring companies would simply buy up the assets in the first instance, never touching the stock. Where this takes place, and the stock is never acquired, the Commission, even under a reversal, would be powerless to halt a merger.

Mr. President, it would have been much better for the economy of the country to have repealed sections 7 and 11 of the Clayton Act rather than let this wide-open loophole to remain. Most of the large and monopolistic mergers which have become detrimental to the free-enterprise system of our Nation have occurred by way of this plain evasion of the intent of the original Clayton Act.

Here is a recent example, cited in a pamphlet entitled "Trade Practices Report," which is a private weekly reporting service published here in Washington. It is report No. 4, dated February 28, 1947.

Mr. President, I ask leave to have this short statement printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LAW LETS DOWN FTC AGAIN

Loophole in the Clayton Act which permits a corporation to acquire assets of a competing firm but not its capital stock caused the Federal Trade Commission to withdraw another proceeding this week. Order was issued dismissing the complaint (5423) charging the Consolidated Grocers Corp., Chicago, with unlawful acquisition of the capital stock of three competing corporations.

Charges originally made under section 7 of the Clayton Act said that Consolidated, as a result of the stock acquistions, became the largest wholesale grocer in the United States, with total assets of $20,000,000, annual sales of $100,000,000, and a force of 1,000 salesmen soliciting the business of 100,000 grocers, hotels, restaurants, and institutions.

The dismissal was ordered after it was shown that Consolidated, following issuance of the complaint, had surrendered to the three corporations all of the capital stock acquired from them and received in lieu thereof an unconditional conveyance and transfer of their assets. In view of this fact, FTC said, the respondent's motion to dismiss the complaint was granted on the basis of a 1934 Supreme Court decision.

"This and many similar situations have been the occasion of the Federal Trade Commission having annually recommended to Congress since 1929 the amendment of sections 7 and 11 of the Clayton Act to make unlawful the acquisition of assets of competing corporations as the present act makes unlawful the acquisition of stocks of such corporations, in order to stop the constant and increasing concentration of economic power."

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, a brief history of this proposal to amend the Clayton Act may be of benefit. The Federal Trade Commission, which is a bipartisan body, by unanimous votes has, every year since 1927, in its annual report recommended to the Congress that this loophole be plugged. On March 4, 1947, the Federal Trade Commission, pursuant to authority of section 6 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and in 1949, and in every other year, submitted a special report to the Congress pointing out the extreme urgency of this proposed legislation.

I hope the Members of the Senate will read the very excellent report submitted by the acting chairman, Mr. Robert E. Freer, for the Commission back in 1947. Mr. Freer was a minority member, but a very great lawyer and economist, and he has always testified and fought for the passage of this bill, as have all members of the Federal Trade Commission regardless of whether they were Democrats or Republicans.

President Truman in his economic report to the Congress in 1947 and in his annual message to the Congress every year since that time has made specific recommendation for this amendment to section 7 of the Clayton Act.

The Temporary National Economic Committee, after exhaustive hearings, recommended that the loophole be plugged.

In the Seventy-ninth Congress I introduced a bill, H. R. 4810, to close the loophole. The Judiciary Committee of the House by a unanimous vote approved this measure. Extensive hearings were held on it. All industry corporations were invited to appear. No witness appeared in opposition. It should be noted, however, that the National Association of Manufacturers filed a statement in opposition. Many fruitless attempts were made to secure a rule for consideration by the House of H. R. 4810.

Subsequently I filed a somewhat different bill, H. R. 5535, which was also approved by the Judiciary Committee. Efforts were then made to secure a rule for the consideration of this measure, but again we were never successful. The present bill, H. R. 2734, is virtually identical with the latter bill.

I should also like to call the attention of the Members of the Senate to the fact that the Small Business Committee of the Senate during the time it was under the able chairmanship of the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] and also during the time when it was under the able chairmanship of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] recommended that the proposed legislation be passed.

The Small Business Committee of the House several years ago, under the direction of Representative PATMAN, of Texas, made a comprehensive study of monopoly. Witnesses from all over the United States, representing business, agriculture, industry, and labor, were called to testify before a subcommittee of the Small Business Committee. It was the unanimous report of that Small Business Committee that this proposed amendment was one of the most vitally needed improvements in the antitrust laws today, and that, without it, section 7 of the Clayton Act and section 11 were dead letters.

In the Eightieth Congress the Small Business Committee of the House of Representatives, under the chairmanship of a very able Member of the House from the State of Missouri, Representative Walter C. Ploeser, made a detailed study of the problem, and again recommended that this loophole be plugged.

I should also like to say, Mr. President, that in the House of Representatives, on three or four or five occasions in three or four Congresses, the Committee on the Judiciary of the House has reported out bills to plug this loophole, bills similar to the measure we now have under consideration. These bills were reported out on most occasions, by unanimous vote of the members of the Committee on the Judiciary. But they were always tied up in the Rules Committee of the House until, during the last Congress, the pending bill was brought up on suspension of the rules under the able leadership of the distinguished Representative from New York, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House, Representative EMANUEL CELLER. The fact that the bill is here is quite a tribute to the work Mr. CELLER has done. It was approved by more than 70 percent of the Members—well above the two-thirds vote required under suspension of rules.

Perhaps the best report I have ever seen on the needs for this bill was made in the Eightieth Congress by Representative John Gwynne, of Iowa, in June 1947. Representative Gwynne was then a majority member of the House on the Committee on the Judiciary, and his report is a masterful analysis.

Throughout all these years, of course, the work of the distinguished Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] has been outstanding. He has introduced the bill since, I believe, 1945, and before that he recommended it in the final report of the TNEC. He has spoken and written and interpreted the meaning of the loophole in the present law. He has testified on its behalf before many, many committees.

Finally, great credit is due to the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] for being finally able to steer this measure to the floor.

Mr. President, there are one or two matters I think I should discuss a little further. The question is more important from the viewpoint of the general economy and the future of our Nation than many people realize. It is unfortunate that we cannot get more Members to discuss and to consider what may happen if the bill should not be passed; that is, if we do not stop the tendency toward concentration of economic power.

I think we must decide very quickly what sort of country we want to live in. This Nation was founded and built by men who believed in individualism. It has grown under a system carried on largely by individual capital. The increased concentration of economic power is dooming free enterprise. The present trend of great corporations to increase their economic power is the antithesis of meritorious competitive development. It is no accident that we now have a big Government, big labor unions, and big business. The concentration of great economic power in a few corporations necessarily leads to the formation of large Nation-wide unions. The development of the two necessarily lends to big bureaus in the Government to deal with them. Local economic independence cannot be preserved in the face of consolidations such as we have had during the past few years. The control of American business is steadily being transferred, I am sorry to have to say, from local communities to a few large cities in which central managers decide the policies and the fate of the far-flung enterprises they control. Millions of people depend helplessly on their judgment. Through monopolistic mergers the people are losing power to direct their own economic welfare. When they lose the power to direct their economic welfare they also lose the means to direct their political future.

I am not an alarmist, but the history of what has taken place in other nations where mergers and concentrations have placed economic control in the hands of a very few people is too clear to pass over easily. A point is eventually reached, and we are rapidly reaching that point in this country, where the public steps in to take over when concentration and monopoly gain too much power. The taking over by the public through its government always follows one or two methods and has one or two political results. It either results in a Fascist state or the nationalization of industries and thereafter a Socialist or Communist state. Most businessmen realize this inevitable result. Certain monopolistic interests are being very short-sighted in not appreciating the plight to which they are forcing their Government.

Mr. President, I now want to discuss certain aspects of the minority views submitted by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL].

In that statement the Senator takes two positions that appear to be quite irreconcilable. The first is that the bill is unnecessary since the Sherman Act already makes unlawful asset acquisitions which tend to create a monopoly or which have the effect of substantially lessening competition. The second is that this bill would produce harmful effects by introducing new elements of uncertainty into the law, so that businessmen would be unable to determine in advance whether a proposed acquisition would be illegal. Certainly, if the bill does no more than confer upon the Federal Trade Commission the same jurisdiction over the subject matter which now rests with the Attorney General under the Sherman Act, no new uncertainty will be introduced into the law by the proposed legislation.

In support of the statement that the Sherman Act already makes illegal such asset acquisitions as tend to create a monopoly, the minority views quote from the decision in the case of American Tobacco Co. v. United States (328 U. S. 781). That this case does not so hold is evident from the fact that the Supreme Court limited certiorari solely to the question of whether actual exclusion of competitors is necessary to the crime of monopolization under the Sherman Act. The holding by the Court that a conspiracy to exclude competition is a violation of the act can hardly be cited as a precedent for the proposition that the act also proscribes asset acquisition, the effect of which may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly, where no conspiracy exists. As a preliminary to its decision, the Court found that a combination or conspiracy to monopolize had been established. Such a conspiracy need not be found as a prerequisite to the consideration of a Clayton Act case. That this case was solely concerned with combination and conspiracy is clear from the Court's statement, at page 798 of its opinion, that—

> It is, therefore, only in conjunction with such a combination or conspiracy that these cases will constitute a precedent.

The other cases cited in the minority views for the propositions stated—Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission (312 U. S. 457); United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. (310 U. S. 150); Shotkin v. General Electric Co. (171 F. 2d 236)—involved conspiracies to fix prices which are illegal per se, and the cases must therefore be disregarded as precedents for the argument that the Sherman Act already prohibits the matters forbidden by the bill.

The minority views seem to rely primarily on the case of United States v. Columbia Steel Co. (334 U. S. 495) for the argument that the Sherman Act already makes illegal asset acquisitions which have the effect of substantially lessening competition. In that Sherman Act case the Court devoted a large portion of is opinion to a discussion of the relative sizes and productive capacities of the corporations concerned in proportion to the size and productive capacity of the total market involved. However, it does not follow from the application by the Court in the Columbia Steel Co. case of the Sherman Act standard of reasonableness that the acquisition of assets would not have been considered substantial had the matter arisen under a Clayton Act strengthened as provided by this bill.

Furthermore, during the time when we were attempting to secure the passage of this bill, it was vigorously contended by opponents of the bill that the Government was going to win the Columbia Steel Co. case, and that the enactment of this proposed legislation would therefore not be necessary. However, the Government lost the Columbia Steel Co. case. The market area of the corporation whose assets were acquired covered 11 States and its actual business approximated $22,000,000 per year. The acquisition contemplated securing to United States Steel a market for 1,200,000 tons of steel per year, to the end that competitors of United States Steel would be excluded from selling steel to the acquired corporation to that extent. Furthermore, the acquiring corporation was a competitor of the corporation whose assets were to be acquired, and to the extent of the business of the acquired corporation competition was entirely eliminated. Under the Sherman Act, the acquisition was held not to be an unreasonable restraint of trade.

Compare that case with International Salt Co. v. United States (332 U. S. 392) a case brought under section 1 of the Sherman Act and section 3 of the Clayton Act. In the International Salt case the defendant had obtained tying contracts whereby lessees of its patented machines were obligated to use only respondent's salt in those machines.

The defendant's yearly sales of salt to be used in the patented machines amounted to 119,000 tons, valued at about $500,000. In resolving the question of whether the effect of the restraint might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the sale of salt within the prescription of section 3 of the Clayton Act, the Court took no consideration of the total volume or value of salt produced by the industry. Based upon the value and volume of salt involved in defendant's own alleged illegal activities, the Court said, at page 396:

> The volume of business affected by these contracts cannot be said to be insignificant or insubstantial and the tendency of the arrangement to accomplishment of monopoly seems obvious. Under the law, agreements are forbidden which "tend to create a monopoly," and it is immaterial that the tendency is a creeping one rather than one that proceeds at full gallop; nor does the law await arrival at the goal before condemning the direction of the movement.

Rather than substantiating the minority views, the Columbia Steel Co. case is a vivid illustration of the necessity for the proposed amendment of the Clayton Act. The Sherman Act test has been a measurement of accomplished monopoly. The purpose of the Clayton Act is to reach in their incipiency certain practices which if permitted to persist might eventually ripen into violations of the Sherman Act. As the Court stated in Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane Houston Co. (258 U. S. 346, 356):

> The Clayton Act sought to reach the agreements embraced within its sphere in their incipiency, and in the section under consideration [sec. 3] to determine their legality by specific tests of its own which declared illegal contracts of sale made upon the agreement or understanding that the purchaser shall not deal in the goods of a competitor or competitors of the seller, which may "substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly."

The proposed amendment is necessary in order to give effect to the underlying intention of Congress when the Clayton Act was adopted that section 7 would serve to prevent the tendency toward monopoly which theretofore had been accomplished by mergers of competing corporations.

Let me say that if the Members of Congress at that time had thought the Sherman Act was sufficient in the beginning they never would have passed the Clayton Act. This amendment is obviously necessary in order to give effect to the intention of the Congress at that time.

As I said a moment ago, the intention then was that section 7 would serve to prevent the tendency toward monopoly which theretofore had been accomplished by mergers of competing corporations. The section as written has been wholly ineffectual in accomplishing this purpose. The hands of the Commission have been tied, as I have pointed out, by decisions of the Supreme Court holding that in order to prevent the evils resulting from such stock acquisition, the Commission can only command a divestiture of the stock, and has no power to require a divestiture of the assets which have been acquired by the use of the illegally obtained stock. Federal Trade Commission v. Western Meat Co. (272 U. S. 554). In the Thatcher Manufacturing Co. case and the Swift & Co. case, considered in the Western Meat Co. opinion, the Supreme Court held that the Commission's power to remedy the illegal acquisition of stock is limited by section 11 to the power of requiring the offender to divest itself of the stock. In those cases the illegally acquired stock had been used to acquire the assets of the competing corporations prior to the issuance of the Commission's complaint. In the later case of Arrow-Hart & Hegeman Electric Co. v. Federal Trade Commission (291 U. S. 587), the doctrine of the above case was extended. In the Arrow-Hart case, at the time the Commission's complaint was issued, a holding company had acquired the stock of two competing corporations. Before the Commission's order could be issued, the stock was employed by diverse transfers and manipulations to effect a merger of the two competing corporations. The Court in effect held that even though this merger might have been accomplished for the purpose of ousting the Commission of its jurisdiction under section 7 of the Clayton Act, the Commission was limited by section 11 to an order requiring the divestiture of the stock, which was no longer in existence, and could not require a divestiture of the assets. See also Federal Trade Commission v. Eastman Kodak Co. (274 U. S. 619), where the Commission was unsuccessful in an attempt to accomplish the same result in connection with a charge of unfair methods of competition under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It will be seen from the above cases that it is impossible for the Commission, no matter how expeditiously it proceeds, to issue a complaint charging the unlawful acquisition of stock and proceed to an order to cease and desist and an order of divestiture prior to the use of the illegally acquired stock by the holders thereof to effectuate an acquisition of assets.

The minority views make great point of the so-called harmful effects of the bill as creating uncertainty as to the legality of future asset acquisitions. This is true to some extent with regard to any law and has no particular application to the bill under consideration.

The use of the term "any section of the country" is not new to section 7 of the Clayton Act. The present section 7 uses the term "any section or community." It is difficult to follow an objection to a simplification and narrowing of terms by dropping the words "or community."

The objection to the phrase "may be" is likewise 36 years too late, since the words "where the effect may be to substantially lessen competition" have been employed in sections 2 and 3 of the Clayton Act since 1914 as a measure of price discrimination and other conduct which falls short of accomplished monopoly.

The minority views attempt to interject confusion by pointing out that the Court in Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co. (334 U. S. 37) used the phrase "reasonable possibility," whereas other cases have considered the word "may" in terms of a probable lessening of competition. If any confusion was created by the use of the Court of different words in discussing the term "may," the case of Standard Oil Co. v. United States (337 U. S. 293), a later case, sets all such doubt at rest because the Court at page 300 quotes as follows from Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane Houston Co., supra, and cites the Morton Salt case for the same holding:

> Section 3 condemns sales or agreements where the effect of such sale or contract of sale "may" be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create monopoly. * * * But we do not think that the purpose in using the word "may" was to prohibit the mere possibility of the consequences described. It was intended to prevent such agreements as would under the circumstances disclosed probably lessen competition, or create an actual tendency to monopoly (258 U. S. at 356–57). See also Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co. (334 U. S. 37, 46, n. 14).

If, as the minority views assume, the present section 7 of the Clayton Act had as its sole aim the abolition of the evil of secret acquisition and holding of stock of a competitor, Congress might well have merely required the public announcement of stock acquisition. There would have been no necessity for authorizing the Commission to order a divestiture of stock. The power was given in an attempt to provide an effective means of checking a practice leading to monopoly. As has been demonstrated, all attempts to carry out this purpose by the Commission have been forestalled by the strict interpretation given by the courts to sections 7 and 11 of the Clayton Act. The situation can be remedied only by enacting specific legislation with regard to the acquisition of assets.

Mr. President, the press of the Nation has had considerable to say about this proposed legislation, indicating that it approves its purpose and recommends its enactment. I have before me editorials from various newspapers in all sections of the United States; for instance, from the New Orleans Times-Picayune, the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen, the Chicago Sun, the Nashville Tennessean, the Washington Post, and several other newspapers. I now ask unanimous consent to have some of these editorials printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the excerpts were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New Orleans Times-Picayune of March 13, 1947]

FTC ON MONOPOLIES

In a special report the Federal Trade Commission has presented Congress with the factual basis for action in case it decides to cooperate with the Truman administration in staying the monopolistic trend in the Nation's industry.

As evidence of the unhealthy trend, the Commission reports that about 1,800 substantial manufacturing and processing companies have been passed out through merger or purchase since 1940, and that 242 of them have fallen into the hands of 18 of the biggest national corporations. Indubitably the mergers have done injury to the system of free competitive enterprise.

The point about the mergers or purchases that seems most to concern the Commission is that they have been achieved largely through the sale of the assets of one company to a larger one—a device by which the intent of the Clayton antitrust law is nullified. The FTC is empowered to prevent mergers through capital stock acquisitions if the result would promote monopoly, but the merger of physical properties through sales of assets bypasses the law. The Commission, of course, advocates the passage of the Kefauver bill to plug the loophole.

Reenforcement of the antitrust laws probably is the first essential in any program to slow down or stop the march of a comparatively few corporations toward mastery of the Nation's industrial production facilities and resources. But it is not the only requirement. Many of the impositions of the Government, including the mass of required reports and taxes which discourage the investment of risk capital, fall harder on the small or medium-sized independent business than they do on the great corporations. The imbalance in the labor laws places the small, more competitive business in a relatively more vulnerable position than the dominant corporations which can withstand periods of idleness and can recover their market.

Unquestionably the Kefauver bill—and any legislation looking to the more vigorous prosecution of monopolies and collusive practices—will meet stiff opposition in Congress. Aside from the objections of groups that might come under scrutiny, there is a school which sees no menace in the growth of the giant corporations. For instance, the chairman of the board of Westinghouse recently argued that there are automatic limits on the size of the big-business concerns because sooner or later the expanding corporation becomes too unwieldly to cope with its competition. Contending that after a certain point the big organization begins to bog down in red tape and bureaucracy, he maintained that when a company attempts to dominate more than 40 percent of a given market it begins to lose a portion of its business to competitors.

Obviously, however, if one company can take 40 percent of the national market, that doesn't leave room for many corporations of a similar size. Domination of two or three national corporations in any field of endeavor is hardly the American idea of free competitive enterprise. But the trend is in that direction.

The Commission makes one pertinent point, frequently overlooked by those who find no menace in the concentration and size of industries: That if we have a private supergovernment of industry it will have to be regulated or controlled by a political supergovernment. Our alternative to this development is the maintenance not merely of free enterprise but of free-competitive enterprise which requires a minimum of regulation.

[From the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times of February 24, 1947]

WHAT CONGRESS MAY DO ABOUT MONOPOLY

Congress is becoming monopoly conscious again. The problem is raised about the encroachments of big business, by big-business men complaining about unrealistic provisions of the antitrust laws, and by business in general complaining about labor unions, which are exempt from antitrust prosecution.

The issue is not anti- or pro-monopoly. As Congressional Quarterly points out, monopoly, like sin, has no avowed friends on Capitol Hill. Everybody is against it. But, like sin, it is hard to regulate. Democratic governments have been struggling with the problem ever since an English court in 1604 handed down an opinion condemning a conspiracy to monopolize London's supply of playing cards. In the United States, congressional interest dates from the 1880's, when it became apparent that the common law no longer was sufficient to cope with expanding industrial empires. Today more than 60 laws on the subject are in effect.

Now in the aftermath of war, which resulated in an increased concentration of economic power, the question of preserving free, private, competitive enterprise in a democratic society arises at almost every turn. Ramifications of the problems are almost endless so, also, are the lines of attack proposed to meet it. Every constituent of every Congressman has a stake in what Congress does about monopoly, because a monopolized industry sends ripples through the economy to touch consumers, workers, farmers, and businessmen—all of us.

A round-up by Congressional Quarterly of specific issues and proposals illustrates that impact. There is, for instance, the issue of small versus big business, of which the fight between independent and chain stores is a phase known in every community. Competition between them favors the consumer while it lasts, but some Members of Congress fear it will mean ultimately the disappearance of small business, leaving the consumer at the mercy of the winner. Representative PATMAN, of Texas, Democrat, has two proposals to curb unfair practices that make competition too one-sided.

As another example, food prices are directly affected by the cost of keeping overworked soil productive, in the South and elsewhere. Increasing farm use of fertilizer in the face of a world-wide shortage has directed congressional attention to that industry. The question of monopoly has arisen over the operations of the Florida Hardrock Phosphate Export Association, which the Federal Trade Commission has found to control most phosphate exports through a cartel arrangement with French-African producers.

Other specific industries currently in the foreground of discussions about monopoly include railroads and air lines, oil and gas, electric power, newspapers and news services, insurance and atomic energy. While each is the subject of separate recommendations, the active antimonopolists are generally agreed upon several broad lines of attack. Foremost among these are proposals to:

1. Provide for Federal charter of corporations with strict standards of corporate conduct.

2. Prohibit corporate mergers through acquisition of assets, or require FTC approval of such mergers.

3. Revise the patent laws to prohibit attaching restrictive conditions of manufacture, sale, or price to patent licenses.

4. Make corporation officers and directors civilly liable for stiff penalties for violation of antitrust laws.

Senator O'MAHONEY, of Wyoming, Democrat, and probably the best-informed man in Congress on business practices, holds that Federal charter is the basic remedy. As he explained recently, the big, modern corporation is in a sort of no-man's land, responsible to nobody, too big to be controlled by the States, insufficiently regulated by the Federal Government. Corporations chartered by States frequently grow to a size larger than the State which chartered them. They are beyond the control even of their hundreds of thousands of widely dispersed stockholders.

But whether the current Congress enacts few or many regulatory measures, the problem of policing business and industry steadily grows bigger, even under existing laws. Much of this responsibility falls on the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice, which has a modest $1,900,000 appropriation for the current year and is tentatively allocated $2,500,000 in the new budget. The latter figure represents only $1 out of every $15,000 which President Truman proposes to spend on the Federal Government as a whole.

The cost of enforcing antitrust regulations through this agency is peanuts in a nation which is approaching a $200,000,000,000 economy. Yet some economy-minded Members of Congress would slash this minor appropriation at the same time that it is proposed to pile more responsibility on the Antitrust Division. While many other forms of economy can be justified, it does not make sense to handcuff the cop on the corner who is faced with a bigger job of guarding the welfare of all of us—consumers, workers, farmers, and businessmen.

[From the Tampa (Fla.) Tribune of March 17, 1947]

FOR COMPETITIVE ENTERPRISE

We suspect that many Americans, with their attention riveted of late on other domestic and foreign affairs, have overlooked the important report released the other day by the Federal Trade Commission. They ought to think about it, however, for what is revealed is not comforting to the believers in competitive enterprise.

The FTC study paints a stop-and-think picture of business in showing the increasing concentration of power in the hands of a small number of giant organizations. It informed Congress that 1,800 companions have been swallowed up by purchase and merger since 1940. It reported that 18 of the country's largest corporations have bought up 242 smaller firms, or an average of 13 companies each.

This is not to say that the outlook for small business is wholly black. It is revealed that the total assets of small manufacturing firms, increased during the war by almost 150 percent, those of medium manufacturing firms by just under 100 percent, and those of large concerns by about 35 percent. Furthermore, a study made in the Department of Commerce shows that there were by the middle of 1946 more individual firms in the business population than before the war, more even than in 1929, and that of the new businesses well over 95 percent were in the bracket of those having less than 50 employees.

But the fact that small business still finds opportunities in the American economy does not argue against the steady and persistent vigilance which the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice alone can supply.

One of the most devastating things their critics have said of the Republicans is that they are monopolists at heart, giving only lip service to the true ideal of free enterprise. The way they act on the modest budget request of the Antitrust Division and upon the Kefauver bill, which would amend the Antitrust Act to block the purchase of a company's assets if the transaction would tend to promote monopoly, will go far to prove that accusation, or to refute it.

Hearings are being held on the antitrust appropriation for 1948. President Truman has asked for $2,500,000 as against the $1,900,000 being spent this year. The 1948 figure is modest however, as is shown by the fact that the highest antitrust appropriation in history was the $2,325,000 allowed in 1942, and the cost inflations since then make the 1948 request less in actual purchasing power than the 1942 sum. Yet, as the FTC report and other figures show, the need for antitrust enforcement and vital changes in the law is greater in 1948 than it was in 1942.

[From the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen of March 18, 1947]

MONOPOLY TREND

A high level of industrial activity and expanding capital assets during and after the war encouraged some large companies to practice a business policy of integration. One example is provided by a drug firm which acquired 38 smaller companies by outright purchase from 1940 to 1946. The purchases included manufacturers of baby foods, floor waxes, and insecticides, as well as other drug manufacturers and wholesalers. Thus, the purchasing company was able to establish effective control over manufacture, distribution, and sale of many allied products, thus integrating its operation.

Does this sort of practice constitute a dangerous tendency toward monopoly? The Federal Trade Commission, which has made a special report to Congress on business trends, warns that the "rapid growth of private supergovernment in industry must be halted" or it will result in "political supergovernment." The record of the last 6 years shows that 1,800 companies have been swallowed up by purchase and merger, 242 of them by 18 of the country's very largest corporations.

Of course, merger and separation are accepted facts of economic life. A successful concern often progresses by absorbing an unsuccessful business which may be on the brink of failure because of inefficiency. In this case the whole economy is strengthened rather than weakened. But excessive growth can be harmful. The FTC cites one instance where the giant steel corporations have bought up so many steel-drum companies that they now produce 87 percent of the country's output as against 10 percent before the war.

The remedy, if any is needed, may lie in laws to forbid purchase of a company's assets if the transaction would promote monopoly. The present antitrust regulations apparently are inadequate to prevent such transactions.

[From the Nashville Tennessean of May 19, 1947]

DISAPPEARING LITTLE BUSINESS

Those who wonder what has become of the noble wartime pledge to save little business can read the answer in what is not being done with the Kefauver-Murray bill to put a stop to the merger movement.

The Eightieth Congress not only refuses to be frightened by the alarming consolidation movement but it also refuses to do anything about it. The Kefauver-Murray bill will not be allowed to see the light of day.

Reasons to be frightened, however, are not lacking. They are clearly and simply detailed in the Federal Trade Commission letter on the Present Trend of Corporate Mergers and Acquisitions to the Senate.

According to the FTC, there have been 1,833 mergers between 1940–46, most of them since 1944. More than one-third of these have been in three industries—foods, nonelectrical machinery, and apparel. These fields are traditionally small-business fields.

Even more alarming is the fact that more than 60 percent of the mergers have been horizontal combinations; that is, absorptions of concerns in the same business. Horizontal combinations have been the most fruitless of all types of mergers. Practically none of them ever result in any gain to consumers in lower prices or better products. Such profits as they make are the result of monopoly control and scarcity high-price policies. Horizontal combinations replace owners with managers, drain profits out of localities where the business has been developed, reduce communities to a colonial status, raise prices, and in other ways victimize communities.

Most of the mergers reported on by the FTC were carried out by our 250 largest corporations, which already control approximately 70 percent of usable manufacturing facilities and employ half of the industrial labor force. Some of these corporations practically decimated certain fields of small business.

The Kefauver-Murray bill would put a stop to this process of devouring American small business and destroying the competitive capitalist system. In a few years it will be too late.

[From the Chicago Sun of May 14, 1947]

A MONOPOLY BILL BURIED

We address ourselves today to a bill which is not in the limelight, which is not about to be passed by Congress, which is not the center of lively controversy. If this seems a rather negative subject to discuss, we ask the reader to reflect that the very absence of interest in S. 104, introduced by Senator JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, of Wyoming, is a commentary on the spirit of the times.

JOSEPH O'MAHONEY is a veteran of the wars against monopoly. More clearly than most other men the Senator has consistently seen and warned against the dangers of the steady concentration of economic power that goes on year after year despite our national habit of paying lip service to competition and small business. Often he might as well be hollering down a rain barrel, for all the good it does. Yet what he has to say is still worth listening to.

The Nation is now in the grip of one of its periodic waves of corporate concentration. The last one was in the latter part of the twenties. Since 1940, and particularly since the middle of 1945, mergers of business firms have been proceeding at a faster and faster rate. A recent report of the Federal Trade Commission shows that in the fields of manufacturing and mining alone, five times as many mergers took place in 1946 as in 1939.

Here is monopoly taking shape before our eyes. Here is the relentless growth of big business aggregations which a few years from now Congress and consumers will be worrying about. Here is the swallowing of little firms by big firms which spells diminishing competition, growing restraints on trade, developing rigidity of the economic structure.

Why isn't something done about it? More than 30 years ago, Congress passed the Clayton Act, which was intended to prevent corporate mergers by the acquisition of stock where the effect might be to lessen competition or promote monopoly. But corporation lawyers found a way to achieve the same purpose by acquiring a firm's assets instead of the stock. The Supreme Court, during the twenties, ruled that if such a merger has been accomplished there is nothing the Federal Trade Commission can do about it except to require divestiture of the stock—which, without the assets on which it rests, is, of course, worthless. This section of the Clayton Act, then, is a dead letter.

Senator O'MAHONEY's bill, sponsored in the House by Representative ESTES KEFAUVER, of Tennessee, is a simple proposal to amend the Clayton Act so that its original purpose would be restored. He would make illegal monopolistic mergers accomplished by acquisition of assets as well as by acquisition of stock. He would give the Federal Trade Commission power to stop such mergers or to dissolve them should they be illegally made in the future.

For years the Federal Trade Commission has been pointing to this loophole in the antimonopoly laws and urging that it be stopped up. The temporary national economic committee, which made the most comprehensive congressional study of our economy system yet, recommended such an amendment. President Truman's council of economic advisers, in its 1947 report, proposed it as one means of strengthening the antitrust laws, enforcement of which it considered essential to the economic health of the Nation.

But S. 104 stays out of the limelight, is in no apparent danger of being passed, is buried in a profound congressional boredom. Monopoly, as Mr. Luce might say, marches on.

[From the Washington Post of May 1, 1947]

GROWTH OF INDUSTRIAL MONOPOLY

(By Marquis Childs)

The visitor from Mars—and if we accept the word of our more romantic scientists, he may be here any day now—is bound to find many puzzling contradictions on our troubled planet. Here in the United States, he is certain to be confused by the way in which the word monopoly is bandied back and forth.

It figures largely in the drive for restrictive labor legislation. The National Association of Manufacturers is spending a great deal of money on advertisements hitting at industry-wide bargaining. The public is being told that this is a monopoly of a little clique of labor leaders.

But, curiously enough, at the same time, we find the NAM growing red in the face with anger at anyone who dares to say that monopoly in the ownership of business is growing at a new and accelerated pace. It is only left wingers and collectivists who would dare to say such a thing.

Specifically, Earl Bunting, head of NAM, attacks a report issued by the Federal Trade Commission. Now, the Federal Trade Commission is a respectable old-line agency that existed long before the New Deal was ever heard of. Yet Bunting interprets the report as sinister evidence that the FTC has been captured by left wingers.

The NAM president has chosen an odd way to refute the FTC report on the growth of monopoly. He, or his economists for him, takes the number of corporations that have been absorbed by merger since 1940 and compares it with the total number of business firms. Thus, he reaches the conclusion that, at this rate, it would take a thousand years to monopolize American industry and therefore we are perfectly safe.

In so doing, he ignores the major conclusion of the report. That was the fact that the 1,800 companies which were merged with larger companies represented 5 percent of the total value of all manufacturing corporations. Most of those mergers took place in the last 2 or 3 years.

The total number of companies is not the important point. The important point is that 5 percent, which is not to be derided as the bogey of left wingers and collectivists. Five percent is a sizable chunk of our economy. The threat of merger and absorption is a very real one to thousands of smaller businesses throughout the country.

Name calling is so silly and futile. It is always the last resort of a man with a bad case or a bad conscience.

Senator JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, of Wyoming, is no left-winger. He has been fighting for the past 10 years to keep the free-enterprise system free by keeping it competitive. He has had the courage to say that the giant corporations are in reality collectivism—a kind of private socialism. And being wise in the ways of politics and human behavior, he knows that private socialism will sooner or later in a democracy become public socialism.

O'MAHONEY and Representative ESTES KEFAUVER, of Tennessee, have a bill before Congress which would stop one of the loopholes in our antitrust laws. The law, as it stands today, says that one corporation may not acquire the stock of another where that would help to create a monopoly. It says nothing about acquiring the physical assets—plants and machines—of another corporation.

Most of the mergers in recent years have been by the latter method. The O'Mahoney-Kefauver bill would close that gap.

If Congress is going to attack the labor monopoly by law, as the NAM wants, then Congress cannot very well ignore the monopoly that exists in many fields of business. There seems to me to be little point in arguing which monopoly came first. Industry-wide bargaining may have grown up because of the existence of industry-wide trade associations and industry-wide price fixing. But like the argument over which came first, the chicken or the egg, this is irrelevant.

"Now is the time," said NAM President Bunting, "to clean out the system-changers from the temple of government." As Senator O'MAHONEY sees it, the system-changers are those who would monopolize all business and thereby prepare the way for the all-dominant state.

[From the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer of April 19, 1947]

DESTROYING FREE ENTERPRISE

The mails are full of pamphlets from the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers extolling the American system of free enterprise. It is the only sound system in peacetimes. But neither of those big business organizations points out or even admits the existence of the one foe that is doing more than all else to undermine or shut the door to men who would like a chance to build up a business of their own. Not all the cries of the believers in free enterprise of "open the door to free enterprise, Richard," is heard in the citadels of monoply.

The Federal Trade Commission recently issued a special report showing that, since 1940, 18,000 companies were swallowed up by big corporations through purchase and merger. One big drug concern, for example, absorbed 38 smaller companies, the companies swallowed including manufacturers of baby food, floor wax, paint, spaghetti, and insecticides. A loophole in the Clayton Antitrust Act permits such a process which Congress intended to make illegal.

The Commission's recommendation to plug this loophole has been ignored by Congress while it seeks to exempt insurance and railroads which violate the antitrust law.

The Washington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor points out the situation as it now exists:

"There is little chance of permanently reducing the size of the Federal Government in Washington, its bureaucracy, and its police powers so long as competition is reduced and corporations get bigger and bigger. For example, if there is one big interstate grocery wholesaler instead of several local ones, the pressure for comparable Federal control is almost inevitable, and so it goes. There is danger, too, for any democracy which allows economic concentration of power to spread at the expense of small business."

[From the Christian Science Monitor of March 26, 1947]

MERGERS THROUGH A LOOPHOLE

(By Richard L. Strout)

The United States was built by men who believed in individualism and competitive enterprise. For that reason, the concentration of economic power into great corporations has always caused concern. Big business almost inevitably means big labor unions and big government. Where the competition of free enterprise does not police an economic system, it is inevitable that government should step in to preserve a democracy.

The Federal Trade Commission recently issued a special report showing that since 1940 18,000 companies were swallowed up by big corporations through purchase and merger. One big drug concern, for example, absorbed 38 smaller companies, the companies swallowed including manufacturers of baby food, floor wax, paint, spaghetti, and insecticides. A loophole in the Clayton Antitrust Act permits such a process which Congress intended to make illegal.

The Clayton Act passed in 1914. It was hailed as the doom of trusts. But trusts haven't been doomed. In fact, the process of building bigger and bigger corporations has gone on. This is because of a convenient loophole in the act. Congress believed that monopolistic corporate mergers would be accomplished by one corporation purchasing the capital stock of another. Section 7 prohibited this. But this section was bypassed, and the plain intent of Congress defeated by another corporate device: the purchase of the physical assets of competitors, rather than their capital stock.

Company B sells its plant, machines, and facilities to company A, and it then doesn't matter much whether it sells its stock certificates or not. The whole thing was legalized by a Supreme Court decision in 1926, in the Western Meat Co. case. It was a 5-to-4 decision, with Justices Brandeis, Taft, Holmes and Stone all dissenting. Later the loophole was further widened by another decision, also 5 to 4.

The bipartisan Federal Trade Commission has unanimously recommended, every year since 1927, that this loophole be plugged. Congress hasn't acted. And the process of corporate expansion by merger has gone on. On March 4, the Federal Trade Commission, in a special report, pointed out with all the urgency at its command, the tremendous growth of corporate agglutination. President Truman in his economic report to Congress made a specific recommendation for this amendment to section 7. Congress hasn't acted. The temporary National Economic Commission studied the matter carefully and made the same recommendation: Congress didn't act then either.

Now two Congressmen, Senator JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, Democrat, of Wyoming, and Representative ESTES KEFAUVER, Democrat, of Tennessee, have again introduced a bill to plug the loophole. Only a sense of the way the old American tradition of free competition, free enterprise, and individual initiative is being endangered will make Congress act now.

Here is how the system works. A Chicago grocery corporation has just become the largest wholesale grocer in the United States, with total assets of $20,000,000, and annual sales of $100,000,000. It did so by acquiring the assets of three competing corporations.

The Federal Trade Commission brought suit under the Clayton Act. It wanted to protect the small grocers of the Nation. But it was shown that the big corporation had surrendered to the three competing corporations all of the capital stock which it has acquired from them, and received in lieu thereof an unconditional transfer of all their assets. After that, there was nothing for the FTC to do. It was all perfectly legal. It dismissed the complaint.

There is little chance of permanently reducing the size of the Federal Government in Washington, its bureaucracy and its police powers, so long as competition is reduced and corporations get bigger and bigger. For example, if there is one big interstate grocery wholesaler instead of several local ones, the pressure for comparable Federal control is almost inevitable, and so it goes. There is danger, too, for any democracy which allows economic concentration of power to spread at the expense of small business.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, there is one matter which I wished particularly to mention when the sponsor of the bill, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], was present, namely, that I know that in some sections of the United States, particularly in some cities, two newspapers might enter into an operating arrangement whereby, in order to save the expense of operating in two separate buildings, they would have an arrangement by which one plant would print both newspapers, with each one following its own editorial policy.

In this connection I want to point out that the measure now before us is less restrictive than the law which is now on the statute books relating to stock acquisitions, owing particularly to the omission of the word in any "community," which now appears in section 7 of the Clayton Act, and also to the omission of the phrase "between such corporations, or any of them, whose stock or other capital is so acquired," which also appears in section 7 as it now stands.

In the case of an operating arrangement of that kind or even in the case of the outright acquisition of a newspaper, the merger, to be illegal, would have to affect competition in a "section of the county" not a "community," and within such a "section" it would not be illegal merely because of the elimination of the competition which had previously existed between the acquiring and acquired firms. That, is to say, within the section, the merger would have to have the effect of lessening competition generally. I doubt whether there are many mergers of this type in the newspaper industry. I should like to ask the sponsor of the bill, in order that we might have the legislative history of the matter, to express his opinion on that point.

Mr. O'CONOR. I am grateful to the Senator from Tennessee for affording an opportunity to make known our position in the matter. We agree entirely with the statement made by the able Senator from Tennessee, who has been so zealous and consistent in his advocacy of this measure, that this bill, if enacted, would not have adverse effects upon such a proposal as he describes. As the Senator has pointed out, through the change in the language of the measure, by the elimination of the words having an effect upon competition "in any community," and particularly by the elimination of the phrase "between" the acquiring and the acquired companies, we feel definitely that that danger is avoided, and that no such proposed consolidation or acquisition would be violative of the law, unless in a section of the country it would result in a substantial lessening of competition in industry generally. It may well be that by effecting a better arrangement for a more profitable undertaking, in the manner described, competition would be stimulated rather than lessened. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I thank the Senator from Maryland for his answer.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I listened rather attentively to the question asked by the Senator from Tennessee. If I may, I should like now to present a concrete illustration. Newspapers A and B in a given community decide that they want to consolidate. Under the present statute, the buying of stock, I take it, might be prohibited, if it would have a tendency to create a monopoly. Buying the assets would be prohibited under the amended statute. But what would be the result if the newspapers A and B decided they would put their combined assets into a new corporation C? In asking the question, I have in mind, of course, the extent to which newspapers control public opinion.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I think in that case the application of the law would be the same, with the same limitations that I have described above. It certainly would not be any more applicable in that case than if newspaper A were to purchase the stock and assets of newspaper B. By both of them going out of business and forming a new corporation, there could be no greater likelihood of violation by the two original newspapers.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator means, does he, that it is a question of geography?

Mr. KEFAUVER. It is, in my opinion, a question which comes under the words of the section as it now exists, but would probably not come under the less restrictive provisions of the measure which we are now considering.

Mr. WILEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield the floor.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I wondered whether the Senator would yield for a question?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I yield with pleasure to the distinguished Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is the very able Senator from Tennessee aware of the use which has been made by opponents of this measure of an article by Drs. John Lintner and J. Keith Butters, which appeared in the Review of Economics and Statistics for February 1950?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I may say to the Senator I am not aware of it, and I shall be very much interested in it. I feel that the Senate would be very much interested if the Senator would enlighten us upon the subject.

Mr. DOUGLAS. As I understand the article, it purported to show that in the recent merger movement, small firms had profited or had gained from the mergers at a more rapid rate than had the larger firms. A table was introduced to show that companies with assets of from one to five million dollars which had acquired other companies had grown at the rate of more than 68 percent; those with assets of from five to ten million dollars had only grown at the rate of 33 percent; those with assets of from ten to fifty million dollars, at the rate of approximately 19 percent; those from fifty to one hundred million dollars, at the rate of approximately 14 percent; and those with assets of over $100,000,000 at the rate of only 2.3 percent.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I had not read the article, but I am familiar with that entirely fallacious line of argument which has been used for many, many years by certain special interests who have been opposing legislation of this kind. I hope the Senator from Illinois will give a full exposition of the utter ridiculousness of the article referred to.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is it not true that the figures which Dr. Lintner and Dr. Butters advance, undoubtedly with the best of motives, confines this computation of percentage growth to the specific companies which acquired additional concerns, rather than the group of companies, within a class of a given size, from under $1,000,000; from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000; from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000; $10,000,000 to $50,000,000; $50,000,000 to $100,000,000; and over $100,000,000 respectively?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I believe the Senators' statement is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. As we have seen from evidence introduced earlier in the afternoon, there were only 156 companies with assets under a million dollars and only 246 companies with assets of from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, which acquired any additional concerns. Among companies with assets under $1,000,000, however, there are tens of thousands over $100,000, and yet 156 and 246 are singled out. I have had some figures prepared with a brief, explanatory statement, and I wondered if the Senator from Tennessee would care to have me put them into the RECORD. I believe they will shed some light on this question.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I should be delighted if the Senator from Illinois would put the figures in the RECORD.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to insert a table with a brief statement in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Relative gains resulting from mergers, 1940–47

1. AS PERCENT OF ASSETS OF ALL CORPORATIONS WITHIN A GIVEN SIZE CLASS

[Dollar figures are in millions]

Asset size class	Total number of acquisitions [1]	Average assets per acquisition [2]	Aggregate assets acquired [3]	Total assets in 1939 of all corporations in group [4]	Assets acquired as a percent of all assets in group in 1939 [5]
I	II	III	IV	V	VI
					Percent
Under $1	119	$0.7	$83.3	$10,011.0	0.8
$1 to $5	368	1.0	368.0	10,034.3	3.7
$5 to $10	254	1.3	330.2	4,874.4	6.8
$10 to $50	584	1.8	1,051.2	12,838.3	8.2
$50 to $100	227	2.6	590.2	5,107.5	11.6
Over $100	438	1.9	832.2	21,203.9	3.9
Total	1,990	1.7	[6] 3,383.0	64,069.4	5.3

2. AS PERCENT OF ASSETS OF ACQUIRING CORPORATIONS ONLY AS USED BY LINTNER AND BUTTERS

Asset size class	Average percentage growth of acquiring corporations [7]
Ia	VIII
	Percent
$1 to $5	68.1
$5 to $10	33.4
$10 to $50	18.7
$50 to $100	13.8
Over $100	2.3

[1] Effect of Mergers on Industrial Concentration, 1940–47, by John Lintner and J. Keith Butters, Review of Economics and Statistics, February 1950, table 1, p. 38.
[2] Loc. cit., table 5, p. 42.
[3] Column II times column III.
[4] Table 6, pp. 147, 152, Statistics of Income for 1939, pt. 2, Bureau of Internal Revenue, U. S. Treasury Department.
[5] Column IV divided by column V.
[6] The sum of the column comes to 3,255.1 million dollars; the difference is due to rounding of the average assets per acquisition.
[7] Lintner and Butters, loc. cit., table 7, p. 43.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The above table demonstrates the inadequacy of the Lintner-Butters commutations in their article in the February 1950 Review of Economics and Statistics. The Lintner-Butters figures indicated that small business fared better than big business in terms of the assets of the acquiring concerns rather than in terms of the assets of all corporations within a given size class. Thus, according to Lintner and Butters, the small companies with assets of $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 appear to have increased their assets through mergers by over 68 percent; those with assets of $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 by over 33 percent; those with assets of $10,000,000 to $50,000,000 by nearly 19 percent; those with assets of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 by nearly 14 percent; and those with assets of over $100,000,000 by only 2.3 percent. These figures are on the basis of the assets of those concerns making acquisitions only. However, in terms of all the corporations within the various size groups, the showing was quite different. Thus, the ratio of total assets acquired to total assets of all corporations within a given size class showed that corporations with assets of $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 gained only 3.7 percent because of mergers; those with assets of $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 gained 6.8 percent; $10,000,000 to $50,000,000, 8.2 percent; $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, 11.6 percent; and over $100,000,000, 3.9 percent. As a matter of fact, corporations with less than $1,000,000 in assets gained only 0.8 of 1 percent. Thus, through a subtle error, Lintner and Butters' figures indicated that small business fared better with mergers than big business, which the above table refutes and demonstrates that the opposite is true.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KEFAUVER. I was going to yield the floor so that the Senator from Illinois could proceed to make his statement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield.

NECESSITY FOR NATIONAL PREPAREDNESS

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate long. I very much regret what I personally deem to be the necessity for speaking today.

For the past 6 months, since the outbreak of the Korean fighting on June 25, I have had an opportunity to devote considerable attention to the problems of this Nation's preparedness. During most of that period, as I have tried to make clear, it has been my personal conviction that a great many of our national preparedness policies have been inadequate. On the basis of such information as I have had, I have not believed we were doing enough soon enough.

Experienced and capable men, for whom I have only the greatest personal respect, have argued eloquently for the policy of "wait and see." For 6 months, their counsel has prevailed. I am not here to condemn that counsel as insincere or incompetent. But I am here to express my personal judgment that this counsel can be accepted no longer.

I say that the policy of "wait and see" must end, and it must end now.

For what are we waiting? What do we expect to see tomorrow that we cannot see clearly today—or could not see on June 25?

For six costly months, this Nation and the whole free world have been at war. That is an undeniable fact which fine technicalities cannot obscure. Through those six precious months, however, our Government has been planning and acting from day to day and hour to hour. Faced with the task of girding this Nation for a struggle that may outlive us all, we have committed ourselves only to a policy of not committing ourselves.

Our Government has taken elaborate precautions to avoid committing this Nation to any permanency in the mobilization policies. We in Congress have been told—and we have apparently accepted it as wise—that we must be more afraid of doing too much than of doing too little. What is the result? For the common defense, we have thrown up a chicken-wire fence, not a wall of armed might.

How long can we continue this course and still keep faith with our consciences?

How long shall we continue to dignify obvious folly?

How long shall we continue to do no more than reenact the policies of World War II to meet the emergencies of a struggle that we know bears no resemblance to that war, or to any other war mankind has ever known?

This is not World War II all over again. This is a struggle without precedent in human experience. The military concepts and the domestic policies which won World War II are not applicable to this struggle in which we are now engaged. Obviously, we need new approaches, new plans, new goals. Just as obviously, we do not now have them.

Those of us in Congress know these things. We know that we have been underwriting makeshift mobilization with only a vague hope that the real thing may come along, sooner or later.

Is there now a man among us who can look the people in the eye and conscientiously say "Your Government has done all that it should have done to make freedom safe"?

Is there a man here who can with confidence answer the questions—

Where do we go from here?

What are we waiting for?

The people of America who sent us here are patient, but they are not docile. Through the bitter experiences of two world wars they have learned well the responsibilities of world leadership. Aware as they are of the cost of discharging that leadership, the American people nonetheless realize that the cost of defaulting that leadership now would be intolerable. That is why the American people today want those questions answered—Where are we going? What are we waiting for?

The people know that this Nation can neither lead the world nor save itself until the answers to those questions are decided.

Reading their newspapers, listening to their radios, the people of America have been unable to find assurance that answers to those questions exist. That is why the magnificent national unity, determination, and confidence displayed in the first days of the Korean crisis 6 months ago is deteriorating before our eyes.

Our national spirit and unity are not expendable. The public confidence cannot be taken for granted eternally. I tell you—and I say this carefully—the clamor of public irritation and impatience cannot be brushed aside like a bothersome fly with the flip and snobbish judgment that the public is not informed.

It is my considered judgment that no problem of preparedness should be of more immediate concern to those of us who represent the people in Congress than the present state of public confidence. The American people have not lost faith in themselves or in their country or in the democratic institutions, but the American people are tired of and they are fed up with double talk in Washington.

We—all of us, in Congress, in the executive branch, in the military—have had 6 months to make sense. We have had 6 months to give the people some answers, to find out where we are going and when we are starting. But we have not done so. The people are not going to put up with this sort of conduct forever.

I think it is time we get down to business; it is time for us to demand some answers and accept no more excuses. I, for one, have more faith in the American people than to suppose that only catastrophe—only a Pearl Harbor—can unite them. They are anxious to unite. But they cannot rally around a vacuum. They cannot give their unified support to policies that do not exist.

If we are going to get down to business, if we are going to begin to make sense, I believe that we must immediately acknowledge three self-apparent facts:

First. We are at war. We are at war not merely with Communist China, but with all the military strength and both the physical and the human resources behind the iron curtain. We have been at war for 6 months. We may well be at war for 10 or 20 years more.

Second. Our primary and immediate goal in this war is survival. This is a bleak, disturbing reality. In other wars we have fought, our goal has been simply victory. Now, however, we must make our survival certain before we can hope for victory, because we cannot be confident of survival.

Third. We are not getting ready for war. We are in a war, but all our effort is seemingly directed toward staying out of the war we are in already. This is adolescent nonsense.

What do these facts mean?

They mean that we must dispense with the illusion that time is on our side, and lay aside the idle hope that actual war will be delayed if we stubbornly refuse to acknowledge that a state of war exists. Time favors those who use it. We are not now using it.

Because this is a war of survival, not merely World War II all over again, we must take carefully into account the limitations of our resources, our capacity, our endurance powers. We must plan to conserve our resources so that if this struggle shall continue for 20 years, freedom will survive.

Finally, we must immediately undertake full mobilization of our productive capacity and our military strength. This must be done without compromise, without apology. Reluctant though some may be, we must finally and permanently acknowledge that mobilization cannot proceed without disturbing business as usual.

Plainly, we have misused the past 6 months. We cannot safely anticipate that our enemies will again be so generous as to grant us another 6 months in which to discuss and debate and do little.

From the facts before us, I believe we can see the outline of what is needed now.

First, and above all else, we must evolve a long range, over-all global plan of strategy for the war to which we are now committed. We have no such definite plan now. The absence of such a plan could well be fatal.

For 6 months, it has been exceedingly difficult to secure firm and positive estimates of military needs, or the needs of domestic mobilization. The military planners tell us they are not certain what we will need because they are waiting to hear from the Joint Chiefs of Staff; the Joint Chiefs of Staff explain that their assumptions are tentative because they have not heard from the Department of State; the Department of State insists that more information is needed from the Department of Defense and other departments.

This circle of confusion must end.

It can be ended only when our planners in the military and in the agencies concerned with domestic mobilization recognize the facts of life and begin to tell Congress candidly what we actually need, rather than what they think we might accept.

To do this, we must have a complete global policy. Our military planners and our diplomatic planners must work together to formulate a national policy, a national strategy for the war in which we are presently engaged.

We, not Russia, must decide where we shall fight and where we can fight. This is essential if we are to shepherd our strength with proper prudence. It is especially essential if we are to conserve our most precious and most limited resource—manpower. How tragic, how horrible it would be for the free world of the west to squander its young manhood in futile, indecisive little wars before the real enemy is ever directly engaged. Until we have determined the basic facts of what we can do, we cannot be confident that our manpower—and the resources necessary to send that manpower into battle—is being wisely used.

It is not dishonorable, it is not cowardly to acknowledge that certain limitations of our strength do exist and that these limitations make it as imperative that we not fight in some areas as that we do fight in other areas. The fact that we are stronger than any of our allies in no way diminishes the necessity for hard-headed generalship in the present crisis. Without an overall plan, the Congress cannot legislate wisely, the military cannot plan intelligently, the diplomats cannot proceed wisely, and the American people cannot confidently lend their support to the efforts of their Government.

The second requirement—as I see it—is the immediate full mobilization of our available manpower. This is long overdue. We must accept the fact that the best of our military strength is now committed to the fighting in Korea, and that, because of the intervention of the Chinese Communists, our numerical strength is being seriously decimated.

If this situation continues, we are very likely to find ourselves virtually impotent, in terms of ground troop strength, a few months hence. Stated more bluntly, if the present policies prevail, we may find ourselves weaker by next June than we were in June 1950 when the Korean fighting began. It is intolerable to permit our strength to deteriorate unnecessarily after actual fighting has begun.

I recognize that the military explains that it takes time to make camps ready to receive men for training, but I also know that it takes much time to make those men ready for combat. The gravity of the present situation is such that we cannot wait for barracks to be steam-heated, we cannot wait for officers' clubs to be redecorated before we begin rebuilding our military strength.

If it is necessary to house the men in pup tents, we shall have to do so. The important thing is that we must get our available manpower trained and trained rapidly. What will comfort matter if, a few months hence, we find ourselves stripped of a fighting force?

I urge again now—as I urged in the Senate on July 12—that all National Guard units and all Reserves presently on drill pay status be ordered into Federal service, and that the nonpaid Reserves be placed on active duty to the limit of need. I especialy urge that the Selective Service base be broadened to make available the maximum manpower strength we can muster. Furthermore, we must plan to use women and disabled men in those jobs where their qualifications make this possible. We cannot afford the luxury of not using all who can help.

Such action, I realize, may cause momentary inconvenience to industry, to educational institutions, and above all, to the individuals concerned. But the problems arising from full manpower mobilization do not override the monumental problem we shall face if we are without an effective fighting force next spring and summer. This is simply a matter of survival. Until we have taken the action necessary to guarantee our survival, we cannot continue to indulge the luxury of yielding to each plea of civilian inconvenience.

The third requirement of the present situation is the prompt mobilization of our economy.

This can wait no longer. Our economy, functioning properly, can be our greatest asset, because this struggle is a struggle between the free economy of the west and the slave economy of the east. But when our economy fails to function properly, it turns against us and becomes our worst enemy.

There is evidence that our economy is turning against us—and at an alarming rate. On November 28, the wholesale price index reached an all-time record high—171.7. That represents an increase of 12.3 percent since April. There is every indication that the index will go higher, because the basic raw materials—the fundamental ingredients of our finished products—are rising greatly in cost.

Burlap has increased 75.6 percent since April; copper is up 32.6 percent; cotton has jumped 28.8 percent; hides have been boosted 50.8 percent. During that same period, lead has increased 61.9 percent; cotton print cloth, 60.7 percent; steel scrap, 60.4 percent; tin, 85.3 percent; wool, 67.6 percent; zinc, 62.5—and crude rubber has increased the incredible total of 209.5 percent.

These are price increases that our production system cannot be expected to absorb. Obviously, this trend is going to hit the civilian population hard; but it is hitting the American people doubly hard because the items they must buy through taxes for the military are costing more and more each week.

Let me cite a few illustrations. The tax dollars which would have bought 100 miles of field wire before Korea would buy only 85 miles in September and only 78 miles in November. The tax money that would buy 10,000 barrels of fuel oil before Korea would buy only 6,500 barrels in September and only 4,700 barrels in November. The money that would have bought 1,000 truck tires in April, before Korea, would buy only 830 in September and just 720 in November.

Here are more examples:

The money that would have bought 10,000 pairs of khaki trousers before Korea would buy only 8,500 pairs in September and only 7,600 in November. The money that would have bought 10,000 pairs of wool socks before Korea would buy only 9,000 pairs in September and only 8,500 in October.

I could recite many more such illustrations. But all of us know what is happening. We know that the failure to take definite and positive steps to mobilize our economy is doubly taxing the American public. We know that by standing aside and permitting this policy of "wait and see" to continue we are increasing the taxes as surely as if we did so by direct legislation. That is why I say that the policy of "wait and see" must end, and end now.

I know—and I believe we all know—that price and wage controls alone cannot solve the problems of our economy. We know that such controls are, essentially, expedients. They afford only short-range solutions to long-range problems. But we also know that there is no use dilly-dallying, waiting for better answers, because there is no evidence that those better answers are forthcoming from those who are doing our planning.

We are going to have to live with controls until we find the courage and the determination to remedy the basic cause of our economic ill-health. That cause is a shortage of production capacity. If we are going to preserve our economic system, if we are going to defend ourselves, we must increase our productive capacity.

We do not now have ample capacity to sustain both our domestic economy and the greatest military mobilization we have ever known. We must do both. Plant expansion is now clearly a defense necessity; just as it was in 1940, when we began a program that expanded our output by 75 percent and made possible our victory in World War II. Similarly, the 40-hour week and one shift per day must go.

There are other steps we must take to mobilize our economy.

Faced as we are with a struggle which will greatly tax and strain our fiscal well-being, we must not permit the tax money, which could go for our defense, to be depleted by unjustified demands for Government programs and Government agencies which do not contribute to our survival. I do not suggest that essential nondefense activities of the Federal Government be crippled or harassed by a meat-ax attack. I believe it especially important that we not forsake the development of our underdeveloped natural resources, because before this struggle ends we may well need to command the full economic potential of every region in our Nation. But I think that we must dispense with the idea that because one segment of the Government increases in size, all segments must increase. It is especially important that we in Congress not honor the requests for inflated appropriations which are justified by contrived arguments of emergency need.

This is an important factor in maintaining the public confidence. Until such time as the public is convinced that their additional tax dollars are to be used solely for defense necessities, essential tax programs are going to be needlessly jeopardized and resisted.

Beyond this, there is still one supremely important deficiency to be filled in our economic mobilization. That is the need for hard-driving, head-knocking, forward-moving personal leadership in high places in the Defense Establishment.

The finest mobilization laws cannot be effective if they are administered timidly, reluctantly, hesitantly. Reluctant, apologetic administration does not inspire public confidence; and it does not get the job done. A nation cannot be mobilized with charts and graphs and lectures on twilight mobilization. That is the sort of talk the people are tired of hearing.

Tell the people what should be done—and why—and they will mobilize themselves far better than memoranda and directives can do.

Over and over again, we in Congress have been hearing our mobilization experts explain that this program and that program cannot be put into effect because we are not ready for it. I say the people have been ready for 6 months for whatever program is necessary. They are only tired of having to accept no program at all.

It is time for our mobilization leaders to take off their velvet gloves and get down to work. It is time for plain talk. It is time for action; the cause of freedom cannot survive longer delay.

We must face facts clearly. We must acknowledge that we are at war and that this is a war of survival. We must admit that we are not getting ready for war—and we can no longer delay our mobilization.

We must immediately develop a plan of global strategy—decide what we can do and cannot do, and get on with the job. We must mobilize now, without further delay, the necessary manpower strength to defend this Nation, to make survival possible. And we must mobilize our economic resources—control the price spiral, expand our productive capacity, curtail nonessential Federal spending, and get some drive and punch into the leadership of our home-front effort.

We do not have the time to spend on further temporary or stopgap or preliminary legislation. We must demand the real thing—not makeshift substitutes. This war is not going to get any more real than it is now.

We have nothing more to wait for—nothing more that we need to see before getting started on the job that has been clearly before us for six lost months.

We must give the people answers to their questions—Where are we going? What are we waiting for?

At this moment, as any open eye can see, our Nation, our civilization, our world, all are being engulfed by a gathering darkness.

Is this the hour of our Nation's twilight, the last fading hour of light before an endless night shall envelop us and all the Western World?

That is a question which we still have in our power to answer. If we delay longer, we can expect nothing but darkness and defeat and desolation. If we answer the challenge with courage and confidence, and with the ability of which we are capable, we can, I am sure, triumph over our foes.

A great American patriot once fanned the fires of democracy into such a flame as to give us America. In debate, Patrick Henry cried in tones heard throughout the years, "Why stand we here idle?"

Can I say more today?

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, with respect to final action on the pending measure, I have consulted with our friends on the other side and they are most cooperative. There appear to be no additional speakers desirous of addressing themselves to the subject.

It has been suggested that we might enter into a unanimous-consent agreement to vote tomorrow afternoon at an hour satisfactory to all Senators. I realize that will necessitate a quorum call. Unless there is indication that any Senator wishes to speak, I now suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hickenlooper	Millikin
Brewster	Hill	Morse
Bricker	Hoey	Mundt
Bridges	Holland	Murray
Butler	Hunt	Neely
Byrd	Ives	Nixon
Cain	Jenner	O'Conor
Capehart	Johnson, Colo.	O'Mahoney
Carlson	Johnson, Tex.	Pepper
Chapman	Kefauver	Robertson
Chavez	Kem	Russell
Clements	Kerr	Saltonstall
Connally	Kilgore	Schoeppel
Cordon	Knowland	Smith, Maine
Donnell	Langer	Smith, N. J.
Douglas	Leahy	Stennis
Dworshak	Long	Taft
Eastland	Lucas	Taylor
Ecton	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Ellender	McCarthy	Thomas, Utah
Flanders	McClellan	Thye
Frear	McFarland	Tobey
Fulbright	McKellar	Tydings
George	McMahon	Watkins
Gillette	Magnuson	Wherry
Gurney	Malone	Wiley
Hayden	Martin	Young
Hendrickson	Maybank

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOLLAND in the chair). A quorum is present.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, in order to expedite the pending business, we have conferred with Senators particularly interested in the bill, and I desire to propose for consideration by the Senate a suggested unanimous-consent agreement which would read as follows:

Ordered, That on the calendar day of Wednesday, December 13, 1950, at the hour of 2:30 p. m., the Senate proceed to vote, under the limitation of debate hereinafter provided, upon any amendment or motion (including appeals) that may be pending or that may thereafter be proposed to the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended, and upon the final passage of the said bill: Provided, (1) That after the said hour of 2:30 p. m., debate upon any amendment, motion, or appeal shall be limited to not exceeding 20 minutes, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the mover of any such amendment or motion and Mr. O'CONOR; (2) that no amendment or motion affecting or relating to so-called civil-rights legislation shall be received; and (3) that no vote on any amendment, motion, or appeal shall be had prior to said hour of 2:30 p. m.

Ordered further, That the time intervening between a quorum call, to be had upon the convening of the Senate on tomorrow (Wednesday, December 13, 1950) and the said hour of 2:30 p. m., shall be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing said bill and controlled, respectively, by Mr. O'CONOR and Mr. DONNELL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, the reason for including the provision relative to not receiving a so-called civil-rights measure is that that is the only thing which may not be received as an amendment. Any other amendment may be offered, and germaneness is not required, under the unanimous-consent request. Is that correct?

Mr. O'CONOR. That is according to our understanding.

Mr. WHERRY. We shall not therefore expect to find ourselves in the situation we were in yesterday. So far as the pending measure is concerned, I think this represents the proper way in which to handle it. Of course, the proposed agreement must meet the approval of all members of the Republican minority. It is being handled in this manner because of a suggestion made by the minority leader, that we could not enter into another unanimous-consent agreement containing the usual provision as to germaneness of amendments, in view of the situation in which we found ourselves yesterday regarding an amendment offered by the Senator from California. Therefore, for this particular request, with the exception of a civil-rights amendment, the provision as to germaneness has been omitted. I believe all Senators will agree that the pending measure, which relates to antimonopoly and restraint of trade, is unaffected by the question of civil rights. Nevertheless, I do not like the provision any too well, personally. I did not know of any other way to reach the situation, however, because, if we are to be confronted with a unanimous-consent request requiring germaneness in the case of all amendments, it wil be a threat to those who might want to offer amendments at any time, up until the hour of voting. Any other amendment, of course, could be offered after 2:30 o'clock with the usual time limit of 10 minutes to a side. For these reasons I favor the unanimous-consent request which has been presented, and I hope minority Members will not object to it, but will agree to it.

The only question about the time which is proposed is that there are many committees which will begin their hearings at 2 o'clock. I do not want to interfere with the work of the committees. I understand the Armed Services Committee is working regularly, and that the Appropriations Committee will meet at 2 o'clock. I wonder whether it is really necessary to fix the time at 2:30 o'clock. Is there any way by which the hour could be shifted from 2:30 o'clock until 2?

Mr. O'CONOR. The Senator from West Virginia suggested it be 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. KILGORE. I made that request.

Mr. WHERRY. I do not want to be arbitrary, but there are many committees working, and they convene at 2 o'clock. Is there any way we can speed this up?

Mr. KILGORE. If we were to vote at 2 o'clock, how could the committees meet at 2 o'clock?

Mr. WHERRY. I think there will be but one vote, unless amendments are offered. At least, that was the thought of the distinguished Senator from Maryland.

Mr. O'CONOR. I may say to the distinguished Senator from Nebraska it is possible there may be no record vote.

Mr. WHERRY. That is my understanding. I am not objecting, although several Members have said to me that it would delay their committee meetings. The Finance Committee is working, trying to conclude hearings on a tax bill, and 30 minutes is 30 minutes to that committee. I should appreciate it if the Senator from West Virginia would concede the matter of time, and make it 2 o'clock—not that I personally care about it at all.

Mr. KILGORE. If necessary, I will make that concession.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. O'CONOR. I ask that the unanimous-consent agreement be modified accordingly, and that, instead of the hour of 2:30 o'clock being designated, if agreeable to our friends, the hour of 2 o'clock be substituted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed unanimous-consent agreement, without objection, will be amended accordingly.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very pleased to yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. LANGER. I shall offer no objection, but I desire to say that I want to speak in favor of the bill for about 15 minutes, if I may make that arrangement.

Mr. O'CONOR. I am delighted to assure the Senator from North Dakota that that much time, or any additional time he may ask, will be afforded him.

Mr. LANGER. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement, as modified? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The unanimous-consent agreement, as entered into, is as follows:

Ordered, That on the calendar day of Wednesday, December 13, 1950, at the hour of 2 p. m., the Senate proceed to vote, under the limitation of debate hereinafter provided, upon any amendment or motion (including appeals) that may be pending or that may thereafter be proposed to the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended, and upon the final passage of the said bill: Provided, (1) That after the said hour of 2 p. m., debate upon any amendment, motion, or appeal shall be limited to not exceeding 20 minutes, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the mover of any such amendment or motion and Mr. O'CONOR; (2), that no amendment or motion affecting or relating to so-called civil rights legislation shall be received; and (3) that no vote on any amendment, motion, or appeal shall be had prior to said hour of 2 p. m.

Ordered further, That the time intervening between a quorum call, to be had upon the convening of the Senate on tomorrow (Wednesday, December 13, 1950) and the said hour of 2 p. m., shall be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing said bill and controlled, respectively, by Mr. O'CONOR and Mr. DONNELL.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, yesterday I secured unanimous consent to explain why I voted against the bill providing aid to Yugoslavia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent to make a statement explaining his vote on the bill providing aid to Yugoslavia.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I received consent last night. I asked consent last night that I might later explain my reason for voting as I did, because I wanted to be sure of my facts before I made the statement. A man coming from California, who is perfectly familiar with the question, was to discuss it with me, and I wanted to be absolutely certain that what I would say would be the truth.

Mr. President, we all remember that during World War II the late President Roosevelt on one occasion paid his compliments to Joe Stalin. That was at a time when Stalin was in partnership with Hitler. This afternoon I want to say that we are all familiar with the fact, with reference to Yugoslavia, that the United States for a long time helped Mr. Mihailovich, and later, in spite of protests by the State Department, he was murdered by those persons who are now in power in Yugoslavia. That was done, I repeat, in spite of the protests of our State Department. Their own investigation shows, in my opinion, at least, that the help which has been voted should not have been given Yugoslavia.

The evidence is uncontradicted that under Tito thousands of soldiers and other persons went to the farms of what were known as the Volkesdeutsche Sudetenland farmers. For instance, a farmer had a beautiful home which had been in the possession of his family for hundreds of years. It is undisputed that these soldiers, if any resistance was offered by the head of the family, killed the head of the family, and then the family was taken out to what is called the meadow, along the road. They were given 2 hours to leave their homes. All they could take with them was what they could carry. The old people were driven along, as well as women carrying little children in their arms. They were not hauled by trucks; they were driven along.

The facts further are, Mr. President, that they were driven all the way to the German border. Their land was then confiscated and given to the Communist followers of Tito. In a great many instances, in fact, almost all the time, except when those in authority had some favorites, all the land of the farmers was confiscated, except perhaps 1, 2, or 3 acres. All over Yugoslavia the farmers protested. Those who remained, when they were told they would have to surrender their crops, refused to seed their crops.

The actual condition in Yugoslavia is not the result of drought. It has developed because Tito did what the Russians did when Russia killed more than 5,000,000 farmers a few years ago. Six hundred thousand of these people went from Yugoslavia to Austria. There were nearly 15,000,000 persons, of whom approximately 4,000,000 died. The land they had has been nationalized. The farmers who did not seed their crops were killed, or, if they were in good physical condition, were sent to Siberia, to the salt mines.

The United States Government, by the vote which was taken yesterday, is giving millions of dollars to a bloody Communist outfit which murdered hundreds of thousands of families, took hundreds of thousands of homes, and now are looking to this country for food—food which the farmers who were brave enough to fight the Communists would not raise.

So, Mr. President, I want to be on record as opposing this loan in every way, shape, form, and manner conceivable.

I might add, Mr. President, that I talked to a great many of the refugees personally, and before I made the statement upon the floor of the Senate I wanted to confer with the man whom I have mentioned, who speaks with authority. He is a man who has been over there for many months. He was over there this year, a year ago, 2 years ago, and 3 years ago, Mr. President. He has relatives there. He has held official positions. I wanted no possible mistake on my part in voting against the loan measure.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, apparently none of my colleagues desire to speak further on the pending bill. I, therefore, move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOLLAND in the chair) laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Frank J. Parker, of New York, to be United States attorney for the eastern district of New York, vice J. Vincent Keogh, resigned, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

Oliver J. Carter, of California, to be United States district judge for the northern district of California;

William M. Byrne, of California, to be United States district judge for the southern district of California; and Edward P. Murphy, of California, to be United States district judge for the northern district of California.

By Mr. MURRAY, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

Robert T. Creasey, of Texas, to be Assistant Secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor;

George J. Bott, of Maryland, to be general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board; and John Thad Scott, Jr., of Texas, to be a member of the National Mediation Board.

By Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare:

Euald C. Warkentin, and several other candidates for appointment in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service; and Leslie A. Chambers, and sundry other candidates for appointment and promotion in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Anna M. Rosenberg, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of Defense.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, it has been requested that that nomination be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nomination will be passed over.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Holmes Baldridge, of Oklahoma, to be an Assistant Attorney General.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Leonard R. Carpenter to be United States marshal for the district of Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of H. Tucker Gratz, of Honolulu, T. H., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 32, with headquarters at Honolulu, T. H.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Albert H. Kleffman to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 35, with headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the Executive Calendar.

RECESS

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, as in legislative session, I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, December 13, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATION

Executive nomination received by the Senate December 12 (legislative day of November 27), 1950:

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

Frank J. Parker, of New York, to be United States attorney for the eastern district of New York, vice J. Vincent Keogh, resigned.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate December 12 (legislative day of November 27), 1950:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Holmes Baldridge, of Oklahoma, to be an Assistant Attorney General.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Leonard R. Carpenter to be United States marshal for the district of Nevada.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

H. Tucker Gratz to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 32, with headquarters at Honolulu, T. H.

Albert H. Kleffman to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 35, with headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Father Henry Freiburg, president, Quincy College, Quincy, Ill., offered the following prayer:

O Heavenly Father, God of peace but also God of might and power and justice, hear the pleas of Thy people who cry to Thee in an hour of peril. Fill our minds with Thy knowledge, our hearts with Thy love, our wills with the determination to serve Thee alone.

Guide the minds of our leaders in government toward clear and prudent judgments in this dangerous hour. May their deliberations and decisions be made always in the spirit of the prayer—Thy will be done.

As a nation make us worthy, O God, of Thy protection and help. Fill our personal lives with a holy fear of Thy judgments, because the fear of Thee is the beginning of wisdom—Ecclesiasticus 1: 16. "And send Thy fear upon the nations that have not sought after Thee: that they may know that there is no God beside Thee"—Ecclesiasticus 36: 2.

We ask this in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Woodruff, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 3295. An act to amend the Railway Labor Act and to authorize agreements providing for union membership and agreements for deductions from the wages of carriers' employees for certain purposes and under certain conditions;

S. 4234. An act to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia; and

S. J. Res. 209. Joint resolution to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended.

The message also announced that the Vice President has appointed Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina and Mr. LANGER members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of August 5, 1939, entitled "An act to provide for the disposition of certain records of the United States Government," for the disposition of executive papers referred to in the report of the Archivist of the United States numbered 51–9.

JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE STATE OF INDIANA

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, may I commend to the consideration of the House a recommendation which has been transmitted to me by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of the State of Indiana. The recommendation contained in a telegram which reached me yesterday is as follows:

The United States is now confronted with an appallingly grave world situation in which God-fearing nations are pitted against atheistic Russia and her satellites. It seems only fitting in this time of crisis that the people of the United States call upon their greatest ally, God, for the guidance, strength, and courage necessary to achieve world-wide peace. It is therefore suggested that the President of the United States declare a Nation-wide legal holiday of 10 minutes on a normal workday for Nation-wide prayer so that all people of the United States can simultaneously humble themselves before God and pray for His aid. It is suggested that all work cease at this time and that all churches throw open their doors. Certainly if a Nation-wide holiday can be declared in celebration of our independence, 10 minutes can be spared for Nation-wide prayer that we keep it. True, various churches and other organizations are earnestly engaged in prayer for peace, but this is not enough. Everyone must be made aware of the importance of prayer at this time and it is thought that a national time of prayer might serve as an incentive for regular family prayer for peace.

We may take encouragement from this and other evidences that our people are becoming more and more conscious of the need for seeking divine help in these trying and difficult times. The recommendation of this group of our fine younger people must not be treated lightly. Their telegram tells me that the Governor of Indiana has endorsed their proposal. I join in urging that the President take appropriate action for the calling of a Nation-wide season of prayer as suggested by them.

DORSEY J. BARTLETT

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I know that all on the Republican side of the House, and I am sure on the Democratic side as well, rejoice in the fact that the chief of our page boys, Dorsey J. Bartlett, has been made a second lieutenant in the marines. He is a man whom we all love and admire and we appreciate his fine courteousness and high patriotism. We congratulate him on achieving his high office and wish for him the fullest measure of success.

Mr. Speaker, may I at this time inquire of the majority leader what the program will be for the balance of the week?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, may I say that I join with the gentleman from Massachusetts in the appropriate remarks he has made about a member of the House organization in connection with obtaining a commission? We are all proud of him and others of our organization for the intense patriotism that they have.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. Speaker, I have been informed by the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], that an appropriation bill will be reported to the House on Friday. It is hoped that the bill may be brought up and considered that afternoon. If not, I shall feel constrained to have a Saturday session in order to consider the bill.

In speaking with me yesterday, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], in giving me this information, said that he hoped the bill could come up on Friday and be passed on the same day. As I speak now I see no reason for a Saturday session if that is done, although I do not want to commit myself at this time. If the appropriation bill is reported on Friday and it can be considered on that day, all well and good; if not, the importance of the bill and the question of time is such I feel constrained to have the House meet on Saturday for the consideration of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I may say, if it is agreeable to the ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], to call it up on Friday, that I personally would have no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman from Massachusetts and the leadership on the Republican side always cooperate on these matters, and I appreciate that very much. I am hopeful that the situation of the Committee on Appropriations will be such that if the bill is reported on Friday it may be brought up that afternoon.

DEAN ACHESON, SECRETARY OF STATE

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, the majority of the Members elected to the House of Representatives, campaigned on the issue that Dean Acheson, Secretary of State and his policy makers in the State Department must be fired.

The election is over, and we cannot now take a soft and compromising view on this question.

The Secretary of State has lost the complete confidence of the American people. There can be no unity with Mr. Acheson at the helm of the State Department.

A state of emergency is about to be declared by the President. The time demands that public servants be above suspicion and have the complete confidence of the people.

I, therefore, urge that a conference of Republicans and anti-Acheson Democrats be called at once, in order that a strong stand may be taken, and a petition circulated which will call for the removal of the Secretary of State and others in policy-forming positions.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MACY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

[Mr. MACY addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. JAVITS asked and was given permission to address the House on Thursday next for 15 minutes at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day and following any special orders heretofore entered.

DORSEY J. BARTLETT

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I, too, want to congratulate Joe Bartlett on winning his commission in the Marine Corps. Joe Bartlett was granted a Reserve commission as second lieutenant on grounds of previous service as meritorious noncommissioned officer. As such rates term "mustang" which marines fondly call officers who come up from enlisted ranks. The Capitol is proud of him as he was graduated from Capitol Page School in June 1944 and immediately joined the Marine Corps and 17-year-old enlistee. He served remainder of World War II and was discharged in September of 1945. He came back to the Capitol then and was then appointed minority chief of pages by Minority Leader JOSEPH W. MARTIN, and holds that post today with distinction and ability. He lives with parents near Clarksburg, W. Va., and they must feel even more proud of him than I. We shall miss him greatly. He has always used his head. He has always been most efficient and completely courteous. He has courage. Mr. Speaker, the Marine Corps shows firm courage and superb generalship even in a temporary retreat, temporary withdrawal. Mr. Speaker, Joe Bartlett will be worthy of all the Marine Corps' traditions. I feel, as many others do, that it is very important for the Marine Corps to be represented on the Joint Chiefs of Staff just as are the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force. It is high time that was done. It would add a great deal to the strategy of the war. It is important that they be represented in peace and it is even more important in war.

WILL YOU BE MISSED?

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include an editorial.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, it is with a spirit of humbleness that I present the following article, dated December 5, 1950, and written by John Barger, editor of the Mineral Daily News-Tribune, Keyser, W. Va., and ask each of you to read it, and join with me in Christian self-reflection. The joyous season of Christmas is with us, but it is overshadowed by clouds of trouble which we must recognize and disperse with wisdom and truth. I know all of you share my prayer that our purpose in life shall be to further God's great plan of peace on earth and good will to all men; that our deeds will be gratefully remembered after we are gone; and that we will be missed, but not in vain.

WILL YOU BE MISSED?

Some of these days you who are reading this are going to die and pass on to your reward—whatever that reward may be. But will you leave a void behind? Will you be missed?

The Creator has ordained that man must carve out his own career in this world, and when he journeys to the great unknown he leaves behind him a record founded upon his own acts.

You may leave behind you a wife, or children, or other dependents. As you deal with them in life so will their grief be gaged and tempered at your death. Will they miss you?

In this town you have friends, and business associates, and perhaps many acquaintances. They know you as you are and as you have been for many years. They have judged you living, and they will judge you dead. Will they miss you?

In the banks and in the stores, and the office and out on the farms are people who have known you in the past and who know you today. As you have been, so are you known to them now. Will they miss you?

In the house of darkened windows where sweet-toned music soothes the tired brain and the minister tells of the better ways of life are many people who know you for your acts, your deeds, for that which you have performed or left undone. Will they miss you?

In our homes are many little children who know you, who have passed you on the streets, who perchance have been greeted with a friendly smile or with a frown. They will remember you. But will they miss you?

Even your faithful animals or pets know you as you are and as you have been to them. Will they miss you?

There is no place you may go, no point of the compass to which you may return, but what people know you or will know you, and by all of these you will be judged when you have passed away. As you shape your career in life, so do you write the record by which you will be known after death. Your family, your associates, your acquaintances, even your dumb brutes will remember you after you have passed on.

But will they miss you?

THE LATE HONORABLE ROBERT F. ROCKWELL

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ASPINALL].

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, it is my sorrowful duty to advise the membership of the House of the death of the Honorable Robert F. Rockwell, former Member of this body during the Seventy-seventh, Seventy-eighth, Seventy-ninth, and Eightieth Congresses. He passed away at his home in Paonia, Colo., on September 28, 1950, at the age of 64 years. Former Congressman Rockwell was born at Cortland, N. Y., on February 11, 1886, and moved to western Colorado in 1907, in which State he had been a livestock producer and rancher throughout the many years of his residence there.

Mr. Rockwell gave allegiance to the Republican Party throughout his lifetime and the people of Colorado honored him many times for his upright and conscientious services in their behalf. In 1916 he was elected as the State Representative from his home county of Delta to the State legislature which position he held for 4 years. In 1920 he was elected State Senator and served in such capacity until he was elected lieutenant governor of Colorado. After his term as lieutenant governor, he was defeated for the governorship and a few years later once again elected to the State senate, which position of public trust he was holding in 1941 when he was elected to Congress from the Fourth Congressional District of the State of Colorado for the seat made vacant in 1941 by the death of the late Honorable Edward T. Taylor, who had been a Member of this body for almost 30 years. Mr. Rockwell held his position in Congress until the first of January 1949.

During his membership in the National Congress, he was a member of the Committee on Public Lands and was serving as chairman of the Subcommittee on Reclamation and Irrigation when he retired from Congress.

In addition to these elective offices, he served for 16 years by appointment on the Colorado State board of agriculture.

Throughout all of his years of residence and office-holding in Colorado, Mr. Rockwell rendered to his community, State and Nation honest and valuable service. He was most conscientious in his political beliefs and in the discharge of the many duties he was called upon to perform. He was at all times a man of a retiring personality, quiet in demeanor and gentlemanly in his associations with his neighbors and colleagues. He was a true conservative in his political philosophy. He never took part in political chicanery and his own political welfare was of secondary importance in the handling of the affairs of the offices which he held.

During my early years of public service, I became acquainted with this honored and trusted citizen of my State and came to know him as a true and noble character. During the State legislative session of 1941, he served in the position of the minority leader of the State senate while I held the responsibility of being majority leader. It was a pleasure to work with him. His word was as good as gold. I never knew him to breach a commitment either directly or indirectly. Whenever there was to be a change in policy on the part of him and his associates, he always gave the necessary warning so that the worthwhile services of the two-party system might be prosecuted for the interests of the electorate.

It was my pleasure to not only know him as a political associate but also as a trusted friend in whom I had great confidence. With his passing, he left a record of good neighborliness in his home community, unselfish public service in his State and Nation, and a quiet, generous and understanding relationship with his fellow men seldom surpassed by individuals anywhere.

He left to mourn his passing his widow, two sons, and a limitless number of friends, to all of whom I join with my colleagues in sending our condolences and sympathies.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASPINALL. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to add a few words on the life and public service of our dear departed friend, former Congressman Robert F. Rockwell, of Paonia, Colo., who served in the Seventy-seventh, Seventy-eighth, Seventy-ninth, and Eightieth Congresses of the United States of America.

Congressman Rockwell was born in New York State—Cortland—moved to Colorado in 1907, where he engaged in stockraising, cattle, and fruit growing.

From 1916 to 1920, Mr. Rockwell served as a member of the house in the Colorado Legislature. From 1920 to 1924 and 1938 to 1941 he served in the Colorado State Senate. From 1922–1924, he was lieutenant governor of Colorado. From 1932 to 1946, he served as an appointee on the board of the Colorado A. & M. College.

In the fall of 1941, Mr. Rockwell was elected to the House of Representatives from the Fourth District of Colorado to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the Honorable Edward T. Taylor.

Congressman Rockwell, as can be realized by the number of positions in which he served the people of our State, was a great public servant, conscientious and deliberate with a mentality that could and did think through the maze of surrounding unessential details and arrive at the crux of an issue without fanfare or unnecessary publicity. All those who worked with Congressman Rockwell loved him, which in itself is a great compliment. He never attempted to punish those with whom he differed. His honesty, integrity, and great love of America and its representative form of government stamped Congressman Rockwell the truly great American he really was.

Colorado lost an outstanding public servant, his community lost a fine cooperator, and all of us who called him our friend will greatly miss him at the conference table, where his sound advice and cautious counsel was always fully appreciated. To his family we extend our most sincere sympathy.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I join with the gentleman from Colorado and other Members from the great State in expressing my deep regret at the death of former Congressman Rockwell. Mr. Rockwell during his service here won for himself the high respect and affection of all of us. He was devoted to the public service. He served the people of his district with fidelity. He served the people with but one ambition, and that was to make his day and generation a little better for his having lived. Colorado has lost a great citizen and a fine public servant. All of us who had the privilege of knowing him have lost a devoted and a loyal friend. I extend my deepest sympathy to his wife and the members of his family at his untimely passing.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. D'EWART].

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, I, too, join with my friends from Colorado in mourning the loss of Bob Rockwell. I served with him on the Committee on Public Lands during the time he was in the Congress. He was chairman of the Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation where he had the opportunity of performing what is probably his most outstanding service while in Congress. He knew the West and he knew its problems. He was always a friend to those who were working for the solution of those problems. He was a real statesman in that he served not only his own State, but the entire country. We on that committee mourn his loss. We miss his advice and regret his passing very much. He was a man of high ideals, good character, and great integrity. He was a fine public servant of the type we can ill afford to lose.

I join with the other Members of the House in extending to his good wife and family our sincerest sympathy in his passing.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, it is with a sense of deep regret that the Members of the House hear today of the passing of our beloved friend Bob Rockwell. He was a neighbor of mine on the fifth floor of the New House Office Building for many years and we always passed the time of day and worked together as neighbors. He was that kind of a man. He believed in the finer things of life, as the gentleman from Colorado now addressing us has said. His political future was not as important to him as doing what was right. He always did what he believed to be right. I know the California delegation joins with the Colorado delegation in deep regret and sadness in the passing of our beloved friend.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASPINALL. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON. One of the first men I met when I came to Congress was Robert Rockwell, whose office was in the same corridor where I had my office.

Bob Rockwell was a gentleman in every sense of the word. He was thoughtful, kind, and generous.

He was also a man of ability. He made his mark in his own State in the legislative halls and as Lieutenant Governor of Colorado.

On the Public Lands Committee in this House he did very fine work. I came to know about it due to the fact that one time I introduced a bill concerning a project in California. Mr. Rockwell was chairman of the committee which handled the hearings. From the manner in which he conducted those hearings, it was obvious that he took a statesmanlike view of problems presented to him. He was patient and he was thorough.

It was the pleasure of my wife and myself to know Mrs. Rockwell, a charming and vivacious woman. To her we extend our deepest sympathy.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASPINALL. I yield.

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I had the privilege of serving with Bob Rockwell on the Public Lands Committee throughout the time he was in Congress, and I served under him, as chairman of the Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation. I always regarded him as one of the finest men in Congress. I am sure I was joined in this regard by all members of the Public Lands Committee, Democrats as well as Republicans. We all mourn the passing of this good man.

Mr. SANBORN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASPINALL. I yield.

Mr. SANBORN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with my colleagues in expressing regret at the passing of Bob Rockwell. I served with Mr. Rockwell in the Eightieth Congress on the Public Lands Committee when he was chairman of the Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation. I had the good fortune to visit some of the projects of the West in company with Mr. Rockwell, and I found him both helpful and understanding in all of the developments of the West with which we came in contact. He was a good friend, a sincere statesman, and a real American.

I wish to extend my heartfelt sympathy to his family who feel most the loss and passing of Mr. Rockwell.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the life and character of the late Honorable Robert Rockwell.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

DECISION OF THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT WOULD PROTECT ENEMIES WITHIN OUR GATES

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, in all the history of America our country has never been in such a deplorable condition as it is today.

Thomas Jefferson once said that if this Government were ever destroyed it would be destroyed by the courts.

A long step in that direction was taken by the Supreme Court of the United States on yesterday in its holding that you could not ask a witness whether or not he was a Communist.

Communism is treason. Every real Communist in America is a traitor to the United States.

Today we are threatened with the most serious condition the world has ever known.

Our boys are dying by the thousands in foreign lands, where they were sent without Congress even being consulted. We had just passed through one of the bloodiest wars in history in which our boys won the fight, but the victory was turned over to Russia, the worst enemy civilization has ever known, a result of a Communist conspiracy led by Alger Hiss and his Communist collaborators who were endeavoring in every way to undermine and destroy the Government of the United States.

For the Court to even attempt to compare this decision with the decisions of John Marshall and other great jurists of the past is an insult to their sacred memories. John Marshall would probably turn over in his grave if he even knew that his decisions and his reasonings were so distorted as to leave the impression that he would have even considered protecting these communistic traitors by judicial fiat.

If this decision is permitted to stand, and Anna Rosenberg is confirmed as Assistant Secretary of National Defense, you may expect to see these Communists packed into our Defense Department by the thousands.

It is about time the Congress woke up and assumed the prerogatives with which it is endowed by the Constitution, of governing the United States, and declaring war whenever that becomes necessary.

We cannot afford to let this so-called United Nations declare war for us and send our boys all over the world to do the fighting and dying and then protecting the enemies within our gates with decisions of this kind.

We had better follow the advice of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson whom these wild-eyed internationalists now brand as isolationsts. We had better follow their advice, bring our boys home, build up our own defenses, and strengthen our own country to where no Nation will dare attack us. Then we can lead the world by precept and example into the enjoyment of a more glorious civilization. But we cannot accomplish that end by international bribery, that is by trying to feed and clothe the rest of the world out of the pockets of the already overburdened taxpayers of America, nor can we accomplish it with the bayonet when the very nations that attempt to plunge us into war refuse to send their own men to help do the fighting, and refuse to tax their own people to help pay the cost.

I repeat that this is one of the most dangerous decisions I have ever read. Instead of following the decisions of John Marshall, it flies right in the face of them.

We cannot restore the peace of the world or insure the safety of America by having our boys shed their blood on foreign soil while the courts use their powers to protect the enemies within our gates.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has expired.

SUPREME COURT STILL DEFENDERS OF LIBERTIES

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] who just preceded me made an attack upon the Supreme Court.

The gentleman's attack on the Supreme Court might well be leveled against every judge that ever sat on the Supreme Court, including Chief Justice John Marshall. The decision for which he upbraids the Court is on all fours with the ruling made by Chief Justice John Marshall in the circuit court for Virginia district in the case of Aaron Burr. This kind of unheeding talk is enough to wake up the dead and disturb the bones of such eminent jurists as Chase, Fuller, Taft, and Stone. The legal doctrine supported by such men as Cardozo, Holmes, Roberts, and Brandeis, and now Vinson cannot be made light of.

The principle of immunity from self-incrimination goes far back into the memory of man and was an integral part of enlightened jurisprudence even years before the adoption of the Bill of Rights. It derives from the democratic struggles of the Puritans of the seventeenth century England against the attempts of the Crown to crush religious and political liberty.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANDERSON of California asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article, notwithstanding the fact that it will exceed two pages of the RECORD and is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $191.34.

Mr. TALLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter addressed by him to the Honorable Warren R. Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations, and Mr. Austin's reply thereto.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial from the Record-Herald of Washington Court House, Ohio, under date of December 8, entitled "May God Grant Us Some Real Leadership."

Mr. JOHNSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. BAILEY asked and was given permission to extend his remark and include comments on an educational project as well as correspondence having to do with the same subject.

Mr. NOLAND asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permissio: to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday I was given permission to extend my remarks and include an article entitled "Shortage of Doctors." I am advised by the Public Printer that it will exceed two pages of the RECORD and is estimated to cost $246. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed, notwithstanding that fact.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, notwithstanding the cost, the extension may be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

YUGOSLAVIA EMERGENCY RELIEF ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1950

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 878 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9853) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia. That after general debate which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 3 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

The resolution which has just been read speaks for itself. It provides for the consideration of the so-called Yugoslav relief bill, which is H. R. 9853.

I have no requests for time on this side on the rule. I wish to address the House briefly myself later during the discussion. I therefore reserve the balance of my time and yield now to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, this bill provides that the United States taxpayers, turn over $38,000,000 to the most ruthless Communist dictator in the history of the world to spend where, how, and when he sees fit, without giving one promise to the Government of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, who is this Tito? What is his background? Since early manhood he has associated himself with whom? With people who believe in democracy? Of course not, but with the people of the Kremlin in Russia; Lenin and Stalin.

Would anyone think for a moment that he is going to be different? This ruthless dictator who did not apologize when five American flyers were shot down; this same dictator who when Cardinal Mindszenty came before him defenseless, permitted him to be tortured until he confessed. Why, is not this the same Communist dictator that has permitted every church under his jurisdiction to be torn down?

Yet here today, Mr. Speaker, we are asked to accept the bloody hands of this dictator in a spirit of friendship. Members will come before us today and say: "Why, this is a military question." I say Tito will not promise anything, he will not even permit one man to fight on the side of democracy out of his 32 divisions of men. Because he is opposed to existing democracies and will fight against its growth.

They will come in here, Mr. Speaker, with such innuendos as "Maybe they will fight." I say again there is no promise on the part of this ruthless dictator to do anything for democracy. In fact, his past record shows conclusevely that he is against everything the people of democracies stand for.

Right at this moment do you think that he is on the side of the democracies in the United Nations? This Tito government has appeared before the Security Council 54 times, and I should like to have the Members refer to the Appendix of the report on the United Nations. Out of 54 votes the representative of the Tito government has voted but one time on the side of the United States and the democracies when communism was involved. I repeat, only one time did he vote on the side of free nations.

Mr. Speaker, now they are trying to turn over $38,000,000 of the hard-earned money of the American taxpayers to this same dictator whom our American taxpayers have already turned over $377,706,000 to. Oh, I know some are going to say here today: "During the last war he fought on the side of the United States." Why, he was forced to do so, not because he liked the United States better but because he hated Hitler worse. Hitler, with his fascism, then was trying to stop communism. Hitler and Tito are of the same caliber.

Our boys are fighting in Korea. We are losing tens and tens of thousands of our boys through casualties and death. When the time comes to recognize Red China in the United Nations, and in my opinion and in the opinion of others Red China will be recognized within 2 months, do you think this ruthless dictator, Tito, will vote on the side of the United Nations? Do you think we can expect Tito to vote once even on the side of the democracies, this man who has sat at the feet of Lenin and Stalin throughout his entire life?

It is going to be mentioned here that Stalin and Tito have had a little falling out. Well, they have not gotten along too well during the last year or so. But why? They both believe in this communistic government idea, but Tito says: "We should have individual communism, puppet states. I want to run Yugoslavia, and I am for you running Russia, I am for Red China running Red China, but I want to run Yugoslavia."

He further says, "We agree on the principles of communism. Our only difference is I want you to let me be the ruthless dictator in Yugoslavia, and you can be the same in Russia."

How can we expect this Tito to furnish troops to those who are fighting for democracy, how can we expect him to furnish troops to fight down Stalin's aggression when we cannot get the United Nations, those who believe as we do, to do any fighting? We are over there now fighting for ourselves and by ourselves.

Now, I cannot prescribe to the theory that we can expect Communists to fight alongside of democracy when we cannot even get the ones who believe as we do to go over to Korea and fight and help us win this war. I am sure that many Members here recall when the United Nations started how Members of this body and the other body got up and said, "We will join the United Nations, and any time anyone starts aggression there will be 50 or 60 flags right shoulder to shoulder, 50 or 60 separate armies of these countries fighting shoulder to shoulder. Why, no one will dare make aggression. When they start there will be 50 countries united, united as one to fight down that aggressor." I ask you whether these predictions have become true.

So, I say to you Members here today that you do not have to apologize to the people of your districts one bit when you stand up here and say, "I am against giving the most ruthless Communist dictator in history, who is alined with the theory, at least, of Stalin, one dime, and I am not just going to have you people, who have been bled white now in taking care of these countries, be taxed additional millions of dollars."

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, we meet here today in a time of most serious crisis to consider H. R. 9853, a bill which would make a gift of $38,000,000 to the Government of Yugoslavia, which is headed by the Communist dictator, Tito, without any strings whatsoever attached thereto with the small exception the people of Yugoslavia are presumably to be made aware of who has furnished the money.

Yesterday another body of this Congress enacted legislation on this same subject, except the bill, as it passed the other body, did provide the money to be used for this gift purpose should be taken from the ECA or Marshall-plan funds and charged against Yugoslavia's quota; and that counterpart funds should be set up by the Government of Yugoslavia, in Yugoslavian currency, to equal the amount of the gift, under the arrangement that the United States might control the disposal of these counterpart funds within Yugoslavia, for purposes that may be for the benefit of both countries.

Two arguments are made in support of the enactment of this legislation. One is that it is necessary to make this gift to Tito in order to at least immobilize, if not to obtain the active help of, some 32 divisions that he now has in his army. The other argument in its favor is that most of the gift fund will be used for the purchase of American agricultural products in storage, or owned or controlled by the Federal Government. The argument is made that Tito is friendly or will be friendly to us because he has broken, or is supposed to have broken, with Stalin and Soviet Russia.

I notice the House committee report states that the break actually took place. However, the Senate committee report simply says that it seems to have taken place, but that there is no direct evidence there has been an actual break; in other words, the Senate is not certain about it.

I am rather firmly convinced, in my own mind, that if the break has not taken place between Tito and Stalin we will be unable to purchase his friendship or the services of his 32 divisions for $38,000,000; but that if the break has taken place, and if it is an honest and real break, regardless of whether we loan Mr. Tito $38,000,000 he will not dare turn back to Russia, because it would mean the end for Tito and his group. So I think such an argument that it is necessary to furnish these funds in order to purchase either the immobilization or the use of the 32 Yugoslav divisions falls of its own weight.

Neither am I impressed greatly with the argument that we will simply be shipping Tito foodstuffs that are in surplus supply, in view of the fact that the Secretary of Agriculture has but recently called upon the farmers of America, and has called upon the great organization representing the farmers, the American Farm Bureau, now in session at Dallas, Tex., to increase the production of foodstuffs because of the coming scarcity, and the need for abundant food crops to meet the requirements of global war, should such a war come.

Let us analyze, if we may, for a moment or two just what the situation is. We have not been unkind or unfriendly to Mr. Tito in the past, I quote from the Senate report, if I may, Mr. Speaker, because I believe it deals with this subject more factually and more clearly than has the House committee report.

If I can read the Senate report correctly, we have already given something like 350 or 360 million dollars to Mr. Tito and his government. If you will refer to page 7 of the Senate report, you will find that during wartime we gave under plan A to Mr. Tito $6,500,000, and under lend-lease, which has never been repaid, $32,125,000; under UNRRA we sent into Yugoslavia $299,081,000 in food and relief; that since the break came with Russia, if it did come, we have made three loans to Tito totaling $55,000,000, one on September 19, 1949, one in March 1949, and another in August 1949; and that in addition we arranged for certain credits for Mr. Tito and his government in the amount of some $3,000,000 in September 1949, all at the expense of the American taxpayer. Again, in October there was a $2,700,000 loan, and again in October a $6,000,000 loan. Again, there were certain off-shore arrangements through ECA benefitting Yugoslavia, the amount of which I do not know. Further, in September 1949 we arranged for the transfer of some $35,000,000 in Western Germany credits to Yugoslavia, in dollars, and of course the only currency involved were American dollars. Let me conclude that segment of my argument by reiterating that we have not been unfair or unkind to Mr. Tito and his government.

Of course, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN] has explained, Tito is a Communist dictator. I believe the American people are growing quite tired and very sad over our continued coddling of communism. They are beginning to feel the time has come to do that which some of us have argued for a long while should be done, to become realistic in our international dealings and to fix our foreign policies in enlightened self-interest.

May I point out this legislation as brought here contains no requirement or commitment of any kind, whatsoever, that Mr. Tito and his government will or will not do anything. Remember all of the relief in the way of surplus foods and other goods that we have shipped into Europe, have been sold by the governments which received them. Remember, if you please, that Mr. Tito will control the distribution of the food to be purchased with this gift, and it is only natural he will not give food to those who oppose him or communism. Also that the real reason why there is a shortage of food in Yugoslavia is that the peasants there are so opposed to communism and to Tito that they refuse to produce food which is needed for their country under the collectivist ideas Tito is imposing on agriculture in Yugoslavia, just as Stalin imposed them in Russia.

Of course there are all kinds of dictators, and there have been all sorts of famines. There are such dictators as Franco of Spain and there have been Spanish famines. Dictator Franco, however, is not a Communist. I hold no brief for any dictator. But Franco is opposed to communism. Franco fought communism, and he whipped the Communist forces in Spain. Yet he has never been recognized by the United States, or any of those elements here in this country now directing our foreign policy. Franco has come to this country for aid in time of Spanish famine—and certainly a Spaniard can be just as hungry and starve just as terribly as any Yugoslav. But when Franco came to the United States pleading for help to meet the famine in Spain, he did not ask for a gift. He did not even suggest a gift. He asked only for a loan. There are strategic supplies in Spain which we need just as much as there are such supplies in Yugoslavia. The Yugoslavians supplies will be one of the arguments used in favor of this bill. But we would not even consider the loan to Spain until Congress, realizing that the Iberian Peninsula was the most important and strategic spot in all Europe in case war should come with Russia, last year voted $100,000,000 to be loaned to the Spanish Government. Up to this moment not a single dollar of that amount has been sent to Spain—not a single loan has been made under the authorization of the Congress by this so-called administration which has been drafting our foreign policies. The people of America are well fed-up with those foreign policies and are complaining to us about them. I think it is time we looked at this bill very carefully—stop coddling communism—and start being realistic in the conduct of our foreign relations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WHITTINGTON). The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCSWEENEY].

Mr. MCSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I come with disturbed thoughts this morning with regard to the pending legislation. I do not believe the House should ever be burdened with a repetition of what a Member has said before in the well of the House, but I find that a previous statement which I made with regard to the Marshall plan enters my thoughts, and I am going to ask your indulgence, to allow me to repeat it.

At the time when we were discussing the Marshall plan I spoke of a situation which existed before the war broke out between the States. At that time a man had come to the Presidency. He was terribly troubled by the situation which existed. He knew that war was imminent, and he felt if he could induce the Congress to buy the slaves, he might eliminate the chances of that war. He felt at least that he would be taking at least one of the very, very serious problems off the shoulders of the people if he could get rid of the slavery question in that way and that they could meet the problem of the States' rights and the question of secession. This man, by the Wall Street bankers and others, was considered an illiterate, uneducated man who came out of the West, and would eventually break this Government if he carried out his program of spending so much money to pay for the individual slaves.

I, while teaching in my class in Wooster High School, 67 years after Mr. Lincoln had made this proposal, discussed this problem with my students. Our beloved Abraham Lincoln was the President to whom I refer. My class found that by multiplying the number of slaves by the purchase price Mr. Lincoln would have paid for them, and dividing it into the cost of the Civil War, considering both the North and South, but not taking into consideration any of the heartrending things that came from the war, merely the actual material expenditures, that the purchase price of the slaves was equal to 11 days of the cost of a 4-year war. In asking for an extension of the Marshall plan, I found that the cost of extending it for 15 months was equal to 21 days of the cost of the last war. Now, I find we are asked to expend an amount which, when we consider the cost of the last war, would be equal to about 10 hours of that war.

I do not know whether this money will do all the things that they speak of. I do not know whether it will save American lives, but I want to say in the presence of this august body that I am not ashamed to admit that I am floundering, trying in some humble way to find a solution for these terrible problems. Do you not feel that under the circumstances we can try this as one of the things that might lessen the opportunity of bringing on a war, or, in fact, save the lives of the men who have already been fighting for us?

I offer this humble suggestion and hope that today providential guidance will be given to us to do that which is best for the people who supply this money—our taxpayers—and for those boys who are fighting in the field, as well as for the future happiness not only of America but of the world.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McSWEENEY] has expired.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may desire.

Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly obvious that the issue confronting us is in a sense distasteful. I share that sensation myself. It is a difficult decision for us to make. We would better be just as practical and cold as possible, despite the fact that we do not like the atmosphere in which we are proceeding.

Referring to the situation in Yugoslavia just for a moment, all of our reliable information is to the effect that the break between Tito and the Politburo in Moscow is irreparable. True, in both capitals, Belgrade and Moscow, communism is supreme—a thing we dislike intensely, but there is a sharp division on one certain fundamental issue. Tito contends that Marx did not teach that communism should be spread over the world by a single, all-powerful government. Stalin insists that that is what communism is meant to do. As has already been indicated, Tito has resisted that conception of communism, has insisted that he and his countrymen shall work out their Communist philosophy in Yugoslavia without dictation from the outside. When Communist rebels against Communist the sin is inexcusable, unforgivable. Should Tito fall, Stalin walks in. There can be no question about it at all. He would be glad to walk in with all the power which he could gather behind him. He would walk into a country which geographically occupies the most strategic position in eastern and Balkan Europe. Just take a look at the map and you can see the enormous importance of Yugoslavia in the event of world-wide trouble breaking out.

Tito cannot surrender to Stalin; if he did, his head would fall, and there is no doubt about it. He must go on in order to survive and save his government as presently constituted.

There is the fundamental issue between these two people. You and I do not like the principles professed by either of them; in fact, we detest them. But the question is: Is it wise for us to look at this thing from a practical standpoint? And having done so should we take a step which will tend most importantly to prevent the fall of the Tito Government? That government has been threatened for several months as the result of a terribly severe drought for which no political group is responsible. The Army of Yugoslavia to which reference has been made has had to be fed by special concessions already granted in order to keep it together, and the peasants of Yugoslavia are in a desperate condition in their mountain valleys. Should they break down completely, Moscow taking advantage as it always does, of suffering and distress, walks in.

As I confess to you that there is an element in this whole situation which is distasteful, let us look at the things that have happened. Some of them are significant; they are like signposts along the way, signs and signal smokes. Let us look, for example, as the troubles in northern Greece when from Yugoslavia came the guerrillas torturing the people of Greece and seeking to condemn that whole country into the arms of Stalin, guerrillas emerging largely from Yugoslavia. That occurred prior to the break between Tito and Stalin. Following the break the infiltration stopped. Of course, we contributed tremendously to the victory of the Greek Government and the defense of that country from communism, but it is to be noted that apparently Tito made up his mind that it was wise not to offend the democracies much more. We gained a little bit there.

You remember also that in 1946 and 1947, I think it was, the very very critical situation that existed at Trieste, a city garrisoned by British and American troops of about equal numbers, with the Yugoslavs in the hinterland demanding the evacuation of Trieste by the Americans and British, and even upon one occasion delivering an ultimatum to the allied government of Trieste saying in effect: "If you do not agree to the entry of our military forces at midnight tonight, we will come in nevertheless." And you will recall, I am sure, as an incident in that occasion the young American lieutenant who with not much more than a squad of infantry stood on the border as thousands of Yugoslav troops marched with every evidence of intent to go across the border. He ordered them to halt. They halted. It was a narrow squeak. That happened before the break between Tito and Stalin. No doubt Yugoslavia policy at that time was Stalin inspired. As you probably have noted, there has been no trouble in Trieste since then—none whatsoever. That is due to a change in policy on the part of Yugoslavia.

You will remember doubtless that Yugoslavia in 1946 and 1947 demanded a slice of the territory of Austria, shouting loud for it. That has been abandoned. It is agreed now by Yugoslavia that they are not entitled to that slice of Austrian territory.

Trouble arose in those days in the treatment accorded American citizens found in Yugoslavia. Following immediately after the war quite a number of American citizens of Yugoslav descent, legally American citizens, returned to their country for one reason or another, probably to see their families. For a long, long time Tito would not allow any one of those American citizens to return to the United States. He has now agreed that they may return.

Those are little signs or signal posts all along the road.

During the Greek insurrection or civil war, if you may call it such, thousands and thousands of Greek children were abducted and taken into Yugoslavia and other Communist satellite countries. Tito is now returning them.

I do not contend for one moment that these little incidents prove that Tito is abandoning communism as such; or that he is repentant as a Communist. I do bring them to your attention believing that these incidents are significant. Actually Tito knows that turning to Russia means for him total destruction and he is more than willing to lean a little bit toward the west. That is what he is doing.

Now, here we have the possibility, and it is a dread possibility, of an all-out war in Europe due to Russia's aggression. I think we can be fairly safe in our assumption that Tito would never take the initiative in that. I do not think you will find him attacking the western democracies. But should Russia do it and Tito stand neutral and say: "I am going to run my own country, you leave me alone," it would be a very grave embarrassment to Stalin and all of his military plans. I do not contend for one moment that we can count on Tito's divisions fighting on our side, but I would rejoice if, having made it possible for him to survive, we could then see those divisions standing ready in Yugoslavia and neutralizing at least an equal number of Russian troops. So in my view this thing comes down to a very practical proposition. It may not be pleasant. It is not pleasant. Nearly everything we see in this world today is unpleasant. Some of our other problems are going to demand solutions which will not be pleasant. But I am trying to look toward the future.

I cannot escape the conclusion that by the passage of this or, even better, the Senate bill we would do something which would make our cause more secure. That is the way I sum it up. My summation may be inadequate, but I speak from my heart.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. I admire, like all Members, the gentleman's judgement. I am just going to ask the gentleman this question. Inasmuch as that lieutenant and that squad showed no signs of appeasement when the troops came in there and stood there ready to fight, I am wondering if the gentleman admits that that is probably the only way to handle this subject, instead of giving them everything without any strings attached.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I think that incident and the problem that now confronts us are scarcely analogous.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. CANFIELD. Has the gentleman taken into consideration, in connection with Tito's action since 1947, when I, personally saw on every other house in sections of Trieste the two pictures of Stalin and Tito painted thereon, this thought, that the whole pattern of Tito's behavior within the last 3 years may be a Moscow-inspired fraud on the free democracies of this world? Has the gentleman taken that thought into consideration?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The best information that comes to us, and I happen to be absolutely sure of this, from our Embassy in Belgrade and men who have been there a long time and are thoroughly familiar with the conduct and motives and plans of the Tito government, is to the effect that the break between those two men is incurable.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I was interested in the gentleman's opinion concerning the type of communism that he believes Tito represents and the type that Stalin represents. Does the gentleman believe that there is any degree in communism that can be recognized? For instance, in this bill, where we are aiding a country that we know is controlled by Communists, can we treat communism by degrees?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No. Communism inside Yugoslavia is exactly like communism inside Russia. The only difference between the two leaders is the fact that the leader of Yugoslavia says, "You keep out of my country while I run my own communism."

Mr. McDONOUGH. And communism in Yugoslavia and in Russia we oppose as a nation?

Mr. WADSWORTH. We do.

Mr. McDONOUGH. There is no reason, therefore, for us to support this kind of legislation, if that is the case.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Unless we are willing to let Stalin walk into Yugoslavia.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York has stated this case so clearly and so frankly and so fully that there hardly remains much to be said to lay the proposition before you for what it is. It is one of those experimental gambles that we have been taking over the years with our foreign situation. It may work out as we hope it will work out. The evidence seems to be that it will work out to our advantage. I have not heard anyone on the Committee on Foreign Affairs say that this guarantees us anything. The gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Illinois both said that we ought to exact promises from Tito as to what he was going to do to Stalin. Well, you cannot expect Tito to spit in the lion's eye; now, that is just all there is to it. We cannot expect to ask him to do this or do that or do the other. We can only rely upon the information that we have. We have done a lot of things here; many of us have gone along on some of these proposals with grave doubts about them. And, some of them have worked well. Some of them have probably worked out better than we ever thought or know now, and it will all come out in the final outcome of this whole grave situation. Here is just a proposal to go along with this one item. Those who have the most knowledge of this subject believe it is a good gamble, nothing more or nothing less, and nobody is telling you any different.

There is a whole lot of difference between the philosophy of Tito as we understand it and the philosophy of Stalin. Stalin, as has been said, wants world domination by communism. Tito believes in home rule, that he is entitled to communism in his country and the other fellow is entitled to democracy in his country. Is not that just what we are for? Did we ever say to Stalin, "We are opposed to your having communism in Russia"? We are not trying to tell Stalin what he shall do in Russia. All we are trying to do is tell Stalin what he shall not do in this country or the rest of the world. I am just wondering how much difference there is in the whole over-all attitude on the subject of communism between Tito and our own policies in that regard.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlemen yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. McSWEENEY. Did we not have Zoar and Zion City in Illinois and Brook Farm in New York? They were themselves a kindly group of people but did they not call themselves Communists?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I believe they did. I am not expressing any degree of affection or tolerance for any of them, but I do say that as far as the policy of this country has always been, we have never said to Stalin, "We are not going to permit you to have the kind of government you want in your country," and we have never said that to any other country.

Look what we are doing for Great Britain. I hesitate to say this, but I believe it. Great Britain took the midway step between democracy and communism when it went to a socialistic government. We have not undertaken to tell Great Britain what she should do. We do not believe in that kind of government over there, yet we have, some of us with a great deal of reluctance, I might say, helped Great Britain under the Marshall plan to maintain itself under a socialistic form of government in which we do not believe for one minute.

Let us see about this bill. We propose to take this gamble, $38,000,000. Three-fourths of that money is to be spent in buying the surplus agricultural products we are going to try to get rid of. In dollars and cents that does not amount to a great deal. If you accept the Senate amendment, it comes out of the appropriation for the Marshall plan already made by this Congress, so that so far as the dollars and cents proposition is concerned, it is a very minor gamble when compared to some others we have made.

The gentlemen who oppose this have said there are no safeguards in this bill. There are plenty of safeguards in the bill. There are some safeguards in there that I think we would have been well advised to put in the Marshall plan and some other plans we have carried out.

Under this plan this Congress by concurrent resolution, if we think Tito is not carrying out the agreement, can stop this relief at any moment.

Under the provisions of this bill, our country is to have access to that country. Our people are to go in there. We have the right to determine that this relief is being given to all of the people without regard to race or religion, that there is a fair distribution of this food.

Under this bill, if Tito accepts this relief he is bound to give us the opportunity for publicity, to tell those people where this money is coming from, where this food is coming from, and who is coming to their rescue in the time of their great distress.

Why not do this and take the chance that we may at least gain the neutrality of Tito in any future misfortune, which neutrality would guarantee, as has been said, the neutralization of a large section of the army of the Communists of Russia.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. COLMER. With reference to the question of the cost and the gamble that we are taking I would like to call to the attention of the distinguished gentleman the fact it is estimated this loan or gift to Yugoslavia would amount to the cost of about 5 hours of World War II. Further, we are building jet bombers at a cost estimated at a little better than $3,000,000 apiece. In other words, this would be the cost of about 12 jet bombers. Therefore, the gamble we are taking is comparatively slight.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Yes, the gentleman has stated the proposition very realistically. It is just a plain, common-sense proposition. Certainly I have no patience with communism and that is well-known. But I do think this is a case where we can well look at the thing from a practical standpoint and do that which appears to be the practical thing, and which may result in great good and can result in no harm to this Nation.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, to me, feeling as I do, this does not seem to be rational behavior, but there are so many fine people who favor the adoption of this measure, people like the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], who is now addressing the House, and the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], that very frankly I am somewhat confused. But if you turn to the report of the committee you will find the committee at the outset recommends the adoption of the bill and then painstakingly sets forth not fewer than 100 reasons why it should not be passed.

The gentleman says provision is made which will give our country the right to supervise the manner in which this bounty shall be distributed or at least to go along with it and advertise that it is a gift from the United States. I am wondering just what value the opinion of an individual or group of individuals or of many individuals may be in a country which is completely dominated by communism.

There is not the slightest indication to be found in the record which would justify the hope that in the event of an all-out conflict with Russia Tito would stand neutral. Certainly there is no ground to hope he would come to our aid. My desire of course is to support the administration's foreign policy, and yet I must confess I find much in it to which I take violent exception and much in it which frightens me tremendously.

I have supported the Marshall plan, and I desire to testify that in my opinion it has to a very considerable extent paid off, but I have for a long time taken exception to the policy of appeasing Russia and everything which partakes of the complexion of communism.

In spite of the finally aroused public opinion that communism threatens to dominate the world and that our country is in danger of being encompassed by Stalin, here we kneel and beg the privilege of contributing $38,000,000 of money, wrung from the taxpayers of this country, to a unit of a group of countries that is dominated by communism. To me, it is hopeless to think that under any circumstances, in the event of a conflict between Russia and the United States, Tito would not play the role dictated by Stalin. It would be impossible for him to offer any resistance, and it being confessed that communism is communism everywhere, there can possibly be no withholding of aid on the part of Tito to his old cohort and brother in communism, Stalin.

I regret to have made these remarks. I had not the slightest idea in the world that I would open my mouth. I meant to come here and take the punishment in silence, but, Mr. Speaker, those are my sentiments, and I must be true to the dictates of my heart.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield briefly.

Mr. CANFIELD. When I was in Trieste in September of 1947, two American GI's, one from Arlington, Va., and one from East Orange, N. J., were seized by Tito's men for stepping over a poorly marked line between Yugoslavia and Trieste. Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, commanding our troops, commissioned me to try to get those boys released. I talked with officers of the Yugoslav Army. These officers talked as if our boys had committed a terrible crime. They finally were released. They told me later, particularly the boy from Arlington, Va., that they were briefed on communism hour after hour and asked the disposition of American troops in the free zone of Trieste. They were given rather shabby treatment and I was at that time informed by Army Intelligence there had been more than 60 incidents of this nature, some more serious.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has expressed in his frank and fearless manner, of course, the fears and doubts that we have on this whole situation. As I said before the gentleman came in, it is a gamble that many of us think is worth taking. None of us holds any brief for Tito. None of us has any apologies to make about this thing. We are going about it in a cold-blooded fashion, in the hope that it would pay dividends. Many of those who know more about it than I do think that it will pay dividends. However, there is a safeguard in that bill, that whatever we send there, our own people go there and see that it is distributed to relieve the famine in that country. Our own people are permitted to give the fullest publicity, both by press and radio, to our charity to those folks over there. Any time we feel that Tito is not carrying out his part of this bargain the President can cut off this relief. If he does not do it the Congress, by concurrent resolution can do it at any time. So this is not a final proposition. We can cut it out any time we feel it is not paying the dividends we expected it to pay.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9853) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 9853, with Mr. MCSWEENEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] is recognized for one hour and a half and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] for one hour and a half.

The gentleman from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, whether or not we agree as to the wisdom of what has been done or not done in the field of foreign policy up until this time, I am sure we will all agree that the bill before us should stand or fall on its own merit, and on that basis only I hope it will be considered.

The bill proposes that we grant to Yugoslavia the sum of $38,000,000 for the relief of want and suffering brought about by a great drought and resulting shortages in food crops in that country this year. I should inform the House that, since Yugoslavia's break with the Comiform, Export-Import Bank loans by this country to Yugoslavia have amounted to $55,000,000. Of this sum there remains unused $10,400,000.

Since the great World War, the United States has been lavish in providing relief and economic recovery funds for our friends abroad, but even in this field we have got to stop, look, and listen. We are nearing the point where we must strictly conserve our national resources and drastically curtail our expenditures abroad. Those who fought beside us in the last war had just as well realize that fact.

Now comes Yugoslavia, certainly not a democracy and long-time friend, with a request for aid. The question is should we grant funds in addition to what has been provided under previous legislation.

In the face of the world crisis confronting us today, we must look to our own house and the case of Yugoslavia must be judged on its individual merit and from the standpoint of what would be best for the United States.

Tito has requested this aid. Once again, as of old, the cry comes from Macedonia: "Come over and help us." And why should we heed the call for help of a dictatorship? In considering what the answer should be, we must face the facts of life as they may affect the welfare of our country. We must consider the question in the blazing light of the unholy conspiracy of communism against freedom everywhere.

The answer may be found in careful study of the strategic position of the Yugoslavia of today in the world arena.

politically, militarily, geographically, and economically.

Politically: It is trite to say that Yugoslavia is a dictatorship and that Tito is a dictator. Everybody knows and admits that. Tito is a dictator, yes. But he is the only dictator or head of a state who, once having been bound by the chains of the Cominform, has kicked over the traces, reasserted his country's independence of the Kremlin, remained in power, and lived to tell the tale.

Since the end of the last great war, 13 countries and 600,000,000 souls have been brought into the circle of satellite nations of Russia. Of all these, only Tito has asserted his independence of Stalin and has dared to say to the master of the Kremlin that, though a Communist he is, he refuses to bow in obedience to the international super-Communist state. He has asserted the right of his country to work out its destiny free of Russia and along the lines of the historic national aspirations of the Yugoslav peoples. For this he has been condemned and ostracized from world communism. For this his country has been boycotted politically and economically. For this the armies of Russia and her satellites hover around his borders. For being so bound, he must turn his eyes to the west for help and receive it, else doubtless his government will fall. And there are none here who will doubt that, should his government fall, Stalin and the Cominform will be in the saddle there again and another satellite will have returned to the fold. What discouragement that would be to other nations which might consider throwing off the chains of despotism.

Remember, the United States Government and its people have never denied the right of the Russian people to choose their own form of government, communistic or otherwise. Our objection to Stalin and the Politburo is that they not only force communism upon the Russian people but they seek to destroy free democratic governments everywhere and bring all others under their sway. Tito, while still asserting his belief in communism, just as vigorously asserts the right of a nation to work out its own salvation without obedience to any other nation. With that tenet the American people cannot quarrel.

Militarily: The armed forces of Tito on our side, or at the least not arrayed against us, in the event of a war with Russia cannot be sneezed at. He has an army of over 30 reasonably well-equipped divisions of over 350,000 men—the largest army in Europe next to Russia's. We need him on our side. We need only remember the Yugoslavs' great fighting qualities during the last world war, when their nation's national existence was endangered, to realize their value as friends in any coming conflict. It is our interest to help keep that army well fed and well clothed with a people behind it not driven by the despair brought about by hunger.

We should remember too the lessening of the military tensions in the Mediterranean area since early 1948 when Tito asserted his independence of the Cominform. The guerrillas have been quieted on the Greek-Yugoslav border and Tito has been in a large measure responsible for this. The tension at Trieste has decreased. Italy is more secure. Albania has been cut off from her contemporary satellite states.

Geographically: Yugoslavia lies in a strategic position on the Adriatic and in the Mediterranean area. In the case of war between our country and Russia, it is an important link in a defense line reaching through Iran, Turkey, Greece to Italy and from there to the European Atlantic Pact states. Yugoslavia is the land bridge between the free world and the Commuist world in South Europe. In Stalin's hand, Yugoslavia is a threat to Greece, Turkey, and the Near East.

Economically: One of Yugoslavia's main economic assets is a plentiful supply of nonferrous metals—copper, lead, antimony, and quicksilver. All of these are vital to the United States and to its allies in western Europe. Formerly these metals went to the Soviet bloc. Now, since Tito's break with the Cominform, they are going to the West. The United States gets now 60 percent of Yugoslavia's copper export, 54 percent of its lead, 35 percent of its quicksilver, 33 percent of its antimony.

The program: The Yugoslav program is not a grant of dollars, but a grant of funds with which to purchase commodities. The market value of the Yugoslav request was $85,900,000. After careful consideration by our own governmental authorities, this request was trimmed down to a market value of $81,000,000. This represents 603,900 metric tons of foodstuffs with a market value of $81,000,000, but which in actual cost is estimated at $69,400,000. Under existing legal authority, the executive branch has already furnished 248,900 metric tons of food with a market value, including transportation costs, of $43,000,000 and an actual expenditure, including transportation, of $31,400,000. The program in this bill is for the remainder; namely, 355,000 metric tons of supplies having a market value and estimated program expenditure, including transportation, of $38,000,000. It is that part of the total program which was not provided in the so-called stop-gap program. This program calls for $34,400,000 worth of commodities and $3,600,000 worth of ocean transportation charges.

The large bulk of these commodities will be purchased from stocks held by the United States Government. Three hundred and one thousand metric tons to cost $24,600,000 are held in Government stocks. The remainder—54,000 metric tons—will be purchased in the open market at a cost of $9,800,000. All of the items in this program are food, feed, and seeds.

It should be important to the American people that 72 percent of the commodities bought under this program will come from Commodity Credit Corporation's surplus stocks and 28 percent of the program will be purchased in the open market.

Conditions of assistance: The assistance in this bill is not being handed to Tito with no conditions asked. Section 3 requires an agreement in which the Yugoslav Government undertakes to do certain things the United States considers necessary.

(a) Yugoslavia finances our operating expenses in Yugoslav currency.

(b) Yugoslavia publicizes this program to make sure that the people know where the assistance is coming from. In adition, the United States will have the opportunity and the access to Yugoslav information facilities to make sure that this fact is known to the Yugoslav people.

(c) United States will be permitted to have its own people in Yugoslavia to observe and supervise without restriction the distribution of relief commodities.

(d) Yugoslavia must make an equitable distribution not only of the commodities we make available, but similar commodities produced locally or imported from anywhere else.

Method of assistance: United States agencies will procure the commodities and ship them to Yugoslavia. Yugoslavia will distribute the commodities through regular commercial channels at reasonable prices. However, commodities will be furnished free to those who are unable to pay for them.

Distribution by the United States would require large staffs of people and a considerable administrative cost. This is not necessary. The Yugoslavs can distribute the commodities under our supervision. If they do not comply with the agreement or satisfy our requirements, we can terminate the aid at any time.

Sanctions: The bill provides ample means for us to stop the program at any time we feel it is desirable. The termination clause permits us to suspend the operation if the Yugoslavs are not complying with the agreement. If conditions change, we have the power of discontinuing the program. This means that if there is a change of regime, in spite of our assistance, we can stop immediately; if the need should be less than we now anticipate, we can stop it too. When this program no longer serves our interest, the bill directs the President to cease the assistance.

Congress has the power to direct termination whenever it considers this to be desirable. We cannot control every detail of this program; we should not. But we have an immediate control at any time. The Executive must act under certain circumstances, and Congress can act whenever it deems necessary.

It is my considered opinion and the considered opinion of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House that whatever we may be unable to do from a financial standpoint for the rest of the world during this great crisis, we can ill afford to miss this chance to do what we can to help prevent the possible fall of the present Yugoslav Government and thereby drive a strong peg in the battle lines against international communism.

Mr. COX. Who pays for that?

Mr. RICHARDS. Our people, of course. But I do want to emphasize the fact that we are also taking into consideration the plight confronting our own farmers here in the United States today in the field of surpluses.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDS. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WHEELER. The gentleman mentioned the fact that international communism had spread over 13 or 14 countries.

Mr. RICHARDS. It has taken under its banner 13 countries.

Mr. WHEELER. I would like to ask the question if we have not financed the spread of that communism by giving to Russia itself approximately $11,000,000,000?

Mr. RICHARDS. In years gone by we made a lot of mistakes in regard to Russia, we made a lot of mistakes in the whole field of foreign policy, we made a lot of them on the battlefield, some of them over in Korea; but I am not discussing that question. I am talking about what is the best thing to do today. The whole question is whether or not the United States Government is going to let Tito have $38,000,000 worth of stuff, most of it farm surplus commodities.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDS. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. The gentleman will agree that for many years we have been trying to buy security and more friends. Does he not agree that that sort of friendship lasts no longer than the money flows?

Mr. RICHARDS. We are not trying to buy a friend. I do not know whether, even if this money accomplishes what we seek, that it will buy a friend. But I do say that through this proposal we are driving a peg against communism as Stalin teaches it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I plead for bipartisan consideration of this measure in the light of our whole foreign policy. In this grim and fateful period we should have a bipartisan foreign policy. It will need to be bi-hemispheric. We cannot unite in a policy that divides the world into two hemispheres, the European and the Asiatic, and proposes that we go along together on the European side and fall apart on the Asiatic side. I live in the Middle West. We would be right in the middle if we attempted to divide the world that way. In order to be bipartisan, we must have one whole world of the free, sticking together in Asia and in Europe, or we must develop a separate Western Hemisphere policy.

This bill involves 32 divisions—maybe. Maybe there are 32 divisions in Yugoslavia. Maybe they will be on our side. This must be considered against the background of our world policy. There is grave danger that the free world is falling apart. Our forces have taken a military beating in Korea, but that has happened to us before. We had to retreat at Lexington and at Bunker Hill. The British burned the Capitol in the war of 1812. We will leave out the defeats that were involved between 1861 and 1865. The battleship Maine was blown up in the Spanish-American War. We went through Pearl Harbor and Bataan in World War II. Always before we have come back strong. The danger this time is that we are coming back weak, because we are taking a beating in Washington and in the United Nations; not a military beating but a diplomatic, political, moral beating, from our friends as well as our enemies.

In that situation we Americans want to stand together. We thought the free world slogan was "One for all and all for one." Instead, there is a tendency for too many nations in the free world to say, "One for all and the rest for themselves."

Facing that situation, our answer has been firmness. We have been saying we are going to demand more promises from the free and better performance of past promises. From rumors I hear that is what the President and Secretary Acheson stood for in the recent negotiations. There was to be no appeasement, no reward of aggression; on this we can stand a united country.

Then comes this proposition, a brand-new policy, a new kind of give-away we have never done before. I think this is a mistake. I urge that we consider this as my beloved colleague from South Carolina has suggested, on the basis of what is best for the United States. I do not think it is good for us to change at this time.

Let us look at this proposal. It is not famine relief. Albright, in the Washington Post, called it drought impoverishment. This is an economic aid bill, not a relief bill. Yugoslavia's ordinary diet is 2,800 calories. They are down to 2,300 based on the $31,000,000 of food they have gotten from us already. If they get what they are asking for, their diet will go up to 2,500 from now until next June.

There are hungry people in Yugoslavia. I talked to a visitor there who saw children with rickets and beri-beri this summer before the drought. That was not because Yugoslavia was not raising enough food; they were exporting food; it was because those children and their parents did not belong to the right crowd, the Communist Party. But this is not a famine relief measure, because if we did not furnish anything more the people of Yugoslavia would be better off for food than more than half the people living on this planet, and I have the figures to show it. Thirteen nations have a lower standard of diet than the Yugoslavs will have if we do not send them anything else. In 1947, when we had before us the post-UNRRA relief bill, our target for urban populations was to bring them up to 2,200 calories. The Yugoslav diet, even without more aid, is above this. So this is not a humanitarian, charity proposition.

As has been pointed out, this is not for military security. Tito has no place else to go, we are told. He will not promise anything by way of military cooperation. He will not promise to join in the common cause. Further, let us remember what Tito knows, that he is a dead goner without us. If the rumors are true about the split between Tito and Stalin, Stalin would have gobbled him up long ago but for the possible threat of what we might do.

Now abideth faith, hope, and charity—but this is not charity and it is not faith, because we have no reason to trust Tito. This is a new policy based on whispering hope. I do not think we should follow that policy now.

Remember what this is: They are all fed there until the end of January. The people in the mountains now have all the food they are going to get because they will be frozen in until March. There is enough there to take care of the army. This is an economic-aid measure, based on food from February until next June. If you are an optimist as I am, and if in this critical period you feel the free world is going to hold together in a bi-hemispheric policy, just as sure as the Lord made little green apples we will have problems of economic and military aid to Tito in the next session of the Congress in order to keep him doing his part among the forces of the free. Even if things turn out well for our side, this is just a start, not a finish, on economic aid for Yugoslavia.

After pain, anguish, and UNRRA we have developed certain postwar policies which apply to all aid that we furnish. We furnish loans and there is a promise to repay. Economic aid requires a promise of economic cooperation. Military aid requires a promise to fight in the common cause. None of those requirements are in the measure now before us. That establishes a new precedent. I am told we have been putting the heat on France to agree to the use of German forces in the fight of the free against world communism. We have been saying, "You promised to cooperate; now perform." And the French have agreed. The people of France can read the papers. Suppose they find out next week that the way to get something for nothing out of the United States is to agree to nothing, to act tough, to go Communist in a new and separate way. That is the new precedent that we are in danger of setting. I do not want to see us set that precedent.

I think we should make this a loan. There is precedent for that. That is the way we handled the dictator Franco who has some divisions which are needed over there. That is what the British have done for Yugoslav relief. They loaned, and Tito accepted, £3,000,000, or $8,400,000 for food. A loan would be my own preference. However, I would be willing to go this far—to offer Tito a loan or if he does not want that, and wants economic-aid grants, he would take it on the same terms which we have found through experience are necessary for our friends and for democratic people. That would mean that we would require counterpart funds; the deposit of the value of our relief in their currency in a special fund subject to joint control for expenditures. Counterpart was suggested first by Herbert Hoover in 1947 in the hearings on the post-UNRRA war-relief bill. It was defeated in our committee. It was written in by amendment on the floor of the House and Senator VANDENBERG sponsored it in the other body. It has been in every relief and every economic-aid bill since then. Paul Hoffman says that is a part of the structure of our aid which has been most helpful Communist or anti-Cominform Yugoslavian divisions in being. I look upon the proposal now before us as a measure essential to the security of the United States. Tito, if he is not given this assistance, may be in danger of being overthrown. Much as I would normally welcome Tito's downfall, it would, under present conditions, give way not to something better but to something worse and that would be the direct control of the Kremlin in Yugoslavia as is the case in all other Communist states in the Soviet's sphere of influence. If that happens, the largest army in being in Europe outside of Russia's, would fall a prize to the Kremlin and Stalin's victory in Yugoslavia would dishearten many dissidents within the countries under his control.

This legislation represents a cold-blooded appraisal of the situation which confronts us. We can defeat this bill, allow the 32 divisions of Yugoslavian soldiers to deteriorate; allow famine to gradually creep in; allow chaos to develop and eventually allow Stalin to step in and take over a country which will fight but which will be in no condition to fight long. On the other hand, we can authorize this aid and keep the 32 Yugoslavian divisions in being so that if and when a show-down comes, Tito's divisions will be ready to fight any act of aggression in that area by the U. S. S. R. and/or its satellites.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. I have a great respect for the gentleman's opinion and judgment. I would like to know what the gentleman thinks in reference to the basis for his approach. It is not on humanitarian grounds, it is not on principle grounds; it is solely on the strategic ground of defense of the interests of the United States?

Mr. MANSFIELD. The gentleman is correct when he says it is not on humanitarian grounds and not on principle, because, as the gentleman from Georgia has pointed out, in our report on this bill we recommend its approval, then to paraphrase his words we give 100 reasons why we should not do anything for Tito. We did that because we wanted to lay the whole picture before the House. Every Member in this chamber is going to have to stand up and be counted. You can make all the speeches you want, you can look for all the outs you want, you can say all the nice words or harsh words you desire, but when you get right down to it, as far as this bill is concerned what we are doing is a matter of strategic importance, it is tied up to the security of the United States. We are keeping 32 Yugoslavian divisions in being, 32 divisions which in case of a showdown can very likely immobilize that many divisions of the satellite states in that area, or which could or would perhaps be used against the Russians when the time comes.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. Does there appear in the record of the hearings authentic proof that Tito has these divisions in being, ready to fight, if properly equipped?

Mr. MANSFIELD. May I say to the gentleman, who has a brilliant military background, that on the basis of testimony given by General Bradley, both in open and secret sessions, Tito does have these divisions in being.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

Mrs. NORTON. I am a little confused about this bill. I understood that this money was to be used to feed the people in Yugoslavia and not to equip divisions; am I wrong about that?

Mr. MANSFIELD. No; the gentlewoman is correct, as always. The purpose is to raise the caloric content of the food of the people of Yugoslavia, with special emphasis on the divisions in being on the Yugoslavian frontiers. But, it will mean, of course, that the rest of the people of Yugoslavia will receive a slight addition to what they are getting at the present time. But, the prime purpose in my opinion and in my belief is to keep the divisions in operation.

Mrs. NORTON. Is there any way that we can be sure that this money will be used for that purpose? It seems to me that is a very grave question.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I think that the gentlewoman can be assured that the money will be used for this purpose because, in the first place, it is not going to be a matter of dollars; it is going to be a matter of food taken out of surplus stocks in this country or, at least, stocks in this country, to the extent of about 72 percent of the total and the other 28 percent will be purchased in the open market in this country. It will all go for food.

Mrs. NORTON. And who will supervise its distribution?

Mr. MANSFIELD. The American Government, under the terms of the bill before us today, is given the right to supervise the distribution of this food or, at least, to observe and supervise, because we did put in that particular word, as I recall, and all of the food will be labeled so that the people of Yugoslavia will know where it is coming from.

Mrs. NORTON. Let us hope they will.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. I would like to ask to what extent this arrangement of having 32 divisions possible on our side, if we have a conflict, has been made definite? Is there anything that the gentleman can tell us about what sort of a firm promise or commitment has been made?

Mr. MANSFIELD. So far as I know, no firm commitment or promise has been made, but looking at the picture realistically, where does Tito have to turn? He has his divisions at the present time on the Bulgarian-Albanian-Hungarian frontiers, and he is using them to keep out, as much as he can, any attempt on the part of those countries to infiltrate by armed methods.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. May I ask if our Government is attempting to get any firm commitment on this subject?

Mr. MANSFIELD. To the best of my knowledge, no.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. May I ask why they are not?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Montana has expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I will yield the gentleman 1 minute to answer that question.

Mr. BENNETT of Florida. I would like to ask why our Nation is not attempting to get a firm commitment at this time from Yugoslavia in return for the benefits that are forthcoming, in view of our own international situation?

Mr. MANSFIELD. For the benefit especially of the gentleman from Ohio as well as the gentleman from Florida, I do not know.

Mrs. BOSONE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the gentlewoman from Utah.

Mrs. BOSONE. Then what does the gentleman from Montana think if Tito does not get the $38,000,000? What will be the situation?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I think that he will survive, and I think that he will carry out his announced policy against the Cominform and the Soviet satellite states, but I think the will to resist will be weakened, and the result may well be that the Army will lose a further degree of its efficiency, that the civilian population will lose more of the food which is now going to it; that eventually Yugoslavia might have famine and chaos and Tito will fall of his own weight, and then the only country, in my opinion, which will step in, will be the U. S. S. R., and they will take over completely and be on the Adriatic and the Mediterranean.

Mr. Chairman, I am including at this point in my remarks, the gist of two amendments which I will offer in the House tomorrow when this measure comes to a vote. I am not the author of these amendments, as they have already been introduced by my friend, Senator BRIEN MCMAHON, of Connecticut, and passed by the Senate. I think, though, that they are of paramount importance, and I shall do all in my power to see that they are included in this bill.

SEC. —. Nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing measures undertaken by the present Government of Yugoslavia which suppress or destroy religious, political, and economic liberty, and the Yugoslav Government shall be so notified when aid is furnished under this act.

SEC. —. At the termination of each 3-month period after aid has been extended under this act the Secretary of State shall make a full and detailed report to the Congress. Said 3-month reports shall not be limited to, but shall include (1) information as to whether or not Yugoslavia is abiding by the agreement as provided for under section 3 of this act; (2) information as to any developments in the attitude of Yugoslavia with respect to basic human rights.

in all the economic recovery that we have obtained.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. RICHARDS. My friend will admit, I am sure, that there is a big distinction between this type of relief bill and what is commonly called ECA or UNRRA. Those are long-range programs. Counterpart funds in themselves envision long-range programs. On this proposition we want to chop it off after the $38,000,000.

Mr. VORYS. All right, I will admit there is a big distinction in the bill before us, but it is just because I do not want to make a big distinction and create a new precedent that I say this should be tied in with some strings and promises.

Here is the reason we do not dare at this dreadful, fateful hour go off on any stopgap, piecemeal tangents any more. We have got to hold the lines, maintain some sort of teamwork, and discipline among and between the forces of the free. We cannot play favorites with the worst or we may lose the best. If Tito is sincere, if he realizes that he is perforce required to join with us in the protection of the free world, then certainly it is not asking something insulting if we treat him the way way we treat Spain and say, "We will give you a loan," or if we treat him the way we treat Marshall-plan countries and say, "If you get a grant, it will be conditioned on counterpart."

We also should require Tito to take steps to prevent the recurrence of this, so that this will not become a habit. That means he must stop collectivizing his farms. We were told that the drought impoverishment is only one of the reasons for food trouble in Yugoslavia. They have been exporting food to obtain other commodities. Mr. Haggerty, our own agricultural expert, said they have had a 10- to 15-percent reduction in agricultural production because of the apathy and discontent caused by collectivization of farms. If we furnish something, we do not want Tito to make a career of having these food emergencies that the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] will bring here annually or semiannually as short-range relief bills. We want Tito to get his economy in shape so that he can help himself and help us and help the free world.

People say, "How could Tito pay back a loan?" Yugoslavia is probably the most important producer in Europe of copper, lead, and zinc, all strategic materials. He exported $45,000,000 worth in 1948; $37,000,000 in 1949, and in the first half of this year $15,700,000. Well, those are things we need, those are things that Western Europe needs. If we are to continue, as I hope we will, in a united, integrated resistance to godless, ruthless communism emanating from Moscow, we are going to need those exports, and Tito is going to need us. We should provide merely for a loan, with repayment in these materials that we need, or we should offer a grant, providing for counterpart and these other obligations. We might offer both, and Tito could take his pick. I am no stickler for particulars. I am a stickler for the principle, that before we give our approval to any aid to Tito we put it in line with the policies that we apply to the free world.

You have heard the story of the little American lieutenant who went out on that fateful night in Trieste and faced the Yugoslav forces, and at that time Tito had the whole Russian Army behind him. As they came up through the dark toward our lines he said, "You cannot come further," and they stopped and turned back. That is what firmness accomplished.

What we need at this time and what we can unite on at this time is no appeasement, no reward for aggression, but merely firmness in the right. I hope that we can unite on both sides of the aisle in writing such policies into this bill.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. FULTON. If by this bill support is given to Tito, is this not ruling out any possibility of aid to a free Yugoslavia? If Tito should fall, there might be two eventualities, either Stalin communism will come in or the Yugoslavia people would turn to democracy. Is that not correct?

Mr. VORYS. That is true. So that if we support Tito in his government, we want to have something more than simply the propaganda that we heard while this bill was under way, propaganda from Yugoslavia which I have on my desk now, that they are turning toward a better way of life. We want assurances it is going to happen. We hope that it will be by orderly processes.

Mr. FULTON. May I ask one more question. How many church people of various denominations are at present in jail? It has been said earlier that there was a show of improvement where Tito was moving toward freedom and also sending Greek children back home. Will you tell us the number of church people imprisoned in Yugoslavia and the number of Greek children not returned?

Mr. VORYS. As far as I know—and I hope to be corrected in this if I am wrong by those who are better informed—there were about 11,000 Greek children taken to Yugoslavia, and 60 or 70 of them have been returned. I have read in the papers that there are 700 priests and 400 nuns in jail. My only information on that is what I read in the newspapers.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Is Yugoslavia a member of the United Nations?

Mr. VORYS. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Is there one Yugoslav soldier alongside our men in Korea today?

Mr. VORYS. No.

Yugoslavia is a member of the United Nations. Bebler, as you know, was chairman of the Security Council last month. In the committee report you will find the voting record of Yugoslavia and how many times she joined forces with the free in controversial matters before the fifth assembly of the United Nations. I counted and found that out of 54 controversial questions Yugoslavia had sided with us against Russia at the most 12 times. I could only find one time in the Security Council, according to the list of votes in the report, where Yugoslavia voted with us. So, while there has been a change in the attitude of Yugoslavia which I hope will continue, they have not yet furnished any 32 divisions, or one division, or one man to the embattled forces of the United Nations, mostly United States, which is fighting in Korea at the present time.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Can the gentleman tell us whether the State Department has made any effort as part of the negotiations with Yugoslavia to secure the release of the priests, the nuns, the Protestant ministers, Archbishop Stepanic, or any other religious denomination who has been jailed by Tito?

Mr. VORYS. Someone else will have to answer that question.

Mr. HUGH D. SCOTT, JR. Does not the gentleman think that if we are to spend millions of money, and I agree that we may have to spend it, that we should at least receive some evidence from Tito that the statements made in that propaganda booklet, that freedom of speech and freedom of religion are really practiced in Yugoslavia?

Mr. VORYS. Yes.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 9 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MANSFIELD].

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, the Committee has before it today H. R. 9853, a bill to authorize the appropriation of $38,000,000 for relief in Yugoslavia.

I should like to make it very plain to the House that I have no sympathy for Tito personally or his Government in particular. I recognize the fact that only a very small minority in Yugoslavia are ideological adherents of Tito and that his Government is a police state, and that he is a Communist. That there has been a severe drought in Yugoslavia, there can be no question. The proposed grant is for the purpose of keeping Yugoslavia alive and, most important, to keep 32 divisions of Yugoslavian soldiers in being.

It is my understanding that just to equip a single American infantry division, the cost would be $75,000,000—the cost roughly $5,000 per man or $94,000,000 to maintain an American division at full strength for a year, or a grand total of about $170,000,000.

Tito, although a Communist, finds himself at odds with Stalin. He is not turning to us because he loves us but he is doing so because he has no other alternative. We are not considering assistance to him because we love him or the type of government he typifies but we are looking at it on the cold-blooded basis of keeping 32 antiinternational

Mr. Chairman, I am inserting at this point a newspaper article from the Washington Star of December 1, 1950; a resolution of the regional meeting of the Catholic Economic Association, and a telegram from my friends of the Helena, Mont., Diocesan Council of Catholic Women:

[From the Washington (D. C.) Star of December 1, 1950]

CATHOLIC VETERANS O. K. YUGOSLAV AID PLANS, BUT HIT TITO POLICIES

Support for sending food and other supplies to Yugoslavia has come from the Catholic War Veterans of America, it was disclosed here yesterday.

It is believed to be the first Catholic endorsement of the administration's plan for lending assistance to Marshal Tito as a means of combating further Soviet encroachment in Eastern Europe. It contained also a criticism of Yugoslavia's internal political practices "which violate many principles of international law and human decency."

The veterans' group claims to speak for nearly 6,000,000 American Catholic veterans of both world wars.

LETTER TO AMBASSADOR

In a letter made public yesterday, National Commander Donald J. McQuade wrote to Yugoslav Ambassador Vladimir Popovic here:

"The Catholic War Veterans hope the United States will extend this much-needed assistance to Yugoslavia. We also hope that you, in turn, will urge your Government to extend to the individual Yugoslavian the dignity that is his; that you will permit him to worship his God freely and that you will give free movement to those stalwart men of God whose only urge is to perpetuate in the hearts of all men the love of Jesus Christ."

STEPINAC CASE CITED

Mr. McQuade added: "Let us be frank. We are not unaware that the Yugoslav Government since the end of World War II has violated many principles of international law and of human decency. We have not forgotten that your forces shot down unarmed American fliers in a peaceful mission. We are aware that your Government imprisoned Archbishop Stepinac because he committed the crime of obeying the dictates of his conscience."

RESOLUTION CONCERNING AMERICAN AID TO YUGOSLAVIA ADOPTED AT THE REGIONAL MEETING OF THE CATHOLIC ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION, NOVEMBER 18, 1950, IN PITTSBURGH, PA.

Whereas the emergency help to drought-stricken Yugoslavia from the United States Government is necessary: Be it

Resolved, That all such aid be accompanied by the dissemination of information which will impress upon the people of Yugoslavia that the United States helps them because—

The United States recognizes the distress of their people;

The United States, by sharing with others not so fortunate, expresses gratitude to God for His blessings;

The United States hopes that her material aid will hasten the end of the spiritual starvation which now grips Yugoslavia and bring to her people the enjoyment of basic human rights, freedom of worship, respect for the individual, preservation of independent family farms, and freedom of opportunity to earn a livelihood.

HELENA, MONT., December 11, 1950.

Representative MIKE MANSFIELD,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

The Helena Diocesan Council of Catholic Women, appalled by indisputable facts of widespread violation of human rights and brutal persecution of religion in Yugoslavia, demands that aid be given only on basis of proven need and with insistence of reestablishment of decency and justice as sole moral justification for any present or future aid, otherwise shall be parties to another betrayal of the real and trustworthy friend and allies we have behind iron curtain.

MRS. HUGH CAMPBELL,
President, Helena Diocesan Council of Catholic Women.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Montana has again expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON].

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, in the consideration of bill H. R. 9853, it seems to me we need to have great judgment and wisdom, perhaps more than most of us possess.

As has been said here by several Members, this is a moment of great danger to all the people of the world. We do not need to kid ourselves, as the boys say. This is a battle for survival whether it be diplomatic or military. We need to remember that at every moment of our considerations, not only of this bill, but of every single legislative measure that comes before this body. To me it is of great importance that we meet with complete realism the terrible problems that each new day seems but to increase; I trust it will be so to every American.

Questions have been asked here, "Has Tito sent a division to Korea?" No, he has not. "Has he done this; has he done that?" No, he has not. The implication seems to be, then, "Very well, why should he have anything from us?"

Let us for the moment assume that Canada is the Soviet Union and we are Yugoslavia. What would we feel able to do for somebody way across the world if we were just beginning to come out from under the iron curtain, and that is all Tito has yet been able to do. He has just begun the effort to learn what the responsibility of independence is. That is pretty dangerous business in these days. I rather imagine that Mr. Tito feels he is stepping on eggs lest he draw down upon himself and the country he controls the military wrath of the Kremlin.

Suppose he had sent one of his rather precious divisions to Korea. Suppose that act tipped the scales and brought the Soviet hordes down onto and across his borders. I merely suggest that as a method of thought while we are considering this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I recognize this measure as the military gamble that it is on the part of the United States. Possibly we should recognize more clearly than we do the part it would play as a move in our economic warfare.

It is my earnest hope that the food that will be sent to Yugoslavia under this act may reach those of its people who, by March and April, will be in real need of food.

Under this bill it will be the responsibility of the administration to see that the hungry be fed. Further than that, our administration is required to give a full accounting to the Congress. If the situation changes and we prove to be ill-advised, the program under the terms of the bill itself must be terminated. The program itself is small, but the objective it aims to attain is tremendous.

I believe no one in this body understands the dangers of Soviet communism better than I do. I would like, however, to emphasize the fact that the Kremlin with its undeviating goal of complete world subjugation is one thing, and a Communist country which dares to insist upon independence is quite another thing. That insistence runs counter to the basic principles of Soviet Communist world domination. The attainment of this diabolic purpose on the part of the Kremlin involves first the destruction of the whole fabric of independence, followed by enslavement. Tito's fight against this basic Soviet goal in effect is our fight as well, regardless of his internal policy. The help now being given to Yugoslavia together with the aid proposed in this bill will lay a groundwork for improvement in his internal policy. It is not Tito's internal policy that constitutes a threat to the United States. Rather is it the fanatic march of Soviet power which would destroy us. Tito is helping to halt that march. Let us do likewise.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. GROSS. The gentlewoman from Ohio says that if it is proven we are poor poker players the program will terminate. Does not the gentlewoman think that we have long ago demonstrated by the diplomatic beating we have been taking that we are very poor poker players?

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. Certain people among us have been very poor poker players, that is true.

Mr. NOLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. NOLAND. If there is one thing which can be placed in the balance on Tito's side at this time—and we all grant there is not very much which can be placed in the balance on his side—would it not be that Tito saw fit to close the Yugoslav border into Greece and cut off the Communist rebellion which was going on there for many, many months and so far as that affected the situation where we were supporting the Greek Government and were spending millions of dollars for arms and aid to Greece that that alone could be placed in the balance and that if he sees fit to keep that border closed, then the money we might send to aid him would be well spent at this time?

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. The distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. NOLAND] does well to bring that to mind. I would like to continue his thought, because the government in Yugoslavia—Tito—has begun to return those tragic Greek children to the Greeks. We have also been told that he has very definitely changed the whole method of procedure against religious groups in Yugoslavia. These are some of steps which have been taken already which would seem to indicate that though Tito recognizes the thinness of the shells on the eggs on which he is treading, he is going to try to reach a new goal.

Mrs. BOSONE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. I yield.

Mrs. BOSONE. What would lead the gentlewoman to believe that his procedure would be different if we failed to give him the $38,000,000.

Mrs. BOLTON of Ohio. Personally, I would be very reluctant to take the chance. It has two sides. Perhaps it is just the little straw which would break the camel's back and destroy his control, because my sense of Yugoslavia today, all I know of it, and I was there in 1945—my sense of it is that if Tito falls, Stalin will take over, and not anyone more friendly to the United States. In addition to that, I would like to feel that, as the world comes out from under the iron curtain, we would have done those things which would give the various countries a sense of our understanding and our friendliness that in the not too distant future a new world might be born.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON] has expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, the decision of extending financial assistance to Tito and his Communist government in Yugoslavia is a most difficult one. It is highly distasteful to me to give aid to a Communist government any place in the world at a time when American soldiers are being killed by Communist governments in other parts of the world. Based upon principle and consistency, this measure for aid to Yugoslavia should not be adopted. But we must, I feel, lay aside the inflexible dictates of principle and recognize world conditions as they exist, our decision should be based on only what is best for America. There are times when expediency is justified.

It is asserted that Tito has a substantial military force estimated to be 32 divisions, which might be available to our side in any European conflict with the Soviets. There are some who feel that certain conditions and promises should be exacted in return for this grant of $38,000,000. To me even though the conditions were imposed upon or promises made by Tito they would be completely ignored by him if necessary from the standpoint of his own interests. There are some who entertain serious doubts as to which side Tito may join. I do not entertain the naive expectation that this aid will cause him to entertain any feeling of undue fairness or obligation to the Western Powers. I do feel, however, that in the light of his present situation, having already incurred the displeasure of the Kremlin, and therefore unable to run the risk of Soviet domination in central Europe, his national interests require that he participate on the side of the Western Powers.

It may be as many persons reason that this assistance will only strengthen his Communist hold upon the Yugoslav people, 85 percent of whom it is reported are opposed to communism. Right at the moment our big concern is Communist Russia, and we can deal with Titoism at a later time after the major Stalinist issue is resolved.

Accordingly, I shall support this measure only upon the basis that by doing so it will aid in part to improve or maintain the physical vigor and stamina of the Yugoslavs, both military and civilian, with the confident expectation that their interests will require them to side with Western Europe in the event of open hostilities.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE].

Mr. BATTLE. Mr. Chairman, the question before us today, whether or not to authorize relief to Yugoslavia by giving her some of our surplus food, takes me back to one of the most important decisions I had to make as a freshman Member of the House. It was back in March 1947, during the first session of the Eightieth Congress. The international situation was tense and serious. It was so grave that it necessitated the special appearance of the President before a joint session of Congress. It was a situation which involved the fundamental interests and security of the United States. The independence and integrity of Greece and Turkey, both strategically located on the eastern Mediterranean, were being threatened. Greece was being subjected to Kremlin-inspired terrorist activities along her northern borders, while Turkey was being bombarded with a furious campaign of intimidation by the Soviet Government. To meet the peril created by those alarming conditions, the President urged that the Congress authorize a program of economic and military assistance to Greece and Turkey.

Mr. Chairman, I voted for that bill because I felt it was in the interest of the national security of the United States and of world peace for our Government to pursue a positive policy in behalf of Greek and Turkish independence. Those of us who voted for the bill recognized that, if Moscow ever succeeded in her objective of dominating Greece and Turkey, disaster would fan out all over the Middle East and Europe and eventually engulf the United States.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATTLE. I yield.

Mr. GROSS. Is there not a tremendous difference? There is no comparison between the two, for the reason that we have a former Communist at the head of the Yugoslav Government and you do not have a Communist at the head of the Greek Government.

Mr. BATTLE. I am not saying that the situation is the same nor comparing the countries. What I am saying is that we were facing troubled times and we came forward with a new program which succeeded to a great extent. We are facing an entirely different and more serious situation today, which calls for positive and new considerations. However, our interest—the security of the United States—is the same.

None of us could be sure then about the success of that program, just like we cannot be sure today of this proposed investment, but let us look at the results. Greece now stands proudly independent, having made considerable progress in getting her own house in order. A few weeks ago I participated in a ceremony in Athens which was a sendoff for Greek troops on the way to Korea to fight with the United Nations forces. And what about Turkey? Turkey stands so firmly independent and so strong that she has become the guardian of the Middle East. The record of Turkish troops fighting in the ranks of the United Nations in Korea has won universal admiration.

Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand at the present time an article which is entitled "Tough Turkey, Middle East Watchdog." I ask unanimous consent to have the article inserted at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

[From the Washington (D. C.) Evening Star of December 7, 1950]

TOUGH TURKEY, MIDDLE-EAST WATCHDOG

(By L. Edgar Prina)

The heroic demonstration of fighting prowess by the 5,000-man Turkish brigade in Korea has afforded the peoples of the free world this comforting thought: There are 375,000 more like them in the army at home.

And should the Soviet Union make an aggressive move toward the Dardanelles, the Suez, or the Near East, the Turks probably could put nearly 2,000,000 trained men in uniform, thanks to universal military training.

That the tough, hard-bitten Turkish soldier is a first-class fighting man may come as a pleasant surprise to many Americans, but not so to the Turks. An official of the Turkish Embassy here, commenting on reports describing the exploits of his countrymen in Korea, said:

"Give us a piece of territory to defend, and—depend on it—we'll defend it to the end."

The hand-picked Turkish brigade in Korea is a self-supporting, reinforced unit—a sort of souped-up regimental combat team. It has its own artillery and communications. It carries a replacement pool, medical organization, postal and mess staffs.

Even men of the housekeeping units have got into the fight. The Embassy spokesman said that many of the cooks demanded to be allowed to go up front, contending they were soldiers first and cooks second. They got permission.

These fighting cooks were with other elements of the brigade cut off by the Chinese Reds last week. Low on ammunition, the Turks fixed bayonets and charged. When the action was completed 200 Reds lay dead and 200 others had been taken prisoner.

An American unit fought its way up to the Turks, providing an escape route. But the Turkish commander, Brig. Gen. Yaicki, declined to flee the "trap." "We are killing too many Chinese," he said.

The Turks finally broke out, carrying their wounded on their backs, after fighting a courageous rear-guard action to aid retreating Eighth Army troops. About 500 of them were killed.

The Turkish armed forces, which have been unified for 15 years, are commanded by Gen. Nuri Yamut. He has more power, relatively, than General Bradley, chairman of our Joint Chiefs of Staff. General Yamut has the final say. Serving under him are Gen. Kurtdjebe Noyan, army chief; Admiral Sadik Altindjan of the navy, and Gen. Muzasser Goksenim of the air force.

Universal military training has been in effect in Turkey for many years. Men between the ages of 21 and 28 are required to serve for 18 months. Those who have had high school education or less are put in the noncommissioned ranks. College graduates are given officer training, but normally they can advance only to company grade rank.

The professional officer corps, up to the rank of general, are trained at the military college. Generals and admirals attend the staff college. Turkey keeps the officer corps large enough, even in peacetime, to meet the needs of full mobilization.

Before our Joint Military Mission for Aid to Turkey began functioning under the Truman doctrine in 1947, Turkey never had a cadre of noncommissioned officers—the backbone of our armed services. Now, however, careers have been opened up for such men in the Turkish forces.

That isn't the only way the Turks have benefited from American aid. More than $1,800,000,000 has gone to Turkey and Greece in the last 3 years in the form of Truman doctrine, ECA, and mutual-defense assistance program grants. With this money, modern equipment and training have been provided. Standardization of weapons is under way, and a network of military roads is being constructed. The 650-member military mission is training Turks to train Turks.

Acting on the recommendation of American experts, the Turks actually have cut down the size of their standing army from the 500,000-man force it maintained in 1947. Today they have a compact, hard-hitting machine of 22 to 25 divisions of about 15,000 men each.

In September the Turkish armed forces held what has been officially described as "extremely successful large-scale military maneuvers." Tanks, planes, and ships participated.

The Turks say that theirs is not purely a defensive force, and point out that they could, in the event of a Russian attack in Western Europe, smash at the Soviet flank.

Turkey has been negotiating a mutual defense pact with Greece which, when consummated, may later include Italy and Yugoslavia. Such a lineup would put a very sizable force on Russia's flank.

Turkey's chief strength lies not alone in its 2,000,000 bayonets but in the unity of its 20,500,000 citizens. Since it broke with the past in 1923, under Ataturk, it has embraced western ideals and democratic principles. Its firmness in the face of heavy Soviet pressure has earned it a high place in the ranks of the free nations.

When the American taxpayer contemplates the aid money spent since World War II, he probably will come up with the verdict of most of our military experts: Nowhere have the dollars been spent more wisely or to better advantage than in Turkey, guardian of the Middle East.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATTLE. I yield.

Mr. FULTON. The gentleman has good powers of observation, and I believe has visited Tito in his office only a few weeks ago. Is that correct?

Mr. BATTLE. I will agree with the gentleman on both counts.

Mr. FULTON. The gentleman then could probably characterize for us from what he saw what kind of a man Tito was from close observation and recent observation, could he not?

Mr. BATTLE. I will be glad to do my best.

Mr. FULTON. Would the gentleman explain to us the picture that Tito had—I believe the gentleman has spoken of it—that hangs behind Tito's seat in his office. What is that?

Mr. BATTLE. Does the gentleman want me to tell this story by degrees or all at once?

Mr. FULTON. Also tell us the kind of statue he has up there and the picture of the world?

Mr. BATTLE. I shall be pleased to tell all that as I go along, or I will be glad to digress now.

Mr. FULTON. I would like for the gentleman to characterize it right here, if he will.

Mr. BATTLE. I can tell you about the man and the picture on the wall. Why not start with Tito's guards? They ushered us into his room, which was a very beautifully decorated room, incidentally.

Mr. FULTON. Does he not have a picture of Lenin behind him?

Mr. BATTLE. Do you want me to answer your questions or not? Tito was seated at the end of a long room. One complete wall was devoted to a picture or painting depicting a sixteenth century peasant uprising. To his left was a bust. When I asked him through an interpreter about this bust he said: "You will note that this is a bust of Lenin and not a bust of Stalin."

What else do you want to know?

Mr. FULTON. Did he not have some sort of world set up there, a globe, and then over that world was there not a plane diving down on the world? And above that was there not the hammer and sickle?

Mr. BATTLE. Yes. Now the gentleman has already told the Committee, so there is no use for me to mention it.

Mr. FULTON. Meaning that communism was to dominate the world?

Mr. BATTLE. I do not know what meaning was intended; but there was a globe in the room, and over this globe was a sickle and a hammer, and over the hammer was a silver airplane in a nosedive. Now, it may have been an airplane of the United Nations dropping an atomic bomb; I do not know what interpretation the gentleman wants placed on it.

Mr. FULTON. I am asking the gentleman for his; that is why I wanted him to tell us about it.

Mr. BATTLE. There is no doubt in my mind that Tito is a dictator. I know what the gentleman has in mind, because this argument has gone on before. But Tito is not the aggressor; it is Stalin, and Stalin is the one we are trying to stop.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATTLE. I yield.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. I wonder if the gentleman can tell us as to whether or not there has been a change of attitude. When we were over there a year ago, he told us that there was one thing he wanted made clear, and that was that they were Communists, that they were against the capitalistic system, and that they hoped to help overthrow the capitalistic system.

Is the gentleman able to state whether or not his attitude has changed on that at all?

Mr. BATTLE. It seemed to me there was a considerable change from that statement, because he indicated to us that the two nations could live side by side and that he had no idea of making aggression; in fact, he said that he would uphold his responsibility to the United Nations in stopping aggression in the future.

I would like to say that all of us, even though we are not from Missouri, would like to be shown, and we indicated this to Tito.

Mr. SUTTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. BATTLE. I yield.

Mr. SUTTON. I quote from Kommunist, the organ of the central committee of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia, March-May 1950, the article, the Equality of Nations and the Struggle for Peace, by V. Popovic, page 111:

> The United States of America is in the front line of the "imperialistic" coalition. "We considered earlier, with reason, the policy of the United States of America, as the expression of the leading imperialistic power. In this way we have not mistaken. This was and remains exact."

I wonder if they have changed since March or May of this year?

Mr. BATTLE. Well, I assume they have changed. It is my understanding that there has been a radical change in the last few weeks in the voting of the Yugoslav representative in the United Nations.

Mr. SUTTON. Is that because they wanted some more money from Uncle Sap?

Mr. BATTLE. I think the $38,000,000 worth of surplus food involved would be too small in proportion to the stakes.

Mr. FULTON. On the question of whether or not the foreign policy of Yugoslavia has changed, I refer to the book sent out by the Yugoslav Ambassador in the last 10 days in which under "Foreign Policy" it is stated:

> Yugoslavia rejects the policy of dividing the world into "spheres of influence" as being harmful to the cause of peace and unjust to the smaller and less developed countries. For this reason, it will not condone aggression in any form or source, nor will it join any bloc, either in the East or the West.

Mr. BATTLE. It was my impression, and I believe it was also the impression of the gentlemen who were with me during the interview with Tito, that he wanted to be as independent as possible and that he wanted no entangling alliances with either the West or the East, which I believe is the substance of what the gentleman is saying. However, he also said that no nation could stay out of another world conflict.

The bill before us today calls for even more resoluteness and more realism. Again we are faced with a critical world situation. Only now Moscow has become more brazen, more imperialistic, more militant, and thus even more of a threat to our national security. To meet that threat will demand much strength from many sources. It will require that we increase the armed strength of the United States. It will mean further assistance to arm our friends, and it will involve the tactic of cracking the iron curtain and weaning the Soviet satellites away from Moscow. It will require taking advantage of every single opportunity. Today, Yugoslavia offers us one such opportunity. Because of the critical food shortage in Yugoslavia, the break with Russia and certain internal policies which we cannot condone, Tito is faced with the threat of economic chaos which could drive him back to the Kremlin or cause him to be overthrown by Stalin's henchmen. In either case the only regime which has been able to break away from the Kremlin would be swallowed up by the waiting Soviet forces. Needless to say, the loss of an independent Yugoslavia, having as it does the largest standing army in Europe, would be a serious blow to the security of the North Atlantic Treaty area and of the United States. Some of our surplus food that we cannot use could make the difference. It is a chance we must take.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATTLE. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Along that same line, would it not be logical to think that Tito might disband some of those divisions and put those men back to producing food in February or March—they have an earlier season than ours—and we would then lose divisions that might be helpful?

Mr. BATTLE. I think that is a definite possibility, although my personal opinion is that his armed forces are going to come first, almost through necessity for his own protection if for nothing else.

Mr. Chairman, I do not mean to suggest that the internal conditions in Yugoslavia today are the same as the conditions which existed in Greece and Turkey back in 1947. I do wish to emphasize, however, that the interest of the United States is the same. And that is, the principle of assisting independent nations to remain independent and free from the domination threatened by Moscow. In voting for the Greek-Turkish aid program, our primary responsibility was to protect the national security of the United States. In voting for this program of relief to drought-stricken Yugoslavia, our consideration must also be that security.

Mr. Chairman, I visited Yugoslavia 6 weeks ago, together with my colleague on the Foreign Affairs Committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CHATHAM], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER], a member of the Armed Services Committee. The devastating effects of the drought were apparent even from the plane before we landed. As we drove over the countryside we saw rows and rows of parched fields. They offered mute testimony to the hunger which is in store for the Yugoslav people this winter unless the United States comes to their assistance quickly with some of our surplus food.

During our visit, we were given an hour and a half interview with the man who dared to defy the Kremlin by refusing to be a puppet, Marshal Tito. He is a mild-mannered man with a square-set jaw, a dictator to be sure and formerly the star pupil of Stalin. We talked very frankly with him throughout the interview, and he displayed a genuine desire to answer our questions. We quizzed Tito sharply about his break with the Kremlin, recognizing that this represents the first roll-back of the iron curtain. Could we place confidence in the reality of the rift? Could we rely on his not returning to the Soviet fold? Tito was emphatic about this. His break with Stalin was real, he assured us. We asked Tito why Russia had not taken over Yugoslavia militarily. Tito explained that there were several reasons: First, he said, Stalin miscalculated in thinking that Yugoslavia would crack up economically. Tito said that they were not going to crack up and surplus food from the United States, if granted, would be a great help in preventing such a catastrophe. Second, Tito told us, he has over 30 divisions trained for mountain fighting, the kind of fighting an invader would find a hard nut to crack. He added that Stalin knows these Yugoslav divisions can tie up and hold up at least an equal number of Russian divisions.

One of the most significant statements that Tito made was relative to his obligations to the United Nations. It was the first time that he had made such a statement. In response to my question, he declared that in the future Yugoslavia would uphold its responsibilities in the United Nations whether or not Yugoslavia was attacked first. It will be recalled that previously he had said he would fight and defend Yugoslavia against any enemy that attacked his country. But this is the first time that he made the statement that in the future he would fight under the auspices of the United Nations irrespective of which nation was attacked. We thought perhaps we were having interpretation difficulties, so we quizzed him further along this line. But there was no misundertanding. Tito stuck to his original statement. This is how he reasoned: There will be no such thing as a bilateral war. In the world of today, if two great nations get into a war, it will inevitably spread into a global conflict. Irrespective of his strong desire to remain neutral and not to have entangling alliances with foreign nations, Tito realizes that no nation would be able to stay out of such a conflict.

While in Yugoslavia we visited a collective farm, and it was interesting to talk to the men, women, and children working on this farm. Except for the Communist leaders sent out to manage the operations, it seemed to me that these farm people were no more Communists than the man in the moon. I do not believe they know anything about political philosophy including Marxism, Leninism, Stalinism, or any other kind of "ism." They impressed me as being terribly poor, hard-working people who never have had much of a chance in life. We also visited a home along the roadside and I was pleasantly surprised in each instance at the good will toward America which was manifested toward us. Many of these people hope to come to America some day, or at least to have their children come to this land of opportunity and freedom. We have a lot of good will to build on, even in this country which used to be behind the iron curtain.

Mr. Chairman, the times are so critical and the danger so imminent that we must marshal all the independent nations which are standing up to Soviet imperialism. Yugoslavia is one of those nations. The fall of an independent Yugoslavia would have grave and far-reaching consequences. Our dangerous military position would become desperate if the largest and strongest army in Europe lined up with the Soviet forces against us. We cannot expect to swap this surplus food which is an investment in our own security for world-shaking bilateral agreements; nor haggle about tying strings which have no strength. We already have more commitments in this bill than we had in the highly successful Greek-Turkish-aid program. Neither can we afford to be choosy, picking out only those countries whose philosophies coincide with ours or those who have always been our friends. Above all, we cannot afford to miss the chance to marshall these independent forces while we still have the chance—in our tremendous task of preventing world enslavement.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATTLE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. The gentleman has stated as his opinion that the drought in Yugoslavia on its economy was devastating. If you will look at page 4 of the Senate report you will find a schedule of commodities produced in Yugoslavia, taking the 1947–49 averages. You will find that the corn production averaged 59 percent and rice 100 percent and sugar 108 percent. Now, which is true, the gentleman's estimate that it was devastating or the Senate estimate that they were actually averaging about 60 to 70 percent of their total production?

Mr. BATTLE. I do not think there is any doubt that Yugoslavia is suffering from a drought and that they are in need of food.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio has suggested that if we give aid under this legislation we ought to make it in the form of a contract, that is, a loan. There is precedent for that. Just a short time ago Mr. Tito accepted a loan from Britain to the extent of about $8,000,000. Why should we not advance $38,000,000 on the same basis?

As I listened, Mr. Chairman, to the proponents of this legislation while the rule was being discussed it seemed to be their view that this is legislation on which we must take a chance. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that we have been taking an awful lot of chances and have been brought to a terrible state of affairs. If we are going to use that as an argument in favor of this legislation we ought to review briefly just how far communism has advanced while we have been taking these chances. In 1945 communism dominated 190,000,000. In 1948 it dominated 450,000,000 people, and on January 1, 1950, it dominated 800,000,000 people.

Mr. Chairman, the Yugoslav aid bill which we are considering is not a program that can be justified on a humanitarian basis. The public and many Members in this body have been led to believe that a serious drought this last summer is causing a great food famine. Nor can it be justified as a military-aid measure. The proponents have failed to prove their case.

This bill is a new wrinkle in give-away programs. It is the worst of its kind ever to be submitted to us. It is a gross fraud upon the American people and another sop to buy a dyed-in-the-wool Communist who sits on a shaky throne. I am opposed to it.

The old calculated-risk theory is trotted out and the bait in the trap is Tito's 30 divisions of troops. It is the same old bogus argument that was used at Tehran, Yalta, and Potsdam, always the pious hope that Stalin would be a nice boy, and it was the same with the Chinese Communists, those agrarian reformers who are murdering our boys in Korea. Again we are wishfully hoping that Communist Tito will play on our side and not with Stalin. Once again we are compromising with communism.

Those who know something about the 30 divisions of troops deny that it is the strongest army in Europe. They say such reports are propaganda. I am informed that it is one of the weakest armies in a Communist-threatened Europe. Nearly all the old commanding officers in Tito's forces are present Stalinites. The rank and file of Tito's army are intensely nationalistic; they are both anti-Tito and anti-Stalin. The only dependable force that Tito has is composed of his own personal followers and his police forces. There is serious question that Tito has anything like 30 divisions. Whatever he has is poorly equipped with weapons of Russian-German origin. It is poorly officered by men whose political dependability is open to serious doubt. To make this army effective, it would be necessary to arm it with modern American weapons and put it under the command of officers whose loyalty to democratic causes cannot be questioned. To do otherwise is to risk having American weapons turned against American boys.

I make this unequivocal statement, Mr. Chairman, that if this bill is approved that within 6 months or less the State Department will be back here with another bill asking Congress to authorize the shipment of military supplies to Yugoslavia. This would be a risky gamble. It would equip Tito's army with additional bargaining power by which the United States could be threatened with pro-Soviet action on the part of Yugoslavia. In other words should we refuse to approve a demand for military matériel, foxy Tito would say, "Well, if I don't get it from you, I'll get it from the Russians." That kind of argument has been quite effective in the past. It seems obvious to me that it will be used again as the occasion arises.

There is no showing that Tito will be on our team. Why not make that a condition of our aid? There have been no consultations between the Yugoslav military and our military leaders. That is General Bradley's testimony.

Now something has been said about the break between Tito and Stalin. I would remind you that there has never been a close relationship between the two. Tito has never been trained in the Kremlin; he was in power when Russian troops entered Belgrade in October 1944. Yugoslavia has never been a Soviet satellite as we understand that term. It was the British, aided by the United States, that backed Tito against Mikhailovich, the real Yugoslav patriot.

May I interpolate here. Do you remember when King Peter spoke to us from the Speaker's dias in the House in 1943 and he concluded his appeal to us for assistance, that it should go to support that great patriotic Mikhailovitch and we stood and cheered and those old girders in the House rang? Then, within less than a year we had sold poor old Mikhailovitch down the river and then they hung him.

Yes, Mr. Chairman, we appeased Tito and dumped Mikhailovitch, another dark chapter in our history—another calculated risk which brought disaster to Greece and instability in the Balkans. Had we continued to support Mikhailovich, the West would be in a far better strategic position to day on the Danube. One writer has said that it would have controlled the balance of power in the middle and southeastern areas of Europe. There surely would have been no German or Austrian problem as we know it today. Many European wars have been fought to secure an outlet to the Mediterranean Sea. If Tito thought it would be profitable for him or because of overwhelming pressure that Russia would bring to bear upon him, he would bow to Stalin and then we would be in the same unfortunate position—as in Korea—of giving material and economic aid to these countries only to make them luscious prizes when the Russians decide to move in.

Mr. Chairman, Tito is a Communist and he boasts of that fact. He is a ruthless dictator; he oppresses freedom and liberty, his opponents are shot or hanged and thousands of loyal people are political prisoners. He has collectivized farms and imprisoned peasants who refuse to produce farm products that he demands. This is the Tito whose guerrillas kidnapped Greek children from their homes and he still refuses to surrender them. Oh, yes, we are told he has returned a few of them. Why not all? Should we not make this a condition? Would you trust him in any kind of a deal? Communists are liars—even the American brand. To do business with Tito is to do business with the Devil. But the State Department says, notwithstanding Tito's communism and his bad record, in our desire to stop communism we will take a chance. This is unadulterated compromise. Do we favor just a little bit of communism? It's a diabolical policy and will lead to the same failure as our appeasement policy has with Stalin. It is this policy that has plunged us into the mess we are in today.

There is another phase of the question before us, Mr. Chairman, namely, the effect of our policy upon the freedom-loving people in Yugoslavia and the other iron-curtain countries. In essence, what we are actually doing is to insure Tito's regime; we make certain that his dictatorship will continue.

Leapold Kohr, professor of economics at Rutgers, in a recent article said:

> No ruler stands on shakier foundations than Marshall Tito. He is opposed by many Serbs because he is a Croat. He is opposed by the overwhelmingly Catholic Croats because he is an atheistic Communist. He is opposed by Communists because he is a Titoist. He is opposed by Democrats because he is a dictator. * * * Deprived of all means of support, Tito can now be maintained in power only through external aid furnished by the very nations he has hitherto denounced and at whom, as they prepare to help him, he now hurls the insolent warning that he does not intend to mend his ways.

Of course, he does not.

Recently, Mr. Chairman, American-Serbian organizations have been heard on this legislation. These organizations contend that Tito would have us believe that the famine was caused by drought. This is not the truth, they say. Its main cause has been Tito's oppressive measures for collectivization of farms. Peasants constitute 80 percent of Yugoslavia's population. This vast majority is being robbed of its right to own land and retain the fruits of its labor. Injustice has robbed them of the initiative to produce. While it is true there has been a considerable drought yet collectivization of the peasants' farms is the basic cause for whatever famine that exists, according to the American-Serbian groups.

Mr. Chairman, if there is danger of famine and suffering then the aid rendered under this bill should be distributed by some American organization such as the American Red Cross or the Friends Society. Further if Tito is on our side then this bill should also provide important conditions; such as a guaranty of free and unfettered elections, of full religious freedom for all faiths, of the release of Cardinal Stepinac, of the end of collectivization of farms and the promise of a settlement of the Trieste dispute. I can hear it said that this is interference with the internal affairs of another government. I ask you what kind of traders are we? Where are the modern Yankee traders? The Communists would destroy us if they could and I shall not be a party to giving aid and comfort to the man who would destroy my home. I shall oppose communism so long as my voice can be heard. I do not intend to compromise with Tito's communism.

Our boys are dying in Korea today in a war they are told is to prevent the rush of communism. The bill we are debating today will, in effect, guarantee the continuance of communism in Yugoslavia—we guarantee the rule of tyranny and despotism. What will we say to the loved ones of those who have already given their lives in Korea if we vote for this bill. Are we against communism or not? Or can we be just a little bit for it? Consistency, thou are a jewel. When the final roll is called the record will reveal those who are for and those who are against communism.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 16 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RIBICOFF].

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. Chairman, first I want to make a few brief comments on the statement made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SMITH], who preceded me. He talks about the roll call and states that by your vote will be indicated whether you are for or against communism. Basically, I think he overlooks the fact that not only are we against communism but we are also against Russian militarism, and there is no question in anyone's mind that the conduct of Russia during the past few years is one of naked militarism, using communism as a force. Anything that can be done to stop that militarism which threatens all mankind is definitely on the side of the United States of America.

The gentleman also mentioned the fact that Tito is weak and could fall at any time. I am willing to grant that proposition to the gentleman from Wisconsin, but is there any question in his mind that if Tito fell Stalin would take his place?

May I ask the gentleman from Wisconsin whether he would prefer Stalin in control of Yugoslavia instead of Tito? Would he prefer Stalin in control of those 32 divisions? Would he prefer Stalin in control of that strategic part of the world? Or would he rather have Tito, not an imperialist, in control?

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. KEATING. That is exactly the point that is bothering me, and my mind is often on this bill. I realize that perhaps the gentleman cannot reveal to the House everything that was said in the committee, nor can the gentleman from Wisconsin, but what is the likelihood in Yugoslavia if Tito fell? In other words, is it a fact that he is likely to be supplanted by a Moscow-controlled puppet?

Mr. RIBICOFF. The best information that we have is that a few men under Tito are very strong individuals, Titoists, anti-cominform, and would probably be able to hold the reins of Tito communism unless there were such general dissatisfaction in the whole country due to conditions such as these that there would be a general sweeping out of Titoism and a supplanting by Stalinism. I think that is a very important consideration to take into account in connection with this bill.

Mr. KEATING. The gentleman from Wisconsin referred to other elements in the country who are equally opposed to Tito as are the Stalinists. My worry and my inquiry is, Which one of those elements is going to come in? The only possible justification for this measure is that it will help to retain in power a man who is the lesser of two evils.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Replying to the gentleman, I would say, let us look at the past successes of communism and its infiltration, together with the manner in which they have taken over one nation after another through close alinement. By cohesiveness, an organized minority knows what they are going to do. Taking into account the fact, that Tito himself has suppressed all the anti-Tito elements, and I think frankly has liquidated all possible effective leadership of anti-Titoism, it seems that if Tito fell because of great dissatisfaction the only group that would be strong enough, and also the only group that could look for outside help right on its border from Russia and its satellites would be the cominform group of Stalinist Communists who would take over in that strategic area of the world. That is what all of us must realize. We must realize that the basic purpose of American foreign policy is to make sure that this Nation survives. We must always make sure that the forces which are aligned with the United States are always the superior force. The United States of America cannot be in the position of not using its power. If it has power and does not use that power it does so nevertheless in favor of the adversary forces. If the United States refuses to give this aid to Tito, what are we actually doing? We are taking our power in a negative manner and giving it to Stalin. We are saying, "We are not going to help you, Mr. Tito; we are going to let you fall, we are going to allow general dissatisfaction to exist throughout your nation." As a consequence, what does America do by not using its power? America then takes a negative view, takes its power and gives it to Stalin. That is one of the main issues here before us today.

I may say that no clearer statement was given than that of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] in his analysis, which was cool, calm, reasonable, and logical. The United States must realize the position in the world of those countries on the borders of Yugoslavia. Not only have you got the satellites, you have Greece, you have Italy, you have Austria. If you get yourself in the position where Stalin comes in, he will control the Adriatic, he marches in Turkey, he marches in Greece. He is there to go into Trieste and to attack Italy and go down the Po Valley.

Those are the facts of life. The fact remains basically that the United States is not too strong today. Let us be realistic about the whole situation. The United States is in a critical situation. General Bradley confirmed the weakness of American forces in a recent speech. It is no secret. I think it can well be said that probably by the aid we may give to Yugoslavia it will be an impetus to have Stalin move against Tito. Is Tito brave or not brave in taking this aid from the United States?

Do you think that the United States would go to the aid of Tito under those circumstances? Whether we would or not I do not know, but I do not think we have the forces or the power today to actually commit our own forces in the Adriatic. Today with the world situation as it is and with our own future at stake, these are the practical considerations.

None of us likes this bill, none of us likes Tito. There is nothing in this bill or the approval of this bill which indicates anything about support for communism or support for Russia. This bill, Mr. Chairman, is basically a bill looking toward the supporting and strengthening of the United States of America. I think this House should view the bill in that light. We are getting a plus factor in the whole situation. We are checkmating at least 32 divisions. We know that for 400 years they fought the Turks. We know that they tied up many Nazi divisions during the last war. Those partisans, those Yugoslavs, stayed there and all of the evidence is that they will tie up many divisions that Russia might throw elsewhere. There is ample testimony to the effect that Yugoslavia today is a plus factor on the side of the forces of the United States. We have alliances with Western Europe. Are we going to be able to save Western Europe and the productice capacity of those people, those 270,000,000 people? But surely if we let Yugoslavia go down and let Stalin take over, by virtue of Stalin taking that nation there is no question that Germany is weakened, that Italy is weakened, that France is weakened, and that Greece is weakened, and accordingly the position of the United States in the world today will be weakened, too.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yeld to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. I would like to say to the gentleman that I think his statement is based on a false premise. He assumes that if the forces of Tito fall that they are going to go Russian Communist. Now, Serbians with whom I have discussed this matter say that by aiding Tito we are blighting the lamp of liberty and freedom; that if he was to fall he would fall to the West, people who believe in the principles that we do. I agree that the crux of this matter is which way it will go.

Mr. RIBICOFF. In answer to the gentleman from Wisconsin, I want to point out this. There is no question that Tito's policy has been anti all religion. I condemn this policy. What makes us think that those Serbians could do any differently than the Hungarians did, than the Rumanians did, than the Bulgarians did, that the Latvians did, that the Poles did, that the Lithuanians did and all those nations that were as strongly religious as those Serbians, but could not stand up against the powers and forces of Soviet Russia? What makes us think that in that area of the world, while that entire area is within the control and purview of Stalin except this country on the Adriatic, approximately 6,000,000 Serbs could stand up against the power of those approximately 600,000,000 people in the heartland of Europe and Asia.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin. Because they have already done it under Mikhailovitch.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. The gentleman says that the United States is weak and quotes General Bradley as concurring in that statement. Why are we weak?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I would be willing to answer that question. I would say to a certain extent that the United States has not realized the responsibiltiy upon its own shoulders for having made the commitments that it has.

Mr. GROSS. The gentleman means the administration and not the United States, because we have appropriated all the money asked for for defense purposes, militarily speaking.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I would say, militarily speaking, that we have not appropriated enough. It has been far from enough. I think the United States does not have a force in being, and has not appropriated enough money to take care of its all-around commitments all over the world, and that is something that I have been saying in Congress and out of Congress for a year and a half, and I think that it becomes very, very important that not another day go by before there is complete mobilization, before there is price control and wage control and more taxes, because the American people have to become aware of the fact that we are woefully weak, and every tick of time is essential for the safety and security of the United States, and there is much more we must do and that the executive branch of this Government must do in order that the United States and western civilization may survive.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS. Would the gentleman have any objection to writing into this bill provisions requiring economic policies so that Tito would not make a habit or a career of running out of funds and coming to us again?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that I am in complete agreement with him. I do not subscribe that all of Tito's difficulties are due to the drought. I believe that much of Tito's difficulties are due to his fast pushing of the industrialization of his nation. I think he sacrificed much of the welfare of his nation in order to become selfsufficient. I also believe that much of Tito's difficulties are due to his rapid collectivization which caused great resistance among the land-owning peasants in that area who are unwilling to grow the crops and unwilling to turn over their substances to an over-all monolithic dictatorship, which is Tito's. As the gentleman knows, I joined with the gentleman in the Committee on Foreign Affairs sponsoring an amendment which would seek to put that type of condition on our further giving of aid. I will say to the gentleman I have had an amendment drafted which I will be delighted to have him introduce instead of myself, which reads as follows:

To take all necessary action to reduce its relief needs and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies.

If this Nation is going to give aid, and I think it is important to give aid, at least this Government can expect the discontinuation of such policies from Tito that will require him to come to this Congress and this Government again and ask for further aid, and I would be glad to join with the gentleman from Ohio in sponsoring such an amendment when the bill is read under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. As I have respect for the gentleman's opinion, why could not the United Nations agencies be used for this aid, if it is for a humanitarian and a relief program, for example, the Food and Agricultural Organization? There is also the International Emergency Children's Fund. The United Nations has agencies set up just for this purpose, and set up in Europe where the distances would not be great.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Frankly, the United States is giving this money for a very selfish purpose. The United States is salvaging millions of hungry Yugoslavs. We want the good will of the people who are the recipients of that aid to inure to the benefit of the United States, that is giving all this money to salvage this nation in hunger and misery. I do not think it is an unworthy purpose of the United States to make sure that we get credit for the money we spend, and to make sure that these people get the relief.

Mr. FULTON. That is putting the program on a broader basis than simply a strategic basis. You are not then simply trying to give millions of dollars in order to hold 32 divisions. From your viewpoint, you are really trying to feed the starving and hungry people as well as get a little credit for it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. That has always been a worthy purpose indulged in by the Government of the United States.

Mr. Chairman, few bills before Congress have been supported with such little enthusiasm for the direct beneficiaries. After all, Yugoslavia is a Communist state and a dictatorship. Although this Nation maintains normal diplomatic and commercial relations with Yugoslavia, this bill in no way implies approval of Tito's internal policies. Further, there is no guaranty implicit in this measure.

This bill requires a tough decision; it is an expensive one; it is not a sure thing, but because of the difficulties the burden is placed nevertheless on this Congress. That burden is a part of democracy, and an essential part. If you lived in Russia, you would not have to trouble yourself over the finely balanced processes of foreign policy. You would leave all the tough questions to your masters in the Kremlin.

This Nation must see the world situation steadily and whole, and yet not become so preoccupied with the whole picture that it loses track of the particular problems of particular situations.

And yet no foreign policy of this Nation can be justified unless it looks toward the strengthening and survival of our own Nation. We must constantly strive to insure that the nations with which we are alined always have the superior power. A nation must give heed, not only to its goals, but also to its means of achieving them. That means power, for power is a capacity to achieve intended results.

We want our Nation to play a role of power—not of power as an end in itself, but as a means to wise and just ends. Our Government must look to its military strength. It must seek the support of other nations. It must be willing to help them, as they need help, in providing the means to persevere toward our common goals. Our Government also must act prudently to preserve and develop the internal strength of the Nation. It must seek at all times to act in the areas where Americans are united as a people. It cannot afford to fragment the popular support which is the ultimate source of all national strength.

Let me tell you what I think is the most important thing for us to keep in mind about our power: There is no way we can avoid having it count. Power—as I said before—means the capacity to achieve one's intentions. A nation which has power and yet withholds it—uses its power nevertheless. It uses it on the side of adversary forces. By withholding aid to Yugoslavia, the United States would really throw its power on the side of the Kremlin, which would capitalize on the weakness of Yugoslavia. As much as we dislike Tito it is to the advantage of this Nation to have Tito in Belgrade instead of Stalin.

Today the cheapest thing we have to sacrifice is money. Our Nation's youth, our freedoms, our institutions are ever so much more precious assets.

Next to Russia, Yugoslavia has the strongest standing army in Europe. It is composed of more than 30 divisions. This aid is justified by political, military and strategic reasons, as well as humanitarian ones. Yugoslavia occupies a highly strategic position in Europe. It has common borders with Italy, Austria, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Albania. The continuation of Yugoslavia's independence certainly works definite advantages to Italy, Trieste and Austria. An independent Yugoslavia blocks Russia's domination of the Adriatic and the Mediterranean. The civil war in Greece came to a close when Tito blocked his frontiers to the Greek Communists.

You have heard and will hear more in this debate that Tito is a Communist, that his country is a police station, that he may realine with Stalin, that what we give him may he used against us, that he may be killed and the Politburo may take over anyway. But as I said earlier, we are giving this aid to Tito with our eye wide open and from a sense of realism, and not because we have any affection for him or his system of government.

Tito, however, cannot go back to the Soviet Union. All testimony is that the break between him and Stalin is definite. While it is true that any assistance that we give Yugoslavia would be beneficial to Stalin were he to take over Yugoslavia, it should be kept in mind that the same argument holds for every other nation in the world which has received aid from this Nation. However, if Yugoslavia goes down, the positions of Greece, Italy, France, and Germany are in still greater danger, as well as the entire Middle East.

There are some things in the bill that do not please me. Although the drought accounts in the main for their food shortages, yet collectivization and too rapid industrialization are also to blame. An amendment should be introduced and supported to the end that any measures which would tend to worsen Yugoslavia's food and economic position should be prohibited, as well as one to the effect that nothing in this act implies approval of Tito's regime or the policies pursued by it.

It can easily be seen that foreign policy is a vast and delicate business. Its complexity goes beyond the limits of any one man or any group. It requires the best wisdom of all of us.

At this critical time in the history of our Nation and western civilization, I again plead for our Nation to rise above the level of party considerations. The fact is that men of good will in both parties have perceived the necessity of establishing a more stable basis for legislative consideration of foreign policy than would be possible if such issues were approached in the context of party bickering. The bipartisan foreign policy has enabled Americans to stand together in facing the world's problems. The Congress—that is, most of the Members of Congress—have sought to find the precepts of our world policy not in the narrow range of partisan striving, but in a broad framework of patriotic endeavor.

Not all of the Members of Congress have abided by that principle. Some have preferred the old habits of mutual distrust between the parties in foreign as well as domestic affairs. Their minds and hearts still operate in the framework of 30 years ago. You will remember the tragedy of that era resulting from the circumstance that men in positions of great political power in our Nation sought to raise party advantage above national welfare and international peace. The conspiracy to wreck the results of President Wilson's leadership was set in motion even before the terms of peace had been developed. Men whose skill was in excess of their principles, whose partisanship was vastly greater than their patriotism, managed to guide that conspiracy to success. The result was a chilling of men's hopes everywhere, a default of leadership on the part of this Nation through the fallow years of the 1920's. Our Nation went ahead on the assmuption that it was not involved in the deterioration of the situation elsewhere on the globe. That assumption was blasted with the coming of World War II, which was the opening phase of the bitter ordeal in which we are still involved. Yet there are some who would write off the intervening facts and return nostalgically to the isolationism of the twenties. Fortunately these are a minority.

There are others who would share in the bipartisan foreign policy when it is to their advantage but would turn their backs upon it whenever a minor tactical gain might be scored in the contention between parties. These are half in and half out of the bipartisar. approach. These are wont to share the credit for all successes and to disavow any part in the disappointments. They are wont also to regard the bipartisan idea of the foreign policy as an arrangement in which the constitutionally responsible officers must give hostages to the minority. They regard any refusal to give way to minority dictation as a breach of faith. They regard the bipartisan foreign policy as a warrant to raise their voices in condemnation whenever they wish and yet to claim immunity to any rejoinder.

Yet these have not been the prevailing moods. Our Nation has presented a continuity of policy and a determination of effort which are quite in contrast to the default of responsibility that obtained after Versailles a generation ago.

This does not mean that there has not also been a short-sighted approach to bipartisanship by the executive branch of our Government. While the direction and execution of foreign policy is within the executive branch, the Congress must implement, legislate, and appropriate to make foreign policy effective. Congress has been neglected too often. Consultation and briefing after the fact, yes; but consultation before the fact, no. An effective foreign policy is too important not to take into account the views of those who have legislative power. The responsibility should be placed on congressional shoulders, too. The executive branch has given too little attention to the realities of the legislative process. This oversight should be rectified at once.

Further, each tick of time makes our job so much harder. Complete mobilization, controls, taxes, a price and wage freeze, and even roll-backs should be put into effect without a moment's delay. We are in a national emergency. Strong leadership will galvanize the entire people to action.

To avert the threatening tragedy and progressing toward the goal of a just peace based on a widening opportunity will require the best thoughts and the most earnest efforts of all men and women who can rise above party. The job is more than Democrats alone can do. It is more than Republicans alone can do. It is a job for all Americans acting together. It requires a steadiness of purpose above the vagaries of party fortunes.

That is why men of good will in both major parties must continue to place our foreign policy on a higher basis than party advantage.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS].

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, we have heard a lot today and we are hearing it, and justly, every day about the grimness of the situation in which the United States finds itself. One of the gentlemen who have discussed this pending bill said, and I think I quote him accurately, that the public opinion of the people of the United States was against appeasing communism. An effort was made here just a few minutes ago to intimate that those who are backing this bill are for the Communist idea, which is, I think, quite unfair. Those who have spoken for this bill are known as ardent opponents of communism and my own record of fighting the Communists and communism certainly needs no apology and it is clear; in fact, this bill is a strong anti-Communist measure.

The one thing that has not been said today is that this is the first time I know of and the first time I think the Congress knows of when the United States has gotten grim and has gotten realistic. This is the only opportunity which has been offered to us here to wage economic warfare behind the iron curtain. The gentlemen who argue against this bill cannot have it both ways. They cannot say they want to fight communism to the limit, that they want to fight it wherever they can find it, and at the same time oppose the only measure of effective economic warfare on communism which the Congress has had an opportunity to act on.

These Communists do not play for marbles. Tito knew he was risking his head when he came out against the Cominform. Yugoslavia, and that is the testimony before us, is running rife with Russian Communist agents seeking Tito's head and seeking to overthrow him. When we back Tito we are backing the only Communist leader who has dared to defy the Kremlin. So far as the Kremlin is concerned, that is anathema. That encourages others to question its authority. That destroys the religion which is communism. This is the first fellow who has had the nerve to do it and we are arguing about the fact that we do not want to break the only effective dagger which has been pointed at the heart of the Kremlin from behind the iron curtain and which is not costing a single American soldier. It is costing thirty-eight million in dollars.

There is one thing that the action of Communist China in Korea should prove to all of us and that is that the strength of the Soviet Union is based upon satellites. What makes the Soviet Union dangerous and imperialistic is the fact that it has grown to control 800,000,000 people. It was not nearly as dangerous and we did not regard it as nearly as great a threat when it controlled the 200,000,000 people of the Soviet Union itself. Now we consider it very dangerous and Communist China showed us why—because the Soviet can now wage aggressive imperialistic war against the world and she can fight such wars by proxy. There is not a single Russian soldier engaged in Korea. Only Chinese and Koreans. Yet, American soldiers are dying there.

Here we have a good chance to immobilize, if we do nothing else, to immobilize, even if we do it only for a time and even if we do it only through next spring, to immobilize 32 Russian divisions. And what are we paying? We are paying $38,000,000.

What do you gentlemen want for $38,000,000?—32 divisions to use as we please? My colleague, the gentleman from Montana, just told us it cost $3,000,000,000 a year to maintain them and equip them. You cannot buy 32 divisions with $38,000,000—but you get a chance to keep them from being a threat to us.

The defection of Tito hurts the Soviet Union. It hurts it badly. Certainly that is shown by the fact that no event in recent history has so unnerved the masters of the Kremlin. No one has been the subject of more violent propaganda out of the Kremlin. They have not come out against anybody in the world, even including the United States and the people they call the imperialists as they have against Tito. He scared them to death. And what we want is to keep them scared. Is this bill not an awfully cheap price to pay?

This bill is the opening gambit in this grim game we are playing with the Soviet Union. This is nothing, pure and simple, but economic warfare, something which we learned was very effective in World War II and something which we are learning now in cutting off exports to Soviet-bloc countries. We still have not done enough in that regard.

We could still exercise more leverage on Hungary with respect to Cardinal Mindszenty and Robert Vogeler. We could still exercise pressure on every other Soviet-bloc country if we completely cut them off from the Western world with which they still must have trade relations, and with which they still do have relations.

There is one other point that is very important here. Tito has asked this aid. We are not shoving it across the counter to him and saying, "There, Mr. Tito, please take it." When he asks for aid from the United States he is making a commitment. He is compromising his position with the people of Yugoslavia themselves, because he was just one of those Communists like Stalin who had been raising hob about imperialists, of which he called us one. Now he comes to us and asks for this aid. You do not have to take my word or anybody else's word for that. The documents are in the record. There is the document of October 20, a note from the Yugoslavian Ambassador to the Secretary of State specifically requesting, at Tito's direction, aid from the United States. Now, Franco-Spain never did that, nor has anybody else in a situation such as this where we can take this effective, unbelievably effective act that we are asked to take in our life and death struggle against communism. There is one point which should be answered. It can be said that when we help Tito we are helping to maintain the status quo. There has been a lot of argument made on that score about our policy, that we almost always manage to get ourselves into a box where we maintain the status quo, whether in Nationalist China or South Korea or now in Yugoslavia. That is perhaps the most potent argument that can be made against this proposition, that by backing Tito we are maintaining the status quo. But I think that is decisively answered by the fact that if we do not back Tito at this time we lose two things: It is likely that if Tito falls he will be succeeded by a Stalinist. The country is in the complete grip of the Communist Party.

Second, and very important, if we do not help Tito now we do not get a nose under the tent even in Yugoslavia. Under this bill we are permitted to send our people in to observe the distribution of this food. Under this bill the food must be distributed and that is revolutionary in Yugoslavia—without any reference, not only to religious application but without discrimination on grounds of political opinion. One of the things which is happening in Yugoslavia today is that special bonuses to Communist commissars have already been eliminated.

Those are great gains for the Western World, in addition to those which the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] today mentioned, about the security of the Greek border. That alone is worth many times $38,000,000.

The quieting of the situation in Trieste; improvement of the situation in Austria; improvement for American citizens in Yugoslavia who could not formerly get out; the beginning of the return of Greek children. All those things we are beginning to get, which is definitely breaking the Communist front; and we are getting it for what? For $38,000,000, for food in a famine situation.

Let me pay my respects to that. It is nice to read figures about the fact that Yugoslavia has produced 59 percent of its corn crop. We have testimony before the committee about the situation with respect to transport in Yugoslavia. It is a fact that they could have 100 percent food supply in the west or north of Yugoslavia and still have starvation in the south of Yugoslavia. That is exactly what has occurred. This food is needed in certain areas to which food cannot be brought because of the inadequacy of transport and transport connections in that country. And food that comes from the United States will go directly to those areas where there is famine, and our own people will see that it goes there.

Yugoslavia is still holding Archbishop Stepinac in prison and hundreds of other priests and nuns, church property has been invaded and taken and generally speaking there has been much activity there which we know to be associated with Communist regimes everywhere against religion. In recent months we have seen a few chinks of light with the release of the Vicar General of the Catholic Archdiocese of Belgrade and a little better climate for people who are practicing their religion in Yugoslavia. This, however, is a very small change and there is still practically everything to be done on this score. The question we must ask ourselves is how best can we begin to get it done, by letting Stalinists take over and getting the iron curtain tightly clamped on again over Yugoslavia, too, or by getting openings through which the injustices against religion and religious institutions in Yugoslavia may begin to be removed?

Now, we have got to make up our minds about this. Do we really mean it when we say we are in a grim situation and we have to fight with all the weapons at our command, or do we not mean it? If we mean it, we have to fight with economic warfare, too. This bill is the first chance we have had. If we do not mean it, then all we are doing is using arguments about the Yugoslav situation as a technique for killing what is proposed—good, bad, or indifferent—directed against Communists and communism, which means spending money.

One of my colleagues said if we can win out in this struggle with communism only by the expenditure of money, we will be getting out of it awfully cheap. I think we would all agree on that.

Mr. SUTTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. SUTTON. Does the gentleman actually think for one-half second that for $38,000,000 we will get even one man on the United Nations side?

Mr. JAVITS. I made it definitely clear that if we could get that, we could afford to spend far more than $38,000,000, but I regard this as being the opening gambit to keep a dagger pointed at the heart of the Kremlin. We will have to be following up on that in whatever way it suits us. That does not mean we will have to go along with Tito in economic aid or anything else, but at least we are keeping the situation favorable to us now.

Mr. SUTTON. We have already loaned them $31,000,000, have we not?

Mr. JAVITS. We have already advanced $32,000,000 in food, but to do the job takes over $70,000,000.

Mr. SUTTON. Is there the slightest insinuation that they will send one man to Korea?

Mr. JAVITS. But if they would send men to Korea, it would be worth far more than this. I am not claiming for this more than it is. It is a great propaganda weapon and economic welfare weapon against the Kremlin the like of which we have not had before.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS] has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HAYS].

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] for giving me this 5 minutes. I realize I cannot begin to cover the field in that time, but I have supported all the foreign commitments that have been brought before the House since I have been a Member of it—the Marshall plan and all the auxiliary features of it.

I hesitate to differ with members of the Foreign Affairs Committee on this matter. As a matter of fact, I have made 86 trips back to my district in the past 2 years to sell my people on the proposition that we cannot be isolationists, and that we have to deal with the world. But it seems to me this is a fundamental matter, that if we are going to fight communism we have got to have some proper and sound ground to stand on when we begin to fight communism by aiding communism.

I was in Yugoslavia a year ago. Tito told us, and his foreign minister and assistant foreign minister told us, that they were Communists; that they have no ideological differences with the Kremlin except one, that is, who is going to be the boss in the Balkans.

There has been a lot made this afternoon about these 32 divisions. The military attaché in Belgrade told me a year ago that as far as he knew I was the only American who had ever seen the Yugoslav Army on maneuvers.

That happened purely through an accident, because we were not permitted to travel freely in Yugoslavia.

I want to say to you that if they have 32 divisions, they are not 32 divisions as we understand them; they are rag-tag, bob-tailed, ill-equipped, poorly clad fighting units. They may be good for guerrilla warfare, but that is about all.

Some have said Tito's alleged 32 divisions can be bought for $38,000,000. We do not have any guaranty we can buy them either with food or even if we equip them. I have seen those men. I have information, and it is first-hand, that the first thing they would do would be to murder their officers, take to the hills and fight against Tito and the Communists from without and try to set up an independent government in Yugoslavia.

They talk about different United Nations organizations. I saw his trucks that his army used. Where the olive-drab and green had faded out or worn away you could see the letters "UNRRA" showing through. That is where he got part of his military equipment. And, as to the UNICEF program, the children's aid program, we went out to a school where we saw them give this milk to the children. Before they got it they had to stand there and sing a little song. I do not understand the language and could not interpret it, but the interpreter said that the meaning of what they sang was: "Thanks to our great leader Tito for this milk we get today."

He did not give any credit to the UNICEF program, to the United Nations, or to anybody else.

The point I am trying to make is that if we follow this bill we are undertaking to fasten his brand of Communist dictatorship upon a people which has a tradition of fighting for freedom. You do not need to take my word for it. Go over to the Library of Congress and look at the history of World War I and find out who fought the Germans down in those mountains; go back and find who fought against the Turks. They will be fighting against communism now just the same as they fought against oppression in the past, because this people have a tradition of freedom and they have a tradition of loving to run their own business. Tito did not break with the Kremlin because he wanted to; he broke with them because he knew the temper of the people. He knew what would happen if he tried to subject those people to the orders and to the wishes of the Kremlin. Oh, yes; if Russia tries to invade Yugoslavia and take over if Tito fails, they might find they had more trouble on their hands than they have now with Tito.

I think we stand at a dangerous place when we give aid. They are using the drought as an appeal to support this loan. I heard what Mr. Haggerty said before the Foreign Affairs Committee. I will not attempt to give his exact figures, but he said that only a relatively small percentage of this lack of calories was caused by the drought; he said that a great deal of it was caused by Tito's collectivization.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON].

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, there was one thing that America has stood for during all the years—that there is something more than bread, and arms, and bombs in the world—there is such a thing as principle. We Americans cherish this basic concept. Our Government has stood as a standard to which people could repair who wanted freedom and justice and who were oppressed. We Americans take pride in this stand. The question then is in connection with this new bill, Shall we firmly and clearly stand with principle and, if necessary, fall with principle? Or shall we embark upon opportunism and expediency to save our skins and our security? My answer is a clear "No."

I hold no higher moral conscience, I hold no higher public judgment, than anyone here. My purpose is merely to point out that possibly this Nation is reaching for the small grain of corn and overlooking the full ear. We are not so desperate as to cast off principle and reach for small things.

The people of this country down through our history have said, we would rather have freedom. This is worth sacrifice and dangers willingly encountered, and alone if necessary. It is an old saying that if Patrick Henry had said, "Give me security or give me death" we would not have had any free America. Liberty requires bold action.

Reduce this proposed course to a simple play for security, but your security will be small indeed. Most of the people of this world are not directly involved in this argument, in this great imperialistic dispute that now seems to be waging. We must convince those billions of people upon the basis of reason and fair conduct. You must appeal to them on their hearts and their consciences, and they will join you. They will know in their hearts they can trust you and propaganda will utterly fail if your words are tied to actions that are based on enduring principle.

The trouble with American foreign policy today is that we are trying to shore up old regimes, we are trying to maintain the status quo wherever it is regardless of principle. This proposed legislation even goes to the extent of trying here to shore up an inefficient and failing dictatorship, let alone an efficient one. Where must the right-thinking people of this world turn in this critical hour of revolution and misunderstanding and bloodshed? Not to opportunism, expediency, imperialism, power politics, and cloak and dagger diplomacy.

If you had two tigers out in your back yard and there was one big one that growled at you every morning, and you said, "I am going to be smart about this. I will take oatmeal out every morning and feed it to the little one. He will show the big one." So one morning you go out and you find you have two big tigers in your back yard instead of a big one and a little one. The little one will probably treat you just as much as you thought the big one might. If he is not for you and your principles, if he is not for your way of life when small, do not expect otherwise any time you go into the garden. The grown little tiger may not like either you or the big one. This bill's policy could be summed up tread softly and carry a big bowl. Teddy Roosevelt's policy was speak softly and carry a big stick.

America should stand up and still hold our banner so that the young people of the world who are looking for some place to place their confidence and their future, can see that the United States is not playing power politics, playing for 32 dictator divisions. Let the dictator have his divisions, as far as I am concerned. The man who chooses to stand with free men on his principles will be respected even by his opposition, but the man who trades his principles for a desperate expediency for his own safety and security will not be respected nor followed by the world's new generation. Let us show the way to build a better world based on principle and we need not buy friends nor enter greasy alliances. Have we forgotten that ours is the job of building a better world, with freedom from fear and want, and justice for all?

You may say, "Well, this bill is not humanitarian." Of course, it is not humanitarian because, if it were, we would already have fed millions of starving people in India as Nehru came over here and pleaded with you to do. It is not relief, because according to the Senate report most of the produce in this year of 1950 in Yugoslavia is not below 60 percent of normal. As you know, the average daily calorie supply in Yugoslavia is about 2,300, whereas shortly before it had been 2,800, really less than a 25-percent decrease in the standard of living.

What else is it? Is it a relief program? Of course it is not, because there has been worse distress in many other places, including slum areas in the United States, and again you have done nothing.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Is this money or food going to be given to Tito to sell to the people over there, or is it going to be distributed?

Mr. FULTON. It is not being given to the people of Yugoslavia when they are able to pay for it. It is a grant to Tito's government, however, so that government will not have to repay the United States. Tito will put the supplies into his economic system and sell them as much as he can through the ration system. This is a concession to the Tito government whose finances will be greatly improved by such a gift. You would, therefore, by this bill, be assisting in keeping in power an inefficient dictatorship, by giving a grant-in-aid where Britain has just made a loan of £3,000,000 under similar circumstances.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The result will be that the hungry people who do not have the money will not get the food?

Mr. FULTON. That is about right, as there is no doubt the Army will come first.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. MANSFIELD. As I understand the question asked by the gentleman from Minnesota, and I wish the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs would correct me if I am wrong, where the people cannot afford to pay, this food will be given free, is that correct?

Mr. RICHARDS. That is correct.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Does the bill say that?

Mr. FULTON. The bill does not say anything about the percentage either being given free or being sold by the Tito government. That is not stated in this bill nor is it proposed to be designated in the legislation. That is Tito's decision.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. VORYS. I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. FULTON. On the humanitarian side and humanitarian principles, let Tito tell us where the Greek children that have been kidnaped, are spending their coming Christmas. Where will the 700 imprisoned priests and church leaders spend their Christmas? Let him come up with that before we give him the money.

The next question about this program is the question of direct alliances. There is no intention by this legislation to make direct alliance with Tito. In addition to that, there is no intention that Yugoslavia will come under the Atlantic Treaty as a treaty nation, because Tito has said he would not. And the irony of it is that Yugoslavia has already been given aid under the United States mutual defense assistance program to tide over temporarily.

There is no doubt that Tito will not go into the so-called western union or union of the nations for the joint defense of Western Europe, nor will he defend them. The written statement on foreign policy circulated to Congress by the Yugoslavian Ambassador several weeks ago proves that even to this date.

In addition to that Tito will not join with the Marshall plan countries to help rebuild Europe, so that he will not accept the Marshall plan in conjunction with the other democracies.

In short what you are doing is this: The State Department and our Government have stated as basic policy that in this question and hour of crisis in Europe there can be no neutrality. We said to France, and Sweden, and others: "No neutrality." "You must stand with the West." We said the same to Italy. Then the United States Government comes along and in Yugoslavia's case we finance a new neutrality for Tito, saying, "even though you spurn Marshall aid and refuse to join with other countries to help rebuild your own and other countries of Europe, even though you will not join in the Atlantic Treaty for the defense of the Atlantic Basin, even though you will not join in a western union to defend Western Europe, and even if you will not join in the United Nations effort to protect our own soldiers in Korea, nevertheless, with no strings at all, we will throw this bread on the waters and just hope that some good comes of it."

I say to you that there are only 3 percent of the people in Yugoslavia that favor the Tito dictatorship. The rest are non-Communists. There are less people in Yugoslavia that are for Tito than are Communists in many States of this country. If you pass this bill, you are shoring up this Government and holding 97 percent of the free people of Yugoslavia down in the throes of one of the worst and most inefficient dictatorships that ever existed in Western Europe. We must meet this issue squarely—shall we of the free world waiver and, in waivering, compromise under the pressure of expediency, the principles that hold us together—and under which we move forward? My answer is a complete and direct "No."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] made the statement that there was nothing in the record to show that any of this relief would go to people who were unable to buy it. The gentleman from Montana refuted that and I corroborated him in what he said. Here is what the Assistant Secretary of State said about it:

> Foodstuffs supplied under the aid program are to be distributed within normal channels. Food will be delivered by each republic to regular consumer outlets where it will be sold for fixed dinar prices. Persons within the rationing system will require ration cards as well as dinars; others (chiefly in rural areas) will require only dinars, and not ration cards. Needy persons lacking sufficient dinars will receive food free of charge.

That was the testimony and that was one of the requirements of this program.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER].

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, I shall vote for the pending bill, and in doing so I join with others in explaining that I hold no brief for Tito. I have heard it repeated here many times, including a statement made by the gentleman who just preceded me, that Tito has one of the worst dictatorship set-ups of any in Western Europe. That may be true according to our standards. I think I know one other that is a little worse, and I think it is over in Moscow. If we are going to decide which of the two is the worst and which one we are going to take sides with here today, count me on the side of Tito. I repeat again, I hold no brief for him, but I do know that the issue here today, if this bill is a justified one, is on the ground of preventing Russian communism moving over and occupying the vacuum created if the present regime in Yugoslavia goes down and their economic system collapses. Therefore, the issue here, as has been stated and restated a number of times, is whether or not we can here, with this assistance so desperately needed over there, move in and help those people to sustain themselves and maintain their economy through this crisis, and in that way prevent the Government that exists there now from collapsing, because in case it does collapse then I think it is generally agreed by those who are familiar with the situation over there, who have made a study of it, that it means Russian communism will move in and take over. Which do you prefer—world communism sponsored by Stalin or Yugoslav communism sponsored by Tito, which does not seek world domination?

It has been argued here that probably they do not have much drought over there, only a 59-percent shortage in the corn crop and a few other shortages, and it is not bad, after all, and that this is a phony excuse for getting money. I might point out in that connection that the Ambassador at Belgrade, Mr. George Allen, told us not long ago that he paid $2 a pound for potatoes on the open market in Belgrade. Red onions, which a year ago sold for 10 cents, are now selling for $3 a pound in Belgrade. Bread is selling for 20 cents a slice in Belgrade. A pork chop will cost you $2.80 in Belgrade, and so on and on and on. Let nobody be confused or misled by the suggestion here that there is not a real threatened famine in Yugoslavia, or certainly in some parts of it. There is no question about that condition being a real one and a serious threat to the economy of that country.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. RICHARDS. Did I correctly understand the gentleman to say that he, himself, visited Yugoslavia recently?

Mr. FISHER. With two other Members of the House, I visited Yugoslavia about 2 months ago. The country is parched. It is the worst drought they have had this century. Their crops in many areas are complete failures. Their over-all total food production this year as compared with last year is 50 percent. Those are facts.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. MANSFIELD. The gentleman visited Yugoslavia lately in company with our colleagues the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE] and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CHATHAM]. Can we assume that what the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE] have said—I understand the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CHATHAM] is not here today because of illness—in brief comprises the feelings of your group as a result of your visit to this part of the world?

Mr. FISHER. Yes; that is true. Not only did we go there and look for ourselves, but, in company with Mr. Haggerty, who was a witness before the Committee on Foreign Affairs, we spent a day in the country visiting some of the farms and looking with our own eyes upon the conditions that exist there. Of course, we talked with our Ambassador and with all our attachés. I think we got a fairly good picture of the situation as far as the food shortage is concerned.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS. How long did the gentleman spend in Yugoslavia?

Mr. FISHER. We were in Yugoslavia 2 or 3 days. I do not pose as an expert on Yugoslavia, but I did see a lot, and I think I know a drought when I see one.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. My good friend the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS] and I had a misunderstanding as to my intent on the distribution of food.

Mr. FISHER. I cannot yield for that, because I have a limited amount of time. Perhaps the gentleman can get some time and answer the gentleman from South Carolina in his own time.

Mr. FULTON. Then may I ask the gentleman, when the gentleman saw Tito did Tito express any sympathy for the position of our forces in Korea or offer to help them?

Mr. FISHER. Not only when we talked with Marshal Tito but in repeated press reports out of Belgrade he condemned the invasion of South Korea. He said it was an unjustified thing. He has repeatedly made expressions along that line. I think that although we have to take a lot of what he said with a grain of salt—I understand that—I think we would do well also to indulge the hope that there may be some sympathy from him with respect to the viewpoint of the west at the present time.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. FISHER. I yield.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Marshal Tito did not come out against the North Korean invasion until Red China got into it; is that not true?

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman is probably more of an expert on that than I am. I do know that his expressions to which I referred happened long before Red China got into it.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. I say that he did not express himself about the situation until Red China got into it. Before that time he did not express himself at all about it.

Mr. FISHER. Yugoslavia's condemnation of Russia's aggression—through her stooges—occurred long before Red China entered the war. The press will bear that out.

Mr. Chairman, let us examine the situation briefly. It is true, as we all know, that Tito was formerly one of the fair-haired boys of the Kremlin. It was said here that he has never been in Moscow. He spent 8 years there. He was the No. 1 fair-haired boy of the Kremlin for a long time. There is no question about that. Then the break came in 1948, on June 29, to be exact. That was after he had refused to go along with the imperialist policies of Russian communism. He insisted upon Yugoslavia having some rights of their own and being permitted to assert those rights and to have some independence in the operation of their government and economy. Up to that time the Kremlin had been very insistent upon bleeding their economies as they do every other one of their satellites with about 75 percent of many of the products and commodities produced. But Yugoslavia decided that that was not a good idea. She was suffering internally as a result and Tito suggested that that be discontinued. The result was a break which has lasted ever since. At the moment that happened and continuously until this day the Kremlin has been booming broadcast after broadcast around the clock into Yugoslavia calling upon the peasants and the people there to rise up and throw off this yoke of communism of the type sponsored by Tito. They say he is a butcher—a butcher, to use their very words. He is a man who is friendly toward the west, this warmongering, Wall Street dominated west; and every conceivable term that could be found in the dictionary, or could be devised, was used to undermine the confidence of the people in the Tito regime and thereby enable the Kremlin to retake that country which is so vital to them in a war against the west. But the vicious propaganda war and the Kremlin has only served to drive the Yugoslavs closer to Tito.

Why do they want Tito out of power? Because Tito is a thorn in the side of one man named Josef Stalin. He is the only man who has had the nerve and the temerity to rise up and throw off the Russian yoke.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I recognize that the proposed aid to Yugoslavia is a calculated risk. The money spent may be wasted. But on the other hand it may not be. It is a risk that I think is worth taking. We do know that Tito has 32 divisions in being. We know that it costs around a half billion dollars to recruit, equip, maintain, and support a division for 1 year in America Just the cost of equipping one armored division costs over $200,000,000. To recruit, support, equip, and maintain 32 divisions in the United States would cost around $16,000,000,000 each year. So, if events should take a turn that would see the Yugoslavs on our side if Russia marches, you can readily see the value in dollars and cents alone in having that army either neutral or on the side of the free people of the West.

I call attention, further, to the fact, that since the Stalin-Tito break, we are importing many scarce strategic minerals from Yugoslavia. In 1949 we purchased 66 percent of the Yugoslav copper export, 54 percent of its lead export, 35 percent of its quicksilver, and 30 percent of the antimony. But if Tito's regime goes down, who gets all that? Russia, of course. No wonder Stalin is so anxious for Tito to fall and enable him to extend his domination to the Adriatic and the Mediterranean.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. ST. GEORGE].

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Mr. Chairman, I have not visited Yugoslavia—not for an hour nor for 3 days—but I am interested in this legislation because it seems to me if it passes in its present form and I very much fear it will, it will be another triumph of hope over experience. I can see nothing very new in this formula. It is one which has been indulged in by our people a great many years now—10 or 12, to be exact. It is that strange theory that you can buy friends and that if somebody is not doing just what you want them to do, if you give them enough dollars, they will come down and worship you. Truly, the experience of these years proves that has not been true. Where are our friends today, I ask you. What have these billions and billions of dollars bought for us? It has been well said on the floor of this House recently that in 1945 Communist Russia only dominated about 400,000,000 people. Today she dominates 800,000,000 people and they are no friends of ours. What has happened in China, where again we have tried to appease; where we have invited the Communist Chinese to come and insult us at Lake Success, because that is all they have done.

They are living now in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York in great luxury and at our expense. When they arrived here I am told they were received with 32 boxes of flowers. Yes, we have done all that, and it is a wonder to me that during the last war we did not invite Ribbentrop and Goering over here while their people were slaughtering our men abroad. It is a strange philosophy. Why can we not have a few conditions to the giving of this $38,000,000? What is the objection? Can we not ask Marshal Tito if he will not send back those 11,000 Greek children? Something has been made about a few of them having gone back, so few that it is almost a joke and an insult.

A great deal has been said about the 32 divisions. If we need them as badly as we have been told by the experts on the floor of this House today, why not incorporate that in an amendment to this legislation, that in case Soviet Russia begins to roll, those 32 divisions will be on our side as long as we need friends, and we do need friends so badly. But no. We are not doing that in this bill. We are just going along on that same old routine of giving away something for nothing. Did you ever find that you made a great friend of someone who borrowed money from you, or, better still, to whom you gave money? I do not think so. That is equally true of the nations.

I think these same people, including Marshal Tito would respect us far more if we said, "Yes, we will give you the help you ask for, but we will give it only under certain conditions. We will give it if you will release the religious who are now in your prisons. We will give it if you will restore religious freedom in your country. We will give it if you will allow our citizens, our newspaper men to travel freely through your country as they do in the other civilized countries of the west. Yes, we will give it if you will promise us that your armies, in time of war, will not be on the other side, against us."

Then I would be in favor of this legislation, but as it is written here today I cannot be for it.

We also seem to have developed a new and interesting theory here today. That is, that there are 2 or 3 brands of communism, and that we here in this country are going to uphold one brand against another. My friends, to paraphrase Shakespeare, I think that communism by any other name will smell as foul.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. ST. GEORGE] has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. BLATNIK].

Mr. BLATNIK. Mr. Chairman, in the few minutes allowed me I cannot adequately cover more than a few of the several points I would like to discuss on the subject before us today.

I am not an expert on Yugoslavia, but I have had some personal experience over a period of several years that has given me a fair bit of information about a good part of Yugoslavia.

I was over there for the whole summer, 4 months, 28 years ago, as a child. I went back again in 1944 as a member of the American Special Military Mission in liaison with the partisan guerrillas. I spent 7½ months of that time in northern Yugoslavia behind enemy lines. I went again last year with a select committee from the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department. I am not going to try to repeat, summarize, or reevaluate the whole argument of the need for this relief for Yugoslavia because of the drought situation and all of the other implications in this issue. I shall merely have time to refer to three or four of the points that have been raised on the floor by the opposition and spend the few minutes I have on those.

No. 1. The argument has been raised, by the opposition, that if Tito fell there was a chance the country would fall into more democratic hands. Though this may be desirable, it is highly unlikely. Just the contrary would most likely occur and this is the consensus of opinion of many who personally know the Yugoslav situation from first-hand experience, including our own American embassy representatives in Belgrade. In fact, I feel that such a premise is based on an assumption as far removed from reality as it can possibly be.

Let us assume that in some manner or another Tito is deposed or removed as head of the present regime. What I feel is very likely to happen almost immediately is that overwhelming numbers of well trained and equipped military forces from the neighboring satellite countries of Rumania, Bulgaria, and Hungary would move quickly over the plains, good roads, and railroads in northern Yugoslavia that lead to the easily accessible capital cities of Belgrade and Zagreb and get there in a matter of hours. Backed by Russian military forces, they could announce to the world that they are there to restore order. Perhaps there would have been some disturbance, or riot, or what you will, staged in advance. But regardless of whether or not there is any disorder or not the satellite forces could move in quickly in superior numbers and Russia would be firmly entrenched in Yugoslavia before any of Yugoslavia's allies could move in to help if they were so inclined or were able to get there in time. That is what is far more probable and likely to happen—the control by Russia of one of the most, if not the most strategically, important land areas in Europe. This land has been the great natural land bridge between the Near East and the west for centuries. Hitler had to control this land bridge to make the other prong of his two-pronged drive into Africa, which, if successful, would have given him control of the Mediterranean, the Suez Canal, which could have made ultimate victory his. Today Russia must have control of that land bridge to give her access to the Mediterranean, and consequently place her in a position to dominate the Near East. So I hold that it is in the national interest and security of our own country and our way of life that this emergency relief assistance be granted by Congress.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLATNIK. I yield.

Mr. FULTON. Does the gentleman recall the history that in World War II when the Nazis were going into the country the Yugoslavs overthrew their government, rushed to the hills and resisted to the end? That is completely opposite to what the gentleman says would happen, especially when viewed in the light of Yugoslav history.

Mr. BLATNIK. I believe that all Yugoslavs, regardless whether they are pro-Tito or anti-Tito, whether Orthodox, Moslem, or Christian, they all will fight to the bitter end to resist aggression. I know of the courage that makes them battle with their bare hands.

Mr. FULTON. That is contrary to what the gentleman just said.

Mr. BLATNIK. What I am getting to, if the gentleman will allow me to finish, is that overwhelming numbers of well-trained, well-equipped troops from the neighboring satellite countries, most likely backed by Russian military forces could strike decisively and get entrenched deep inside Yugoslavia. Look what happened in Korea late last June. There is no question but that the Yugoslav people would fight to the bitter end, from the mountains if forced back, as they did against Hitler's invading armies; but Hitler at that time was heavily committed in Africa, in Western Europe, deep in Russia, in much of the Balkans, and although even at that he was forced for a while to have as many and perhaps more of his own troops and Axis troops in Yugoslavia than confronted the combined British Eighth and American Fifth Armies in the early days of the Italian campaign. But today, a well-calculated military drive of overwhelming numbers concentrated on one country could well be more than partially successful and give Russia a more complete control than Hitler ever had.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlemen yield?

Mr. BLATNIK. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I just heard the gentleman say in previous statements that different Members were assuming situations; then I heard the gentleman continue in his own argument to assume a situation that might exist if Russia should invade Yugoslavia. Now, piling one assumption on top of another does not help us in arriving at the facts and a decision.

Mr. BLATNIK. I know from personal experience what the military facts are in this instance and what is probable.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLATNIK. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I wish to emphasize for the consideration of the House the fact that when it comes to assuming, the gentleman now addressing us has a great deal more to base his assumptions on than any other Member here. If I remember correctly, the gentleman is not only of Yugoslav descent, but he also spent some months in Yugoslavia during the war as a paratrooper with the OSS; and I recall that just last year he was the chairman of a distinguished committee which visited Yugoslavia. I think he, above all others, is the most capable among our Members to assume what is happening over there and to tell us what he thinks.

Mr. BLATNIK. I thank my good friend from Montana. While I agree with the strategic importance of this emergency-relief aid, I also hope there will be a few who will share my feeling that there is a humanitarian need for helping feed the people of Yugoslavia during this critical winter. There is among those people such widespread friendliness and respect for the United States wherein live so many of their kinfolk who have given them so much help in the past and as they do so today.

The tragedy of the wholesale killing of those people during World War II is beyond human comprehension. Over 10 percent of the entire population were killed; hundreds of thousands of others wounded, maimed, tortured. If 10 percent of the population in America were killed that would be 15,000,000 people, men, women, and children. Yet, in spite of such unbelievable horror, when it meant death to give assistance to American airmen or to American military personnel operating behind enemy lines, those people gave us food, shelter, information whenever they could. Boys 10 years old were used as couriers to slip through enemy lines at night, when they knew they would be tortured and shot upon capture. The old women were the great heroes of the war. Having seen tragedy in World War I and now in World War II, many having lost their husbands in the first, and some, or most, and many cases all of their families in this war, these women gave us and the fighting Partisans food, concealment, information about the enemy, at the risk of torture and death, or at the best being put in a concentration camp and having their homes burned.

In the little area in which we operated for almost 8 months in northern Yugoslavia these helped rescue 350 American airmen that had to bail out of bombers damaged during air raids farther north in Budapest and in Vienna. We would then evacuate these men by Allied aircraft landing on secret landing strips at night. The landing strips were merely open spaces of ground, usually a meadow or cornfield.

There were other military advantages. We learned of enemy divisions moving into Italy from the eastern front days and weeks before they showed up on the Italian battle line. I have already mentioned the large number of Nazi and Axis troops forced to fight in Yugoslavia because of the devastating guerrilla warfare carried on by the Partisans.

There are thousands upon thousands of American boys who are alive in America today, because of the fierce resistance put up by the Yugoslavs.

It was in those early critical years of World War II where such resistance was so invaluable and contributed so much to ultimate victory. Gen. George Marshall referred to those dark days of the war in his report of August of 1945, when he wrote, "There are few who realize how slim was the thread by which hung Allied survival."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two additional minutes and I should like to ask him a question. I agree with the gentleman from Montana that the Member now addressing the House is probably better qualified to speak on Yugoslavia than any other man here.

I want to ask the gentleman what does he think of the proposal in this bill to provide $30,000,000 for Yugoslavia relief?

Mr. BLATNIK. I firmly believe that it is unquestionably to our own national interest and our own security to secure passage of this bill providing this relief aid.

I have always supported economic aid for the needy of war-torn countries, including even the needy of countries that were our enemies in World War II. I feel that on this very eve of the Holy Season we can extend a helping hand to the needy of Yugoslavia. We can make our intentions clear and say, "Look, we do not approve of your administration or your leadership or the politics or the form of your government; but the people of Yugoslavia have our respect and admiration for what they have done during the war and for their independence and their determination to maintain their sovereignty and resist aggression to the last."

What we do give is largely surplus stocks of food we now have in abundance. The distribution of the food will be open to supervision and inspection by American representatives at all times, and at any time that the purposes of this act are not being carried out, the whole program can be stopped immediately.

However, to attach a series of conditions to the bill beyond the purposes of the act would be a serious error.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLATNIK. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. Does the gentleman feel that conditions releasing all the people in jail, because of their religious beliefs, or sending back Greek children would degrade you.

Mr. BLATNIK. The gentleman misses my point. I yield to no one in my earnest desire to see the Greek children sent back, or to have innocent people released from the jails. But I do say, that to write those conditions in this relief-aid measure would preclude reaching those just and humanitarian and democratic objectives, rather than expedite them. Our State Department and our American Embassy officials in Belgrade have been working day and night and are now working to make that possible; some progress is being made, and hope for more progress in the future is more encouraging than ever. The committee report and hearings are complete on this and I do not have time to go into detail. The Greek children are now in the process of being returned. The State Department says that of all the countries of Eastern Europe in which there are Greek children, Yugoslavia is the only one that has done anything about returning them. A Swedish Red Cross mission is even now en route to Yugoslavia to supervise and expedite this repatriation.

Progress is being made, the State Department further informs us, in the matter of religious liberties, and I do hope this will be broadened and continued. But the political aspects of the over-all problems should continue to be in the hands of our Ambassador, and I have been very impressed by the ability and the caliber of former Ambassador Cavendish Cannon and his staff, who have done a singularly brilliant and most difficult job, and the same outstanding job is now being done under Ambassador Allen.

I do believe that approval of this aid measure is without question in our best interests, will substantially bolster opposition to aggression in a most strategic area, and will have a strong psychological impact on the peoples of eastern European countries in encouraging their will for independence and national sovereignty. Although there are many more assurances and commitments from Yugoslavia that I, too, would wish to have, as so many of you have today expressed, I do feel that with the bill we have before us, or even the Senate version, that we have very little, if anything, to lose and so much to gain in these critical days which confront us.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, the gentleman was giving the history of people being shot down in World War II and the part that Tito and the Yugoslav Government had in that. Why did he not go further and mention the five American boys, fliers, that were shot down over Yugoslavia by this very Tito government that you now say we should help?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GORDON].

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of passage of H. R. 9853, the primary objective of which is to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense—and I emphasize "defense"—and general welfare of the United States. This bill proposes that we do this by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia. Thus there is really only one issue involved here, and that is whether or not the bill is designed to accomplish that objective.

The foreign policy of the United States has always been directed toward the encouragement of independent nations to remain independent, regardless of their form of government. This is one of the key points of difference between us and Moscow. The foreign policy of Moscow is directed ruthlessly toward undermining independent countries and forcing them within the iron curtain. The menace of Soviet communistic imperialism is the greatest, most critical, and most imminent which our Nation and all other independent nations have ever faced. The foreign policy of the United States has been realistic in this respect and recognizes the danger. Any gamble which this country may take to reduce that danger, no matter what the degree of reduction, is worth taking, in my opinion. The bill before us today involves just such a gamble. The cost is small and the stakes are high. Those who oppose taking the gamble consider only one side of the question. They ask: "What assurances do we have if we pass this bill?" Those who favor the bill realize that it would be nice if we could have assurances. But, Mr. Chairman, if the foreign policy of the United States were made only on the basis of assurances, we would have no foreign policy at all, but only a policy of defeatism and hopelessness. So far as I am concerned, I look forward to no assurances if we pass this bill. But, what about the other side of the question? An essential step in considering the wisdom of any policy is to look at the alternatives. What are the probable consequences to the foreign policy of the United States, to the defense of the United States, and to the general welfare of the United States if we do not pass this bill? The evidence on this point seems clear to those who favor the bill and to our highest military authorities, like General Marshall and General Bradley. It seems clear to me.

Yugoslavia under Tito is the first country formerly within the satellite domain which has been able to break away from the clutches of the Kremlin. Tito stands defiantly opposed to Kremlin domination and he is determined to maintain that defiance. I venture to say that when the history of the collapse of the Soviet Union is written Tito's break with Stalin will constitute one of the major contributing factors in that collapse—with one qualification. And that qualification is that we provide relief assistance to the hungry people of Yugoslavia and do it quickly and effectively. Unless we do this, the ability of the Yugoslavs to continue the resistance to Moscow's military and economic pressures will be seriously impaired, Tito will be overthrown, and Yugoslavia, with the largest standing army in non-Soviet Europe, will be forced to submit and fall back behind the iron curtain.

That is the most significant alternative that we face, and that must be the center point for all discussion on the wisdom of this bill. It is in our national interest and in the interest of our defense plans that this tragedy should not take place. I can only think of the millions of people in the other Soviet-dominated satellite states of Europe: Albania, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, and Poland, with her rich tradition of freedom and independence. What is our answer to these people, who despise communism perhaps even more than do we, when we turn our backs on the only country which has managed to break away from Soviet slavery? What hope do we hold out to these people, when we turn our backs on the only symbol of rebellion against Moscow to which they can look?

Mr. Chairman, there are many administrative details involved in this bill. Let us not become entangled in them, but let us rather concentrate on the only issue which we as Americans must consider in these perilous days: the national interest, defense and security of the people of the United States.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'KONSKI].

Mr. O'KONSKI. Mr. Chairman, if my heart were not so heavy, I perhaps would just as soon not talk. However, for the record I think I should express my views on this pending legislation.

The reason why I say that perhaps I should not talk at all is because I have never been in Yugoslavia. I have never seen Tito. But I have never seen God, and I know there is a God. I have never seen the devil, and I have never been in hell, but I know there is a devil and I know there is a hell. We are underwriting a one-way ticket to hell when we pass this bill. Because in passing this bill we are going to take up truck with Tito, and in taking up truck with Tito we are taking up truck with the most brutal, the most daring, the most cold, and the most calculating and dictatorial murderer next to Joe Stalin himself. I am talking now about Josef Broz Tito, commonly known now under the Communist title of Tito.

This bill is based on five very false assumptions: Number one, when all the world is burning at our feet and we are paying the heavy penalty of gambling, gambling on our future, we are asked to gamble again. We gambled at Yalta, we gambled at Potsdam, we gambled in Poland, we gambled in Czechoslovakia, we gambled in Yugoslavia when we discarded Mihailovich for Dictator Tito, we gambled in Korea, and we gambled in China. And we are losing these gambles in blood of American boys. We have not played a gamble yet that we have not lost. Now along comes the leadership and they say we have to take another gamble, we have to gamble on Tito.

I say that the time has come when we should not gamble with America's future and America's security any more. I want something better than a gamble. No one in this body has yet sold me on the idea that this is anything but a calculated gamble with the cards stacked against us.

We are told we should do this because we finally realize something, we finally realize what we have come to realize very bitterly in China. You remember when Lattimore and Jessup and Service sold the American leadership the idea that the Chinese Communists were not Communists, that there were two kinds of communism, namely, Stalin's communism and Mao's communism, that they were merely North Dakota nonpartisans, that they were agrarians or land reformers, they were not real Communists. We were not going to have any trouble with the Chinese Communists we were told, because they were different from Russian Communists. I wonder if the 20,000 or 30,000 American dead in Korea feel that Mao's Chinese Communists are different from the Russian Communists.

Of course, that argument wore thin so they thought up another one even thinner than that. They say now there is a difference between Tito's communism and Stalin's communism. They interpret Leninism in a different way, we are told. Stalin interprets Leninism to mean that communism must conquer the whole world, but Tito does not believe in that. Tito believes that communism should conquer the whole world except Yugoslavia. That is the only difference between the two communisms, the only difference, we are now told—are you laughing? You should laugh on this whopper.

What Tito is saying is, "I am a Communist. I believe in Leninism but, Joe Stalin, I will do the murdering for you in Yugoslavia, I will imprison the priests for you in Yugoslavia, I will collectivize the farms for you in Yugoslavia, I will communize Yugoslavia for you, but you keep out. I will do the job in Yugoslavia for you. You take over the rest of the countries. Don't waste your time in Yugoslavia—go elsewhere. I don't need you here."

Does Tito object to what is going on in Korea today? Not at all. Does Tito object to the Communist rape of Poland, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, part of Austria-Hungary, and Eastern Germany? Not one iota. The only significant difference you have between Tito and Stalin today is, as someone said, they interpret Leninism in a different way. One says Leninism means that they must conquer the whole world, but here we have a great hero that we must help, we have a different kind of communism under Tito, who says, "Sure, Stalin, you can take over the whole world and communize it, but you don't have to do it in Yugoslavia because I will do it myself."

On the basis of that minute difference they say we should give Tito this aid. They say Tito has fallen out with Russia. I wonder if Tito has fallen out with Russia. Let me tell you this much. Stalin, cold, calculating killer that he is, if he thought today or felt one iota afraid that he might be betrayed by Tito or the people under him, would not wait until tomorrow to take Yugoslavia over. He would not have an enemy at his gates. But Stalin today is occupied with feeding 400,000,000 Chinese. Stalin today is occupied with feeding the people who are massacring our boys in Korea. Stalin is short of food and short of drugs, so he has to cut down on somebody. So he goes over to his best buddy of all the satellites, Tito, and he says, "I'll tell you what to do, Tito. I need the food and I need the goods for China. I need it for Korea. I need it to murder Americans. You go get yours from Uncle Sam. He is a big enough sap to fall for it."

That is exactly what we are doing. We have already given him $400,000,000 since the war ended. Now, if $400,000,000 does not secure him as our friend, are you so naive as to believe that another $37,000,000 is going to do it? It certainly is not.

Let us take a look at this man Tito. There is some divergence of opinion as to where he came from. I do know this. You have a whole slew of them in Europe. You have Georgi Dimitrov, the dictator of Bulgaria; Clement Gottwald, head of Czechoslovakia; Boleslaw Beirut, dictator of Poland; Marshal Josef Broz Tito, dictator of Yugoslavia. You have Thorez, of France; Togliatti and Luigi Longo, of Italy.

I could go on, if time permitted. Who are all these people? They are Kremlin-trained propagandists and murderers for communism throughout the world. The best scholar and the most successful of them was Josef Broz Tito, to the point that when he fought in the Spanish Civil War—and that is where he got his start in international communism—together with Togliatti and Thorez and Clement Gottwald and all these other dictators in Europe today, he did such a good job that when he went back to Moscow they changed his name from Josef Broz, and gave him a Russian name of Tito, taken from four Russian words meaning "secret international terroristic organization." Of all the satellites in Europe the only satellite dictator that Russia could get to march against the United States or any of its allies was Josef Broz Tito, who marched into Greece, but who pulled in his horns when he found out that he might get licked. He tried to march into Trieste, but thank God for an American sergeant with guts—it was not a lieutenant—it was an American sergeant, and, as I say, thank God it was, because if it had been a representative of the State Department or a general, they would have bungled the job, but it happened to be a sergeant and he told the Tito men, "If you pass this line, you are going to get it." Since that time Tito pulled in his horns.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Would the gentleman give a little more explanation of the interpretation of the letters in Tito's name, T-I-T-O?

Mr. O'KONSKI. I forget what the Russian words are, but the interpretation of the Russian words is taken from the four words which in Russian mean secret international terroristic organization. He could not have a better name. Incidentally, of all the satellite dictators in Europe he is the only one who has a fancy title for the good work that he has done. A great deal has been said here about the suffering of the Yugoslav people. Yes, they have suffered. A great deal of credit has been given him more or less by inuendo. But let me tell you that Yugoslavia is a country by itself today, not under Russia's domination, not because of Tito but in spite of Tito. Do not forget that Yugoslavians were being slaughtered at a time when you had the Hitler-Stalin pact in existence. When Hitler was marching through Yugoslavia, where was Tito? Was Tito in the mountains and in the hills fighting with General Mikhailovitch and the Serbian patriots? He was not. He was in cahoots with the Hitler-Stalin pact, burning down cities and villages and murdering his own people. That is where Tito was until the war was over. That man who betrayed his own people became the leader of the Yugoslavian Government and that is where he is today. I think that with any man with a record of that type, if we underwrite this bill, we go into it in league with death and a covenant with hell.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'KONSKI] has expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HESELTON].

Mr. HESELTON. Mr. Chairman, I want to speak briefly about a certain aspect of this legislation which has troubled me for some time. I address myself to those who are for the bill and those who are against the bill.

When I first heard of the proposal, I wrote the State Department and asked them to inquire into the possibility of taking care of this situation out of the huge stocks of surplus foods that we have all over this country, which we all know about, and which is costing the taxpayers a tremendous sum of money in terms of carrying charges alone. I did not receive an immediate answer and I wrote again on November 27. On November 29, Assistant Secretary Jack K. McFall sent me a letter covering the interim and the full program. I want each letter to be available to my colleagues. They follow:

DEERFIELD, MASS., November 18, 1950.

Hon. DEAN ACHESON,
Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I understand from press reports that Yugoslavia has requested approximately $105,000,000 worth of food to relieve drought conditions there. You have been quoted as saying that you would have to go to Congress for funds to carry out any such program.

May I call your attention to the fact that as of August 31 the Department of Agriculture had in storage 1,833,550,826 pounds of six kinds of edible foods—butter, cheese, dried eggs and milk, edible dried beans and peas—at a cost to the taxpayers of $403,290,956.77. The carrying charges on the storage of these food commodities had reached the staggering sum of $3,351,028.13, and is continuing at an unknown rate.

The Department of Agriculture has hoarded away millions more pounds of other food commodities which are doing no one any good, running the risk of spoilage, and costing the taxpayers totally indefensible sums of hard-earned dollars.

I urge that you order an immediate and full investigation as to how much of these surplus foods can be transferred to any program you are developing to aid Yugoslavia. I am certain that you will agree with me that the overburdened taxpayers are entitled to this much consideration in connection with any recommendation you submit to Congress when it reconvenes.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN W. HESELTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 27, 1950.

Hon. DEAN ACHESON,
Secretary of State, State Department,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: On November 18 I wrote to you with reference to the request by Yugoslavia for $105,000,000 worth of food to relieve drought conditions there and urged an immediate and full investigation of the possibility of using some of the hundreds of millions of Governed-owned surplus food commodities for that purpose.

I have received no acknowledgment of or reply to that letter.

Since then the Department of Agriculture has published its reports of its holdings of food as of September 30. The facts contained in the report reemphasize the vital importance of such an investigation in fairness to the American taxpayers who are paying increased taxes and who face even larger increases of taxation.

In the six kinds of edible foods I mentioned, butter, cheese, dried eggs and milk, edible dried beans and peas, the cost to the taxpayers increased $29,233,958.94 to $432,524,915.71.

The carrying charges had jumped in one month $2,598,759.87 to $5,949,788.

The six items by no means exhaust the possibilities of wholesome foods held in storage in huge quantities at indefensible waste of the taxpayers' earnings and savings.

Let me mention a few others:

	Amount	Lost
Rice --pounds--	464, 387, 000	$2, 476, 278. 87
Turkeys ---do--	3, 905, 821	1, 671, 213. 25
Mexican canned meat, pounds	64,466, 487	15, 524, 878. 95

I cannot believe that your failure to acknowledge my letter of the 18th means that you propose to ignore this possibility or that you are indifferent to the best interests of the American people upon whom the Federal Government has placed so heavy a burden of taxation. But, in view of the current reports as to the executive department's plans and operations in this matter of furnishing food to Yugoslavia, I submit that action upon this suggestion is imperatively needed.

I enclose a copy of my letter of the 18th.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN W. HESELTON.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 29, 1950.

The Honorable JOHN W. HESELTON,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. HESELTON: Reference is made to your letters of November 18 and 27, 1950, urging investigation of the possibility of utilizing surplus-food stocks of the Department of Agriculture in the Yugoslav emergency-aid program.

For the past few weeks we have been actively engaged in formulating this program for presentation to the Congress. I am glad to inform you that the first food procurements, most of which have already left for Yugoslavia, consisted entirely of some of the foodstuffs which you mentioned in your letters. These were 44,096,409 pounds of beans, 9,951,800 pounds of dried eggs, 20,000,000 pounds of canned Mexican beef. These foodstuffs were purchased as part of the stopgap program with funds available from an Export-Import Bank loan.

The program currently before the Congress calls for additional quantities of surplus agricultural commodities—15,432,200 pounds of dried milk, 32,069,000 pounds of dried beans, and 66,138,000 pounds of dried peas. Besides this, active steps are being taken to develop a welfare-type feeding program through CARE and church organizations, which will make use of other surplus foodstuffs of the Department of Agriculture.

The basic diet of the Yugoslav people is based on bread grains and lard, so it is impractical to use the Department of Agriculture surplus foodstuffs beyond the extent already planned.

For your information, complete details of the proposed Yugoslav aid program are being supplied to the House Foreign Affairs and Appropriations Committees.

If there is any further information concerning this program which you desire, please do not hesitate to call upon us.

Sincerely yours,

JACK K. MCFALL,
Assistant Secretary
(For the Secretary of State).

Mr. Chairman, I now want to include data as to six of the food commodities which were held in storage by the Commodity Credit Corporation as of October 31, 1950, the date of the latest available report. In view of the references in the hearings of the committee report to certain seed items, I shall also include similar data as to certain seeds held in storage.

	Inventory Oct. 31, 1950	Cost	Carrying charges
	Pounds
Butter	168, 889, 008	$104, 253, 780. 07	$1, 567, 317. 93
Cheese	109, 319, 543	36, 819, 645. 70	1, 150, 513. 34
Dried milk	383, 500, 481	49, 409, 955. 86	1, 836, 367. 63
Dried eggs	108, 648, 358	114, 986, 624. 21	1, 021, 758. 67
Dried beans	902, 857, 100	73, 743, 837. 99	1, 668, 642. 62
Dried peas	70, 270, 400	2, 624, 651. 77	292, 553. 12
Total	1, 743, 484, 890	381, 838, 495. 60	7, 537, 153. 31

	Inventory Oct. 31, 1950	Cost	Carrying charges
	Pounds
Hay and pasture seeds	4, 357, 288	$629, 450. 49	$12, 485. 23
Winter corn crop seeds	7, 563, 812	469, 860. 98	21, 072. 09
Field seeds	268, 989	62, 356. 19	1, 392. 50
Foundation seeds	3, 918	272. 17	0

Yesterday in the RECORD, in the debate in the other body, there is a memorandum at page 16402, spelling out more in detail what the program intends to be as far as these commodities are concerned. For my colleagues' convenience I include it here:

The total proposed program of emergency relief assistance for Yugoslavia consists entirely of commodities procured or to be procured through the Department of Agriculture and shipped directly to Yugoslavia. The program totals 603,900 tons, including 464,500 tons of grains, 70,000 tons of vegetables and rice, 20,000 tons of lard, 20,000 tons of sugar, 4,500 tons of dried eggs, 6,000 tons of dried milk, 900 tons of canned meat, and 18,000 tons of seeds. The total costs of supplying these foods, including transportation, is $69,400,000.

Under the stopgap program already in progress, 248,900 tons of food and feed are being provided under the Economic Cooperation Administration Act, the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, and under a line of credit extended to the Yugoslav Government by the Export-Import Bank. As a part of the stopgap program 140,000 tons of wheat are being shipped by the ECA from the United States to Italy and Germany, which countries are in turn supplying about 110,000 tons of milled flour to Yugoslavia. The processing of this wheat into flour has afforded the milling industries of Italy and Germany an opportunity to utilize their facilities more fully and in this way a definite contribution has been made to the economic health of these countries. The $5,600,000 in funds provided by the Export-Import Bank were used for the purchase and shipment of surplus beans, eggs, and meat from the Department of Agriculture, also for lard purchased in the open market by the Department of Agriculture for Yugoslav account.

The remaining portion of the program now before the Congress consists of 355,000 tons of food, feed, and seeds as follows: 276,000 tons of grains, 50,000 tons of vegetables and rice, 5,000 tons of lard, 6,000 tons of dried milk, and 18,000 tons of seeds. The cost of the commodities and their shipment under this part of the program is estimated at $34,400,000. All of these commodities will be procured by the Department of Agriculture with appropriated funds. No funds will be turned over to the Yugoslav Government.

Of the total program before the Congress, 71 percent will be procured from stocks of the Commodity Credit Corporation, while the balance, or 29 percent, chiefly flour, lard, and seeds, must be purchased in the open market.

This morning, in terms of the debate in the other body yesterday and particularly in terms of the memorandum to which I have referred, I telephoned Mr. McFall and asked him if he would make a quick analysis of the memorandum in terms of his letter to me of November 29. He called back and made a report which I think will be useful to us in the consideration of this bill.

It is obvious that the food products referred to in the second paragraph of his letter to me were those actually contracted for under the so-called stopgap program. It is pointed out that they were purchased by Yugoslavia from the Commodity Credit Corporation with funds made available from the Export-Import Bank credit at the price which the Commodity Credit Corporation had established for the countries that were members of the Food and Agricultural Organization.

The differences between the amounts contained in the memorandum and paragraph three of Mr. McFall's letter to me, which covers the program contained in this bill, are as follows: The program before us calls for 7,000 metric tons of dried milk, the 15,432,200 pounds mentioned in Mr. McFall's letter to me. The memorandum refers to 6,000 tons of dried milk. The difference of 1,000 metric tons is accounted for by an adjustment of the program after Mr. McFall's letter of November 29. Dried beans and dried peas referred to in the letter as totaling 99,147,000 pounds constitute 45,000 metric tons. The memorandum refers to 50,000 tons of vegetables and rice. The 5,000 tons difference is said to constitute a different category so far as the Commodity Credit Corporation is concerned, and I was advised that while the Commodity Credit Corporation does have rice now in stock, it is not considered surplus. That is one of the major difficulties I have in terms of the facts because the Commodity Credit Corporation Report of Financial Conditions and Operations as of October 31, 1950, shows on hand then 23,184,800 pounds purchased at a cost of $1,720,269.15 with carrying charges for the four months since June 30 of $121,115.58.

With reference to the fourth paragraph:

> The basic diet of the Yugoslav people is based on bread grains and lard, so it is impractical to use the Department of Agriculture surplus foodstuffs beyond the extent already planned,

I was advised that the Commodity Credit Corporation has what it considers "a normal carryover of bread grain which they have not declared surplus." In my studies of this problem of purchasing and storing surplus food commodities, I have not had the opportunity to go into the problem of the proper carryovers of grains. I think we all realize that some carryover is essential, but I also think it is important, in these days when so much of a burden is being placed upon the American people, that a careful determination of the proper carryovers should have been made long since, so that a sound and defensible program could be in operation. I have taken from the October Report of the Commodity Credit Corporation certain statistics with reference to certain grains which I shall include here solely for information purposes. I shall also list the stated losses on these items. Certainly all of this factual information points to the urgent necessity of developing the full facts in a congressional hearing, and I am glad to state that the chairman of our Committee on Agriculture has advised me that he intends to hold such a hearing.

	Inventory, October 31, 1950	Cost	Carrying charges
	Bushels
Corn	357, 505, 925	$552, 513, 585. 82	$12, 215, 726. 96
Wheat	297, 085, 735	707, 186, 713. 72	28, 933, 466. 22
Barley	31, 398, 552	45, 747, 078. 32	414, 109. 74
Oats	12, 258, 621	11, 349, 343. 30	594, 093. 24
Rye	544, 276	757, 681. 09	208, 240. 80

	Losses
Corn	$3, 082, 940. 30
Wheat	9, 275, 721. 67
Barley	835, 602. 21
Oats	59, 900. 18
Rye	71, 398. 07
Total	13, 325, 562. 43

My concern about this is that no one, as far as I know—and I have read the committee hearings and the committee report, I read the debate in the other body and have listened to the debate here—no one has indicated clearly why it is that, for instance, they are going to need lard in substantial quantities and, on the other hand, no consideration is given to the American taxpayer, who is paying the bill, who has already paid a tremendous amount for these surplus foods, so that we have on hand butter, cheese, dried eggs, dried milk, dried beans, and dried peas, in the amount of over one and three-quarters billion pounds in storage. It has already cost the American taxpayer $381,838,495.60 in initial cost. The carrying charges alone on these items since June, during a time of war, has cost the American taxpayer over seven and one-half million dollars.

To me it does not make any sense whatever, irrespective of the position we may take with reference to the merits of this legislation, for us not to measure up to our own responsibilities on this phase of the matter. It is true, it is said in the committee report, and it is true the Department has said in its letters to me that they do intend to utilize, as much as possible, these surplus foods, but I think it is our responsibility to write legislation which carries out our intention beyond any question. There should be no disagreement about that. It is our constitutional obligation to legislate and to make our intention crystal clear.

I have an amendment prepared, and I shall place it in the RECORD. I have been requested to consider whether it would be advisable to present to the House a choice of an amendment that might not be quite as far reaching, which is the present draft that I will place in the RECORD, or an amendment requiring all of these commodities, except possibly seeds, to be drawn from these huge stores of surplus foods. I shall consider that before tomorrow. Possibly someone more conversant with the problem of grains will consider that possibility.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HESELTON. I yield.

Mr. GROSS. Does the gentleman think we are going to deplete our surplus commodity stocks in this country by shipping them over there?

Mr. HESELTON. That is something that bothers me. You will find, if you look at the hearings, that there is a great deal of difference of opinion as to what is and what is not surplus. And we may need stocks in certain amounts of wheat, for instance, with no stocks of other commodities such as dried milk or butter. I do not know. I am saying that the Department of Agriculture has done a mighty poor piece of work in handling this surplus program, and they have already confessed it in terms of the dried-egg program; they have confessed it in terms of the potato program; and we are going to run into a considerable amount of difficulty as to the entire program, unless there is more realism and more common sense used. I am very glad to emphasize to the gentleman that the chairman of our House committee has written to me that he is going to hold a hearing on this over-all program. That cannot come too soon, as far as I am concerned.

In conclusion, I have obtained from the Department of Agriculture a table which shows the calories and the vitamins in certain of the items mentioned for this program for Yugoslavia, as well as items contained in the stores of surplus foods of the Commodity Credit Corporation. I call particular attention to the calories and vitamins in butter, cheese, dried milk, and dried eggs in contrast to rice and lard. I do hope that someone familiar with the details will explain to us tomorrow the basic reasons for the selection of the items requested and whether or not there was any consideration given to the substitution of items from our surpluses for those which it is stated must be bought in the open market. The tabulation is as follows:

Vitamins and calories in following foods: Rice, butter, lard, Cheddar cheese, dried milk (whole and skimmed), dried whole eggs, dried beans, and dried peas

[Quantities are all 1 pound]

	Calories	Vitamin A [1]	Thiamine	Riboflavin	Niacin	Vitamin C
Rice:
White	1,644	None	0.30	0.12	7.4	0
Brown	1,634	None	1.43	.23	21.0	0
Butter	3,251	15,000	.01	.05	.5	0
Lard	4,095	None	None	None	None	None
Cheddar cheese	1,806	6,360	.11	1.91	.1	0
Dried milk:
Whole	2,233	6,360	1.38	6.63	3.0	29
Skimmed	1,643	190	1.60	8.88	5.2	32
Dried whole eggs	2,689	16,970	1.52	4.79	1.1	0
Dried beans	1,537	None	3.06	1.04	9.9	8
Dried peas	1,541	1,680	3.48	1.28	14.2	9

[1] International unit.

Source: Agriculture Handbook No. 8, table 2, composition of food.

The proposed amendment as I have drafted it is as follows:

Page 3, line 2, after the word "belief", insert a new section as follows:

"SEC. 4. All of the funds made available under authority of this act shall be utilized to the fullest practicable extent in the purchase of the commodities from the surplus commodities in the possession of the Commodity Credit Corporation."

And renumber the subsections of the bill accordingly.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. HALE. Mr. Chairman, I expect to support this legislation. It is, of course, a very desperate gamble, because no one can say what Tito will do; no one certainly can commend all the things that he has done in the past. Still the amount involved here is trifling in the general scale of our defense expenditures, and there is apparently a good deal of genuine anti-Soviet sentiment in Yugoslavia on which we might legitimately capitalize. I do not know how genuine or durable is Tito's opposition to Stalin, but in the last analysis we can afford to make a small gesture to encourage his schism with the Kremlin, for which, of course, there is plenty of excellent cause.

What troubles me, however, and the reason why I have asked for this time is that we are passing this bill without being given any assurance of what our policy is going to be in Asia. Everybody recognizes that our forces may have to be withdrawn from Korea. If such a withdrawal is a military necessity, like the British withdrawal at Dunkerque, let us not deceive ourselves that it is anything but a military necessity. I, for one, am still quaking with fear that we are going to end by making a deal with the Chinese Communists. If, with or without a Dunkerque, we concede Communist China a seat in the United Nations or agree to their occupation of Korea, or, still more, of Formosa, then we shall have made a surrender of vital principles. Furthermore, we shall have entered into an appeasement that can do nothing but add to the awful insecurity of our present position. A Dunkerque if need be; a Munich never.

While a communiqué issued by the President and Mr. Attlee seems to deny any intent on our part to seat Red China in the United Nations, the fact remains that the Attlee government has recognized the Red Chinese Government, is prepared to seat them, and the pressure on the Truman administration to give ground is bound to be very great.

Over and beyond this, I am distressed, and I want to take this opportunity to say that I am very much distressed at the slow progress of this country in reaching all-out mobilization either on the military side or on the economic and industrial side. I understand that representatives of the great automobile companies are here today protesting that the 5-percent increase in automobile prices is justifiable and necessary.

If we are to pass legislation like this on the gamble of getting aid from Tito and neglect the vital and absolutely necessary things that we must do in national defense, we are certainly not putting first things first, and the importance of doing that I urge upon you as beyond every other consideration.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCDONOUGH].

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, there have been some very serious arguments made here today against this bill and if I can add anything to the seriousness of the arguments in opposition to the bill, I am going to do so. I have never been in Yugoslavia, I am not a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, but I have had in the last 24 hours the benefit of knowledge from a gentleman for whom I have a lot of respect, a man who has just returned from Yugoslavia. He was an OSS officer, Army Intelligence, in the Balkan States during the last war. He is an American-born Yugoslavian. He traveled through Yugoslavia by automobile to the small villages. He knows the habits and customs and talks Yugoslavian fluently. He talked to everyone he could. He went there for the purpose of looking over the country as an American, to observe what progress they were making and the general conditions.

To the arguments that have been made here today about the 32 divisions that Tito has, let me say this man tells me, and I have every reason to believe he is honest—he is a respectable businessman of southern California—that that is a myth, that if there is any armed forces in Yugoslavia which we can hope to come to our side in the event of an attack by Russia, they will disperse into the hills, they will not fight to support the Tito regime, and that those who are armed are poorly armed and not the kind of soldiers we would expect to support us in the event of an attack. He also told me that he found out Tito recently bought two American-made B–29's from England, if you please, B–29's that the United States sold to England which England in turn sold to Tito. B–29's have a 10,000-mile range, while Yugoslavia is only 900 miles long. He believed the only reason that Tito bought the B–29's was to get out of Yugoslavia as quickly as he could when the people of Yugoslavia revolt against him, because they do not like his dictator tactics, and neither do they want either Stalin's or Tito's brand of communism in their country.

He stated that insofar as the communism which Tito represents in Yugoslavia is concerned, there is no difference between that and the communism which Stalin represents, except the nationalistic feature of Tito's Communists.

Mr. Chairman, we, as a nation, are opposed to communism in any form. In reply to my question asked of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] this afternoon, he admitted that we could not treat communism by degrees; that is, we cannot favor Tito's communism because we think it is not as bad as Stalin's communism, but we are. We are saying, in effect, that this gift of millions of dollars to Tito is an appeasement to the possibility of making friends for us out of a Communist dictator. Well, no Communist is trustworthy and Tito is no exception.

Mr. Chairman, I venture to say that if this bill were submitted to the people of the United States there would be a resounding "No" across the Nation, and I make that statement because I believe the November 7 elections proved that. If this bill were introduced in the Eighty-second Congress it would not pass, in my opinion. It is offered in this Congress. It is being voted upon by many who are not coming back here. And why are they not coming back? Bill Green himself told the American Federation of Labor that the men who were defeated were defeated because they placed too much emphasis on the foreign policy of the United States and too little on domestic issues.

The foreign policy we have been following has made us no friends. I have said many times that we cannot buy military allies or friends with dollars.

My friend who just returned from Yugoslavia said that if this bill passed, the food would go to build up Tito's army and that the people who need it would get little or none of it.

We have got to consider where we are going; and if we are going to represent American thought and belief in Government, we should not support this bill. It is opposed to the thought, I would say, of the majority of the people of the United States and it will not give us the relief we are hoping for, and I recommend a vote of "no" on the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. COOPER) having assumed the chair, Mr. MCSWEENEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 9853) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia, had come to no resolution thereon.

RIO GRANDE RECLAMATION PROJECT

Mr. REGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and insert a resolution passed by the Public Lands Committee this morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. REGAN. Mr. Speaker, I insert at this point in the RECORD a resolution which was adopted by the Public Lands Committee of the House this morning, and two acts relating to this procedure, concerning the expenditure of rehabilitation and betterment costs on certain reclamation projects. This resolution approves the findings of the Secretary of the Interior on this contract as outlined in his letter to both the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and to the Public Lands Committee of the House of Representatives, dated December 8, 1950.

On October 7, 1949, the President approved an act to provide for the return of rehabilitation and betterment costs of Federal reclamation projects, and on March 3, this year, an act was approved amending that act to a slight degree, whereby it becomes possible for the above-named committees to express their approval of the determination by the Secretary of the Interior of the terms of a contract for the repayment of rehabilitation and betterment costs on reclamation projects.

The two acts referred to and the resolution which was adopted by the Public Lands Committee of the House are as follows:

[Public Law 335, 81st Cong.]

[Ch. 650, 1st sess.]

H. R. 1694

An act to provide for the return of rehabilitation and betterment costs of Federal reclamation projects

Be it enacted, etc., That expenditures of funds hereafter specifically appropriated for rehabilitation and betterment of irrigation systems on projects governed by the Federal reclamation laws (act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) shall be made only after the organizations concerned shall have obligated themselves for the return thereof in installments fixed in accordance with their ability to pay, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior in the light of their outstanding repayment obligations, and which shall, to the fullest practicable extent, be scheduled for return with their construction charge installments or otherwise scheduled as he shall determine. No such determination of the Secretary of the Interior shall become effective until the expiration of 60 days after it has been submitted to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives. The term "rehabilitation and betterment," as used in this act, shall mean maintenance, including replacements, which cannot be financed currently, as otherwise contemplated by the Federal reclamation laws in the case of operation and maintenance costs, but shall not include construction, the costs of which are returnable, in whole or in part, through "construction charges" as that term is defined in section 2 (d) of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 (53 Stat. 1187). Such rehabilitation and betterment work may be performed by contract, by force-account, or, notwithstanding any other law and subject only to such reasonable terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior shall deem appropriate for the protection of the United States, by contract entered into with the organization concerned whereby such organization shall perform such work.

SEC. 2. This act shall be deemed a supplement to the Federal reclamation laws.

Approved October 7, 1949.

[Public Law 451, 81st Cong.]

[Ch. 47, 2d sess.]

H. R. 7220

An act to expedite the rehabilitation of Federal reclamation projects in certain cases

Be it enacted, etc., That the second sentence of the act entitled "An act to provide for the return of rehabilitation and betterment costs of Federal reclamation projects," approved October 7, 1949, is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting a semicolon and the following: "except that, any such determination may become effective prior to the expiration of such 60 days in any case in which each such committee approves an earlier date and notifies the Secretary, in writing, of such approval: Provided, That when Congress is not in session the Secretary's determination, if accompanied by a finding by the Secretary that substantial hardship to the water users concerned or substantial further injury to the project works will result, shall become effective when the chairman and ranking minority member of each such committee shall file with the Secretary their written approval of said findings."

Approved March 3, 1950.

RESOLUTION CONCERNING THE EXPENDITURE OF REHABILITATION AND BETTERMENT FUNDS ON THE EL PASO COUNTY WATER IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NO. 1, RIO GRANDE PROJECT, NEW MEXICO-TEXAS

Whereas the act of October 7, 1949 (Public Law 335, 81st Cong., 1st sess.), as amended by the act of March 3, 1950 (Public Law 451, 81st Cong., 2d sess.) provides that expenditure of funds specifically appropriated for rehabilitation and betterment of irrigation systems on projects governed by the Federal reclamation laws shall be made only after the organizations shall have obligated themselves for the return thereof in installments fixed in accordance with their ability to pay, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior in the light of their outstanding repayment obligations, and which shall, to the fullest practicable extent, be scheduled for return with their construction charge installments or otherwise scheduled as he shall determine. No such determination of the Secretary of the Interior shall become effective until the expiration of 60 days after it has been submitted to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives or on a date prior to the expiration of such 60 days in any case in which each such committee approves an earlier date and notifies the Secretary, in writing, of such approval; and

Whereas in a letter dated December 8, 1950, the Secretary of the Interior submitted to the Committee on Public Lands his findings relating to the return of rehabilitation and betterment funds to be expended on the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1, Rio Grande project, New Mexico-Texas; and

Whereas the Committee on Public Lands has, in session with a quorum present, this day approved the findings of the Secretary of the Interior in these premises: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands give notice in writing to the Secretary of the Interior of its approval of his determination in these premises.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS,
J. HARDIN PETERSON,
Chairman.

Adopted this 12th day of December 1950.

UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., December 8, 1950.

Hon. J. HARDIN PETERSON,
Chairman, Committee on Public Lands,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. PETERSON: In compliance with the requirements of the act of October 7, 1949 (Public Law 335, 81st Cong., 1st sess.), as amended by the act of March 3, 1950 (Public Law 451, 81st Cong., 2d sess.), I submit herein my determinations relating to the return of rehabilitation and betterment funds to be expended on behalf of the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1, Rio Grande project, New Mexico-Texas.

An urgently needed rehabilitation and betterment program in the El Paso district is proposed for initiation during fiscal year 1951. Before such work is authorized, however, compliance must be had with Public Law 335, Eighty-first Congress, first session, which reads in part as follows:

"Expenditures of funds hereafter specifically appropriated for rehabilitation and betterment of irrigation systems on projects governed by the Federal Reclamation Laws (act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) shall be made only after the organizations concerned shall have obligated themselves for the return thereof in installments fixed in accordance with their ability to pay, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior in the light of their outstanding repayment obligations, and which shall, to the fullest practicable extent, be scheduled for return with their construction charge installments or otherwise scheduled as he shall determine."

The El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 contains approximately 67,000 acres of water-right land and 6,000 acres of other land which receive water when available. The district represents that portion of the Rio Grande project located in the State of Texas. It is organized under Texas law to represent the landowners in the portion of the project from the New Mexico line on the Rio Grande to a point several miles below El Paso, Tex. The project was authorized by the act of Congress of February 25, 1905, being among the first in the United States under the Federal Reclamation Act of 1902. Construction followed immediately and included the Elephant Butte Dam and Reservoir authorized for construction March 4, 1905, which serves the purpose of irrigation and facilitates the delivery of water to Mexico in compliance with the treaty dated May 21, 1906 with the Republic of Mexico, under which Mexico is entitled to 60,000 acre-feet of water annually. Water was first made available on the project in 1908.

Since 1930, care, operation, and maintenance have been at an enforced minimum as a result of the depression, the war, and postwar scarcities of both labor and material. Furthermore, irrigation structures installed from 1905 to 1930, which are primarily of timber construction, have deteriorated from natural causes to the extent that replacements and major repairs are now obligatory.

The rehabilitation and betterment program will require the expenditure of an estimated $4,025,000 over a period of approximately 5 years. As of June 30, 1950, the district construction obligation totaled $1,730,229.90 payable in annual installments of $98,863 with the final payment due in 1967. It is proposed that the United States enter into a repayment contract with the district providing that commencing with the second calendar year following that in which the United States shall have commenced the work program, and during each calendar year thereafter until the total sum due on account of the work program shall have been paid, the district will pay toward reimbursement of the work-program costs the sum of $168,860 less annual amounts required to be paid to the United States on project construction costs. It is estimated that the district-construction obligation will have been liquidated by 1967 which means that approximately $70,000 per year will be applied on rehabilitation costs prior to that date and the full $168,860 per annum after that time. Assuming that rehabilitation work can be started in 1951, payments will begin in 1953 and continue through 1985 for a total pay-out period of 32 years.

A repayment-capacity analysis of the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 supports the proposed payment schedule as outlined above, and I have, therefore, determined that:

1. Annual installments of approximately $70,000 payable while payments are still being made by the district on its construction obligation and $168,860 thereafter on the proposed rehabilitation and betterment obligation will be in accordance with the ability of the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 to pay in the light of its outstanding repayment obligations.

2. The work for which the rehabilitation and betterment funds are to be expended in the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1 is not construction but is maintenance, including replacements, which cannot be financed currently as otherwise contemplated by the Federal reclamation laws in the case of operation and maintenance costs.

As indicated in the above discussion some of the project works are in urgent need of rehabilitation. Funds are available to initiate the work contemplated by the proposed contract and work should be started as quickly as possible. For this reason it would be most helpful if your committee would take early action on these recommendations under the procedures prescribed by Public Law 451, Eighty-first Congress, second session.

An identical letter has been sent to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate.

Sincerely yours,

MASTIN G. WHITE,
Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

WILLIAM EARLE GRIFFIN

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 880) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to William Earle Griffin, son of Helen M. Griffin, late an employee of the House of Representatives, an amount equal to 6 months' salary at the rate she was receiving at the time of her death and an additional amount not to exceed $350 toward defraying the funeral expenses of said Helen M. Griffin.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LONG-STAPLE COTTON

Mr. REGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 9832) to remove the marketing penalties on certain long-staple cotton.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman please explain the bill?

Mr. REGAN. Mr. Speaker, the law of 1950 would put a penalty on certain long-staple cotton if it was not ginned on roller-type gins. The early frost has cut the maturing of some of the cotton production and they will have to gin it on saw-type gins. It will take the regular price of the cotton and may be put on a short-staple base. The Committee on Agriculture has unanimously approved this bill. It involves but an estimated 6,000 bales that the country needs for defense purposes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman has made a very good case, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the marketing penalty provided in section 346 of the Agricutural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended August 29, 1949, shall not be applied to long staple cotton of the 1950 crop ginned on saw type gins where such action was necessary to conserve the cotton because of frost or weather damage.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MANSFIELD asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made in Committee and include a newspaper article, a press release, a telegram, and two amendments which he intends to offer tomorrow.

Mr. COLMER asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. KILBURN (at the request of Mr. VORYS) was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous material.

Mr. BOYKIN (at the request of Mr. REGAN) was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. RICHARDS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include two newspaper articles.

Mr. HESELTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made in Committee and include copies of correspondence, statistics, and other tabulations.

Mr. CASE of New Jersey asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. DOYLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a statement of the aims and objectives of the American Veterans of World War II, including their revised constitution and bylaws, notwithstanding the fact that it will exceed two pages of the RECORD and is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $410.

Mr. McDONOUGH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks.

Mr. JENISON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include extraneous matter.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. WERDEL, for an indefinite time, on account of attendance at California meetings of subcommittee of Public Lands Committee.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. J. Res. 207. Joint resolution to continue for a temporary period certain provisions of the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, as amended.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A joint resolution of the Senate was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. J. Res. 209. Joint resolution to amend and extend the provisions of the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, as amended; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on December 8, 1950, present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 5967. An act to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, to clarify the status of freight forwarders and their relationship with motor common carriers.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 47 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, December 13, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on House Administration. House Resolution 880. Resolution providing for the payment of 6 months' gratuity and $350 funeral expenses to William Earle Griffin, son of Helen M. Griffin, late an employee of the House; without amendment (Rept. No. 3185). Ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. MORRIS: Committee on Public Lands. S. 3519. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to James Chester Stevens; without amendment (Rept. No. 3184). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. BROOKS:

H. R. 9899. A bill to authorize the issuance of a special Korean campaign medal; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. RANKIN (by request):

H. R. 9900. A bill to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 27, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FALLON:

H. R. 9901. A bill for the relief of Dr. Leonidas M. Peppas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GARMATZ:

H. R. 9902. A bill to adjust the status of an alien who is in the United States and who is a quota immigrant; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HERTER (by request):

H. R. 9903. A bill for the relief of Bartholomew H. Donovan; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LODGE:

H. R. 9904. A bill for the relief of Stanislas d'Erceville; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PLUMLEY:

H. R. 9905. A bill to authorize the transfer to the Vermont Agricultural College of certain lands in Addison County, Vt., for agricultural purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts:

H. R. 9906. A bill for admission to the United States of Mrs. Margot Kazerski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

2410. The SPEAKER presented a petition of Edmond C. Fletcher, Washington, D. C., relative to grievance against the Government of the United States for the impeachment of Hon. Albert V. Bryan, of Alexandria, Va., district judge of the United States for the eastern district of Virginia, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1950

(Legislative day of Monday, November 27, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father God, Thou hast made all the highways of our hearts to lead to Thy face; Thou hast so formed our being that its deepest cravings are satisfied only in Thee. Help us this noontide to lift our faces to Thy radiance, O Thou sun of our help and strength.

Not only for our separate lives do we pray, but for the common interests and great spiritual traditions that bind us all together, for our Nation and its chosen leaders, and for the whole body of our citizens in this time of testing, we crave Thy guidance. In all our decisions set our souls on high things. In this dangerous yet glorious day, when we must choose for ourselves and our civilization life or death, the blessing or the curse, grant us the grace, in scorn of consequence, to set our wills on things worth living for and, if need be, worth dying for. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, December 12, 1950, was dispensed with.

DESIGNATION OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, D. C., December 13, 1950.

To the Senate:

Being temporarily absent from the Senate, I appoint Hon. CARL HAYDEN, a Senator from the State of Arizona, to perform the duties of the Chair during my absence.

KENNETH MCKELLAR,
President pro tempore.

Mr. HAYDEN thereupon took the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 9832) to remove marketing penalties on certain long-staple cotton, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

On request of Mr. HOEY, and by unanimous consent, Mr. SMITH of North Carolina was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate today, because of public business.

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, Mr. PEPPER was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate today.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, tomorrow the junior Senator from Louisiana and the senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] will conduct subcommittee hearings for the Small Business Committee. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the senior Senator from Kansas and the junior Senator from Louisiana may be absent on official business tomorrow.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, permission is granted.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS DURING SENATE SESSION

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Public Works was authorized to meet during the session of the Senate today.

On request of Mr. O'CONOR, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Armed Services was authorized to meet today during the session of the Senate.

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. O'CONOR. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the unanimous-consent agreement a quorum call is ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hickenlooper	Maybank
Anderson	Hill	Millikin
Benton	Hoey	Morse
Brewster	Holland	Mundt
Bricker	Hunt	Murray
Bridges	Ives	Neely
Butler	Jenner	Nixon
Byrd	Johnson, Colo.	O'Conor
Cain	Johnson, Tex.	O'Mahoney
Capehart	Johnston, S. C.	Robertson
Carlson	Kefauver	Russell
Chapman	Kem	Saltonstall
Chavez	Kerr	Schoeppel
Clements	Kilgore	Smith, Maine
Connally	Knowland	Smith, N. J.
Cordon	Langer	Stennis
Donnell	Leahy	Taylor
Douglas	Lehman	Thomas, Okla.
Dworshak	Long	Thomas, Utah
Eastland	Lucas	Thye
Ecton	McCarran	Tobey
Flanders	McCarthy	Tydings
Frear	McClellan	Watkins
Fulbright	McFarland	Wherry
George	McKellar	Wiley
Gillette	McMahon	Williams
Gurney	Magnuson	Young
Hayden	Malone
Hendrickson	Martin

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the time between now and 2 o'clock is equally divided between the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL].

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER].

EXEMPTION OF FURLOUGH TRAVEL OF SERVICE PERSONNEL FROM TRANSPORTATION TAX

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maine yield to me for a minute if he may do so without losing his position?

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I will do so. I do not want to yield to anyone else, but I yield to the Senator from Georgia, however.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask for the present consideration of House bill 9840.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 9840) to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, what is proposed to be done by the bill is exactly what was done in World War II. The bill was unanimously reported from the Finance Committee.

Since it is reported with a minor amendment, it is necessary to have it go to the House. I therefore ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9840) to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance, with an amendment on page 2, line 4, after the word "than" to strike out "2" and insert "2.025."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 9840) was read the third time and passed.

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I do not intend to discuss the merits of the bill now under consideration, although I think it will be recognized that it is a measure which has been pending for a long time, and that there have been serious arguments as to its wisdom in view of all its implications and ramifications. It involves questions on which the Senator from Maine has not formed a final opinion, because of the press of many other matters.

It seems to me most unfortunate that this bill is being pressed to a conclusion at the very time when the President of the United States has called the leaders of both sides to the White House to consider the declaration of a total emergency which will involve, we trust, an all-out effort and the mobilization of every possible resource of America in the face of what is certainly the most critical situation that has been faced in our lifetime, and perhaps in the lifetime of our country.

The reason why it seems a peculiarly inappropriate measure to consider is that it involves further placing of responsibilities upon the executive department to take action against possible mergers or growth toward concentration of economic power when, during the last war, as a result of our experience, with the full approval of all members of the administration, the operation of existing legislation of this character was suspended because it was the considered conclusion of all concerned, that it was calculated to hamper production which was the vital element in the winning of the war.

It seems to me, therefore, most unfortunate and most unhappy that this bill is being pressed. I continue to hope very earnestly that those responsible may recognize the wisdom of laying the measure aside. When this consideration was presented to them yesterday, the only reply which the distinguished sponsors of the bill made was that, recognizing it might be necessary to suspend the legislation, it would be just as easy to suspend it as to suspend the other existing legislation on the subject. That seems to me to be a very questionable argument in favor of acting at this time.

Aside from that, however, we are now in the closing days of the session, with a new Congress coming in on January 3, at which time, if happily the crisis in which we find ourselves should pass, there will be time to consider the proposed legislation. That, it seems to me, is the time to act rather than in the closing days of a Congress which has just been reconstituted by the action of the American people.

So on both grounds, that of the war emergency which may require once again suspending not only the existing legislation dealing with the subject but other legislation as well, and that, with but a few days remaining in this session, there are so many other matters pressing it seems to me entirely indefensible to give consideration to legislation of this character. During the closing days of the session, it seems to the Senator from Maine, the complete attention and thought of every Member of the Senate should be given to how we may cooperate with the administration and the country in trying to get the country on a war basis without a day's delay.

We expect there may be a decree of total emergency within 24 or 48 hours. So we are told. Yet, here we are debating a measure which, at the least, must be admitted as being calculated possibly to hamper rather than to give impetus to the war mobilization and effort.

Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

NOMINATIONS OF MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL SCIENCE BOARD OF THE NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, does the Senator from Missouri have the floor?

Mr. DONNELL. I do; yes.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Will the Senator yield to me about 2 minutes in order to make a report from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, to report favorably the nominations of 24 individuals to be members of the National Science Board of the National Science Foundation, and in connection with this report to speak briefly on behalf of the committee.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations will be received and placed on the Executive Calendar.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, as one of the original sponsors of the National Science Foundation legislation, together with many of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, I express the deepest gratification that this measure has been enacted into law, and that now there have been submitted to the Senate the names of 24 eminent educators and scientists to be members of the Board of the National Science Foundation. I am sure that all my colleagues will join me in wishing success to the labors of the National Science Foundation as it begins its important deliberations. This new organization devoted to the pursuit of fundamental science, as all of us know, has an important role to play in promoting the national welfare and the security of the United States.

Mr. President, in reporting these nominations favorably, the committee expresses its view—and in that view I join—that among the 24 nominees there are a disproportionate number of administrators, as distinguished from research scientists. The committee notes with approval the general high caliber of the individuals nominated, but expresses the hope that when the time comes to appoint successors to the present members, at the expiration of their respective terms, a greater proportion of actual research scientists will be chosen.

In brief elaboration of that point, let me say that we felt that every person who has been nominated is worthy of our support, and we would not for any reason oppose confirmation of any of the nominations. However, the committee felt that there are a disproportionate number of administrators, and relatively too few expert research scientists.

I thank the Senator for yielding time to me.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I have consulted the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DONNELL], and it is agreeable to both of us that opportunity be given at this time for the transaction of routine business and insertions in the RECORD, without debate.

CREDENTIALS

Mr. KNOWLAND. Supplementary to the telegram from the Governor of California appointing my colleague the junior Senator from California [Mr. NIXON] to serve the unexpired term of Mr. Downey, which was read to the Senate on December 4, I present the official credentials of Mr. NIXON, and ask that they be read.

The credentials were read, and ordered to be placed on file, as follows:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that pursuant to the power vested in me by the Constitution of the United States and the laws of the State of California, I, Earl Warren, the Governor of said State, do hereby appoint RICHARD NIXON a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States until the vacancy therein, caused by the resignation of Sheridan Downey, is filled by election, as provided by law.

Witness: His Excellency, our Governor, Earl Warren, and our seal hereto affixed at Sacramento, this 1st day of December, in the year of our Lord 1950.

EARL WARREN,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] FRANK M. JORDAN,
Secretary of State.
By CHAS. J. HAGERTY,
Deputy Secretary of State.

Mr. MUNDT presented the credentials of FRANCIS CASE, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of South Dakota, a Senator from that State, for the term beginning January 3, 1951, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR.

CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November, 1950, FRANCIS CASE was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of South Dakota a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of 6 years, beginning on the 3d day of January 1951.

Witness: His Excellency, our Governor, George T. Mickelson, and our seal hereto affixed at Pierre, this 7th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1950.

GEORGE T. MICKELSON,
Governor.

By the Governor:
Attest:
[SEAL] ANNAMAE RIIFF,
Secretary of State.

Mr. LEAHY presented the credentials of JOHN O. PASTORE, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Rhode Island, a Senator from that State, for the unexpired term ending January 2, 1953, which were read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Providence.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November 1950, JOHN O. PASTORE, was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Rhode Island a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the unexpired term of 6 years, ending on the 2d of January 1953.

Witness: His Excellency, our Governor, and our seal hereto affixed at Providence this 11th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1950.

JOHN O. PASTORE,
Governor.

By the Governor:
[SEAL] ARMOND H. COTE,
Secretary of State.

MEMORIALS

Memorials were laid before the Senate, and referred as indicated:

By the ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore:

Two telegrams in the nature of memorials from the Knights of Columbus of Escanaba, Mich., signed by Alex St. Cyr, and the Fourth Degree Assembly, Knights of Columbus of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., signed by John P. LaBlanc, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing financial assistance to Yugoslavia; ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

S. 4235. A bill to authorize the transfer to the Vermont Agricultural College of certain lands in Addison County, Vt., for agricultural purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2625).

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

H. R. 8349. A bill to authorize deductions from the wages of seamen for payment into employee welfare funds; with an amendment (Rept. No. 2628);

H. R. 8851. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer by quitclaim deed to the Brown's Point Improvement Club a portion of a small strip of land at Coast Guard light station facility, Brown's Point, Pierce County, Wash., and to transfer by quitclaim deed the remaining portion of such strip to the county of Pierce, State of Washington; without amendment (Rept. No. 2629); and

H. R. 9681. A bill to authorize the waiver of the navigation and vessel-inspection laws; without amendment (Rept. No. 2630).

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. 4069. A bill for the relief of Edulji Dinshaw and his sister, Mrs. Bachoo Dinsha Woronzow; without amendment (Rept. No. 2631).

INTERIM REPORT ON CERTAIN PERISHABLE AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES (REPT. NO. 2626)

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I submit, pursuant to Senate Resolution 173, Eighty-first Congress, an interim report on the present status of certain perishable agricultural commodities under the supervision, management, and control of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and ask that the report be printed.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the report will be received and printed.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. May I inquire of the Senator from Oklahoma whether or not he expects to try to bring up the bill (H. R. 9313) upon which the report is based?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The committee held a meeting this morning, and it was practically agreed that it would not ask, as a committee, that the bill be brought up. The bill is on the calendar. However, so far as I know, no member of the committee will ask that the bill be brought up.

Mr. LUCAS. I merely wished to get that information for the RECORD.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished majority leader if that means that the bill will not be brought up for consideration this afternoon.

Mr. LUCAS. No; it will not be brought up for consideration this afternoon.

COMPETITIVE FREIGHT ABSORPTION—REPORT OF A COMMITTEE (REPT. NO. 2627)

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, I submit a report on the status of competitive freight absorption, and request that it be printed.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the report will be received and printed, as requested by the Senator from Colorado.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. KEM:

S. 4251. A bill for the relief of Yee Kee Lam; and

S. 4252. A bill for the relief of Stela S. Ransier; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 4253. A bill for the relief of Mark Yoke Loon and Mark Seep Ming; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 9832) to remove marketing penalties on certain long-staple cotton was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED AND NATIONAL DEFENSE—STATEMENT BY GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL

[Mr. DOUGLAS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement on the subject The Physically Handicapped and National Defense, by Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense, which appears in the Appendix.]

HOLY CITY—EDITORIAL FROM THE WASHINGTON POST

[Mr. BREWSTER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Holy City," published in the Washington Post for December 8, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

TIME FOR UNITY—EDITORIAL FROM THE WASHINGTON POST

[Mr. MCMAHON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Time for Unity," published in the Washington Post of December 9, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

USE OF TAX MONEY—EDITORIAL FROM THE OIL CITY DERRICK

[Mr. MARTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "It's Fun To Spend," published in the Oil City Derrick, of Oil City, Pa., December 9, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

A NOTE ON WARS—EDITORIAL BY W. L. WHITE

[Mr. SCHOEPPEL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "A Note on Wars," written by W. L. White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, which appears in the Appendix.]

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I wish to speak very briefly and state the reasons why I shall oppose the pending bill.

It seems to me that a case has not been made that the increase in concentration is due to the acquisition of assets. This matter brings up a principle to which I am devoted and to which I will remain devoted until I see reasons for changing my devotion. I refer to the principle that no bills should be introduced and no laws enacted unless they are necessary. I fail to see that the necessity for this proposed law has been proved.

The other point on which I wish to speak just as briefly is the argument that the bill is in support of small business. When we consider the vast number of small businesses, amounting to a large percentage, which have to go out of business for one reason or another, there begins to appear an interest on the part of small business in the ability to sell out, instead of having to have a complete liquidation of assets under unfavorable conditions. Thus, the selling out of small interests to a larger concern—not necessarily one of the giants of industry, but perhaps a large concern for the particular area—is one of the things which should be protected from the small-business standpoint.

For these reasons, Mr. President—first, because I am opposed to the extension of laws or the multiplying of laws for the purpose of simply having more laws; and, second, for the reason that the market for small businesses should not be impaired by putting obstacles in their way, as this proposed law would seem to me to do, I oppose the passage of this bill.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, let me inquire of the Senator from Maryland whether he is ready to proceed at this time.

Mr. O'CONOR. Several Senators who have expressed a desire to speak are not quite ready. If it is agreeable to the Senator from Missouri for him to proceed now, it will be appreciated if he will do so.

Mr. DONNELL. Very well.

Mr. President, let me ask how much time we have.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri has 37 minutes remaining. The rest of the time belongs to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I yield to myself 25 minutes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri is recognized for 25 minutes.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, the purpose of this bill, as stated in the report of the majority of the committee, is—

> To prevent corporations from acquiring another corporation by means of the acquisition of its assets, where under the present law it is prohibited from acquiring the stock of said corporation.

The Senator from Vermont has referred to the question of whether adequate proof has been presented to indicate that acquisitions of assets of corporations are responsible for the increase in economic concentration. That matter was referred to yesterday in the course of the address made by the Senator from Maryland, and particularly by the citation on my part of the various views submitted by Doctors John Lintner and J. Keith Butters on the effect of mergers on industrial concentrations, which views appear in an article in the February 1950 issue of the Review of Economics and Statistics.

It is not my purpose this afternoon to go further into this question of fact, upon which complicated inquiries obviously are necessary, and upon which the charts which have been presented here by those who favor the bill indicate by their very nature something of the complexity of the questions of fact involved.

I desire to address myself primarily to the effect of the Sherman Act upon assets acquisitions. I submit most respectfully to the Senate that the Sherman Act already makes illegal such assets acquisitions as shall tend to create a monopoly in any section of the country or as shall have the effect of substantially lessening competition in any such section.

The Sherman Act contains, among its provisions, these two:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy—

I emphasize by my voice the word "or," because it obviously indicates something which may differ from the contract or combination previously mentioned.

I repeat:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal—

Second:

> Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Mr. President, I have stated that the Sherman Act already makes illegal such assets acquisitions as shall tend to create a monopoly in any section of the country, or as shall have the effect of substantially lessening competition in any such section. I submit that the two quotations which I have made from the Sherman Act amply justify the statement which I have made.

The case of United States against Steel Co. and others, Three hundred and thirty-fourth United States Reports, page 495, is a suit brought by the United States to enjoin the United States Steel Corp. and its subsidiaries from purchasing the assets—note "the assets"—of the largest independent steel fabricator on the west coast, on the ground that such acquisition would violate sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. Although the proof adduced by the Government failed in that suit to prove its contention that the acquisition of Consolidated—that is, of its assets—would unreasonably lessen competition in the respects charged, and consequently the Court held that the proposed contract was not forbidden by section 1 of the Sherman Act, it is nevertheless obvious that the Court accepted the proposition that the sale of assets, if an unreasonable lessening of competition were proved, would be illegal under section 1 of the Sherman Act. In this connection attention is called to the language of the Court at pages 507 and 508 that—

> On the record before us and in agreement with the trial court we conclude that the Government has failed to prove its contention that the acquisition of Consolidated would unreasonably lessen competition in the three respects charged, and therefore the proposed contract is not forbidden by section 1 of the Sherman Act.

In said case of United States v. Steel Company and others (334 U. S., L. C. 527), the Court says, with respect to the acquisition of competitors in identical or similar lines of merchandise—the case being, as previously indicated, one in which the purchase of assets was involved—

> If such acquisition results in or is aimed at unreasonable restraint, then the purchase is forbidden by the Sherman Act.

By reason of the use by the court of the term "unreasonable restraint," it is obvious that the provision of the Sherman Act by which the court considered that said purchase would be forbidden is section 1, which declares to be illegal every contract, and so forth, "in restraint of trade."

Mr. President, in my opinion the provision of said section 1 of the Sherman Act declaring illegal every contract, and so forth, "in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations" includes, within its scope, any tendency of an assets acquisition to substantially lessen, hinder, or suppress competition.

In Shotkin v. General Electric Company and others (171 Fed. (2d) 236, U. S. C. A., 10th Cir., decided December 2, 1948) the defendants were charged under sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, and 15 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. The court in that case, local citation 23, said:

> But regardless of the intent of the parties, if the inherent tendency of the combination, agreement, or concert is substantially to lessen, hinder, or suppress competition in the channels of the trade or commerce, it comes within the sweep of the act. (Fashion Originators' Guild v. Federal Trade Commission (312 U. S. 457, 668 [468], 61 S. Ct. 703, 85 L. Ed. 949).)

Mr. President, the reason for my opinion that the Court in the language so quoted, is referring not to section 2 of the Sherman Act, which is the section relative to monopolization, but to section 1, the section which relates to contracts, combinations, or conspiracies in restraint of trade, was set forth yesterday in the RECORD through an insertion which I made at page 16439; and I shall not go further into that reason.

Mr. President, I have thus indicated the applicability of the Sherman Act to such assets acquisitions as shall tend to create a monopoly in any section of the country, or as shall have the effect of substantially lessening competition in any such section. I desire to call attention to the fact that the pending bill, H. R. 2734, contains language, however, which is not in the Sherman Act. It will be recalled from what I have read that the Sherman Act is positive. It declares every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, to be illegal. The bill, H. R. 2734, however, injects, as I see it, an element of uncertainty, to which I call the attention of the Senate. The bill provides that—> may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

> No corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, wherein any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition—

I emphasize the next two words by my voice—

The Sherman Act is itself clear and definite. The bill is clouded by the uncertainty of the quoted language.

The Senator from Wyoming, who spoke yesterday on the subject of this bill, in the Eighty-first Congress, first session, made certain observations in connection with the bill, S. 1008, and those observations of his are, I think, in point in connection with the use of the words "may be" in H. R. 2734. I call attention to the fact that at page 11344 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Eighty-first Congress, first session, we are informed, at pages 166 and following, of the hearings on H. R. 2734, that the Senator from Wyoming said this:

> Mr. President, the difference between the word "will" and the word "may" is almost as great as the distinction between the poles. Under the Kefauver amendment, this law will read, if it is enacted—and I hope it will be—that delivered prices or freight absorption independently practiced by an industrialist are not in violation of the Clayton Act unless they will have the effect of violating the antitrust laws. I prefer the word "will" to the word "may" because, if we use the word "may," no one under the sun can tell what the law means, because "may" conveys into the hands of some future Federal Trade Commission the power to hold that these two practices to be illegal, although the Federal Trade Commission now say they are not illegal. That is all in the world that this bill proposes to do. * * *
>
> What more can Senators ask? Do Senators wish to go beyond that and say, "We are not satisfied with the requirement that there will not be injury to competition. We want something more. We want the Federal Trade Commission to be able to say, 'Well, perhaps there is no present injury but perhaps there may be some injury in the future.'"

So, Mr. President, with his usual clarity and graphic power of statement, the Senator from Wyoming, in his comments on the difference between the word "will" and the words "may be," in his discussion of Senate bill 1008, comes to the conclusion that—

> If we use the words "may be," no one under the sun can tell what the law means.

Mr. President, the uncertainty of meaning in the pending bill, where it is declared to be prohibited that any corporation shall acquire these assets, when, in any line of commerce in any section of the country, "the effect of such acquisition may be to substantially lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly," I say that the uncertainty of meaning which results from the use of the words "may be" may seriously interfere with or even destroy the market for a small business. We realize, I think as matter of senatorial notice, if "judicial notice" is not the proper expression, the difficulty of selling a business nowadays to a person who is not already engaged in the same type of business and the consequent practical necessity, in many cases, that if a particular owner of a business desires to dispose of his business he must sell it either to a corporation or other company already operating in the same line, or not sell it at all. Yet, under this bill, the purchaser of the assets finds that the purchase which he has made will be illegal and can be divested if the effect of such acquisition "may be" substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly.

I take it to be clear that it would deter purchasers from investing their money in the purchase of assets when they are confronted with the possibility of determining, in view of this language, whether the acquisition of the assets will or will not be ultimately held to have been invalid.

So, Mr. President, from the standpoint of the proposed seller of the assets, I take it that this bill, by interposing this vagueness, this uncertainty by the use of the words "may be," is injecting something which may be of very great injury to the owner of a small business who desires to sell, but finds that the purchaser is fearful of the outcome of the purchase because of the difficulty of knowing whether the purchase will or will not be valid after it is concluded.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DONNELL. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I was curious to know whether the words "may be" have not been at least interpreted by the courts in many cases. It was my impression that the court, in the Morton Salt Co. case, had occasion to interpret the words "may be." Therefore, are we not probably going to make it much more difficult than it already is?

Mr. DONNELL. I assure the Senator that I had, a little further on in my remarks, intended to and shall discuss the very case to which he refers, namely, the Morton Salt Co. case, and one or two other cases along that line.

I wish to say that this fear, this apprehension, this possibility of an impediment in the way of selling a business is not a mere fanciful one; at least, it is not so regarded by some of the witnesses who appeared before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate.

I referred yesterday to the testimony of Mr. James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, Chicago, Ill. Mr. Donnelly testified, at page 294 of the hearings, as follows:

> The Illinois Manufacturers' Association embraces approximately 4,000 member firms. The members of the association include industries of all sizes, large, small, and middle sized, engaged in a wide variety of production.
>
> However, the great majority of the members of the IMA are small. Thirty percent employ less than 20 persons; 40 percent less than 50 persons; 60 percent less than 100 persons; and 70 percent less than 200 persons.
>
> The Illinois Manufacturers' Association, therefore, in fact speaks for the small manufacturing industries in Illinois. The manufacturers in our State, large and small, are opposed to this measure.
>
> We believe the situation in Illinois with reference to the sizes toward this legislation is typical of the situation that prevails in other industrial States.
>
> This measure, now pending consideration in the United States Senate, would amend section 7 of the Clayton Act so as to prohibit not only stock acquisitions but also the acquisition by one corporation of any part of the assets of another where "in any line of commerce in any section of the country" the effect may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.
>
> In other words, the bill would forbid any corporation no matter how small that it is engaged in commerce, no matter in how small a degree, to acquire any assets of another corporation, no matter how small, where, in any line of commerce, no matter how small, in any section of the country, no matter how small, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, no matter in how small a degree.

The Illinois Manufacturers' Association is opposed to this measure.

Mr. President, I should like at this point in my argument to read what Mr. Donnelly said with respect to one of the reasons why his organization opposes this proposed legislation. He said, at page 295 of the hearings:

The second reason why we oppose this legislation is that the measure would injure small business. This measure represents, in substance, a renewal of the effort that has been made for years to induce Congress to so amend the antitrust laws that the opportunities of small companies to sell their businesses would, in effect, be restricted.

This measure, in effect, is based upon the premise that business development results only from the building of new plants, facilities, et cetera, and that such development should never follow the lawful acquisition of the assets of a competitive company.

This philosophy is particularly unfortunate in its application to thousands of smaller business firms.

Frequently a small business, on account of Government taxation policies, internal difficulties, business conditions, death, ill health, age, and many other sound considerations, is required to sell its assets, and in many cases, the only market for such sale is among competitors. This measure would, in effect, prevent the sale of said assets to a competitor.

The measure would, in effect, freeze the assets of many small business firms and prevent their expansion or further development. This result, of course, would be directly contrary to the expressed intention of the advocates of the measure, i. e., to protect small business against larger concerns.

Mr. President, I shall quote also from the testimony of Mrs. Katherine Parsons, Associate Director of the Employers Advisory Division, Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association. When testifying before the subcommittee, she stated:

As the venture capital of individuals becomes scarcer, small- and medium-sized corporations faced with the necessity of selling found that the markets for their businesses were restricted to some larger corporation, usually a competitor.

It is an indisputable fact that this legislation—

She was speaking of House bill 2734—

will now remove this principal remaining market for small- and medium-size businesses in the event that sale becomes necessary. The physical properties would have to be disposed of piecemeal at salvage prices. The good will and reputation that the company may have built up over the years would bring in nothing to the stockholders.

Mr. President, the Commerce and Industry Association of New York, Inc., in a memorandum which is printed in the hearings before the subcommittee, stated:

The small corporate business is usually a family enterprise, or a so-called closed corporation; in either case the stock is closely held by relatively few individuals. Personal incentive and ability are the principal ingredients for its success; and in the absence of extreme, pressing circumstances the small business is not bought or sold. The factors motivating such sales are quickly enumerated; death or illness or the retirement of a principal shareholder, bad business conditions in the face of small operating capital, personal or immediate tax problems, are the ones most frequently responsible.

When small business runs afoul of such circumstances, the only market usually available is among competitors in the same field. This bill would forbid competitors to purchase, and a small business would find it was unable to offer itself as a going concern to the highest bidder; virtually, it would of necessity be disposed of as at a forced sale; good will and the repute it may have earned as a going business would be lost to its stockholders.

Mr. President, there was brought to my office this morning, entirely without solicitation on my part, a letter dated December 12, 1950, on the letterhead of National Milk Producers' Federation. I should like to read the letter into the RECORD. It is as follows:

NATIONAL MILK PRODUCERS FEDERATION,
Washington, D. C., December 12, 1950.

The Honorable FORREST C. DONNELL,
The Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR DONNELL: For several years the National Milk Producers Federation has been deeply concerned over various legislative proposals which would hamper or interfere with the development and expansion of business concerns, including farmers' cooperatives. At the thirty-fourth annual convention of the federation, held in Minneapolis, Minn., in November 1950, the voting delegates reiterated by resolution our position with respect to this matter. The following resolution was adopted:

"We are opposed to legislation which would prevent the normal development of any business by restricting it in the acquisition of the assets of other corporations or businesses."

In line with the above resolution, we desire to register our opposition to the bill H. R. 2734 now under consideration by the Senate. We wish to make clear that we do not sanction monopolies, and sound and effective legislation designed to prevent monopolistic control, whether by industry, labor, or agriculture, will receive our support. However, in our opinion, H. R. 2734, worthy as its objectives may be, does not, among other things, contain clear and definite provisions which will permit the normal expansion of business.

Your leadership in opposing the proposed legislation is very much appreciated by the membership of our federation.

Very truly yours,

CHARLES W. HOLMAN,
Secretary, National Milk Producers Federation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The 25 minutes which the Senator had allotted to himself have expired.

Mr. DONNELL. I believe I have 12 minutes remaining.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. DONNELL. I allow myself five additional minutes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DONNELL. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] inquired in regard to the construction placed upon the word "may" by the courts. That involves a very interesting situation, as is disclosed in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. In my minority views I have mentioned the decisions to which the Senator from Louisiana refers.

Mr. President, the fact is that the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Company (334 U. S. 37, at page 46) said:

The statute requires no more than that the effect of the prohibited price discriminations "may be substantially to lessen competition. * * * or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition." After a careful consideration of this provision of the Robinson-Patman Act, we have said that "the statute does not require that the discriminations must in fact have harmed competition, but only that there is a reasonable possibility that they 'may' have such an effect."

The Supreme Court then cites Corn Products Co. v. Federal Trade Commission (324 U. S. 726, 742, and refers to note 14). In note 14 the Court states:

This language is to be read also in the light of the following statement in the same case, discussing the meaning of section 2 (a), as contained in the Robinson-Patman Act, in relation to section 3 of the Clayton Act:

"It is to be observed that section 2 (a) does not require a finding that the discriminations in price have in fact had an adverse effect on competition. The statute is designed to reach such discriminations 'in their incipiency,' before the harm to competition is effected. It is enough that they 'may' have the prescribed effect."

The Court then cites the case of Standard Fashion Co. v. Magrane-Houston Co. (258 U. S. 346, 356–357).

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DONNELL. I am afraid I shall have to be excused from yielding at this point.

Mr. KEFAUVER. I should like to ask only one brief question if I may. If there was any confusion as a result of the Morton Salt Co. case concerning the use of the word "may," was that not entirely clarified by the Supreme Court in the case of Standard Oil Co. against the United States?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I shall answer the Senator by quoting from that case. I shall continue to quote from the Morton Salt Co. case at page 46. Note 14 continues:

"But as was held in the Standard Fashion case, supra, with respect to the like provisions of section 3 of the Clayton Act, prohibiting tying clause agreements, the effect of which 'may be to substantially lessen competition,' the use of the word 'may' was not to prohibit discriminations having 'the mere possibility' of those consequences, but to reach those which would probably have the defined effect on competition."

In the Standard Oil case, to which the Senator from Tennessee has referred, the Court says, in Three Hundred and Thirty-seventh United States Reports 293, at page 300:

The Standard Fashion case, the first of the five holding that the act had been violated, settled one question of interpretation of section 3. The Court said:

"Section 3 condemns sales or agreements where the effect of such sale or contract of sale 'may' be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create monopoly * * * But we do not think that the purpose in using the word 'may' was to prohibit the mere possibility of the consequences described. It was intended to prevent such agreements as would under the circumstances disclosed probably lessen competition or create an actual tendency to monopoly" (258 U. S. at 356–57). See also Federal Trade Commission v. Morton Salt Co. (334 U. S. 37, 46, note 14).

The Morton Salt Co. case, as will be recalled, is the one in which the Corn Products case is cited to the effect that "the statute does not require that the discriminations must in fact have harmed competition, but only that there is a reasonable possibility that they 'may' have such an effect."

The note which I read indicates that "the use of the word 'may' was not to prohibit discriminations having 'the mere possibility' of those consequences, but to reach those which would probably have the defined effect on competition."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McMAHON in the chair). The additional time which the Senator has allotted to himself has expired.

Mr. DONNELL. I yield myself the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for seven additional minutes.

Mr. DONNELL. I take it that under this state of the decisions it is difficult to determine what is the meaning of the word "may" as defined by the Supreme Court. In Standard Oil Company of California against United States the Court quotes from the Standard Fashion Co. case, which is mentioned in note 14 to the Morton Salt Co. case, which Standard Fashion case used the word "probably." But the Court, in the Standard Oil case, also refers to the Morton Salt case, which is later than the Standard Fashion case, which Morton Salt case quotes the Corn Products case in the use of the term "reasonable possibility."

It may be, Mr. President, and I am inclined to think it is true, that the word "may" probably does not have the meaning of "mere possibility" but may mean either the "reasonable possibility" or, at most, the "probability" under "the circumstances disclosed." I think it is true that this is the probability as to what the word "may" means, namely, either "reasonable possibility," or at most, the "probability" under "the circumstances disclosed." However, the point I make is that obviously it will, prior to final adjudication, be in many specific cases difficult if not impossible to be certain whether or not the effect of a specific acquisition of assets may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly.

This uncertainty is what, to my mind, is reasonably to be expected to cause injury to the owners of a business who may desire to dispose of such business.

The Sherman Act, to which I have referred, is not limited to the punishment of consummated violations. It will be recalled that injunctions under section 4 of the Sherman Act will lie. It will also be recalled, Mr. President, that yesterday in the course of the debate I referred to Mr. Montague, who testified before our subcommittee as to what the Sherman Act is today construed to mean. Mr. Montague was referred to by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] as a very good lawyer. On this point Mr. Montague testified:

> Today that act empowers the Attorney General to apply to the court for an injunction ab initio, or criminal sentence, or divestiture decree in respect of any economic concentration, be it existing or incipient, whether a person, firm, or corporation, or group of them, which has power to raise prices, or to exclude competition, in any section of the country, even though it is only incipient, and never exercises such power.

Mr. President, I had intended to quote from the American Tobacco Co. case, a good portion of which is set forth at page 14 in my minority views, but the time is too short for me to have the opportunity to do so. I may say that the quotation set forth in the report from the American Tobacco Co. case refers to section 2 of the Sherman Act. Nevertheless, to my mind, the same reasoning applies with respect to section 1. The general point is to quote from the American Tobacco Co. case, Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth United States Reports, page 781:

> A correct interpretation of the statute and of the authorities makes it the crime of monopolizing, under section 2 of the Sherman Act, for parties, as in these cases, to combine or conspire to acquire or maintain the power to exclude competitors from any part of the trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, provided they also have such a power that they are able, as a group, to exclude actual or potential competition from the field, and provided that they have the intent and purpose to exercise that power. (See United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. (310 U. S. 150, 226, note 59) and authorities cited.)

At page 810 the Court states:

> Neither proof of exertion of the power to exclude nor proof of actual exclusion of existing or potential competitors is essential to sustain a charge of monopolization under the Sherman Act.

In Fashion Originators Guild v. Federal Trade Commission (312 U. S. 457) the decision is to similar effect.

Mr. President, I desire to close my remarks today by referring to the point made yesterday by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] to the effect that I had taken two positions that appeared to be quite irreconcilable. May I inquire how much time I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Three minutes.

Mr. DONNELL. On page 16452 of the RECORD the Senator from Tennessee points out that one of the positions I take is that the bill is unnecessary, since the Sherman Act already makes unlawful asset acquisitions which tend to create a monopoly or have the effect of substantially lessening competition, and that the second position I have taken is that the bill would produce harmful effects by introducing new elements of uncertainty into the law, so that businessmen would be unable to determine in advance whether a proposed acquisition would be illegal.

The Senator from Tennessee concludes with this observation:

> Certainly, if the bill does no more than confer upon the Federal Trade Commission the same jurisdiction over the subject matter which now rests with the Attorney General under the Sherman Act, no new uncertainty will be introduced into the law by the proposed legislation.

There is no irreconcilability between the two positions which I take. It is true that the Sherman Act already makes unlawful asset acquisitions which tend to create a monopoly or which have the effect of substantially lessening competition. It is likewise true that the bill itself, House bill 2734, by introducing the words "may be," with the obvious uncertainty as to their meaning, does have the effect of introducing new elements of uncertainty into the law.

As the situation is today, the courts, under the Sherman Act, can in advance prevent by injunction the consummation of any transaction of the nature described which tends to create monopoly or which has the effect of substantially lessening competition. The effect of the bill is not only to introduce into the law uncertainty as to what asset acquisitions may be illegal and what may be legal; but, in addition, it gives to an administrative body, the Federal Trade Commission, the power which could be and should be exercised by a court.

So, Mr. President, I submit, in the first place, that the Sherman law at this time provides adequate remedy to cover the situation. I submit that there is strong reason in the minds of many persons who believe that the passage of this bill would be, as Mr. Donnelly, of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, and others have testified, an interference with small business in the sale of businesses.

I submit that the language of Mr. Holman, of the Milk Producers Federation, is highly persuasive and should be borne in mind by the Senate.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I yield 15 minutes to the able junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER].

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, the concluding observation of the distinguished Senator from Missouri was to the effect that the passage of this bill was unnecessary because the Department of Justice already has the power, under the Sherman Antitrust Act, to secure an injunction in advance of a merger, in the event that it would result in monopoly.

The latest statement of the law as to what constitutes monopoly, per se, under the Sherman Act is contained in the decision of the special court which was established to hear the Aluminum Co. case, owing to the fact that several members of the Supreme Court had been officials of the Department of Justice and therefore had to disqualify themselves. In its decision, which I understand, in substance, at least, has been approved by the Supreme Court in later decisions, the Court held that if one company held 33⅓ percent control of the business in a particular line or industry, the Sherman Act would not be violated by that fact alone; that if it held 66 percent control, the Sherman Act might or might not be violated, depending upon the circumstances; and that, if it held 90 percent control, the act would definitely be violated.

I think we must all concede that somewhere before we reach the point of 90 percent control by a single company, we have a duty to perform, if we are to preserve the free enterprise system and retain some kind of competition in our economy. We simply cannot afford to wait until one corporation has a 90-percent control, or even a 66-percent control. Yet, that is what we are required to do under the most recent announcement or finding by the Supreme Court as to what constitutes monopolization.

When the Columbia Steel case was first brought and was pending, I remember very distinctly that the distinguished lawyer to whom the Senator from Missouri referred, Mr. Gilbert Montague—who is indeed a very capable lawyer and has been most effective in contesting this bill over a period of many years—based his argument against this bill on the ground that the Department of Justice has wisely brought the Columbia Steel case, and that if the position of the Department of Justice prevailed in that case—as he was sure it would—the problem of monopolistic mergers could be adequately taken care of by the Sherman Act, thus making unnecessary the passage of this bill.

Of course, as we all know, when the Department of Justice lost the Columbia Steel case, that argument lost its force, particularly since the merger involved represented a very substantial acquisition with a substantial effect upon competition. I believe that if section 7 of the Clayton Act had been amended as the pending bill proposes, the acquisition which was made by the United States Steel Corp. in that case would not have been permitted.

The second point made by the distinguished Senator from Missouri is in connection with the use of the word "may" or "will." It is true that the Morton Salt Co. case resulted in some confusion as to just what the term "may be" meant, and that there the Supreme Court may have approached the "possibility" definition. However, any argument on that point has been very definitely settled by the later and subsequent decision of the Supreme Court in Standard Oil Company of California v. United States (337 U. S.). As has been stated by the distinguished Senator from Missouri, in that case the Supreme Court said:

> But we do not think that the purpose in using the word "may" was to prohibit the mere possibility of the consequences described. It was intended to prevent such agreements as would, under the circumstances disclosed, probably lessen competition or create an actual tendency to monopoly.

The Senator from Missouri seemed to think that by virtue of the fact that following this quotation the opinion said "See also Federal Trade Commission against Morton Salt Co.," the court referred back to the Morton Salt Co. case in such a way as to approve the language in the Morton Salt Co. case; but I believe that since the opinion does not say that the court approves the Morton Salt Co. case, and since it lays down another rule—the old rule of probability—the statement "See also Federal Trade Commission against Morton Salt Co." is included merely for the benefit of lawyers who may wish to compare the definitions by the court in those two decisions. Hence, I do not think there can be any doubt as to what the term "may be," as used in this bill, means. It has been a part of the Clayton Act, of course, since it was passed in 1914. But I think the distinguished Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR] in the majority report very wisely stated the legislative intent. Consequently, there cannot possibly be any misunderstanding as to what the words "may be" mean. That expression of the legislative intent will be found on page 6 of the report, under the heading "The scope of the words 'may be'":

> The use of these words means that the bill, if enacted, would not apply to the mere possibility but only to the reasonable probability of the prescribed effect, as determined by the Commission in accord with the Administrative Procedure Act.

This is followed by additional language to the same effect. Yesterday the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY], and also the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER], raised a point which I think should be very definitely answered at this time. These two Senators suggested that some mergers may be desirable during the industrial mobilization period and that this bill might stand in the way. Their point is, as I understand it, that some concerns that would otherwise be squeezed out may, by merging with other firms, be in a better position to get war business and the scarce materials necessary for the war business. One of the principal reasons why this bill is needed right now rests on this very point, in my opinion. The point of the bill is to protect business concerns—and particularly the smaller firms—from the very squeeze which forces them to merge in order to get war business. Our history plainly shows that every war period this country has ever been through has resulted in a great increase in concentration of industry. One might think that the great expansions of industrial capacity which have always taken place in the periods of defense mobilization would provide the opportunity for just the reverse tendency. One might think that such rapid expansions of productive capacity would provide an opportunity for the creation of new business firms and for the growth of small business; but just the opposite has always been true.

One of the reasons why increased concentration of industry has always come about in such periods is that war, and the preparation for war, inadvertently creates shortages of many of the basic industrial materials. Most of our basic industrial materials—steel, aluminum, copper, and a host of others outside of agriculture—are controlled by highly concentrated industries. A relatively few giant corporations are able to determine which buyers shall have essential materials and how much. Consequently, these large corporations are in a strategic and, I might add, a very tempting position, to starve out buyers for the purpose of taking them over. The industrial mobilization program does not in any way reduce the necessity for this bill. On the contrary the industrial mobilization program makes the bill even more necessary than it would be if there were no industrial mobilization and no shortages of basic industrial materials.

I should like to call attention to some of our merger experiences during the World War II period. During this period the big steel companies took over virtually one entire steel fabricating industry—namely, the steel drum industry. The steel drum industry, incidentally, is one in which the steel corporations had had no interest at all prior to World War II. This is what Iron Age, the recognized voice of the steel industry had to say about the steel drum industry:

> Long, long ago, in 1939, before the words "postwar" and "planning" were wedded, the manufacture of heavy steel barrels and drums was a rather volatile business firmly in the hands of a large number of highly individualist entrepreneurs. Most of these fabricators had started on a precarious shoestring and were justifiably vocal in their pride of success in the classical Horatio Alger pluck and luck tradition.

First, I might point out that prior to around 1930 the major steel producers confined their operations to the manufacture of the basic steel shapes and forms. They had gained control of the various processes in the manufacture of steel back through iron ore and the various raw materials, but they had not moved forward to acquire their customers, the small fabricators of steel.

I should like to quote an eminent authority on corporation finance on this point. This is a quotation from Prof. E. S. Mead, who in 1930 published a book called Corporation Finance. Professor Mead stated:

> Vertical consolidation in the steel industry stopped with the raw material of other industries. The steel corporation sells its products to machine-tool builders, building erectors, automobile manufacturers, manufacturers of agricultural machinery, railroads, public utilities, and a variety of other industries which use steel as raw material of their operations. The steel corporation has not, however, gone into these industries either to own or operate. It stops short at the line of rails, sheets, plates, billets, wire, and structural shapes.

Hardly had this book been published, however, when the steel industry began to edge forward into the fabricating fields to acquire smaller independent manufacturers. For example, in 1930, the United States Steel Corp. purchased the Oil Well Supply Co., one of the largest established organizations in its field. In 1936, United States Steel bought out the Virginia Bridge Co., formerly one of its principal customers for structural steel. Bethelehem Steel also undertook to follow this trend of buying into the fabricating field around this time. In 1931, it purchased the McClintic-Marshall Corp., a firm which was fully equipped for the construction of bridges, tanks, river barges, and so forth. Republic also got into the fabricating fields by purchasing, for example, the Nile Steel Products Co., one of the Nation's largest producers of steel containers.

During World War II, and in the shortage period following, the steel producers held the power of life and death over fabricators. In this period of shortages they could determine whether or not they would ship steel to a particular fabricator. When a steel corporation had designs on a particular fabricator, or when such fabricators happened to be in the same business as one of the steel companies' own subsidiaries, naturally he stood a poor chance of getting steel. Terrific pressures were brought upon independent fabricators, either to join up with one of the giant steel producers, or face the alternative of doing without essential materials.

The large steel producers had a double motive in exerting such pressure; they could make greater wartime profits by channeling their steel into their own fabricating subsidiaries and they could prepare themselves for a postwar market, and its high profits, by bringing pressure on the independent fabricators to become part of their organization.

This is not theory. It is actual experience. Let us not assume that the large steel companies were so busy turning out steel for the war effort that they did not step out and acquire other companies.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield me five more minutes?

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I am very happy to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized for five more minutes.

Mr. KEFAUVER. The war emergency was no reason for them to stop expanding by the merger process. Let me cite some of the acquisitions made by United States Steel Corp. In the field of steel drums, United States Steel Corp. in 1943 bought the Petroleum Iron Works; in 1944 it bought the Bennett Manufacturing Co. As a result of these two mergers, plus an earlier merger with Boyle Manufacturing Co., Inc., in 1939, the United States Steel Corp. became the country's largest producer of steel drums. United States Steel Corp. now owns nearly 25 percent of all the steel drum fabricating capacity in the United States. It is the largest fabricator of steel drums on the Pacific coast, in the Houston region, and in the New Orleans area; and it is one of the leading producers in the Chicago and Cleveland-Pittsburgh areas.

United States Steel's war and postwar acquisitions of steel fabricators have not, of course, been confined to the steel-drum business. Here are a few examples of the previously independent steel customers who have been acquired by the steel corporations. These include two oil-well-machinery producers, the Witte Engine Works, of Kansas City, Mo., merged in 1944, and the Neilson Pump, of Long Beach, Calif., merged in 1945. United States Steel also bought out the Savannah Wire Cloth Mills in 1940, and in 1943 purchased the assets of the Morse Steel Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., immediately following the war. Finally, United States Steel bought out one of the largest steel fabricator corporations in the country. This was the famous purchase of the Consolidated Steel Corp., a merger which the Supreme Court held could not be stopped by the Sherman Act. That is the merger referred to in the case I was discussing a little while ago.

The record on this bill and the voluminous reports issued by the Federal Trade Commission cite voluminous instances where the giant steel producers have been buying up their customers under the stress of shortages in basic materials.

No one has a better knowledge of the hardships wrought upon independent fabricators during this period of steel shortages than does the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY], who was chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee during the Eightieth Congress. The Senate Small Business Committee, under the chairmanship of the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, made a study and report on this problem. That report is entitled "Changes in the Distribution of Steel, 1940–1947." It contains the results of a survey covering the 14 largest steel companies in the country, and accounting for 85 percent of all the Nation's steel capacity. The report shows that when supplies of steel were short in 1947, the big steel corporations greatly increased the supplies of steel shipped to their own fabricating subsidiaries, and correspondingly reduced the amounts shipped to independent fabricators. I should like to quote a passage from the report submitted by the distinguished Senator from Nebraska. Referring to the increased allowances of steel made to the fabricating subsidiaries of these 14 big steel companies, the report states:

> The increase was much more pronounced in the case of those particular steel products which constitute the principal raw materials consumed by the fabricating companies that have been acquired—specifically, hot-rolled sheet, cold-rolled sheet, and hot-rolled strip * * * the proportions * * * [of their products] moving to fabricating subsidiaries roughly doubled between 1940 and 1947.

The report concluded:

> The substantial increase in the proportion of sheet steel flowing to fabricating subsidiaries does not necessarily mean that the old subsidiaries receive more than their historical quota permitted nor that the new subsidiaries obtained more than they would have secured as independent companies. But it does mean that the proportion of the Nation's output which moves within what might be called the closed circle of steel-company ownership has been significantly increased, a conclusion which is only an inevitable byproduct of the steel companies' recent acquisitions of fabricating companies.

In short, Mr. President, it is more important to stop the increase of monopolistic mergers during the mobilization period than at any other time. We must avoid the terrible hardships imposed on small, independent businesses during the recent war and postwar periods, when the giant corporations took advantage of the shortages to expand their empires. During periods of short supply the giant corporations will always favor their own fabricating subsidiaries, in preference to independent fabricators. They always keep an eye out for opportunities to buy up independent fabricators. Indeed, in the current mobilization period they are in a pivotal position to bring about more monopolistic mergers. This amendment to sections 7 and 11 of the Clayton Act will go a long way in stopping this monopolistic trend, and in making it possible for small, independent businesses to survive and prosper.

I yield back the remainder of my time, Mr. President.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I yield to the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] 5 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, the bill we are now considering is one of the more important bills which we have had before us at this session of Congress.

If enacted, the bill not only will be an instrument of the Federal Trade Commission in curbing monopolies, but, more important, it will evidence an intention on the part of the Congress to prevent monopolies.

That the concentration of business in the hands of a few persons has always been regarded as an evil is indicated by the enactment of the Clayton Act in 1914 and the enactment of the Sherman Act, which was passed by the Congress long before that time.

Although the Sherman Act serves as an instrument for breaking up monopolies or trusts, it did not suffice to prevent their organization. By means of the Clayton Act, the Congress sought to remedy that over-all defect. However, the Clayton Act has been found ineffective by reason of a Supreme Court decision validating a loophole which permits a strong corporation to acquire the assets of its smaller competitors, thereby achieving a virtual monopoly.

Mr. President, why is it so important that we find a way to prevent the concentration of business into a few hands? It is important for the same reason that it is important to prevent the concentration of political power. The United States already has gone too far along both those roads.

During the hearings, it was testified by Dr. Willford I. King, an opponent of this bill, that one-tenth of 1 percent of the corporations of the United States now control 49 percent of the total assets of all corporations. The concentration of political power in Washington has brought us to a point where there is grave doubt in the minds of many persons as to whether the United States can long survive as a first-rate Nation. The concentration of power, either economic or political, in the hands of a few persons is a breeder of weakness, discontent, and, finally, revolution.

Today we are fighting for the survival of democracy. For over a century, the United States has maintained a position as the citadel of democracy, because in this country more opportunities were open to more persons than anywhere else on earth. If we are to maintain our proud record as a democratic Nation and our position as a leader among nations, we must continue to maintain political and economic opportunity for our people.

All of us know too well what has happened in countries where opportunity has been vested in the hands of a few.

The result has been that either socialization or a totalitarian form of government has taken over, the middle classes have disappeared, and there have been left only a ruling class and a great mass of underprivileged people who seek to overthrow the ruling class at the first opportunity.

Today we are fighting communism. We have dispersed all over the earth our resources and our armed strength. We ought to know, and we do know, that communism is something which cannot be defeated by force of arms. It cannot be defeated solely by propaganda, no matter how good the propaganda may be. It can be defeated only by example. We can maintain democracy in the United States only by making democracy work here.

It is not a crime to desire monopoly. That is an inherent human urge. However, the effective maintenance of a democratic government requires that collectively we devise a means of keeping that urge, whether on the part of a group or on the part of an individual, within bounds.

If we cannot do this, if we permit economic monopolies to be formed, and permit the concentration of power in the hands of a few, with a resultant economic dependency on the part of the many, we shall have failed to maintain our example of democracy before the world.

That, Mr. President, is the reason why we must make every effort to strengthen and make effective the antimonopoly laws of the Nation.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON].

APPROPRIATIONS FOR PRODUCTION OF FISSIONABLE MATERIALS AND ATOMIC WEAPONS

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. President, from the standpoint of the security of this and the other nations of the free world, an action of paramount importance is pending before this concluding session of the Eighty-first Congress. I refer to action on the supplemental appropriations estimate for $17,850,000,000, sent to Congress by the President on December 1. All of the projects for bulwarking our military strength that are to be financed by our disposition of this request are important. None is of greater importance than the one for expansion of our capacity for producing fissionable materials and fabricating atomic weapons from them, which is included as an item of $1,050,000,000 in these estimates.

Action by the House of Representatives on this measure is imminent, and within a matter of days it will come before the Senate. I cannot state too strongly my view that full and speedy provision for this program is of the utmost urgency.

The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy has examined the detail of this program with the members and staff of the Atomic Energy Commission. For reasons of protecting military information, I cannot divulge the individual items of expenditure. I can say that it is a broad program, boldly conceived and carefully worked out—a program which is vitally necessary to the common defense and security. It offers the ways and means of keeping the lead which the Atomic Energy Commission, as steward for the American people, has maintained in the development and the making of more, newer, and more effective atomic weapons.

As has been the case at every step of the way in recent years, the Atomic Energy Commission, consulting with the military authorities and with the joint committee, has kept the plans as well as the performance of our atomic-energy project out ahead of the immediately apparent position. Future needs have been foreseen and the actions to provide for them have been planned out. I am proud to state that the joint committee has played a major role in this planning.

This is the third major program to come before us within the past 14 months for enlarging the production capacity of the enterprise. These plans were not formulated overnight—they could not be—in frantic reaction to the new evidences of Soviet desires to enslave the free world, or of Russian achievement in the atomic-weapons field. These plans have been under unremitting study, and, as they ripen, are brought forward. It is coincidence, not cause and effect, that they have come forward successively almost at once (1) after we learned that the Russians had exploded an atomic bomb in September of 1949; (2) after the June 1950 aggression by Russian satellite puppets in Korea; and (3) after the recent intervention in that same tortured land by the Communist Chinese in all-out force. We are fortunate that the management of our atomic enterprise has had the energy and the capacity to keep on with development at an accelerating pace and be ready with the plans necessary to arm us atomically for coping with the perils that press so hard against our liberties and our faith.

The program the Commission has now developed will enable us to enlarge our stocks of available uranium ore. This was the first requirement and one which had to be satisfied by months of advance planning. The program in another phase will add huge new plants for using the products of the ore to make fissionable materials—materials which can go into weapon shapes or into fuels for power-producing machines. In the present state of the world, we have no choice but to process these materials into weapon shapes as fast as they can be produced. To provide for this, a third phase of the program calls for new weapons production and storage facilities.

Why must we go full tilt into this expansion of our atomic energy production plant? Because of one thing and one thing only; because of the refusal of the Communist imperialists and their dupes to live and let live in a world of scores of sovereignties and diversities and mutual tolerance; because of their now all too plain determination to impose one sovereignty, one dogma, one monstrous, faceless set of ideas upon the family life, the daily work, and the spiritual beliefs of every last individual on this planet.

This we cannot accept. To avert it, we ourselves must needs move with speed to authorize the enlargement of our atomic energy program, and we must direct the executive branch to push forward continuously with the vigor displayed by the past record of the Atomic Energy Commission.

By following this path, we seize upon the best chance of a just peace. By refusing to appease, by showing our determination to remain free, we maximize our fervent hopes that atomic weapon shapes can some day be safely beaten into the parts and components of peaceful atomic reactors.

PREVENTION OF CORPORATIONS FROM ACQUIRING ANOTHER CORPORATION BY MEANS OF ACQUISITION OF ITS ASSETS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended.

Mr. O'CONOR. I yield myself the remaining time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I cannot conclude this discussion without paying tribute to the able senior Senator from Missouri, who, despite his opposition to the bill, has made a great contribution to the considerations involved in this debate, and, while he has in his characteristically earnest and intelligent manner interposed objections, I feel that he has assisted materially in bringing to light important facts bearing on the matter. For that reason, I think he is entitled to our appreciation.

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. O'CONOR. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. DONNELL. I greatly appreciate the comments of the Senator, and thank him for them.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, it is of course unnecessary to repeat the arguments which have been advanced and which have been repeated somewhat in the addresses made since this discussion was begun yesterday, but it may be in point merely to refer to a few additional facts. I wish particularly to call attention to the anomalous situation in our antitrust laws created by this loophole.

Market controls which would violate the antitrust laws if carried out by independent companies can today be practiced safely whenever one such company acquires the physical property of another. It is true that the Sherman Act and the Federal Trade Commission Act condemn attempts to control markets through mutual understanding or agreements among competitors, but if the same objective is achieved through acquisition of assets it is lawful, in the absence of monopoly, and the antitrust agencies are powerless to act. So long as a merger is consummated through purchase of physical property, and the resulting company achieves less than a monopoly position in its market, it is protected by the legal vacuum lying between the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act.

If a merger were carried out solely through an exchange of stock, it would, of course, be vulnerable under section 7 of the Clayton Act. This section of the law, however, applies only to acquisitions of stock as such. The Supreme Court has held that if acquisition of stock is implemented by acquisition of assets, section 7 of the Clayton Act no longer applies. Although the relevant rulings were handed down by the Court in the twenties and early thirties, the gap in the antitrust laws which they disclosed has not yet been closed. In 1926 the Supreme Court held that if acquired stock is used to effect an absorption of assets before the Federal Trade Commission can file a complaint, the Commission is powerless to order a divestiture of the assets—F. T. C. v. Western Meat Co., Thatcher Mfg. Co. v. F. T. C., Swift & Co. v. F. T. C. (272 U. S. 554 (1926)). In 1934 the Court answered the next logical question In that case the Commission filed a complaint while stock was in the hands of an acquiring holding company and before it had been used to effect a merger of the physical assets of the competing corporations in question. The assets were, however, transferred before the Commission issued its cease-and-desist order. The Supreme Court held that since the assets had been transferred before the Commission had issued its order, the transfer did not violate section 7, despite the fact that the stock acquisition which preceded it was illegal—Arrow-Hart & Hegeman Electrical Co. v. F. T. C. (211 U. S. 587, 599, 608 (1934)). This meant that whereas a substantial lessening of competition of the type prohibited by section 7 had occurred, the method by which it had been accomplished was an innocent one and, therefore, the merger could not be condemned under the Clayton Act.

Once a merger has been consummated by acquisition of assets, therefore, the only antitrust instrument now available is section 2 of the Sherman Act. This part of the antitrust laws would, however, be of use, alone, and without support of a finding of combination, only if a monopoly position approaching the 90-percent market control found in the Alcoa case were achieved through the merger—U. S. v. Aluminum Co. of America et al. (148 Fed. (2d) 416 (1945)). Thus, even if a merger controlled two-thirds of the domestic market for its product it would, in the words of the Alcoa decision, be doubtful whether it would have achieved a monopoly of the type condemned under section 2 of the Sherman Act.

Unless, therefore, a full-scale monopoly had been accomplished through merger, there would be no anti-trust method of dissolving the consolidation, even though it resulted in substantial lessening of competition or tended to create a monopoly.

The fact that acquisition of assets is not covered by the Clayton Act, on the same basis as the acquisition of stock, has been said to be a loophole in the law. This term, however, understates the magnitude of the omission. During the period from 1939 to 1944, for example, the Federal Trade Commission found that asset acquisition represented 58 percent of the total number of all industrial acquisitions—Report of the Federal Trade Commission on the Merger Movement, a summary report, 1948, page 6. The Department of Justice made a fairly close analysis of most of the mergers and acquisitions taking place in manufacturing industries during 1946–47; out of the several hundred mergers examined, it found that in less than 10 percent of the cases was it essential for the acquiring company to buy the stock as a necessary step in securing the assets.

The existing loophole, or vacuum, in the antitrust laws is a sizable one, which the pending measure seeks to close. It provides a compelling incentive to merger by companies who may wish to perpetuate otherwise irregular practices. This is so because once a merger is accomplished, activities which were formerly carried on through irregular agreement between them can be carried on by the single company through managerial decisions. Paradoxical as it may seem, the weaker, less effective cooperative methods of eliminating competition are definitely prohibited both by section 1 of the Sherman Act and by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; but the permanent and more effective method of consolidation under a single management is permissible.

The vacuum in the law, therefore, puts a premium on the achievement by the more concentrated method of consolidation of purposes which could not be legally achieved by combination among a more loosely knit group of independent firms.

Moreover, the more effective is the enforcement of the law against collusion among competitors, the greater is the incentive to achieve the same ends through purchase, consolidation, and merger. Thus, price fixing, division of markets, limitation of production, limitation of grades and types of products produced, exclusion of competitors, and other agreements prohibited when practiced by separate companies may be perpetuated as between any two companies, through merger.

This method of continuing practices prohibited by law and enjoined by the courts is almost as old as the Sherman act itself.

In 1899, for example, the Supreme Court ruled that a conspiracy among six cast-iron pipe companies to raise prices by eliminating competitive bidding was illegal—Addyston Pipe and Steel Co. v. U. S. (175 U. S. 211 (1899)). The defendants subsequently merged into what is now the largest manufacturer and distributor of cast iron pressure pipe in the United States—report of the Federal Trade Commission of the Merger Movement, page 9.

In 1944, the Commission issued a complaint against members of the white lead industry, charging price fixing. During the summer of 1946 Eagle-Picher Co. acquired assets of International Smelting & Refining Co. used in smelting and refining lead and producing white lead and white lead-in-oil at East Chicago. This acquisition increased the size of the second largest producer and eliminated the third largest, leaving two concerns accounting for between 75 and 85 percent of the production and sale of white lead and white lead-in-oil.

Again, in 1945, the Federal Trade Commission issued a cease-and-desist order against the most important manufacturers of paper in the United States. The order prohibited the companies, among whom were the Mead Corp., one of the largest firms in the industry, and the Columbian Paper Co. from collectively fixing prices. One year after the order was issued the Mead Corp. acquired the entire capital stock of the Columbian Co.—report of the Federal Trade Commission on the Merger Movement, pages 13 and 14.

The end is not in sight, so long as the Clayton Act permits merger by purchase of assets.

Less than 3 weeks ago, two large corporations, Minnesota-Mining and Manufacturing Co. and the Carborundum Co., announced their intention to accomplish a statutory merger under Delaware law—Moody's Industrials, November 29, 1950, page 1972. This announcement followed by less than a month the filing of the second of two court orders prohibiting these two manufacturers, which between them accounted for 52 percent of the sales of important industrial material, such as coated abrasives, in the United States in 1947, from engaging in practices in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act—Behr-Manning Corp. and Armour & Co. were also defendants in the same suit, as were Durex Abrasives Corp. and the Durex Corp.—United States against Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. et al.—complaint filed July 5, 1949, United States district court, district of Massachusetts; final judgment as to count 1, November 6, 1950; final decree, as to count 2, September 13, 1950; opinion, September 13, 1950, amended September 20, 1950.

This proposed merger is a dramatic example of how assets can be used to circumvent a court injunction. Once it goes through, Minnesota-Mining & Carborundum will presumably be able, as one company, to continue practices which were judged illegal when they were two companies. The salient facts can be briefly stated.

Four manufacturing companies—the Carborundum Co., Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co., Behr-Manning Corp., and Armour & Co.—controlled 85 percent of the sales of coated abrasives in the domestic market in 1947. Each of the four companies owned patents covering some type of coated abrasive. Each extended licenses under his patents to the others under identical terms. For example, Minnesota, which held the patents relating to waterproof-coated abrasives, entered into a series of identical patent license agreements with the other manufacturers. Under the terms of these agreements, licensor and licensee agreed to adhere to prices set out in schedules attached to the agreement and both parties agreed to manufacture only those waterproof-coated abrasives authorized by the majority of a standardization committee composed of representatives of the licensor and licensee.

In 1943, the four manufacturers entered into identical cross-license agreements with each other binding each manufacturer to license the others to use all methods, processes, and apparatus which were then, or might become, the subject of patents by any one of them. Under these agreements, the manufacturers bound themselves to maintain manufacturing and distribution standards and minimum prices specified by the licensor. They also agreed to make available to each other on reasonable terms all raw materials necessary for the production of coated abrasives under the licenses in question.

Over 80 percent of the coated abrasives manufactured in the United States were produced under one of the license agreements described. The patent pool covered substantially all United States patents and technical information in the field, and therefore, according to the complaint filed by the Department of Justice, eliminated competition in the development of new processes and products in the industry.

In addition to the patent pooling, cross-licensing, price-fixing, and standardization practices affecting sales of coated abrasives in the domestic market, the four manufacturers also engaged in practices affecting foreign trade.

During 1929 these companies organized Durex Abrasives—the export company—which filed with the Federal Trade Commission as a Webb Export Trade Act association. At the same time the same companies organized the Durex Corp.—Durex. The stock in this company was held by the four manufacturers and its directorate consisted of one officer or representative of each of the manufacturers. Durex acted as a holding company for foreign patents covering the manufacture of coated abrasives, and as a holding company for the stock of foreign corporations organized by Durex to manufacture such abrasives in foreign countries. Although prior to 1929 the manufacturers had competed among themselves in sales in foreign markets, after that time Durex entered into identical agreements with each of them, providing that until December 31, 1956, they would grant exclusive licenses to Durex to manufacture and sell coated abrasives in foreign countries under all foreign patents. The export company entered into a similar agreement with each of the manufacturers under which the manufacturers agreed to export coated abrasives only through the export company.

Between 1929 and 1945, Durex organized manufacturing companies in Great Britain, Canada, Germany, and Australia. After the organization of each foreign subsidiary, the export company stopped selling in the country in question and in countries whose markets had been alloted to the respective foreign subsidiaries.

Sales by the defendant manufacturers in the markets assigned to the subsidiaries were eliminated, and sales by independent American companies were discouraged.

Charges of violation of the Sherman Act were brought by the Department of Justice in the District Court of Massachusetts. In September 1950, the Court handed down an order prohibiting illegal practices affecting foreign trade. In November 1950, the Court filed an order to which the defendants consented prohibiting illegal practices affecting domestic trade.

The Court's order relating to foreign activities opens with a finding that the defendants had violated section 1 of the Sherman Act in combining with each other to organize and operate Durex and its subsidiaries. They had also violated the law through their use of patent agreements and licensing arrangements covering sales in British Empire markets, under which Durex or its subsidiaries supply coated abrasives manufactured in part or in whole in foreign countries.

Therefore, defendants were enjoined from combining to restrain trade with foreign nations and, specifically, from engaging in "any joint action by two or more American manufacturers to establish or operate factories in foreign nations to supply coated abrasives." Patent licensing agreements covering sales in various foreign areas were canceled and Durex and its subsidiaries were required to transfer all foreign patents and licenses to the original transferor or its successor and the manufacturers and Durex were required to file a plan with the Court for the dissolution of Durex and its manufacturing subsidiaries.

Under the consent order relating to domestic activities the patent license and cross-license agreements relating to coated-abrasive products were canceled and defendants were prohibited from entering into such agreements in the future. They were also prohibited from entering into agreements with any manufacturer of coated-abrasive products to fix prices, terms of sale, and so forth, or to prevent any manufacturer from selling any specific kinds, types, styles, or grades of coated-abrasive products, or from manufacturing any of such products according to any standards of specifications.

Despite these injunctions, however, once Minnesota-Mining and Carborundum merge they will as a single company be able to continue many of the practices prohibited by the Court. They will, for example, be able to determine the price at which all coated abrasives they manufacture will sell as well as the types and kinds of abrasives to be produced. They will also be able to pool their patents, and operate subsidiaries, domestic or foreign, as may appear desirable.

After merger, Minnesota-Mining and Carborundum will apparently control some 52 percent of sales of coated abrasives and will, therefore, have a dominant position in the industry. The new company will have a strong patent position and resources with which to extend its share of the market and continue practices which as separate companies its constituent companies would be prohibited from doing.

Minnesota-Mining and Carborundum will, therefore, be able to continue their mutual relations, which would otherwise have been severed by the Court's orders, on a far closer basis than ever before, since they will be able to accomplish by managerial decision activities which could previously be carried on only through illegal agreement.

Furthermore, the two largest companies in the field, the enlarged Minnesota-Mining and its codefendant, the second largest manufacturer, Behr-Manning, will control 81 percent of the domestic sales of coated abrasives. Past history does not give much basis and hope that these two dominant companies will be truly competitive or that the smaller companies in the industry can make headway against them.

While the defendant companies will, it is true, be required to extend nonexclusive licenses to any applicant, many other provisions of the Court's orders will, in effect, be nullified.

These examples—and more could be cited—underline the fundamental principle that an effective antitrust policy must prohibit the achievement of monopolistic ends, regardless of whether they are attained by collusive agreement among separate firms or by consolidations, acquisitions, and mergers. To block off one of these two roads to monopoly, merely increases traffic on the other.

There is no greater internal threat to the antitrust laws and to the maintenance of the competitive system than the vacuum which permits corporations to perpetuate by mergers and acquisitions those practices which they are specifically prohibited from carrying on as individual companies.

H. R. 2734 is designed to fill this vacuum by outlawing acquisitions of corporate assets wherever "in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly." Once it has become law, H. R. 2734 will operate to inhibit monopoly by accumulation and to reinforce the competitive enterprise economy to which we are committed.

Mr. President, I should like now to summarize the principal reasons for the passage of this proposed measure.

First. To restore meaning to the law of the United States. Section 7 as it now stands is a nullity. It makes a mockery of the Federal law. By proposing in essence to make the present law applicable to stock acquisitions also applicable to asset acquisitions, the bill will do only what is logical and necessary in order to make the law against monopolistic mergers meaningful and effective.

Second. To close an avenue to monopoly by which through mergers corporations can attain the same ends which are now prohibited if they are accomplished through conspiracy or collusion among independent firms. At the present time the law is an effective instrument against collusive agreements to restrain trade. But because of the loophole in section 7, the same restraints can be achieved by the simple means of one or more firms buying up a sufficient number of competitors until they control the market.

Third. To halt the continuous long-term upward trend in economic concentration. Concentration has been sharply increased in the United States principally as a result of three successive waves of merger activity—the consolidation movement of 1890–1907, the merger movement of 1923–29, and the recurrent and recent merger movement since World War II. All of the studies which have been made on the trend of concentration show a long-term upward movement which is due in large part to mergers and acquisitions.

Fourth. To protect the independence of small business. Obviously, if this upward trend in concentration continues small business will gradually be eliminated as an important factor in the economy. Such an elimination of small business would, of course, dry up the opportunities for young people and make the entire economy dependent upon the decisions of the central office managers of a few giant corporations.

Fifth. To protect and preserve the American system of free enterprise. If concentration continues to increase the Nation will surely sink into some form of collectivism—fascism, socialism, or communism. The replacement of free-enterprise economy by any of these forms of collectivism is unthinkable. Yet, unless the trend toward increasing concentration is arrested, collectivism may well be upon us.

Mr. President, in answer to inquiries by some of my colleagues on the floor of the Senate as to the organizations or persons who favor this bill, let me say that every small business organization which has appeared before or submitted statements to congressional committees on this bill has vigorously supported it. These include: National Federation of Independent Business, the American Association of Small Business, the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, the National Association of Retail Druggists, the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, the Smaller Business Association of New England, Inc., Retail Merchants Association of South Dakota, and the Federation of Nebraska Retailers.

Each of the above organizations made known their views on this proposed legislation to the House Judiciary Committee of the Eightieth Congress and some of them made additional statements repeating their position before the House and Senate Judiciary Committee or the House and Senate Small Business Committees of the Eighty-first Congress.

In addition the record contains statements supporting the measure by a number of individual independent small-business men including: John Howard Ford, president, Union Works, Inc., Washington, D. C.; Charles J. Beck, Beck Baking Co., Fredericksburg, Va., and R. Morschner, Morschner Dye Works, Inc., Newton Upper Falls, Mass.

Finally, the bill is supported by most of the leading labor, farm, and cooperative organizations, some of which have testified on its behalf before congressional committees. These organizations include: Congress of Industrial Organizations, American Federation of Labor, International Association of Machinists, Railroad Brotherhoods, National Grange, National Farmers Union, and Cooperative League of America.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in my remarks a few interesting facts concerning the bill in the light of the Texas antitrust law.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECTION AND BILL IN THE LIGHT OF THE TEXAS ANTITRUST LAW

The State of Texas is well in advance of the Federal Government in preventing mergers that reduce competition.

The present Texas antitrust law dates from 1903, when the previous statutes of 1889, 1895, and 1899 were drastically revised. (Charles D. Mathews, History, Interpretation and Enforcement of Texas Antitrust Laws, in 1950 Institute on Antitrust Laws and Price Regulations, Southwestern Legal Foundation, Dallas, Tex.) An important part of the purpose of the revision was to cope with mergers. On January 16, 1903, in an outgoing message to the legislature, Governor Sayers said:

The trust, which consisted of a combination or agreement between two or more persons, firms, or corporations, by which the price of articles was fixed, or the output limited, either by direct agreement or by placing the controlling interests of the different persons, firms, and corporations under the management of one or more persons, having been declared by the courts to be illegal, the method is now adopted to form a corporation for buying the physical properties of competing plants, thus concentrating them all under one management, and in effect, making a complete consolidation. It is evident that insofar as suppressing competition may be the object, this method of combination is much more effective than any plan previously devised. Stringent legislation is, therefore, recommended prohibiting the combination or consolidation of existing corporations.

In the same year the executive message to the legislature by the incoming Governor Lanham recommended the same changes and said:

"It is confidently believed that the three measures which accompany this message, if they shall become the law, will absolutely prevent the formation of monopolies by the combination of existing competing corporations."

The bill accompanying the Governor's message was introduced on February 7, 1903, by Representative TOM CONNALLY and MacDonald Meachum, and with certain changes endorsed by these sponsors, a revised bill became law on March 31, 1903.

The bill prohibited trusts, monopolies, and conspiracies.

A "trust" was defined as a combination of two or more persons, etc., to create, or which may tend to create, certain designated restrictions; to fix, maintain, increase, or reduce prices; to prevent or lessen competition; to regulate, fix, or limit output, or to abstain from engaging or continuing in business.

A "monopoly" was defined as a combination or consolidation of two or more corporations, either by bringing them under the same management or control for the purpose of creating a trust, or where any corporation shall acquire the stock or bonds, franchises, rights, or physical properties of any other corporation for the purpose of preventing or lessening competition, or where the effect tends to affect or lessen competition.

"Conspiracy in restraint of trade" was defined as where any two or more persons, etc., engaged in business shall agree to refuse to buy from or sell to others, or shall agree to boycott or threaten to refuse to buy from or sell to others.

The statute was enforceable by civil penalties or forfeiture of corporate charter and a fine of $50 a day and by a criminal penalty of from 1 to 10 years in prison.

The substantive provisions of the 1903 law are still in effect. In 1907 the Attorney General was given sweeping authority to examine the books and records of corporations within the State and provision was made for a lien upon corporate property to secure a payment of penalties and for appointment of a receiver by the court in case of dissolution or forfeiture of charter. (The 1907 law also provided that a person who sells below cost of manufacture or production, or gives away products, or gives secret rebates for the purpose or in such a way as to drive out competition or financially injure a competitor shall be imprisoned from 1 to 10 years.) Minimum criminal penalty was increased to 2 years in prison. The criminal penalties were specifically applied to formation of a trust, becoming a party to a trust, or giving effect in Texas to a trust formed outside the State. It was also provided that no foreign corporation may be given a permit to do business in Texas unless designated officers make affidavit that the corporation has not within the 12 months next preceding been a party to any combination in restraint of trade. In 1909 the civil penalty was changed from $50 a day to not less than $50 and not more than $1,500 a day.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, for the reasons already cited by my colleagues who have spoken in favor of the bill, I urge its passage.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'CONOR. I yield.

Mr. BREWSTER. I have had brought to my attention the question of newspaper mergers. Has that subject been discussed in the course of the debate?

Mr. O'CONOR. It has, I may say to the Senator from Maine, extensively, both by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], and particular attention was given to it in the committee as well. In order to make the RECORD clear on that point, there was an exchange of views, and the opinion was to the effect that this bill creates no danger to proposed mergers of the kind described by the Senator.

Mr. BREWSTER. Even though within a given city it might be a considerable step toward either monopoly or reduction of competition?

Mr. O'CONOR. Of course, each case, as the able Senator knows, would have to be decided on its particular facts. However, we think that the merging of two newspapers, for example, each of which might be in a failing condition, would not lessen competition. It would, in effect, result in the creation of one successful newspaper, which would be a very salutary thing. For that and other reasons which were stated, we were definitely of the opinion that the bill would not have an adverse effect on the type of merger described.

Mr. BREWSTER. Is the Senator familiar with the colloquy which occurred in the House on this subject?

Mr. O'CONOR. Yes, I am familiar with it. We do not know whether the quotation was taken out of context, but we do not feel there is anything to fear in that regard.

Mr. BREWSTER. One of the reasons mentioned was the recent merger in New York.

Mr. O'CONOR. We had the facts before us and felt that that merger was probably desirable and would not be prevented by this bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Holland	Maybank
Anderson	Hunt	Millikin
Benton	Ives	Morse
Bricker	Jenner	Mundt
Bridges	Johnson, Colo.	Murray
Butler	Johnson, Tex.	Neely
Cain	Johnston, S. C.	Nixon
Carlson	Kefauver	O'Conor
Connally	Kem	O'Mahoney
Cordon	Kerr	Robertson
Donnell	Kilgore	Russell
Douglas	Knowland	Saltonstall
Dworshak	Langer	Schoeppel
Eastland	Leahy	Smith, Maine
Ecton	Lehman	Smith, N. J.
Flanders	Long	Stennis
Frear	Lucas	Taylor
Fulbright	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
George	McCarthy	Thye
Gillette	McClellan	Tobey
Gurney	McFarland	Watkins
Hayden	McKellar	Wherry
Hendrickson	McMahon	Wiley
Hickenlooper	Magnuson	Williams
Hill	Malone	Young
Hoey	Martin

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

Mr. O'CONOR. Mr. President, I offer a group of committee amendments, minor in nature, which are principally aimed at perfecting the bill. I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the committee amendments.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 7, after the word "Aeronautics", it is proposed to strike out "Authority" and insert "Board"; in line 10, after the word "Commission", to insert "in the exercise of its jurisdiction under section 10 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the United States Maritime Commission"; in line 14, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 22, after the word "Aeronautics", to strike out "Authority" and insert "Board"; on page 5, line 4, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 14, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 19, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 23, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 24, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; on page 6, line 12, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 18, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 19, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; on page 7, line 1, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 8, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 9, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 16, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 18, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 21, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; on page 8, line 7, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 11, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line —, before the word "or", to strike out "Authority," on page 9, line 4, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; ity,"; in line 18, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 19, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 21, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 25, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; on page 9, line 4, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,"; in line 8, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,", and in line 10, after the word "Commission", to strike out "Authority,".

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the amendments en bloc? The Chair hears none, and the question is on agreeing to the amendments en bloc.

The amendments were agreed to en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. DONNELL. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. LUCAS. I announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senators from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN and Mr. CLEMENTS], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are unavoidably absent on official business.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

If present and voting, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CLEMENTS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MYERS], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] would vote "yea."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] are necessarily absent. If present and voting, the Senator from Ohio would vote "yea."

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The result was announced—yeas 55, nays 22, as follows:

YEAS—55

Aiken	Johnston, S. C.	Murray
Anderson	Kefauver	Neely
Benton	Kerr	Nixon
Connally	Kilgore	O'Conor
Douglas	Langer	O'Mahoney
Eastland	Leahy	Robertson
Frear	Lehman	Russell
Fulbright	Long	Smith, Maine
George	Lucas	Stennis
Gillette	McCarran	Taylor
Hayden	McCarthy	Thomas, Okla.
Hill	McClellan	Thye
Hoey	McFarland	Tobey
Holland	McKellar	Watkins
Hunt	McMahon	Wherry
Ives	Magnuson	Wiley
Jenner	Maybank	Young
Johnson, Colo.	Morse
Johnson, Tex.	Mundt

NAYS—22

Bricker	Ecton	Martin
Bridges	Flanders	Millikin
Butler	Gurney	Saltonstall
Cain	Hendrickson	Schoeppel
Carlson	Hickenlooper	Smith, N. J.
Cordon	Kem	Williams
Donnell	Knowland
Dworshak	Malone

NOT VOTING—19

Brewster	Ferguson	Sparkman
Byrd	Green	Taft
Capehart	Humphrey	Thomas, Utah
Chapman	Lodge	Tydings
Chavez	Myers	Vandenberg
Clements	Pepper
Ellender	Smith, N. C.

So the bill (H. R. 2734) was passed.

AMENDMENT OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TEACHERS' LEAVE ACT

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 2583, House bill 9524. When the calendar was last called, the bill was objected to by a Senator on the minority side because the report had not been printed at that time. It is now printed, and I understand that there is no objection to the consideration and passage of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, inasmuch as the minority side was mentioned, I am quite sure that I am correct in stating that the reason the bill was not considered prior to the adjournment in September was that there was no report accompanying the bill. It was among a group of bills which were not accompanied by reports, and the majority leader was agreeable to postponing consideration of those bills until the reports were before us. Therefore, it was passed over. There is no objection to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 9524) to supplement the District of Columbia Teachers' Leave Act of 1949 was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS FOR LOSSES AND DAMAGES TO PORTUGUESE TERRITORY OF MACAO

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, just before the bill which was last considered was passed I had risen with the purpose of reserving the right to object because the bill was No. 5 on the list of bills I propose to have taken up for consideration this afternoon, and I felt that if there was going to be long discussion on it I should object to consideration of that bill until we reached it in the order in which the Democratic Policy Committee had proposed that bills be considered.

Mr. President, on December 11 the Committee on Foreign Relations reported to the Senate four measures unanimously. It is my understanding there will be little or no debate upon those measures.

I now move that the Senate proceed to consideration of House bill 9484, Calendar No. 2581, and ask that the bill be stated by title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair). The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. H. R. 9484, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I should like to ask the distinguished majority leader if, when that bill is passed, it is his intention to continue with the bills reported from the Foreign Relations Committee?

Mr. LUCAS. That is exactly what I stated a moment ago. I said we would take up the bills which had been reported unanimously by the Committee on Foreign Relations, and I said that four such bills had been reported, which I would ask the Senate to consider.

Mr. WHERRY. May I ask the majority leader if it is then the intention to bring up Calendar No. 2569, House bill 7445, authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I will say to the Senator that is the intention; yes.

Mr. LUCAS. That is one of the four measures which have been reported by the Committee on Foreign Relations unanimously, which it is proposed may now be taken up for consideration. As I stated, the first is House bill 9484, Calendar No. 2581. After that bill is passed I shall ask for the present consideration of House bill 5902, Calendar No. 2570, for the relief of the Pan American Union, and if and when that bill is passed I propose to ask for consideration of House bill 8546, Calendar No. 2580, to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946.

After that bill is passed, the next and last bill is the one the Senator from Nebraska made inquiry about. That will be the last bill on the list.

Mr. WHERRY. I thank the Senator.

PEANUTS

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. The Senator from Illinois realizes, of course, that Virginia peanut growers have to vote tomorrow on the allotment plan which is going to cut them 16½ percent. They are producing less than they did 40 years ago. There is a market for all edible peanuts that can be produced. There is not a market for all the oil type of peanuts. The Senator from Virginia would like to know if the majority leader—and I ask the question now while the distinguished junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] is present—proposes to give consideration to the Hoey-Graham bill to provide a different basis of allotments?

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator from Virginia that is one of the bills on the list we propose to take up at some time before this short session is adjourned, provided we have the time to consider it. I had hoped that perhaps the Senators from Virginia, Georgia and all other States who are interested in the peanut situation might be able to agree so that we would not be compelled to debate the subject of peanuts for a couple of days.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I do not think the debate will take very long. I regret exceedingly that we have been unable to reach an agreement on a bill which the President would sign, because any agreement we reach would still leave an allotment for oil peanuts far in excess of the market.

The subsidies now being paid to those who produce that kind of peanuts is $27.50 an acre. The program this year will cost more than the $40,500,000 which it cost last year. The total program has cost more than $67,000,000. We feel that unless there be, from the standpoint of the general taxpayers, some better arrangement for this type of support, it will ultimately mean not only the wrecking of the peanut program, but will react badly on the entire farm program.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I think the distinguished Senator from Virginia is in error in saying that there is a subsidy of $27.50 an acre, or any other sum, on oil peanuts. Such a subsidy is impossible under the law. Under the oil peanut provision they are sold by the Department of Agriculture, and if I recall the law the farmer is paid only on the basis of what the Department receives for the oil. I do not think I can be in error about that.

Mr. ROBERTSON. This is the situation. The production was underestimated by 150,000 tons. It was agreed for this year to buy all except 300 pounds out of each ton of oil peanuts, at 15 cents a pound, which is 50 percent above the market price, and that figures out a subsidy of $27.50 an acre for oil peanuts, and $23 and some cents for all the peanut growers. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON], a former distinguished Secretary of Agriculture, gave me the figure of $27.50 an acre for oil peanuts.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not want to become involved in this peanut argument, because the peanut bill is not before the Senate. These arguments can be made later on when we have the peanut bill under consideration.

I regret to find my friends from the peanut-producing areas disagreeing with one another. Seldom do they fail to find a solution for any of their problems, whether they be problems relating to peanuts, tobacco, cotton, or any other product produced in the South. I never yet knew of a product in which those Senators are vitally interested on which an agreement could not be worked out. I hope the problems affecting the peanut bill can be worked out before the bill is taken up for consideration. But the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] made a special request that the bill not be considered today because he is now attending an executive session of the Finance Committee on the bill relating to excess-profits taxes.

I yield now for a brief explanation to the Senator from New Mexico relating to the question of peanuts.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, in support of what the Senator from Virginia stated, I wish to say that the record will show that the 1949 crop of peanuts cost the Government of the United States $49,000,000. There were slightly more than 2,000,000 acres of peanuts. Anyone can divide the figure 2,000,000 into 49,000,000 and know that it is costing more than $20 an acre for every acre of peanuts grown. Every time a farmer planted an acre of peanuts for oil in 1949 it cost the Government of the United States $27. Farmers do not get that much out of the various crops in different parts of the country, and there are those of us who would like to see the provision of the law affecting peanuts corrected in such a manner that it will continue to operate satisfactorily.

I believe that what we need most of all is to grant additional acreage to the farmers in Virginia and North Carolina who grow the ball park kind of peanuts, the kind we are now forced to import from China and other countries. It is too bad that American farmers cannot grow more of such peanuts.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I was very much interested in the statement made by the Senator from Virginia. In the form in which the most recent bill affecting peanuts was passed by the Senate it could not result in costing the Government of the United States $27.50 an acre for oil peanuts. The peanut program has cost some money but the excess oil peanuts simply cannot cause losses to the Government. I shall investigate the matter very carefully. I wish to say to the distinguished Senator from Virginia, however, that if he expects the Graham-Hoey bill to be passed in time to be beneficial with respect to the referendum to be taken tomorrow, I am very much afraid he will be disappointed.

Mr. LUCAS. I can see that the peanut controversy is going to be very interesting and exciting. I surely would like to be present when the debate takes place, and I shall be present when it does. The proposed legislation cannot, however, be passed today.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, I wish to say a word about the urgency of the matter. In the first place, a number of very fine Virginia and North Carolina farmers are being adversely affected. In the second place, the Administrator of the program went into the peanut-producing section of Virginia and told the peanut growers, "You have some Senators who do not give two whoops in hell for the peanut growers." I have been flooded with letters dealing with the situation. I do not say to what Senators the Administrator referred. I leave it to them to draw their own inferences. Then the Administrator went on to say, "We do not think this is a good program. It ought to be changed. But Congress has to change the law. We cannot change it." That is the situation he presents to my constituents.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, at one time I was interested in the flood of letters which come to Senators—but not any more.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS FOR LOSSES AND DAMAGES TO PORTUGUESE TERRITORY OF MACAO

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Illinois that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 9484.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9484) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights.

Mr. JENNER and Mr. McMAHON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana was on his feet first, the Chair believes; and the Senator from Indiana is recognized.

FOREIGN POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. JENNER. Mr. President, the subject I wish to discuss this afternoon is not about me, but it is a grave subject. My subject is our country's status—where we have been, where we are now, and where we should go.

Mr. President, there is an old saying that—"Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small."

Today, American people are slowly but surely throwing off the deadly hypnosis of the past tragic 33 years, to find that what they thought was only a passing political nightmare has become a horrible reality. As they look about, they find the mills of gods slowly grinding out the truth that America has been betrayed.

That truth is this, Mr. President: No matter to what desperate lengths some may continue to go to hide it from our eyes, the fact remains that never before have a free people been so deliberately deceived, so ruthlessly exploited, or so betrayed.

As a consequence, the American people are awakening, in the dark dawn of disillusionment, to find that never before have any free people been subjected to such staggering defeats on the economic, social, political, military, and diplomatic fronts, at the hands of their own leaders.

The extent of these defeats can be measured only against the stark fact that today America is unable to keep the peace, to win a war, or even to defend her vital interests against the very force of tyranny which our present leadership has helped to turn loose around the world.

Yet, in the midst of the rising chaos, this frightful, face-saving fraud marches on.

Not one of our responsible political leaders has yet admitted his part in the tragic blunders, mistakes, and betrayals that have taken place.

Instead, even General Marshall described the cause of this predicament we are in on November 14, 1950, at Fort Benning, Ga., by saying that our national defense has always been "a succession of feasts and famines that have followed each other in demoralizing sequence."

Then, completely ignoring the basic cause of the matter, General Marshall went on to point his finger of guilt at the American people by saying:

> The basic error has always been with the American people themselves.

Mr. President, it seems that because the American people are becoming bitterly resentful, and are not sufficiently aroused to their Marshall-decreed guilt, and are even demanding the impeachment of Mr. Truman and Acheson, another crisis is being used to whip up a frenzied public hysteria and take the heat off a leadership which, no matter what it does, seemingly can do no wrong.

The truth is, Mr. President, that resentment, distrust, and disgust are spreading like wildfire in the hearts and minds of the American people.

Mr. President, this growing public disillusionment is the stuff of which revolutions are made.

We can only hope and pray that sanity and patriotism will finally prevail to save us by leading America out of the chaotic crisis we are in, back on to the road of the traditional principles which underlie our heritage as a free and sovereign people. This is the task that awaits our doing—this, and this alone.

Yet, Mr. President, we can never find our way out of the international morass into which we have been led, or prevent the final emergence of a tyrannical police state in our own midst, unless 150,000,000 Americans are now willing to stand up and be counted as Americans.

We have pulled other nations' chestnuts out of the fire long enough. For far too long we have been underwriting the interests and security of everyone but ourselves.

For too many years we have been the pawns of alien forces—until, today, America, once the land of the free and the home of the brave, has been reduced to the role of a flunky to an international Frankenstein.

America, the richest nation on earth, is being bled white by its own leaders.

America's traditional two-party system has been stalled on dead center by a vicious bypartisan paralysis of all honest criticism and searching debate, a paralysis which destroys every essence of representative government itself.

The American people themselves stand between their own destiny as a free people and the inevitable slavery which their discredited, incompetent, world-saving leadership even now would shackle upon them.

Think of it, Mr. President! After all the global goose chasing we have done during these tragic years, we stand on the threshold of a third world war, under the discredited leadership of those whose follies have helped to breed a Communist monster which has broken its leash and is now at large.

This same leadership has no more understanding of our traditional American principles and of our vital national interests which now are really at stake in this crisis than it has of why we have already fought and lost two other tragic world wars.

What is the truth, Mr. President? The truth is that on December 16, 1948, the Hoover Commission task force investigating the reorganization of our armed services warned in its report that—

> Within slightly more than a score of years, at a great cost in life and property, we have won two wars, only to lose the peace both times, through lack of a clear and consistent national objective. * * *
>
> The bitter lesson does not yet seem to be fully learned * * * for the committee found that strategic plans, made without clear guidance of long-term peace aims, were based on assumptions that may or may not be true, that the military were planning now to fight the next war—if this tragedy should occur, without knowing what exactly we would be fighting for.

The truth is that we are only relearning the ancient biblical teaching of what always happens when the blind lead the blind.

For we now know that what started out as a Korean police action has only plunged us deeper into the rising tide of international anarchy and has further obscured the real issues of our own national interests, national security, and national objectives, which are now at stake.

The tragedy is that if we keep going the way we are headed, and unless these crucial issues are immediately clarified, we shall have already lost the third world war. The reason is that we shall not be fighting for clearly defined national objectives, we shall not be fighting for the preservation of clearly defined American principles, and we shall not be fighting to keep America sound, strong, and free. This then, is the measure of the defeat that is already in the making. We can only ask ourselves, "Why?" Mr. President, why are we in this tragic predicament? What has happened that America today should be fighting for her own survival with all the odds stacked against her? This is the question that cries for an answer in the minds and hearts of the American people. What is the master-key that unlocks this frightful puzzle? How can we escape such a fate?

Now, Mr. President, I am convinced there is only one way out. Strangely enough, President Truman was telling a tremendous truth when he denounced the Communist investigation as a "red herring." I do not mean that there is the slightest doubt but that Communists and traitors have been selling us out during these tragic years. What I do mean is that the issue of communism has been, is being, and will continue to be used by many as a "red herring" to detract the attention of the American people from the real cause of the disaster we confront.

The real causes of this disaster and the deadliest enemies of America are the internationalist doctrines, the internationalist machinery, and the internationalists themselves, who have provided the instruments whereby alien forces could infiltrate, manipulate and betray the national policies and interests of the United States.

What other master-key unlocks the mystery of America's betrayal? What other explanation puts the frightening events of the past 33 years into their proper perspective? So far as I am concerned, I can find no other way to explain what has happened to America during these tragic years, or what is yet to happen, unless we come to our senses in time; and it is later than most people think.

The truth is that whenever an American embraces internationalism as a doctrine or a practice, however well-intentioned he may be, he betrays both his country and himself. For such a doctrine and practice immediately opens the doors to foreign influence and foreign interests which, by their very nature, are determined to use America for their own selfish and vicious ends. As an example of what I mean, I cite an article in today's Washington Post, under the dateline of Cairo, Egypt, December 12. The headline is "Cairo cheers bid to play off East versus West," and the article begins thus:

> Parliament tonight applauded a deputy's proposal that Egypt make agreements with Communist-bloc nations and use these agreements to pry concessions from the Western Powers.

This is what George Washington meant when, in his farewell address, he said:

> Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake; since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. Real patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favorite, are liable to become suspected and odious; while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

Surely we have paid an awful price to relearn in our lifetime that America can survive as a free and sovereign Nation only as we maintain American interests, principles, and security as our primary concern—only as our leadership seeks to protect, preserve and advance America's legitimate and vital interests above all others—only as the American people, themselves, are given honest facts and the opportunity to make honest choices between honest alternatives, before others are given a chance, secretly, to decide their destiny for them.

For years now, America has been the victim of the abandonment and repudiation of these principles and practices, with the inevitable result that nothing short of a major operation on the policies and personnel which have produced the present crisis can save us.

The choice we confront now is not how we are going to save the United Nations; not how we are going to save our allies; not how are we going to save face; but how we are going to save the United States. That is what we are up against today. The choice is not how we are going to perpetuate the mechanism of international death traps. The question is, how are we going to restore the machinery whereby we can take back into our own hands the control of America's foreign policy and destiny.

I know of no other way of doing this than by again warning of the suicidal course we have traveled during the past 33 years, under the leadership of internationalist crusaders, who have been leading us down the road to destruction and strengthening the internationalist machinery which, even today, has been taken over and continues to be manipulated by those who are determined to destroy us.

Mr. President, while this is a little known story which has been deliberately denied to the American people, it is the shocking truth. Why otherwise has it been deliberately suppressed by the very internationalists themselves, who during these tragic years have been playing hand-in-glove not only with Communists but with many other alien interests?

If we are not in a deliberate conspiracy of silence, why have these same internationalists gone to such lengths to pervert, distort and conceal the truth, and even to degrade the writing of history itself?

If we are to save America, the time has come to clean up, once and for all, the deliberate falsehoods and the "isolationist" smears with which the internationalists have been blotting out and fouling up the pages of American history. Those who oppose the internationalists are called "isolationists." If we are to believe the internationalist propagandists, the reason the world is in the predicament it is, is because America has been, and continues to be too isolationist—because we have never given the internationalists enough power with which to meddle in the affairs of other nations—because we have been too stingy with our purse strings—because we have never given them enough control over our resources, manpower and wealth—and because they have not yet been able to make enough outrageous secret deals with alien interests.

The only reason these men have been able to get away with this fantastic distortion of history is because we have let them get away with it, and the time has come to smash the Communist-Fair Deal-internationalist conspiracy that is destroying us. The supreme tragedy is that so many well-intentioned, patriotic Americans have been so completely taken in. At this very moment, internationalism is still peddled as a honeyed phrase that promises our only hope of salvation. Yet, at the same time, internationalism continues to be nothing but a smoke screen to cover up the brutal struggle for national survival which is now going on around the world.

Yet, this internationalism, which has already brought the peoples of the earth to their knees, is the same internationalism that has already tricked America into betraying her own interests in two world wars and is preparing to betray us in a third.

Mr. President, we were tricked into the First World War in Europe, behind the slogan, "We are going to make the world safe for democracy."

Yet, we now know that the American principles we were propagandized into believing were at stake, were thrown into the ash heap and an American President placed his stamp of approval on a war-breeding, inhuman absurdity called the Versailles Treaty.

Subsequent events prove beyond any question of a doubt that under the guise of internationalism our leaders betrayed our own vital interests and pulled the chestnuts of Britain and France out of the fires of power politics by yielding to the influence and pressure of foreign cliques, who wormed their spokesmen into the highest policy-making circles of our Government.

The record also shows that behind the scenes we continued to be led around by the nose by British imperial interests right up to and into the Second World War.

This time, behind the internationalist slogan of the Atlantic Charter and the "four freedoms" we fought the most terrible war in history, only to find that Communists had infiltrated our highest policy-making circles and used this international crusade and the international machinery that was set up for the prosecution of the war, and for the building of the so-called peace that followed, to sell America into the hands of Russia.

Mr. President, my record on these matters is clear.

I have consistently and bitterly opposed this betrayal of American principles.

I have continually warned that this internationalist conspiracy had been taken over by the Communists and was betraying our vital interests by squandering our substance and the blood of our youth in the four corners of the earth.

Not to secure and advance America's interest—not even to make the world safe for democracy—but to prepare the table for Stalin and make the world safe for communism.

A documentary review of this story is too complicated and involved to present at this particular moment, but I propose to bring this whole sordid story before the Senate in the not too distant future. Parts of it I have brought out in the past.

What is needed now is a recognition of the fact that this continuing internationalist conspiracy, together with its mushrooming organizations and machinery, is now as deadly an enemy as communism itself.

For if we keep going the way we are headed, we shall end up in world-imposed isolation, the object of the undying hatred and enmity of the very peoples who are our natural friends and allies, and saddled with the very totalitarian police state, with its inevitable poverty, degradation, and slavery from which these false prophets of internationalism promised to save the world.

This is why, Mr. President, if America is to be saved, the Congress is now confronted with such a seemingly impossible task.

For it is the duty of Congress, now, and of every Member of Congress who loves America, to prevent the perpetuation of this myth of internationalism for the purpose of saving the face of our internationalists, by pointing out that what is good for internationalism, now has become ruinous to the best interests of the United States of America.

Those who preached the unity-at-any price-with-Russia line, because they said, "Russia is a great peace-loving ally," might have helped keep internationalism and the United Nations alive, but so far as America is concerned, they were preaching treason.

The time has come to recognize that those who are now preaching the unity-at-any-price-with-our-allies propaganda are equally deceiving the American people.

The allies have already fallen out with us and are going their own merry way to take care of their own national interests, and are selling out America's interests and principles, while they leave us holding the bag, fighting their wars, and paying the bills.

Those who continue to preach dependence upon allies who desert us in our hour of need, when, if we are to survive, it will be by dependence on our own wits and strength, are also preaching treason.

At this very moment American GI's are fighting and dying in a United Nations war in Korea under directives that are drafted by a membership that includes our deadly enemies.

This may be good for internationalism, but it is treason to America.

Our GI's are fighting today in Korea against overwhelming odds that are backed by the military might that has been supplied by the underhanded trade practices of our allies, as well as our own Government.

This may be good for internationalism, but it is treason to the United States.

At this very moment American Armed Forces are locked in deadly combat with the hordes of Communist Chinese, who at this very moment, as I speak to the Senate, are represented in the United Nations and turned loose to berate, obstruct, and paralyze our own independence of action.

This may be good for internationalism, but it is treason to the United States.

At this very moment, although threatened with annihilation, our armies, fighting for their very lives, are unable to defend or protect themselves against the onslaught which is based north of the Yalu River in Manchuria because the United Nations will not permit us even to protect ourselves.

Mr. President, this may be good for the United Nations morale, but any red-blooded American knows that, so far as America is concerned, this is the rankest kind of treason.

Mr. President, at this very moment we are engaged in a terrible war which was entered into unofficially by an American President without the advice or consent of Congress—a war which the President has yet to declare; a war which had reduced the President of the United States himself to an errand boy for this anti-American international superconspiracy into which the United Nations has now degenerated.

Meanwhile, both Houses of Congress have been completely bypassed and reduced to rubber stamps to pay the terrible costs and to pick up the tragic pieces. That is what we are doing today.

Equally responsible, Mr. President, for this tragic predicament are members of the Republican Party itself, who, as officials of the American delegation to the United Nations, are continuing to perpetuate internationalism.

It must be clear now, Mr. President, that the time has come for an all-out fight to save America from self-destruction.

It is at this point the question arises, "What would you do?"

While I am speaking only for myself, Mr. President, I think I know how my people in Indiana feel about this tragedy that is taking place.

I think I know what they would expect me to do.

First, since the issue now is clear between this internationalism in which we are caught which enables alien interests to manipulate American policies and resources for their own ends, and an awakened Americanism, the time has come to make or break the Republican Party as the loyal opposition to this continuing sell-out of America.

What possible excuse does the Republican Party have today for existence if it continues to be symbolized by an elephant with a trap door in its belly?

There can be no middle ground now. The Republican Party either stands for the preservation of these United States or for an international conspiracy that is driving us to our destruction.

Mr. President, the hour is so much later than we think.

At this moment, those who have led us into this terrible crisis are preparing to declare a state of national emergency. They held a conference today—another bipartisan conference, it was called—and to demand the surrender of whatever freedom, resources, wealth, and manpower the American people have left, without clarifying our national objectives, without defining the strategic areas the defense of which is necessary to our security, and without making any effort to remove from office those parties who have been responsible for our present predicament.

The President has many emergency powers in his possession. He still holds such powers. Congress left the powers with him, particularly with respect to price and wage controls, and so forth. However, it is apparent that we must have more hysteria. Yet we do not declare what our national objectives are.

Indeed, America stands in desperate need of all-out action to create an impregnable national defense under a leadership we can trust.

But for the Republican Party now to blindly fall in line behind the dangerous untrustworthy and un-American leadership that continues to control our destiny, would be a raw act of unutterable folly.

For this administration is composed of the same personnel, the same Communist-coddling appeasers, the same fellow-traveling conspirators, the same well-intentioned, yet deluded world-savers, the same moral and mental perverts who have been the architects of the present disaster.

This discredited directorate has completely lost touch with and confidence in our form of government and our way of life.

It does not believe in a primary loyalty to America's interests and principles where our relations with other nations are concerned.

Even now, this same leadership is engaged in perpetuating the same self-defeating international hand-out policies which corrupt and confuse the international scene and which continue to bleed us white, even while we are left with no control whatever over the end uses of either our own resources or of our own flesh and blood.

Again I say, Mr. President, this is the same leadership which managed to use its internationalist slogans, blueprints, and war and peace machinery to betray America in two world wars, and which succeeded in its betrayal only because of its determined strangulation of Americanism and American patriots who dared to defend America.

Now, Mr. President, this demand for total mobilization, if acquiesced in by the Republican Party, amounts to a surrender right into the hands of these enemies in our own midst, a surrender which spells the doom of our form of government and way of life.

Again I say, there is no possible reason for the continued existence of the Republican Party if, by its silence, it becomes an accomplice in this continuing internationalist betrayal of the American people.

America is fighting for survival and I do not see how any Republican can meekly surrender whatever freedom or integrity we have left, to the leadership which is determined to use the same machinery, the same slogans, the same sinister objectives of internationalism, to save America from the very mess into which they have plunged us.

How can any Republican now sanction a complete surrender of totalitarian powers to such a leadership, when the same outrageous secret agreements that betrayed us are still on the diplomatic books, when secret diplomacy is still in the saddle, making a mockery of the Senate's traditional treaty-making powers, when the same political and diplomatic personnel that has been completely discredited as either incompetent, untrustworthy, or un-American, still are in power and driving the American people to their destruction, when the same hand-out policies and the same suicidal enforce-a-global-peace philosophy makes it impossible to define attainable national objectives, when the very military strategy on which this global goose chase is based could not be better designed to play into the hands of Moscow, and when mounting global commitments which are impossible to fulfill threaten to bankrupt this Nation and turn America permanently upside down and inside out?

It is time the Republican Party took a stand for America.

For myself, there is no point in continuing to attack a democratic leadership that has gone berserk, when self-appointed spokesmen for the Republican Party are down on their worshipful knees, crawling around, licking the heels of the same false gods.

Second, we must repudiate the policies and purge the personnel which have conspired to bring this tragedy upon us.

This means a repudiation of the secret agreements of Tehran-Yalta-Potsdam, as the only honest means of bringing about a clean break with the treasonable betrayals of the past.

There are some who protest that this means war with Russia.

I can only say, Mr. President, that if a repudiation of the betrayals of humanity and of every American principle of decency and justice means war, the sooner we find it out the better.

Third, Mr. President, we must reorganize our foreign policy on the basis of a realism we have never known before.

This means a complete about-face in our dealings with the German and Japanese people, and the end to the senseless destruction which continues to go on in Germany. It is going on as I speak.

This also means the refusal to compromise with Communist China, and the demand that our so-called allies stop playing both ends against the middle, and help to organize European and Asiatic federations, on a basis of equality of membership and mutual interest. This must be made the basis of all future American cooperation. Meanwhile we should encourage all freedom-loving peoples behind the iron curtain and remain loyal to our proven friends.

Fourth, Congress must force the resignation of Mr. Acheson and Mr. Marshall as the symbols of the catastrophe that has occurred.

Clean out of the national administration, the double talkers, Communist sympathizers, collectivists, crackpots, and internationalist fellow travelers who put everybody else's interests above our own.

Fifth, since the United Nations itself has become a debating society death trap for American GI's, the time has come to revise it or to break it up.

Sixth, Mr. President, we need to halt every last dime of foreign hand-outs now pouring abroad through the international hand-out programs and machinery which our internationalist friends have devised.

We are only preparing the table for Stalin by continuing to feed the confusion and corruption of the anti-Soviet world which continues to play domestic politics with the fate of civilization.

Seventh, I am convinced, Mr. President, that with the crisis that exists, with international commitments, pacts, and treaties becoming more meaningless and futile by the hour and with our so-called allies turning neutral in our hour of need, the time has come to rely upon ourselves for our own protection, defense, security, and salvation, and to go to work immediately putting our own house in order.

This means withdrawing our troops to the Western Hemisphere and its strategic outposts, drawing a line, and sending an ultimatum to Mr. Stalin or any other aggressor, "You will cross this line only at your peril."

Then, Mr. President, we must set about building an impregnable national defense, the core of which should be a striking power capable of destroying at the source any threat to the security of these United States.

Mr. President, I make no claim to being a prophet, but I am absolutely convinced that if we are to save our form of government and our way of life, if we are to survive, this is the direction in which America must now move, and I want to serve notice on this administration, my Democratic colleagues, and my fellow Republicans that this is where I have stood in the past and where I shall always stand.

For myself I am willing to pour out everything America possesses in defense of these United States, but not another dime and not another American life to enable international dreamers to continue pouring out our substance and our lifeblood itself down the rat holes of the earth.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks an article entitled "Kennedy Calls Policy 'Suicide,'" published in the Baltimore Sun of December 13, 1950. Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, delivered an address in Charlottesville, Va., last night.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

KENNEDY CALLS POLICY "SUICIDE"—FORMER AMBASSADOR SAYS UNITED STATES HAS "OIL BUT NO FRIENDS"

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., December 12.—Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, said tonight our foreign policy is suicidal and has made no foul-weather friends.

Kennedy also charged that United States foreign policy has solidified communism, sapped our economic strength, failed to provide a strong defense in this hemisphere, and is politically and morally a bankrupt policy.

He proposed that the United States get out of Korea and any other place in Asia where we cannot hope to hold our defense, and to stop wasting our resources in an idle attempt to hold the line of the Elbe or the line of the Rhine.

SPEAKS AT LAW SCHOOL FORUM

Kennedy gave his views in a speech at the University of Virginia Law School Forum.

Kennedy, in his talk, said this country had expanded its political and financial programs on an almost unbelievable wide scale, interfering in the Italian elections, spending billions in aid to Greece and Turkey, through the Marshall plan and in other military aid.

"Now in Korea we are fighting the fourth greatest war in our history," he said.

"What have we in return for this effort, friends? We have far fewer friends than we had in 1945. * * *

"Where is there in all Europe any buffer against a massed Russian onslaught? Worse than this, where is there any determination to create such a buffer?"

"OIL BUT NO FRIENDS"

Kennedy said that the United States has "oil but no friends" in the Middle East and that "Indonesia, Malaya, Indochina are in revolt or heavy with discontent at the influences we represent."

Saying that Russia and her satellites have military strength "of a type that the world has never seen," Kennedy added:

"To engage these vast armies on the European or the Asian Continent is foolhardy, but that is the direction toward which our policy has been tending.

"That policy is suicidal. It has made us no foul-weather friends. It has kept our armament scattered over the globe."

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS FOR LOSSES AND DAMAGE TO PORTUGUESE TERRITORY OF MACAO

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9484) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights.

RELIEF OF THE PAN AMERICAN UNION

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5902.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5902, which will be read by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 5902) for the relief of the Pan American Union.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Texas?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, is there any reason why the pending bill should be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. CONNALLY. I must leave to attend a meeting of the Committee on Finance. The consideration of the bill will require only a few minutes.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the Senator know whether or not there is likely to be some discussion?

Mr. CONNALLY. I think not.

Mr. WHERRY. Will a vote be required?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am sure that a yea-and-nay vote will not be necessary. The Committee on Foreign Relations reported the bill unanimously, and there is no controversy over it.

Mr. WHERRY. If that is the case, I shall not object to the request of the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Texas?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with an amendment on page 2, line 1, after the word "organization", to insert a colon and "Provided, That the government of the District of Columbia shall reimburse the Treasury of the United States for such amount."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, this is a bill relating to the reimbursement of the Pan American Union for an amount which it was forced by the District of Columbia government to pay in the form of an inheritance tax.

Many Senators will remember Dr. Rowe, who was for many years the head of the Pan American Union. I am sure that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] will remember Dr. Rowe. He was a very public-spirited man.

Dr. Rowe was killed by an automobile striking him some years ago. In his will he bequeathed $493,680.44, practically all of his estate, to the Pan American Union as a loan fund for Latin-American students desiring to study in the United States, and for the personnel of the Union.

The District of Columbia government stepped in and said, "You must pay us an inheritance tax." Under the force of their pressure, an inheritance tax of $54,000 was grabbed by the District government.

The bill provides that the Pan American Union shall be reimbursed in the sum of $54,691.65, but that the District government must pay back to the Government of the United States a similar sum, so that the Federal Government will not be out anything, and the District government will be forced to repay to the United States the amount which was unjustly, we think, demanded of Dr. Rowe's estate, and which his estate paid.

That is all there is to the bill, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS FOR LOSSES AND DAMAGE TO PORTUGUESE TERRITORY OF MACAO

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9484) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate question now automatically reverts to House bill 9484, Calendar 2581, which is the present unfinished business, it having been made so on the motion of the Senator from Illinois just before the Senator from Indiana [Mr. JENNER] began to speak.

Mr. WHERRY. I understand the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT] had asked that that bill be laid aside temporarily and that another bill be taken up for consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understood, but that was not done.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON], who was prepared to handle the bill relating to the Portuguese territory of Macao, was interrupted by a speech, and meanwhile was obliged to go elsewhere.

I now wish to bring up two bills which are among the four the minority leader discussed with the majority leader, and and to which the majority leader has heretofore referred.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, which bill does the Senator puropose to take up first?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. House bill 8546, Calendar No. 2580, to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection to the action proposed to be taken by the Senator from Arkansas.

AMENDMENT OF PHILIPPINE PROPERTY ACT OF 1946

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate temporarily lay aside House bill 9484, and proceed to consider Calendar No. 2580, House bill 8546, to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 8546) to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, the General Appropriations Act of 1951 provides that the Philippine Alien Property Administration shall cease to exist after June 30, 1951. That agency of this Government must wind up its business in the Philippines by that time. In order to do so, it is necessary to amend the Philippine Property Act so that suits brought against the Administration may be brought in United States Courts rather than in Philippine Courts as now provided by law. Failure to amend the law would mean that the United States would need to continue to maintain facilities in the Islands to defend a very small number of suits that might be brought.

At the present time there are only 44 claims pending and on the basis of experience not more than 5 percent of these claims will result in litigation.

There is no opposition to the bill, which was proposed by the Philippine Alien Property Custodian. Neither the Philippine Government nor any claimant has opposed the bill.

I ask for immediate consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, do I understand the bill came from the Foreign Relations Committee with unanimous approval, and that there was no objection whatever to it?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the bill come before the Senate with the unanimous recommendation by the committee that it be passed?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 8546) to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946 was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS RAINY RIVER, BAUDETTE, MINN.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent temporarily to lay aside House bill 9484, and that the Senate proceed to consider House bill 7445.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to consider House bill 7445, which will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 7445) authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, as I understand the parliamentary situation, the distinguished Senator from Arkansas is now asking that the unfinished business, which is H. R. 9484, be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. R. 7445. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, this bill which was passed by the House last August authorizes the village of Baudette, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Rainy River connecting Baudette with Canada. Congressional action is necessary because the bridge will be across an international boundary. There are a number of precedents for action of this type by the Congress.

This legislation does not authorize the appropriation of funds. Arrangements for the cost of construction are to be made by the village of Baudette. The costs will be amortized by tolls. After the bridge is paid for, it is to be operated free of tolls.

The committee has received no evidence of opposition to the bill. Its passage has been approved by the Department of the Army and the Department of State.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, were any amendments offered in the committee?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. There were no amendments offered.

Mr. WHERRY. And the bill comes from the committee unanimously indorsed by its membership?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7445) authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS FOR LOSSES AND DAMAGE TO PORTUGUESE TERRITORY OF MACAO

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9484) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I understand that House bill 9484 is the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, the so-called Portuguese claims arise out of the accidental wartime bombing by American aircraft of the Island of Macao on January 16, February 25, and June 11, 1945. Liability for this type of destruction visited upon neutral territory and nationals is clearly established in international law. Moreover, these claims were at first presented to the Congress by the State Department in company with the Swiss claims, which were identical in character and for which the Congress has voted compensation.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Portugal the sum of 1,172,762 patacas, or about $202,559.52 at the December 31, 1949, rate of exchange. Of this sum 1,043,714.35 patacas is principal and 129,048.04 patacas is interest at 2½ percent up to December 31, 1949. In addition interest at the rate of 71.49 patacas daily from December 31, 1949, to the date of settlement is provided for.

The claims have been thoroughly investigated by the Department of the Army, and it is on the basis of these recommendations that compensation due Portugal has been calculated. The interest rate of 2½ percent is lower than the rate of 3½ percent paid on the Swiss claims. Portugal is now a member of the North Atlantic Treaty. Therefore, not only legally is the United States liable for the damages, but politically, too, it is expedient for us to make these payments. The maintenance of friendly and honorable relations with Portugal is both a matter of deep interest and of vital concern to the security of the United States. The House has already passed the measure. The Committee on Foreign Relations urges the Senate to do likewise. The bill was reported to the Senate unanimously.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. WHERRY. I am only asking these questions in the interest of bringing out all the information possible. I have not seen the report on the bill.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. A report has been filed.

Mr. WHERRY. Does the amount carried by the bill represent the total sum of the claims against us, or will other bills follow?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The bill covers the total amount.

Mr. WHERRY. The amount covered by the bill will be the one and final and only payment to be made?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. WHERRY. Are the claims in the category of claims which have heretofore come before the Senate, such as the Swiss claims?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. They are identical with the Swiss claims, only smaller in amount.

Mr. WHERRY. Yes; I understand. I only ask with respect to the principle involved, not the amount.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 9484) was ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to consider executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

William F. Riley, of Iowa, to be United States district judge for the southern district of Iowa, vice Charles A. Dewey, retired; and Walter M. Bastian, of the District of Columbia, to be United States district judge for the District of Columbia.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

Stephen J. Spingarn, of New York, to be a Federal Trade Commissioner, for the unexpired term of 7 years from September 26, 1946; and Hugh W. Cross, of Illinois, to be Interstate Commerce Commissioner for the term expiring December 31, 1957.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair). If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—NOMINATION PASSED OVER

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Anna M. Rosenberg, of New York, to be Assistant Secretary of Defense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination will be passed over.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Robert T. Creasey, of Texas, to be Assistant Secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of John Thad Scott, Jr., of Texas, to be a member of the National Mediation Board.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objective, the nomination is confirmed.

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of George J. Bott, of Maryland, to be general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Hon. Oliver J. Carter to be United States district judge for the northern district of California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Edward P. Murphy to be United States district judge for the northern district of California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Hon. William M. Byrne to be United States district judge for the southern district of California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Public Health Service.

Mr. McFARLAND. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Public Health Service be confirmed en bloc.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Public Health Service are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. McFARLAND. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, December 14, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate December 13 (legislative day of November 27), 1950.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Robert T. Creasey, of Texas, to be Assistant Secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor.

NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD

John Thad Scott, Jr., of Texas, to be a member of the National Mediation Board, term expiring February 1, 1954.

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD

George J. Bott, of Maryland, to be General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, term of 4 years.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES

Hon. Oliver J. Carter to be United States district judge for the northern district of California. (Now serving under a recess appointment.)

Edward P. Murphy to be a United States district judge for the northern district of California. (New position.)

Hon. William M. Byrne to be United States district judge for the southern district of California. (Now serving under a recess appointment.)

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The following-named candidates for appointment in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service:

To be sanitary engineer (equivalent to the Army rank of major), effective date of acceptance

Euald C. Warkentin

To be junior assistant pharmacists (equivalent to the Army rank of second lieutenant), effective date of acceptance

Edward J. Martin
George J. Gruber
Albert B. Ripley

The following-named candidates for appointment and promotion in the Regular Corps of the Public Health Service:

To be senior scientist (equivalent to the Army rank of lieutenant colonel), effective September 29, 1950

Leslie A. Chambers

To be junior assistant pharmacist (equivalent to the Army rank of second lieutenant), effective November 24, 1950

John W. Toole

To be senior assistant sanitarians (equivalent to the Army rank of captain), effective date indicated

Harold Wainess, November 2, 1950.
Darold W. Taylor, November 8, 1950.

To be senior assistant nurse officer (equivalent to the Army rank of captain), effective November 2, 1950

Mary G. Damiani

To be senior surgeons (equivalent to the Army rank of lieutenant colonel), effective date indicated

Allen B. Eschenbrenner, September 28, 1950.
William J. Brown, September 28, 1950.
Ralph W. McComas, September 29, 1950.
James A. Smith, October 2, 1950.
Frederick G. Gillick, October 13, 1950.
Louis Jacobs, November 6, 1950.
Carl L. Larson, December 26, 1950.

Senior assistant surgeon to be surgeon (equivalent to the Army rank of major), effective Oct. 25, 1950

Arthur E. Rikli

To be senior assistant sanitary engineer (equivalent to the Army rank of captain), effective Oct. 11, 1950

Ronald G. Macomber

To be assistant sanitary engineer (equivalent to the Army rank of first lieutenant), effective Oct. 11, 1950

George W. Burke, Jr.

To be senior nurse officers (equivalent to the Army rank of lieutenant colonel), effective Oct. 31, 1950

Lorena J. Murray
Ellwynne M. Vreeland
Zella Bryant
Esther A. Garrison
Elsie T. Berdan
L. Margaret McLaughlin
Ruth I. Gillan

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. PRIEST.

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

DECEMBER 13, 1950.

I hereby designate the Honorable J. PERCY PRIEST to act as Speaker pro tempore today.

SAM RAYBURN,
Speaker.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art our refuge and strength, our companion and counselor, humbly and gratefully we would acknowledge our dependence upon Thee, for always and everywhere we need Thee.

We need Thee in the morning years when life is carefree and full of adventure and hope. We need Thee when we are in the midway of our course and the burdens are heavy and responsibilities are great. We need Thee in the eventide of life when the shadows lengthen and there is only a little way to go.

Grant that in these perilous days when our pilgrimage is beset with so many hardships and difficulties we may have the glad assurance that the spiritual resources are adequate and available.

We pray that they may give us inward steadfastness in our struggle for peace and righteousness. May we be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might, for Thou art our God forever and ever and will be our guide even unto death.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REMOVE SECRETARY OF STATE ACHESON

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, it should be obvious even to President Truman that Acheson has completely lost the confidence of the Congress and of the country. With America facing one of the most critical times in our history, the President has not taken the one step which would do more to convince our people of a sincere desire for unity than any other single move—the replacing of Acheson as Secretary of State and the cleaning up of the State Department.

The matter transcends partisan politics. From a selfish standpoint the Republican cause probably would be better served with Acheson remaining in office, but the welfare of the Nation must come first and I would be derelict in my duty if I did not speak out for the citizens I represent, many of whom have written to me bitterly protesting the continued presence of Acheson in his high office.

This is no time for America to look backward except that we may profit by our past mistakes. We must now make the best of a tragic harvest in the field of international relations and do those things that will strengthen America for the heavy tasks all of us face.

The need for national unity is paramount. To achieve this unity there must be widespread trust in and respect for our leadership.

For the President to defy the crescendo of demands now sweeping the country that a new Secretary of State be named is to impair national morale at a time when the highest morale is desperately needed.

MEMBERSHIP IN AMERICAN LEGION

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. LECOMPTE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing two bills which I think will appeal to every Member of this House. The bills are for the purpose of carrying out resolutions adopted by the American Legion at the convention in Los Angeles in October of this year.

The first of these bills provides for an amendment to the national charter of the American Legion and is to enable the heroic members of the armed services in Korea to become eligible for membership in the American Legion. Eligibility is also extended to citizens of the United States on active duty in the armed services with governments associated with the United States in the present conflict.

My colleague the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] is associated with me in the introduction of these bills and will propose similar measures. Under the rules it is not permissible for two Members of the House to jointly sponsor legislation, and separate bills must be introduced even though the measures are identical.

Mr. Speaker, one of the resolutions adopted at Los Angeles by the national convention of the American Legion reads as follows:

Be it resolved, That the national judge advocate be directed to frame an appropriate charter amendment to be submitted to the Congress so as to add to the eligibility provision thereof the period June 25, 1950, to and including the date of cessation of hostilities, or for those continuing to serve honorably thereafter; and for citizens of the United States on active duty in the armed forces of governments associated with the United States in the present conflict.

The second of these bills provides for giving the national organization of the American Legion additional protection of emblems, badges, seal, and so forth, and a resolution to this effect was adopted at Los Angeles by the American Legion convention.

These two bills have the endorsement of the national legislative commission of the American Legion, whom I have consulted in connection with the preparation and introduction of these measures. I hope that the appropriate committee of the House will act on these bills promptly and that we will be able to get them enacted into law before adjournment of this Congress. I understand that similar legislation is being given early consideration by the Senate. Let us speed these measures to the White House before Christmas.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

THE ADMINISTRATION IS ENTIRELY TOO SLOW IN BUILDING OUR DEFENSES

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include part of a letter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, the people in my area are away ahead of the administration in realizing that we must rapidly get prepared to defend ourselves.

I am inserting in the RECORD as part of these remarks a letter which I will read in part, which gives the views of a very intelligent man in my home city. His general views have been expressed to me in writing by other constituents. The man that wrote this letter is a thoroughly responsible, successful, and patriotic citizen. Since he is not seeking any notoriety for his views, I am omitting his name.

This is the letter:

DECEMBER 7, 1950.

DEAR ROY: This letter does not require an answer—because I know how busy you are.

People out here are not only concerned but they are frightened, with the lethargy of the Government's preparations for defense, and to rebuild and rearm our military services. Some people doubt that the west coast can be defended or held if Russia should jump soon.

The feeling is to get into military production fast, and accept immediate economic controls on prices, wages, manpower, taxes, etc. Public opinion out here has crystallized much more rapidly than the Government thinks. They want to rearm for protection as quickly as it can be done. They are concerned about their safety, not their financial security or the unpleasantness of wartime controls and dislocations.

They are fed up with the fact that the military in the Pentagon are apparently still squabbling among themselves and can't make up their minds as to what they want—6 months after the outbreak of war. We're still piddling. Nero and his fiddle would take a back seat to our present efforts. You have appropriated the money, but the small number of contracts that have been let or even discussed with industry is shameful.

Why don't we get going? Does anyone back there doubt that this is it—the first stages of all out war—world war III? The elections are over—they still don't have to play politics, do they?

As I said, Roy, this letter does not require an answer; but the contents are just about all people talk about out here these days.

Sincerely.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. JOHNSON] has expired.

RESOURCES AND PRODUCTION

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, during World War II, I asked the Speaker to invite the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as well as the Secretaries of the various departments, to come before the House and present information to the Members which would be of value in regard to the conduct of the war. I felt then, as I firmly believe now, that the Congress should be informed and told about the general objectives the country must accomplish.

Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask you to request Mr. Stuart Symington, Director of the National Security Resources Board, and who is responsible for our industrial mobilization, to meet with the Members of the House and explain what has been done and what is planned to be done regarding the organizing and preparation of American industrial power to meet any possible emergency, as well as the demands of total war.

The American people today have a feeling of fear and uncertainty regarding the future. Lack of knowledge nourishes fear. If the Government possesses knowledge or information which, if given to the people, would allay their fears and give them courage, and through this courage the strength to face the future, then it seems to me the Government would be performing an act of immeasurable value to the strength of our whole country by imparting and explaining to the people the activities either taking place or which are planned in the immediate future. This would provide the confidence and the courage that is so greatly needed.

Efficiently organized American industrial power is vastly greater than that possessed by all of the Communist countries combined. Within this industrial genius lies the strength of America. With American industry operating at capacity, communism cannot compete with this power. With American industry mobilized and in operation, the leadership of communism has better sense than to challenge this industrial might of America.

It is with this thought in mind, Mr. Speaker, that I think it would be most enlightening to the Members of Congress and to the American people to have Mr. Symington come before us and describe what he is doing to bring our great industrial resources into capacity production. There is nothing I know of at the present time which would give more confidence and courage to the Nation and cause more fear and consternation to the leaders of communism and their supporters.

SUICIDAL UNITED STATES POLICY

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that in this world struggle we are opposed to more than one dictator, Josef Stalin; we are opposed to communism. I do not want to see our country sucked into a diplomatic Pearl Harbor in this Tito business. May I read from the New York Times of today a report on Joe Kennedy's speech at the University of Virginia last night?

Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, said tonight that our foreign policy is suicidal and has made us no foul-weather friends.

Mr. Kennedy also charged that United States foreign policy has solidified communism, sapped our economic strength, failed to provide a strong defense in this hemisphere, and is politically and morally a bankrupt policy.

Unless we adopt some sensible amendments to this bill today, I am voting against the measure.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech delivered today by Mr. POAGE in Texas before the Farm Bureau Federation.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. FEIGHAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article.

Mr. HARRISON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. GATHINGS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include two editorials.

Mr. BOGGS of Louisiana asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. LANE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include extraneous matter.

Mr. WILSON of Texas asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech by Mr. Harry Withers.

Mr. McGREGOR asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article written by Louis Bromfield.

Mr. BEALL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial from the Baltimore Sun.

Mr. ELLSWORTH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. VURSELL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech by Thomas Stack.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE asked and was given permission to extend her remarks and include a letter from a constituent.

Mr. MORTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include extraneous material.

Mr. SADLAK asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the following title:

H. R. 9840. An act to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 294]

Biemiller	Gillette	Pfeifer,
Boykin	Gorski	Joseph L.
Bramblett	Hart	Pfeiffer,
Brehm	Havenner	William L.
Buckley, Ill.	Hébert	Poage
Burnside	Herter	Powell
Cannon	Holifield	Rich
Cavalcante	Irving	Sabath
Chatham	Javits	Scudder
Chesney	Jennings	Sheppard
Christopher	Jones, Ala.	Smathers
Cole, N. Y.	Kee	Smith, Ohio
Combs	Keefe	Stanley
Crook	Kennedy	Talle
Crosser	Kerr	Teague
Davenport	King	Tollefson
Davies, N. Y.	Kruse	Van Zandt
Dawson	Lichtenwalter	Werdel
Dingell	Lodge	Whitaker
Dondero	McCarthy	Whitten
Eaton	McGrath	Widnall
Eberharter	McMillen, Ill.	Willis
Engel, Mich.	Miller, Md.	Wolcott
Flood	Murray, Wis.	Wood
Fogarty	O'Toole
Gavin	Passman

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this roll call 355 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

YUGOSLAVIA EMERGENCY RELIEF ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1950

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 9853) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 9853, with Mr. McSWEENEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word and ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, in order to understand the action proposed by the bill under consideration, let us look for a moment at what we have done for Yugoslavia in the past.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee report on the Senate companion bill printed in last Friday's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD gives in detail the money which American taxpayers have given and made available to Yugoslavia.

During the war we gave them $36,666,000 under lend-lease and plan A. From 1945 through 1947 we gave them $299,000,000 under UNRRA procedure. In 1949 we furnished them through the Export-Import Bank $55,000,000, and in 1950 we have already furnished them $31,400,000 worth of food supplies.

So far as I know, no one disputes the accuracy of these figures contained in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee report on this legislation.

During the UNRRA years, a total of $430,000,000 was provided Yugoslavia under that plan. Seventy-two percent of this amount was furnished by the United States.

The magazine World Report in its issue of January 21, 1947, stated that taxes would go up in Eastern Europe when supplies from UNRRA ended, for the reason that the free shipments sent in under UNRRA were sold, with the proceeds intended to aid reconstruction. This magazine further stated that Yugoslavia may realize as high as a third of her revenue from sales of UNRRA goods.

I asked at that time the Library of Congress to check this statement for me, and the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress did check it and furnished me a report which said that UNRRA sent supplies into Yugoslavia totaling 2,000,000 tons, with a value of nearly $400,000,000, by the end of 1946, and that UNRRA shipped into Yugoslavia enough food to give every man, woman, and child in the country more than 150 pounds of food per year, and in addition to this, 9 pounds of textiles per person, two pairs of trousers, two shirts, three union suits, six pairs of socks, one sweater, one overcoat, and six handkerchiefs.

This report further contained the statement:

> There can be no doubt that the whole of the Yugoslav Army and Air Corps was maintained on our supplies. The 12,000 trucks which UNRRA gave to Yugoslavia have, in the main, been diverted to moving supplies and soldiers of Tito's army.
>
> The fact is that in terms of the total economy of the country Yugoslavia has received as a gift goods equal in sales value to more than 10 years of its total prewar national budget and to three full years of its gross national income, Yugoslavia has thus been saved from complete collapse despite Soviet depredation, only by the movement of UNRRA supplies into the country.

This report from the Library of Congress further stated that based on information furnished it, it would appear that one-third of the Yugoslav revenue for 1946 came from the sales of UNRRA supplies.

Thus, high American taxes in 1946 at one and the same time kept Yugoslavian taxes low, and paid for the equipment and maintenance of the Yugoslavian Army.

Thus our gifts, which we thought were going to starving people in Yugoslavia, actually went to swell the treasury of the Red Yugoslavia Government, then, as now, under the domination of the same Communist Tito.

In this same article prepared by the Library of Congress, it was stated:

> What happened in Yugoslavia was that the Communists were able to do as they pleased with UNRRA supplies. People could buy UNRRA supplies only at government-controlled markets at prices which were from 3 to 30 times normal prices. By this selling at a huge profit, the goods we have been sending free to Yugoslavia, Tito's regime has obtained funds to equip and support an army which has put every eighth man in uniform. Even our country could hardly afford to keep such a vast manpower idle. Tito was able to do it on UNRRA.

Thus, we with our gifts enabled Red Yugoslavia to equip and maintain an army devoted to the promotion of communism.

The weak argument is now advanced in behalf of this bill, that if we now send $38,000,000 in foodstuffs to Yugoslavia, our generosity will sway the Communist dictator, Tito, to such an extent that his military strength will be a threat to Russia in the event America and Russia go to war.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. The gentleman's statement leads me to wonder what if anything of sanity and strength there is left to us besides Westbrook Pegler, Fulton Lewis, George Sokolsky, and the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I thank the distinguished gentleman from Georgia for his comment.

Mr. VURSELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. VURSELL. I should like to suggest that the large amount of funds the gentleman has listed as furnished by us to Yugoslavia was the result of allowing Communists to get control of the allocation and distribution of UNRRA funds, of which the United States contributed 72 percent of the total. The gentleman is rendering a service giving us these figures showing the wastefulness of the American taxpayer's money through UNRRA in connection with Yugoslavia. Why again inaugurate another program of such waste?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I thank the gentleman from Illinois for his remarks.

If the $38,000,000 we gave them during the war failed to achieve this result, how can it be hoped that $38,000,000 now will accomplish the purpose? If the $385,000,000 additional which we have poured into Yugoslavia since the war including $55,000,000 last year and $31,000,000 this year, has failed to accomplish that purpose, how can it be hoped that another $38,000,000 poured in now will tip the scales and accomplish the purpose which up to this time nearly a half billion dollars has failed to do? Let it be remembered that the taxpayers of America already have poured into the coffers of this Communist country $421,000,000, very nearly half a billion of taxpayers' money.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman makes the statement that we gave Yugoslavia $50,000,000 last year. Is that an accurate statement?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. We furnished $55,000,000.

Mr. COOLEY. And that we gave it to them?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I did not say we gave it to them. I said we furnished it to them under the Export-Import Bank plan.

Mr. COOLEY. That was a legitimate loan; was it not?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I am not going into whether it was legitimate or not. I said that it was furnished to Yugoslavia out of the taxpayers' money of this country, which is a fact.

Mr. COOLEY. The reason I interrupted the gentleman was this: I was under the impression that he had left the impression with the House that we made a donation in excess of $50,000,000.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I distinctly said it went under the Export-Import Bank plan.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, it was at least doing business with a Communist country at a time when we were with a death struggle with communism.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. That is true, I will say to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. As a matter of fact, the $55,000,000 referred to is to be repaid in metal, things taken out of the ground, including lead, in competition with the products of our own mines in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentlemen be permitted to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, Tito is as blackhearted and treacherous a Communist as Stalin himself. The very thought of voting to spend American taxpayers' money to support the Communist government of a Communist dictator is as repugnant and abhorrent to me as any act which I can conceive.

In the debate yesterday proponents of this bill stated that it is not based upon humanitarian motives, that it is not based upon a principle, but that it is a gamble, and a calculated risk. To me it is neither. The advocates of this bill seem to think that this generosity on our part will generate such gratitude on the part of Tito that his attitude toward Russia will stiffen and toward America will soften up.

We could make no greater mistake than this. There is no such word as gratitude in the Soviet dictionary.

If American generosity could arouse gratitude in Tito's heart, he would long ago have been our ally.

The four hundred and twenty-one million we have already furnished him has not in the slightest degree made him an ally of ours. Four hundred and twenty-one million dollars more will not make him our ally.

Now what is the reason for such haste in bringing up this legislation? Why must we hurry so to give this conscienceless dictator $38,000,000 more worth of supplies, when we have already sent him $55,000,000 in 1949 and $31,000,000 in November 1950, particularly and especially when there is no food emergency in Yugoslavia? Does anyone believe there is a food emergency in Yugoslavia? If so, let us look at the facts. They are set forth in detail both in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee report and in the House Foreign Affairs Committee report. The facts are, as set out in detail in both these committee reports, that in this present year Yugoslavia produced 108 percent of its normal crop of sugar, 100 percent of its normal crop of rice, 88 percent of its normal crop of wheat, 87 percent of its normal crop of barley, 83 percent of its normal crop of rye, 79 percent of its normal crop of oats, and 59 percent of its normal crop of corn. These are undisputed figures.

We are just now in the harvest season. This year's production cannot have been depleted to any substantial extent by this time. These yields, which approach so nearly to normal crop production, will not have been seriously depleted even by next spring.

Notwithstanding the fact that Yugoslavia's sugar production this year was 108 percent of normal, the food distribution program under this bill, and the committee report shows it, provides for $2,400,000 worth of sugar to be sent to Yugoslavia.

Notwithstanding the fact that Yugoslavia's rice production this year was 100 percent of normal, the food distribution program under this bill provides that $1,100,000 worth of rice is to be sent to Yugoslavia.

Thus in this food distribution bill totaling $38,000,000, $3,500,000 of it, or nearly one tenth of the total amount, is to be spent to send to Yugoslavia two articles of food of which Yugoslavia produced this year 100 percent of the normal crop, of one of these items, and 108 percent of the normal crop of the other item.

Mr. Chairman, how eager must this Congress and our Government be to give away American taxpayer's money to do an act of this kind? How gullible must this Congress and the American people be to engage in this kind of give-away program? I have not the slightest intention of voting one 5 cents to send more than a million dollars worth of rice to a Communist country which produced 100 percent of its normal rice crop this year.

I have not the slightest intention of voting one 5 cents of American taxpayers' money to send $2,400,000 worth of sugar to a Communist country which produced a 108 percent of its normal sugar crop this year.

Further and beyond this, I have not the slightest intention of voting one 5 cents of American taxpayers' money to strengthen and bolster up any Communist government anywhere in the world.

We are fighting communism now in Korea. We are fighting Korean Communists and Chinese Communists there. A Communist is a Communist, regardless of his nationality.

Communism cannot be defeated anywhere by coddling it.

I believe we are making ourselves simple in the eyes of the world by trying to coddle communism in Yugoslavia.

We have scattered our substance all over the face of the earth under the mistaken belief that friendship can be bought.

Friendship cannot even be bought among allies, let alone among enemies.

If Tito's friendship could be bought, we have already given him enough to buy it. If what we have already given him cannot buy it, then we do not have enough, and cannot raise enough money or supplies to buy his friendship.

We are on the verge of bankruptcy now. We owe $257,000,000,000. We are having to increase our military spending this year from $13,500,000,000 to a minimum of $50,000,000,000. We are on the verge this moment of going into wartime mobilization controls. We are saddling grave additional burdens upon the backs of our taxpayers, and yet the so-called statesmen of the world continue to coddle communism, and try to appease notorious Communist dictators.

We were gullible enough for a long time to say that Chinese Communists were different from Russian Communists. Our Communist coddlers said that they were not genuine Communists—they were simply agrarian reformers. Too late now we realize how greviously wrong that policy was.

While our boys in Korea are now being killed on the battlefields and frozen in the subzero temperatures of Korea, some of them being burned, butchered, and shot in the back as prisoners of war, while Chinese Communists are doing this, while Chinese Communists are overrunning the little helpless country of Tibet, while Chinese Communists are overrunning French Indochina, and are engaged in spreading communism over the face of the earth just as efficiently and fast as Russia herself is spreading it, England still insists on aiding and abetting Red China to spread communism over the face of the earth by insisting that Red China be seated as a member of the United Nations organization.

Mr. Chairman, I say that there is one way and one way only to stop the spread of communism, and that is to oppose it openly, vigorously, and constantly. Communism cannot be stopped by appeasement. Communism cannot be stopped or even hindered by coddling it.

This legislation in my opinion is thoroughly unsound. I regard it as absurd. I believe it would be a most serious mistake to pass it, and I shall therefore vote against it.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FULTON: Page 1, line 4, after "1950" insert "Whereas the Government of Yugoslavia has urgently requested relief due to drought conditions, and has expressed an intention to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations."

Mr. FULTON. To explain this amendment, it comes in right after the phrase, "That this act may be cited as the Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950." It is a "whereas clause" stating:

Whereas the Government of Yugoslavia has urgently requested relief, due to drought conditions, and has expressed an intention to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations—

And then you go on with the rest of the bill.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield to my good friend.

Mr. RICHARDS. I have just had an opportunity to read the gentleman's amendment. I do not think it would do the original purpose of the bill any harm, and I am willing to agree to it.

Mr. FULTON. I see my friend the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE], who with a congressional group in the last 4 or 6 weeks had visited Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia. He will corroborate that. When the Congressmen were there Tito had orally assured this group that he would scrupulously live up to his obligations as a member nation of the United Nations.

Then the question came up in the Foreign Affairs Committee—was this statement an official statement of the Government of Yugoslavia or was it just a casual statement to several Congressmen as United States private citizens, among whom were the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE] and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CHATHAM], of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. To remove that question as to whether it was merely a casual conversation by the head of the Yugoslav Government and to put it on the ground of an official communication made to representatives of the United States Government acting in their official capacity in investigating Yugoslavia, I have therefore prepared this amendment. It puts in the preamble of the bill as the specific inducement that the Government of Yugoslavia has urgently requested relief due to drought conditions and has expressed an intention to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations.

That puts the question this way: If the Government of Yugoslavia then accepts this relief based upon such an inducement or promise, we then have it as an official matter and not as a matter of conversation between Congressmen and Mr. Tito. I certainly think if Tito once has said it he should be perfectly willing in this bill to stand by it; do not you, Mr. BATTLE?

Mr. BATTLE. I agree.

Mr. FULTON. He agrees; I thank the gentleman.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does the gentleman think that placing the language in the bill will bind Mr. Tito? Will it establish a condition under which the money might be withheld if he fails to observe that as a condition?

Mr. FULTON. It is a statement of the record, of the official record of the relations between the United States and the Yugoslav Government as they stand at the time we pass this bill. Now then, under a later provision of this bill the President has the discretion of terminating relief. We cannot force Mr. Tito by an extraneous document to live up to his obligations under the United Nations charter, even though he has already agreed to that pledge. Nevertheless this amendment states the condition upon which this legislation is premised—that Tito himself, as an inducement to this Congress, has officially pledged this course to members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If it can be the interpretation of the gentleman's statment, that having it in the bill under those conditions or those circumstances, it may be we are pretending or thinking that we are establishing a condition, but certainly unless Mr. Tito himself subscribes to it, there is nothing binding there so far as he is concerned.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. KEATING. Did the gentleman in his prefatory paragraph in his statement here refer particularly to the guaranty of human rights and fundamental freedoms of the United Nations Charter?

Mr. FULTON. That is correct, and everything that goes with being a good member nation of the United Nations—that the Yugoslav Government will conform closely to the obligations under the United Nations Charter.

Mr. KEATING. Would the gentleman feel it would be necessary for the United Nations to take some affirmative action with regard to those human rights and fundamental freedoms in order to bind Tito to anything, even by inference?

Mr. FULTON. No affirmative UN action should be necessary. The obligation is assumed under the Charter. I could answer the gentleman further in this way: I have another amendment that ties in with this, which I will offer to the next section, paragraph 2, which will put specific conditions in the bill as conditions precedent upon which the United States Government must be assured before a written agreement on the terms of aid can be entered into.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] has expired.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULTON. That second proposed amendment says that "upon the express prior assurance by the Government of Yugoslavia," and then I cite the various items and others along the line that the gentlemen have suggested.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Would the gentleman say, in view of his statement, that he would feel that if Tito fails to live up to the implied commitments, the President would be obliged to withhold aid?

Mr. FULTON. If the Yugoslav Government does not conform to Tito's pledges set out in my currently considered preamble amendment, because of the change in the basic premise upon which this legislation is being based, the President must then, under the changed conditions on page 4, subsection (2) of section 6, terminate all assistance under this act. It is the intention of this amendment that aid shall be promptly terminated by the President under such conditions.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I think the Congress can certainly bind the President by establishing the conditions under which he extends aid. I do not think we can bind Tito.

Mr. FULTON. That is correct, but we want this express assurance by Tito placed in the bill as the basis on which the aid is extended.

Mr. CLEMENTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. CLEMENTE. Is there any difference in the pledge you have in your amendment for Marshal Tito to perform the obligations as a member of the United Nations and the pledge that he took when he joined the United Nations?

Mr. FULTON. No; there is none. But it simply states, as an official matter of the record, the relation between the Yugoslav Government and the United States Government, and that the Congress assumes that that course will be followed in dealing with the United States. As you know, previously the Yugoslav Government has certainly not lived up to the obligations of the United Nations Charter in many things—religion, the Greek orphans, freedom, and so forth. And, therefore, the express obtaining of this assurance is well warranted.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield to my friend from New Jersey.

Mr. CANFIELD. I hope that our colleagues who heard those remarks from Tito's own lips will elaborate on how he elaborated on them.

Mr. FULTON. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BATTLE] is here, and I hope he will do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] has again expired.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this mushy, moonshine, artificial, soft-pedaling, pussyfooting stuff as represented by this committee sickens me. I had thought that the visits made by Members of this body to foreign countries over the past few years was paying off, but, Mr. Chairman, I doubt now if that is so. I am against the wiles of communism wherever it exists, which is possibly everywhere.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word and I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, all of us must realize that in our day and generation tragic mistakes have been made. The miserable mistake, which was made in the partition of Germany we will long remember as one of the tragic mistakes of modern history. The same is true concerning the partition of Austria and even perhaps the partition of Korea.

In addition to these grave mistakes and to the others which have been made, I personally believe that our Nation made another grave and tragic mistake when it recognized Marshal Tito and the government he had established in Yugoslavia and when we placed our stamp of approval upon the elections which were held in Yugoslavia on November 11, 1945.

In the month of July 1945 even before the Yugoslavian elections and just after I had returned from a trip to Europe I made a speech on the floor of the House and at that time gave to the Members of the House the full benefit of information which I had been able to obtain concerning the situation then existing in Yugoslavia. I emphasized the ruthless manner in which Marshal Tito was then conducting the affairs of that great little country. I pointed out then that I had received information to the effect that he had either executed or exiled or imprisoned more than 60 professors of the University of Belgrade. A year later, our majority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] took the floor and told the House that in his program of religious persecutions Tito had caused to be executed or exiled 250 Catholic priests.

Within a few weeks after the November 1945 elections, I communicated with the Secretary of State, Hon. James Byrnes, and urged upon him the fact that we should not recognize Marshal Tito as the duly elected head of the Government of Yugoslavia. I then pointed out that the November elections were not in keeping with either the letter or the spirit of the Yalta Agreement, and I emphasized the fact that the citizens of that country had not been afforded free and unfettered elections and had not been accorded the rights and privileges of free and unfettered preelection activities. But, notwithstanding, our country—yes; our officials—recognized Marshal Tito and the government he had established in Yugoslavia. I did not trust Tito then; nor did I trust him when in 1947 he had his open break with Russia. I had no faith in his sincerity; nor have I ever approved or condoned the high crimes and misdemeanors of which he has been guilty. Many tragic events have happened in Yugoslavia and we are living in a fast-changing world. Others appeared to have faith in Tito's sincerity, but actually I had none.

During the past summer I was invited by the speaker of the Yugoslavian House of Representatives to visit Yugoslavia. After arriving in Belgrade, I was invited by Marshal Tito to have dinner with him. Having heard so many fantastic and fabulous stories about this man and his country, I welcomed the invitations and the opportunities.

Socially, Tito is a very likable fellow but not even his personal charm could cause me to forget the many blood-curdling stories which I had heard. My visit with him was very pleasant indeed. I never met a more friendly man nor a man who was more frank and forthright. After dinner we had a conference that lasted almost until midnight, and we talked of just about everything under the sun. When I found that he was apparently perfectly willing to discuss every subject I asked him about the Greek children, and I asked him why he did not return them immediately to Greece and to their parents and loved ones. Tito said that he was anxious to return the Greek children to Greece and to their parents but that he must insist on proper identification of them and of their parents, and he stated that he had no moral right to turn the children over to people who had no right to them. After discussing this situation with Tito we went almost immediately to Greece and conferred with the Prime Minister, and we told him that Tito was apparently sincere in his assertion that he was anxious to return Greek children to Greece and to their parents if proper identification of the children and the relationship could be established. The Prime Minister of Greece told us that he was delighted with such news and that he would immediately give public notice through the press and radio of Tito's willingness to return the children to their parents upon the presentation of proper identification. Since that time I have seen press reports to the effect that at least some of the Greek children have been appropriately identified and have been returned to their homes and parents.

Then I asked Marshal Tito: "Why is it, Marshal Tito, that you insist upon keeping Archbishop Stepinac in jail and making him a martyr? Why don't you free him and exile him and let him be forgotten?" His answer was: "I realize that I would make a lot of people happy if I could do just that, but the fact remains that such action would greatly offend all of the Serbs of Yugoslavia." Tito went on to say that the archbishop had acquired land extending over an area of 200 miles and that in an effort to protect himself and his property he had been a party to the crime of executing 6,000 Serbs. Whether that is true or not I do not know, but actually I had never heard that story before. I thought that the archbishop had been imprisoned as the result of some sort of religious persecution. I thought that he had been arrested and incarcerated without just cause. I did not know that he had joined hands with the German Army and had been particeps criminis in the killing of thousands of Serbs. Notwithstanding the archbishop's conduct Tito appeared willing to release him from prison if he would leave the country, even at the risk of offending a great number of his own people.

We do not seem to realize that the little country of Yugoslavia came into existence only a few short years ago. After World War I the country of Yugoslavia had its birth. It is made up of Czechs, Croats, Slovenes, Serbs, Rumanians, Bulgarians, Germans, and people of many nations. That is the kind of country Tito is trying to run. As I sat in luxurious quarters with Marshal Tito and looked at him dressed in a beautiful uniform covered with gold braid and as I realized the bloody march to power he had made and tried to appreciate his present predicament, I thought to myself that I would rather be a poor tenant farmer in North Carolina than to have that man's job.

I do not intend to condone crime nor to embrace dictatorship, both of which I hate and despise, but as I look at the map of the world and realize how hopelessly weak we are I am convinced that we can afford to make this gift to the people of Yugoslavia, not with the idea of strengthening Tito nor with the idea of perpetuating him in power, but as a friendly gesture to the right-thinking people of his country and in the hope that the people of Yugoslavia will appreciate our friendship, I shall vote for the pending bill. Until the end of the war we were embracing Russia. In our aid to Russia we were pouring out hundreds of millions of dollars, apparently in the honest belief that Russia was a real friend and ally. Tito was also friendly to Russia and his friendship continued until 1948. I asked Tito why he had broken with Russia and he said that Russia wanted to dominate the world and that he wanted no part of such a program. Of course Tito is a Communist. He frankly admits that he is a Communist, but somehow I am willing to believe that he has no designs on the world outside of his own country. Maybe I am wrong and maybe he has. Whether he is sincere remains a secret of the future, but the fact remains that we know that Tito has had a break with Stalin. We know too that a dictator must rule with an iron hand or he will not continue to be a dictator. I do not believe that Tito can ever again turn to the east and ask for aid. He must look to the west. If he should turn again to the east, off would go his head and I believe he knows it. He cannot show evidence of weakness, but he must at all times at least pretend to be strong. I have no idea that we will ever make a democrat out of Tito, but I do believe that by aiding the distressed people of his country we will be making an investment in our own future welfare. If his army will resist invasion this investment may prove worth while.

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BARDEN. Did Mr. Tito give you any good reason as to why he kidnapped the 9,000 children to begin with?

Mr. COOLEY. No. I do not think anybody asked him why he kidnapped them. I do not think anybody would admit it was a case of absolute kidnaping. Some of the parents were already in Yugoslavia. But that is not the problem we are dealing with.

When those of us who served on the Herter committee, the special committee on foreign aid, wanted to insist upon certain conditions being attached to our loans and grants to foreign countries and wanted further to insist upon bringing about certain internal reforms in the nations to be aided by our charity and generosity, we were met with the argument that we shall not use their economic power to influence the internal affairs of other nations. I believe that the time has come when all of us must realize that we must reexamine not only our foreign policy but our foreign-aid policy. If we could, forsooth, bring about necessary reforms in Yugoslavia, certainly it would be a consummation devoutly to be wished. But all of us know that that is not now possible. In our foreign-aid programs of the future we shall very carefully guard the expenditures of every single American dollar.

Let us be realistic about our situation in the world today. If the Communists should attack Yugoslavia, the city of Belgrade would be immediately surrendered and the soldiers of that city would, of necessity, take to the hills and carry on guerrilla warfare. I was not too greatly influenced by the remarks and assurances of Tito. I would not even now accept his mere statement as positive proof of his sincerity. I base my own opinion upon the information I obtained from many sources and from on-the-spot observations which I made. I earnestly believe that if the Communists invade Yugoslavia that Tito and his armies will fight to death resisting the foot of the invader. I am not kidding myself into believing that Tito is a reformed person, or that he will join the ranks of freemen, or that he will join with us in fighting Russia. But I do believe that he will do his dead-level best to keep the Russian Army off the soil of Yugoslavia.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Did Tito give any explanation of how they happened to shoot down American fliers over Yugoslavia?

Mr. COOLEY. No. I did not go into that with him. But let us look at the broad aspects of this picture. Take the map of the world. Here is something that appeared in a Los Angeles paper.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, here is something that appeared in a Los Angeles paper that you might want to show your constituents. It indicates how the world has been running red with communism. Here we are at this little appendix which you can cover with your finger nail, Korea, where they are challenging the civilized free world. Look at the defeats and the disappointments we have encountered over there. Look how easy it would be if Russia wanted to invade this territory over here. She could circumvent all of Tito's efforts and probably go around the soil of Yugoslavia. But here is an army that I believe will stand and fight and die, not in defense of democracy as we know it and love it, but in defense of their own territory. Tito has got a difficult job. He will try to survive. If he is assassinated or overthrown, or if death comes to him, none of us knows what will happen in Yugoslavia.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. These experts that are attesting to the Yugoslavia Army are the same experts, are they, that told us France had the best army in the world in 1939?

Mr. COOLEY. I do not know about that. I got this from our ambassador, I got this from our military and air attachés and other officials. I talked to members of the American press. I did not see or meet an American in Yugoslavia who did not believe the Yugoslavia soldier would fight in the defense of Yugoslavia.

Now, you cannot regard the Yugoslav soldier as a West Point graduate. Frankly, they look like a bunch of tramps. It is nothing but a slave army. They are working on the highways and the railways like we work our convicts in North Carolina and other States of this country. They are dirty, unkempt soldiers. But, that does not mean that they do not have courage enough to fight for their own country. Whether they will fight or not, or whether this is a good investment or not, I do not think any of us know, but I think it is a risk that we can afford to take.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. The gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Georgia have raised the question that was raised before about the Greek children. I would like to give, for the benefit of the House, the information that we have in the Committee on Foreign Affairs on that subject.

The Yugoslav Government has stated as of September 1, 1950, there were about 9,500 Greek children in Yugoslavia but that 8,300 of these were living with their parents, most of whom are Slavs from Greek Macedonia who fought with the guerrilla forces and do not now wish to return to Greece; in fact, it is doubtful whether the Greeks want them back. The Yugoslavs reported that the remaining 1,200 children were living in special camps; it is regarding these that the repatriation arrangements have been made and which are now being implemented.

Mr. COOLEY. I think the gentleman has accurate information.

In closing let me suggest this: If we are going to carry out our program of resisting aggression in the world, if you look at this map, then I want to ask you how in the name of high heaven can we carry out such a program? We are woefully weak everywhere in this world. I honestly think that Soviet Russia could walk into Iran, Iraq, and Syria, and take them over by telephone, but for the Yugoslav army and but for our hope of what the Yugoslavs might do. Why, there may be another Korea. I would like to say this about Korea. You talk about getting out of Korea. When you talk about pulling our flag out of Korea, then let me say, if we do then let us bring our men out of West Germany. Let us bring them home from everywhere. We are in this war. It is not a police action. It is a cruel conflict, and our countrymen are dying every hour of the day and night, and our people must be aroused to that fact. Whether we can buy friendship, I do not know. But I will say this, even if we do not give this aid, and I understand 72 percent will come from our surplus commodity supply account—even if we do not give it to him, I do not think Tito can reach back and clasp the hand of Joe Stalin again. Tito may be done with. I do not think he will be able to keep his army through the winter if we do not give him aid.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. Accepting the gentleman's statement that the Tito government army is a slave army, does the gentleman think that the United States of America should use such slave troops and, secondly, should supply them with subsistence to keep them in operation in order to be the guardians of freedom in this world of ours?

Mr. COOLEY. Well, I think we ought to do it. I think it is a question of whether we have them in the hills of Yugoslavia or whether we have our own boys there. I have heard talk about the Turkish and the Greek troops. Do you know what a Turkish soldier gets per month? He gets 21 cents per month and one uniform for each season of the year, one for summer, one for winter; not a cake of soap, a razor blade, or pair of socks, but 21 cents a month. If you do not call that a slave army, I do not know what you would call it, and yet I do not mean to reflect on the Turkish soldier, because I think they have given a good account of themselves in Korea.

Mr. FULTON. In talking about the Yugoslav soldier and calling it a slave army, as the gentleman did, does he want to use them as an arm of defense?

Mr. COOLEY. Yes; I would use them, and I would use Tito and anybody else to save the lives of American boys.

American boys cannot fight alone on all the battle fronts of the world nor can American resources alone finance the fighting in all of the vital spots of the world in which we live. If we can help to keep the fighting forces of other nations in the field and on our side, we might be able to save some of our own countrymen. I realize that the thought of giving aid in any shape, form, or fashion to a dictator or to a Communist is somewhat repulsive; but if we have to fight for our own existence, the peoples of other nations must join with us or we will fail in our effort to defend our institutions. I wish that time would permit further detailed discussion of our foreign policy and of our true situation in the world today, but these remarks must be concluded.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the President for additional emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia a sum not to exceed $38,000,000 to remain available for obligation through June 30, 1951.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BURLESON: On page 1, line 5, beginning with the word "There", strike out all of lines 5, 6, 7, and 8 and insert in lieu thereof: "The President is hereby authorized to expend not in excess of $50,000,000 of the funds, heretofore appropriated for expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended (Public Law 759, 81st Cong.), for the purpose of providing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia under the authority of this act."

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, to those of you who may be familiar with the so-called McCarran amendment passed in the Senate, this is it. It does two things: It provides a diversion of $50,000,000 from the existing ECA unallocated and unexpended funds to Yugoslavia. With what has heretofore been done, that is, with the transfer of $12,200,000 from this fund to the Yugoslav Government, together with funds from the military assistance program and from the Export-Import Bank, making a total of something like $31,000,000, the amendment actually reduces the total proposal by a figure of $200,000.

I feel very much as many of you feel. To be realistic about this matter is one thing, and to be emotional and sentimental about it is another. As the gentleman from North Carolina has just said, and while it is fresh in our minds, we are in a situation today which should cause us to look for friends wherever we can find them around this world. I am not kidding myself and I do not think very many of you are kidding yourselves or anybody else. We are taking chances in this action as we have taken all through the aid programs which have passed this Congress.

There is good reason for adopting the amendment I offer. First, there has been some question as to whether or not there was authority for the transfer of the $12,200,000 from the ECA fund to the Yugoslav Government, making up the $31,000,000 expended in stop-gap aid while the Congress was in recess. This amendment will remove that doubt. That is another feature worth your consideration.

There will be no need for an additional appropriation of $38,000,000. That is certainly an attractive thing to all of us.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURLESON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. Does the gentleman know under what authority ECA even purported to act in advancing the $12,000,000?

Mr. BURLESON. I do not. It was an action based on exigencies which was thought to exist at the time, in the judgment of our officials. I do not raise the question of legality, but I do have some doubt about it,,and that doubt has been expressed in many quarters. It was thought to be expedient and the use of those funds from sources mentioned was authorized by the executive department.

Again, there may be some question as to the legality of what is here proposed, but it is a realistic approach. Mr. Chairman, as example of the practical and more businesslike approach for providing aid to the Yugoslav Government, by using ECA funds already available to Western Europe. I call your attention particularly to conditions with the British at this time.

From September 1949 to September of 1950 Great Britain's allowance out of the ECA appropriations have been approximately $700,000,000 and in this same period of time the gold reserves and the dollar reserves of the British Government were approximately $1,330,000,000. So, although it is not suggested to be taken out of the fund which has been allocated to the British or to any other European countries, but rather out of the general fund of the ECA appropriation, it seems to me that we now have the opportunity to spread our bets a little thinner around the world. We have been helping a lot of people, hoping to bring about a greater degree of world peace and stability in this troubled and chaotic world, but they should be willing to tighten their belts, even more and more. I am sure they have had their belts pretty tight for a long time. But since we are telling our people it is going to be necessary for us to make some sacrifices under the circumstances in which we find ourselves today, I feel our friends in Europe should be willing to do the same.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURLESON. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. Am I correct in understanding the gentleman to say that there is $50,000,000 floating around loose in the ECA appropriation which can be used for this purpose?

Mr. BURLESON. Well, I do not know of any funds floating around loose, but let me say to the gentleman in all seriousness that there is something in the neighborhood of $500,000,000 to a billion dollars unexpended and unallocated in ECA funds. In other words, no moral obligation has attached to this sum and that is the fund from which money for the purpose of this bill is authorized to be expended.

Mr. WHEELER. I suggest that that money be returned to the Treasury.

Mr. BURLESON. If we could start completely over in all we have done, hindsight would guide us to do many things differently. On the other hand, by reason of the rapidly changing conditions, time is of the essence and the present is always with us.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. VORYS: On page 1, at the end of the Burleson amendment, strike out the words "under the authority of this act", and insert a comma and the following: "to be expended upon credit terms as provided in section 111 (C) (2) of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended, or on a grant basis subject to the following provisions of this act:

"SECTION 3. When any commodity which is not furnished on terms of repayment in dollars is made available under this act, Yugoslavia shall make a commensurate deposit in its currency in a special account to be held and used for such purposes as may be agreed to between Yugoslavia and the Government of the United States."

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, you have just heard the McCarran-Burleson amendment explained. I do not oppose that amendment, although I think that it neither adds to nor subtracts from our problems. It proposes to take $38,000,000 already appropriated for ECA and spend it for something else. If it cuts down the amount needed for the ECA, we are not getting ahead, and if it comes out of money which might otherwise be saved, we are not getting ahead. However, it is a device which will prevent the pain of an additional appropriation for this purpose. My amendment, however, proposes to give the President and Tito two alternatives. First, a straight loan with no conditions, just exactly like the Spanish loan provided in Public Law 759, that was the way we have handled the dictators earlier this fall. On the other hand, if they want to make it on a grant basis, it is subject to a deposit of counterpart funds along the line of the Interim Aid Act which we passed in the fall of 1947 in the Eightieth Congress, and subject to all of the other conditions written in this act.

Thus the two alternatives are, a loan like the Spanish loan, without conditions; or on a grant basis, with conditions like the Interim Aid Act, providing for counterpart and any other conditions you want to write into the bill.

The loan will be administered, like the Spanish loan, through the ECA, with approval of the Advisory Council, which is a body about the same as the Export-Import Bank board. ECA has been more lenient about loans than the Export-Import Bank. The Export-Import Bank makes loans for 10 or 12 years. The ECA has made them for 35 years. Yugoslavia already has gotten $55,000,000 in loans from the Export-Import Bank. Britain, appealed to on this food relief program, has loaned Yugoslavia 3,000,000 pounds, about $8,400,000, and Yugoslavia has accepted it, according to the papers, in the last few days.

Can Yugoslavia repay? Yes. They have strategic materials, copper, lead, zinc, which we need. Since their supposed break with Stalin they have been exporting them largely to the United States. I will give you their exports in recent years of these strategic materials which our side needs in this struggle. In 1948, $45,000,000; in 1949, $37,000,000; the first half of 1950, $15,700,000 worth.

Will they pay? I think they will. Clemantis, who was recently Communist Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, called our attention in Prague in 1947 to the fact that, curiously enough, Communist countries have a practice of repaying their capitalistic loans. He said, "It is only countries like Britain who do not repay." So I think if Yugoslavia takes the loan we can be fairly sure they will repay it. In fact, we know they are not completely loaned up now. In the background material handed us by the State Department, on page 3, it is said that "negotiations were recently resumed with the International Bank by Yugoslavia for other loans, specifically for economic development projects."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] has expired.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BATTLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. BATTLE. I do not mean to be facetious, but I would like the gentleman to elaborate on this point that we can be sure that they will repay this loan.

Mr. VORYS. We cannot be sure that any country in Western Europe is going to be able to pay any loan back, because, if a third world war is launched, they are all going to have quite a long moratorium. If, however, you are optimistic and feel as I do, that, out of the troubled indecision in the free world now, we are going to be able to line up the free people in both hemispheres, then Yugoslavia is going to need us and our help to stay away from under Stalin's domination, and we are going to need them strategically. I cannot guarantee that Yugoslavia, or anybody else, is going to repay a loan. I merely say it has a fairly good record on loans so far.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. PATTERSON. As far as this loan goes, is this copper and zinc that Tito would export to the United States going to be collateral for the loan, or will we buy that and also make the loan without collateral, and what would be the conditions of this loan?

Mr. VORYS. They would be fixed by ECA and this National Advisory Council. I have not attempted to spell out the conditions, except merely to state that Tito has strategic materials available to pay it off. At present we are buying these materials for dollars. I would judge that part of the materials would be shipped in payment of the loan, in addition to the amounts that we are buying. I have not attempted to spell out the specific provisions of this loan.

Mr. PATTERSON. Do I correctly understand that Marshal Tito has said he would not accept this loan, or this gift, or whatever it might be called, under any conditions we might think should be added to it?

Mr. VORYS. We have been told by the State Department that they do not want any strings or conditions at all.

My amendment provides, first, for a loan. They pay us back without other conditions spelled out in the law except reference to the ECA Act. Second, if it is to be a grant, then they must deposit counterpart, that is, deposit their own currency, in a special account to be held and used for such purposes as may be agreed upon between the two countries. Substantially a similar provision is in the Senate bill. I do not attempt to spell out in this amendment any other conditions that will be put upon the grant. Those will be provided in the rest of the bill.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is time we check up and see where we stand now.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURLESON] has offered an amendment which materially changes the bill. As presented by the Foreign Affairs Committee, the bill provides $38,000,000 for relief for Yugoslavia. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas provides that there will be no new authorization and, of course, no new appropriation. Existing surplus funds from ECA will be diverted and used for the purposes set forth in the bill. In other words, it does not call for another dime of the taxpayers' money. In view of the fact that we have not obtained the cooperation that some of us think we are entitled to from our ECA friends, maybe the approval of the amendment will not only help Yugoslavia but it will awaken some of the ECA recipient countries to the realization that we are not getting all the cooperation we have a right to expect from them. At the same time it will not cost the taxpayers anything. For that reason I will go along with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] proposes to amend the Burleson amendment to this effect: First, to make it a loan; and, second, to operate through counterpart funds just as ECA does.

Mr. Chairman, it is simply ridiculous to talk about Tito ever paying this money back. He probably will be unable to, even if he wants to.

There is another ground for my objection to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, and it is this: He seemingly proposes, through the amendment, to make this a long-range program through a counterpart fund arrangement just as is done under ECA. The thing we have been trying to impress upon the House since this bill was first considered is that it provides only for an emergency relief program. Yugoslavia should have no grounds upon which to come back later and say that this Congress started this thing and that we should give them more money later to follow through.

If this House wants to appropriate new money to Yugoslavia to effect this so-called relief, then vote down the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas. If you agree, as I do, that this money could more properly be diverted from existing and surplus ECA funds, then vote up the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

If the Members of the House want to leave the implication that this will be a long-range program with counterpart funds set up as they are now set up in ECA, then vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

I believe you will be doing a bad thing, and I believe you will be doing a disservice to our taxpayers and holding out false hopes to the government of Yugoslavia if you adopt the Vorys amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDS. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. How would the gentleman divert the ECA funds? I should like to know from which one of these countries or from all of these countries does the gentleman propose we shall divert the funds.

Mr. RICHARDS. From any of them or all of them.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDS. I yield.

Mr. VORYS. The gentleman is aware, I am sure, that the Fulbright amendment provided for equivalent local currency for this and that it was adopted in the Senate unanimously.

Mr. RICHARDS. That is an entirely different matter. This bill itself provides for counterpart funds. For what? Only to cover the administration of this act in Yugoslavia by our own people. The Fulbright amendment can be taken up on its own merits later. I am talking about the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS. The gentleman does not say that the Fulbright amendment does not apply to all the relief supplies that are sold for local currency?

Mr. RICHARDS. The Fulbright amendment is not now being considered and is not in the House bill.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDS. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. If we were to accept the Burleson amendment, would that be a grant or a loan?

Mr. RICHARDS. It would be a grant but a grant of funds already appropriated by the Congress.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Vorys amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am not forgetting that in connection with the creation of the United Nations organization there was established a very great piece of machinery known as Bretton Woods, which set up a stabilization fund and the Bank for International Credit, and this is the bank that should handle these deals. I have never been sympathetic with the Export-Import Bank nosing into this general picture as it has been explained here the Export-Import Bank did in connection with Yugoslavia in making loans such as the $55,000,000 loan referred to previously. I do not think that was a legitimate loan, I may say to my friend from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY], because I do not think a loan made to a Communist country at the present time can be defended as a legitimate loan under present world conditions. Therefore, I look upon the $55,000,000 advanced by the Export-Import Bank as an outright gift to Yugoslavia because I do not expect a penny of it will ever be paid back.

Secondly, I am in favor of the Vorys amendment because, as I understand that amendment, it would enable this present proposal to be handled in such a way as to let the funds be taken out of the Marshall plan, ECA funds; is that correct?

Mr. VORYS. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Then be extended to Yugoslavia under a grant or under a counterpart fund arrangement.

The last time I was in Tokyo I discussed this question of counterpart funds with Mr. Joseph Dodge, of Detroit, who had been sent over to Japan to balance the Japanese budget. I asked him how he was getting along in balancing the Japanese budget. He said: "We are making great progress." I said, "On what basis?" "On the basis of use of the counterpart funds."

I am going to ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] to check me very carefully here. His proposal in connection with the counterpart fund arrangement is that, if we give these goods or advance these goods to the Yugoslav Government, that Government will in turn sell those goods to its citizens for local currency, and that local currency will be impounded in a fund which is subject to distribution and under the supervision of the joint committee between Yugoslavia and the United States Government; is that correct?

Mr. VORYS. Yes, except as drafted and following the plan, it would also apply to goods that are not sold, that are to be given away. Commensurate deposit is required for everything they do not pay for in our Relief Act of 1947. The same technique is supplied in this. However, the gentleman neglected to mention that Tito is given an alternative under my amendment; that he can get a loan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I was just coming to that, because we have kind of a double-barreled proposition in this amendment. If we want to make him a loan without any restrictions from ECA funds already provided, we can do so under the Vorys amendment. If you want to put him on a counterpart fund proposition where he will put into a fund controlled by a joint commission, we will call it, a fund of his own currency covering all the goods that we ship him, whether given away or sold through local currency, then that local currency will come under this joint control, and it can then be distributed for such purposes as we deem advisable. Those are the two reasons I am for the Vorys amendment, and I hope it will be carried, and then we can adopt the Burleson amendment and thereby keep this thing tied up in the Marshall-plan funds.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. Does the gentleman think we should make a loan to Tito without any conditions whatsoever?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I would much prefer that kind of a proposition than the one submitted in this bill. I am against this bill lock, stock, and barrel as presented. I am for the amendment, but I am not for the bill even after it is amended only by this amendment.

Mr. GROSS. Is not a loan without any condition merely a subterfuge?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I think the whole thing is subterfuge, even the ECA in many of its phases.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. RICHARDS. I was going to ask the gentleman if the Vorys amendment is adopted and the Burleson amendment is adopted, will the gentleman be for the bill?

Mr. CRAWFORD. No; I would not be for the bill. I assume the bill is going to be passed, and therefore I want to make it as acceptable as possible.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURLESON]. In my judgment that amendment will serve several purposes. In the first place it will obviate the necessity of an additional appropriation at this time. We hope to have on the floor of the House on Friday, according to my understanding, a supplemental bill appropriating $18,000,000,000. This appropriation could not possibly be written into that bill at this time; therefore, it is doubtful whether the authorized funds could be appropriated during this session if we attempt to handle the appropriation in the regular manner.

By diverting funds of the ECA for this purpose, it will do away with the necessity of consideration by the Committee on Appropriations and will speed up proceedings. It will, moreover, conform our action to that of the Senate.

As all of you know, I have a great deal of interest in the ECA appropriations, having served as chairman of the subcommittee that has handled the foreign-aid appropriations during this session of the Congress. I therefore talked to Mr. William Foster, Administrator of ECA, this morning, and he tells me that he has no objection to taking these funds out of the moneys appropriated to the ECA. He said that there will be ample funds to take care of this particular project. He added, however, that he did want to correct the impression that there are between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 of ECA funds that might be diverted to other purposes during this fiscal year. That, he says, is not a fact. It appears that some of the countries are recovering economically more rapidly than had been anticipated and consequently that they will not need all of the funds that have been appropriated for them for this present year. Therefore, there will be a sufficient surplus to take care of the $50,000,000 which is provided for in this bill; the $12,000,000 which has already been taken from the fund and the $38,000,000 additional which this bill would provide.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WHEELER. The gentleman just indicated that he had received permission from Mr. Foster to divert these funds. I am wondering if the gentleman also got permission from Mr. Attlee while he was here last week?

Mr. GARY. May I say to the gentleman that he knows me well enough to know that I do not ask anybody for permission for what I do. I am trying to give this House information. In order to give the House accurate information I contacted the Administrator who has charge of handling these funds, because I wanted to know what effect a diversion would have on the funds. I assumed the other Members of the House would like the same information. I am simply trying to give them that information at the present time. The gentleman knows it is not my custom to seek permission from any of the department heads as to what action I shall take on the floor of the House.

Mr. WHEELER. I did not mean that to be personal.

Mr. GARY. I am certain the gentleman did not mean it that way, but I did want to make it plain that I am simply trying to give the House information.

A short time ago I was quoted correctly in the press as saying that I did not think we should help any dictators, period. I have not changed my position. I say very frankly that I would not raise my hand to help Tito. However, I am tremendously interested in the United States of America and I am going to vote for anything that I think will help the United States of America in this crisis. I cannot help but believe that the passage of this bill will have a good effect.

In October 1947 I had the privilege of visiting Trieste. At that time it was one of the trouble spots of the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Virginia be permitted to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARY. Just a few weeks before my visit, the Italian peace treaty had gone into effect. Under this treaty we, along with the other countries involved, were obligated to make some changes in the positions of our troops. We all know what took place. There was an agreement with the Yugoslavs and the Russians that, although the treaty went into effect at midnight, if troop movements were completed by 10 o'clock the next morning, it would be satisfactory. That night about 8 o'clock we were notified by Yugoslavia that they would expect us to carry out the terms of the treaty to the letter and be in our new positions by midnight. We did so. Then, you remember, the Yugoslavs threatened to take over Trieste, but were stopped by our soldiers. For weeks thereafter it was thought that they would attempt to carry out their threat.

I stood one evening with General Gaither, of Maryland, on one of the balconies of the castle Miramare, which was built by Maximilian. The moon was shining on the Gulf of Trieste. To our left shone the lights of the city nestled on the hills. As I gazed upon the scene I said, "General, I think this is one of the most beautiful sights I have ever seen." He replied, "Yes, and to think that Maximilian had all of this, yet he went to Mexico and was killed. With all that I have back in the United States, I stand here tonight, but I hope not for the same purpose." That is how tense the situation was at that time.

There is no crisis at Trieste today. Why? Because something has happened. Then we were facing a threat from Tito. We no longer face that threat because Tito has broken with Russia, and we know that Tito is not going to attempt to attack us as long as he does not have the help of Russia.

If, by extending this aid we can gain his cooperation and help, the situation will be even better for us. In my judgment we are going to need the help of all the forces we can get in this world crisis. I favor this bill, not because I think it will help the dictator Tito, but because I think it will help the United States of America.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the Vorys amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. A substitute for the Vorys amendment would be an amendment in the third degree and is therefore not in order. The substitute amendment may be offered to the original amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Then, Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment as a substitute for the Burleson amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota as a substitute for the Burleson amendment: On page 1, beginning with the word "There", strike out all of lines 5, 6, 7, and 8, and insert in lieu thereof: "The President is hereby authorized to expend not in excess of $50,000,000 of the funds heretofore appropriated for expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended, Public Law 759, Eighty-first Congress, for the purpose of providing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia to be expended upon credit terms as provided in section III (C) (2) of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended, subject to the provisions of this act."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment, since I have not had an opportunity to look at it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, this amendment makes the aid for Yugoslavia come out of the ECA fund and puts it on a strictly loan basis. It picks up the Burleson amendment at the same point that the Vorys amendment picks it up, and drops out the words in the Vorys amendment which read "or on a grant basis," and also leaves out the section which provides for repayment by simply putting up counterpart funds.

Mr. RICHARDS. Is it the essence of this proposition to make this a straight-out loan with any further provisions or conditions?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The essence of my substitute is to make it a straight-out loan taking the money from the ECA funds the same as the Burleson amendment does.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. Did I understand correctly that the gentleman has changed the amount from $38,000,000 to $50,000,000?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I picked up the language of the Burleson amendment. The Burleson amendment carries not in excess of $50,000,000. I picked up the Burleson amendment in the same way that the Vorys amendment does, but in adding the language of the Vorys amendment I dropped out the words "or on a grant basis."

Mr. JUDD. What it would do is to authorize loans not to exceed a total amount of $50,000,000?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Not in excess of that amount.

Mr. VORYS. It seems to me we have the various ways of doing this thing presented here.

First is the Burleson amendment, which would use existing ECA funds and not require a new appropriation. No one has objected to that.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. However, that could be with either a grant or on a loan basis?

Mr. VORYS. Yes. Now, I have proposed an alternative of a loan without any conditions, or, if it is a grant, it is to be done on the basis of counterpart, as in previous legislation. The gentleman from South Dakota provides that we use the same Burleson-McCarran amendment for getting the money without a new appropriation, but that it be made a straight loan, subject to the conditions provided in the law. Is that not correct?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That is exactly the situation. This will resolve some of the problems I have had in my mind in thinking about this legislation and perhaps would for others.

In the first place, it does not require a new appropriation. It has the same merit the Burleson approach has.

In the second place, taking the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio as to the degree to which Yugoslavia has repaid its loans, it gives some possibility of getting the money back under the terms of the loan provision. It avoids giving a direct grant without the promises that some of us would like to get with a grant, and which it does not seem possible to get. Also, it seems to me to avoid the implication that we would authorize an out-and-out grant to a Communist country whose hands are not too clean when you come to the question of civil and religious liberties. It makes it possible simply to make them a straight-out loan, and to get the money from ECA, without an additional drain on the Treasury.

Mr. JONAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. JONAS. Who would have to do with fixing the terms of the loan?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The section in the ECA Act, to which reference is made by the language "when it is determined that assistance should be extended under the provisions of this title, the Administrator shall allocate funds from the Export-Import Bank," et cetera. So it would be as carried in that section of the ECA Act and must be the conditions carried in this bill itself.

Mr. JONAS. Is not the gentleman's amendment entirely incompatible with the message received from the President, that this is to be an out-and-out grant, which Tito does not want?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It does deny the possibility of an out-and-out grant, without any strings attached. That I think is its virtue.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] has expired.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I shall vote for the loan to Yugoslavia for one simple and single reason: the Commander in Chief of our Armed Forces says such aid is necessary for our national defense.

On November 24 President Truman asserted:

Yugoslavia is a nation whose strategic location makes it of direct importance to the defense of the North Atlantic area.

The defense of the North Atlantic area, I am convinced, is of direct importance to the defense of America.

It would be a reckless American who, in this hour of national peril, would hamper measures necessary for our country's defense. The more effectively to provide for our national security, I have some suggestions to offer in connection with this aid to Yugoslavia. It would be unfortunate, however, if, in the haste of congressional action, these considerations were not brought to the attention of this body.

There is an inevitable human tendency, which I am afraid we Americans have to an acute degree, to think that everyone in trouble is, after all, not such a bad sort of fellow. We have reached the stage in this country when many people think that Tito is a sort of Balkan Henry Wallace, a pathetic politician who blundered and is endeavoring honestly to find his way home.

Let us face the facts. Josip Broz is an average, if unusually energetic type, of international thug. Where his ideological home is, what his political purposes are, can be easily discovered by his treatment of political opponents and every religious faith.

In line with this "Tito is not such a bad sort of fellow" thing, we have been hearing a good deal lately of the distinction between "good" Communists of the Tito type and "bad" Communists of the Stalin stripe. Let us face the facts. In all the hundreds of thousands of words of mutual abuse that have issued from Moscow and Belgrade since June 28, 1948, when Tito's gang was expelled from the Cominform, there has not been the slightest suggestion of any concrete difference between the Communist regimes of Yugoslavia and of the Soviets—nor any evidence that the people of Yugoslavia resent the oppression under Tito less than the Russians hate their Kremlin masters.

Let us face the facts. Tito is a declared enemy of everything America stands for. Let us not forget that when the United Nations Security Council on June 27 voted to furnish assistance "to repel armed attack"—against the Republic of Korea, "and to restore international peace and security in that area," the lone vote cast against that resolution was by Tito's Talleyrand, Dr. Ales Bebler. With a nice show of impartiality and an embarrassing display of affection for America, Dr. Bebler explained that the war in Korea was the result of dividing geographical areas into spheres of influence. The United States, I suppose, had imperialistic designs on South Korea.

The present Ambassador from Yugoslavia has explicitly accused us of imperialism. Just before leaving for his new post in Washington, Tito's new Ambassador, Vladimir Popovitch, wrote in Kommunist, official organ of the central committee of the Yugoslav Communist Party, on June 1 of this year, that American foreign policy has been and continues to be imperialistic. Perhaps we are expected to be grateful that Mr. Popovitch included Soviet foreign policy in the range of his hatred. We must not forget to thank Mr. Popovitch today for saying that Soviet foreign policy, too, represents the same danger for the independence of some nations. We should be grateful that we are, at least now, linked with the Soviets as equal imperialists. On February 9, 1947, Tito was shouting that America was the greatest enemy of peace in the world.

We are voting this aid to strengthen our national defense. Let us make sure it is so used. Let us not forget that only last July 17 Tito's propaganda chief, Milovan Djilas, assured the Yugoslav peace conference that his country was neutral in the struggle between the east and the west. At this juncture of history, in this hour of international crisis, such studied neutrality betrays a secret hostility to America.

But whatever the private prejudices of Tito's political group, the people of Yugoslavia are facing a famine and the great humanitarian heart of America cannot refuse them food. Let us face the facts. Such an argument is different from the original justification that our aid is demanded in the interest of our national defense.

Besides, such an argument raises the question of how this food shortage happened. We have heard a lot about a drought in the country. We heard a lot about a drought in the Ukraine in 1923, too, though, as we later learned, Stalin had more to do with the famine than the weather did.

Before the last war Yugoslavia regularly exported 25 percent of its meat and grain to Italy and Germany in exchange for manufactured products. It is my information that food production in Yugoslavia since the Tito tyranny began has never reached 60 percent of prewar totals. Tito's drive for industrialization, to establish, I suppose, the "dictatorship of the proletariat," had dragged, I am told, 1,000,000 young men peasants from the farms to work in the state-owned factories. Moreover, Tito's regimentation of the farmers has occasioned livestock slaughtering and a lower food output in a normally food-exporting country. His much advertised break with the Cominform has hastened this hectic drive to collectivize the small farmer. According to September 1950 figures from the Yugoslav Agricultural Commission, there are now 6,970 kolkhozes—collective farms—in Titoland. The vast majority of them—5,650—have been created in the last 2 years, or since Tito fell out with his fellow thieves in the Kremlin. Tito is determined—no matter what the price in human misery—to prove that he is a better Communist than Stalin.

We hear a lot these days of Tito's 30 divisions. As we anxiously examine Western Europe's military feebleness, that is a reassuring number of men to have on our side. We understand the need of keeping the muzzles of Europe's largest standing army pointed menacingly against the Soviet aggressors.

But let us ask some questions about that much publicized army. Let us remember that there was a royal Yugoslav Army of impressive numbers we hoped would hold Hitler in 1941. Its effective resistance was overcome in about a week. Tito's present standing army is equipped with captured German and Italian equipment, plus cast-off Soviet matériel. It is manifestly no match for the motorized forces of the satellite countries; not even for the well-trained, well-equipped Hungarian Army.

But wouldn't the army become the center of terrifying guerrilla action from Yugoslavian mountain strongholds? The question supposes that American national defense will be aided appreciably by 100,000 partisans—the number probably loyal to Tito—making raids from the forests.

Before we put too much American defense reliance on Yugoslav military might, let us look a little closer at the armed forces at his disposal. There is the militia serving in each town and village as the armed instrument of the local Soviets or people's committees and associated with the people's courts. These courts and committees, and especially their armed agents, are considered the embodiment of oppression and cruelty. They symbolize Tito's Communist regime in the eyes of the people. The peasants and townsfolk of Yugoslavia would not be expected to rally around the 60,000 militia men any more than the Czechs rallied around Hitler's hangman, Heidrich.

Then there are the 48,000 troops of the Defense Corps or UDBA, a secret police force at the disposal of Alexander Rankovitch as the Gestapo was at the disposal of Heinrich Himmler. They arrest Yugoslavs at night, keep camps of slave labor, mobilize the nation for forced service, seize grain and pigs from the peasants—all for Tito's party. Are the Yugoslavs expected to rally around Rankovitch's secret police?

Let us remember that Yugoslavia's conscript army is composed of peasants and workingmen, serving under Communist commissars, Communist politicians, and former partisans. Key places are held by thugs formerly belonging to the international Communist conspiracy, and considered by all decent Yugoslavs as foreigners.

You have to live under Communists, it must be remembered, to really hate them. Can this gang of international gangsters be expected to sustain a national-defense effort? The popularity of a regime has a great deal to do with the morale of a people in wartime, as we learned to our embarrassment in South Korea.

Since, as the President said, Yugoslavia is a nation important for our national defense, we are properly concerned about the morale and equipment of her army. At this moment of America's peril, food is a feeble weapon to repel a possible invasion of Yugoslavia, that would imperil Italy, France, and all of western Europe. With the President calling for support of Tito's army in the interests of our own national defense, I am moved to urge that we carry our aid to Yugoslavia much further.

Why can we not, in the interest of our own security, send a military mission to Yugoslavia as we have to Greece and Turkey? Why can we not learn at first hand what the worth of Tito's army is for the defense of the North Atlantic area? If its equipment is outmoded and its morale bad, it would be much better for us to know that now and offer measures to strengthen that army, in the interests always, of course, of our own national defense. I have no doubt that our own military people would promptly report that the system of political commissars indoctrinating conscript soldiers with the hated ideology of communism interferes with military efficiency and hence would actually harm our national defense.

Since our exclusive concern today in voting this loan to Yugoslavia is with American security, I am not satisfied that we can wash our hands, Pilate-like, of the implications of our actions by proclaiming that our aid does not imply approval of the suppression of political and religious liberties in that country.

Such conditions of organized tyranny demonstrably affect the popularity of a regime. They condition the morale of its army. They affect our national security.

The plight of refugees is always an infallible index of popular hatred of a government. We know that North Korea was a typically Communist tyranny, even though we had no observers there, from the fact that 3,000,000 people fled to the protection of South Korea in the year after the puppet regime was organized at Pyongyang. People are fleeing from Yugoslavia to Germany in numbers comparable to the refugees from the Soviet satellite countries, and for the same reason.

It is only last September that a false rumor was started in a remote rural area of Yugoslavia that the government was permitting people to emigrate to the United States. More than 1,500 peasant families, the entire population in that area, besieged the American Embassy in Belgrade for visas. Then the police learned of it and letters of recantation arrived at the Embassy, saying: "I have changed my mind and have no intention of emigrating to the United States any more."

There was one note, significantly unsigned, scrawled in pencil on a small scrap of paper, that said:

> I beg to inform you that all persons who have registered as immigrants to the United States have been arrested and imprisoned by UDBA. We appeal to your urgent assistance, since all of the people concerned only intended to leave Yugoslavia legally.

I submit that such a judgment of the people on the regime inescapably affects our American security.

It is somewhat reassuring to read that the State Department has made efforts to let the Yugoslav people know that the food we are shipping is coming from the American people and not from the Titoist tyrants. It is good to learn that arrangements have been made to observe the distribution of that food. Since our aid is admittedly in the interests of our own national security, I cannot understand why American teams cannot actually distribute the food. We did it once before in a Communist country—in Russia in 1921.

After all, we have had one unhappy experience of seeing food distributed by UNRRA—and paid for largely by American taxpayers—used to strengthen the power of Eastern European Communist administrators hostile to America. Do we propose to allow our food to be used by Tito's party hacks for their own aggrandizement? That would scarcely improve in Yugoslavia the morale so necessary for American security.

Mr. Chairman, we cannot afford in this hour of national peril to appear to be upholding the regime of Tito which is hated by all Yugoslavs. We cannot afford to be identified in the minds of the poor, oppressed people of Yugoslavia as supporters of the tyrant Tito. We must never forget that it is the people of Yugoslavia, not a small gang of alien international terrorists, that we count on to oppose the military might of the Soviets.

No one in Congress is under any illusions about the character of the government in Yugoslavia. It is a crude, standard, all-too-hideously familiar brand of police state. It is a country cursed with concentration camps, secret police, sudden arrests. It is run by a regime that maintains itself by terror. There is in unhappy Yugoslavia today no freedom of the press, no freedom of elections, no freedom of religion, no freedom of speech. The courts have been perverted to nakedly political purposes, as in every other Communist country. There are the same forced "confessions" of "processed" prisoners kept in underground dungeons until produced at Soviet-style "spectacle" trials. Everything down to the small shops has been nationalized. Forty percent of the arable land has been collectivized, and the ruthless expropriations continue at a frantic rate.

Every Member of this House knows these things. Do we forget that everyone in Yugoslavia not only knows them but has to live under them? Do we propose to encourage the perpetuation of this tyrannical system and thus imperil America's national security?

I want to name three Yugoslav democrats, political leaders, now in jail. I chose three names from three different areas of Yugoslavia, men of different religious faiths, united in their devotion to democratic ideal and in their common fate in Tito's dread prisons. They are Dr. Dragojub Jovanovich, head of the Serbian Agrarian Party; Dr. Boris Furlan, of the Liberal Slovenian Party; and Dr. Tomislav Janchikovich, of the Croatian Peasants' Party.

America needs leaders like these men, alive and free in Yugoslavia today, to tell the people that the people of the United States are their friends; that opposing Soviet aggression is demanded by national interests and human decency—not by any need of saving Tito's hide.

In the interests of our own national defense, I suggest that there should be an amnesty of democratic politicians in Yugoslavia. They are the sincere friends of America and the West.

It would be at least progress, and helpful for American security, if we could return at least to the spirit of Yalta that promised free elections and the right of the people to choose governments freely. These are fundamental freedoms enshrined in the charter of the United Nations, so often called the corner-stone of our foreign policy.

Another fundamental freedom concerns religion. The Yugoslav Constitution under article 25 asserts:

Citizens are guaranteed freedom of conscience and freedom of religion.

There is no one in this House with any doubt of what a mockery those words are. For, like every Communist regime, Titoism recognizes religion as an allegiance to something larger than merely human purposes and, consequently, steadfastly persecutes it.

Members of this House undoubtedly think instantly of the figure of Aloysius Stepinac, the Catholic Archibishop of Zagreb, at the mention of the words "religious persecution." The imprisoned prelate is only a symbol of Tito's relentless war on God, his grinding persecution of all religion. An American Congressman cannot fail to point during this debate to another martyr, the jailed Serbian Orthodox bishop, Varnava Nastic of Sarajevo. Bishop Nastic was born in America.

Because it directly affects the morale of the people of Yugoslavia and, consequently, has a bearing on American security, let us spend a few minutes on this issue of religious persecution. We must make sure, I repeat, that America not be listed as a supporter of the oppressive Tito regime—if we hope to have the people fighting on our side.

How shall we calibrate the resentment of the religious people of Yugoslavia at a regime which has confiscated every Catholic school, every Catholic hospital and orphanage and old-folks home, that has dissolved the religious orders freely serving the poor and the sick, that has murdered 378 priests whose name are known, and holds 400 more in prison today? What must be the attitude of the people toward a regime that attaches the penalty of immediate dismissal to the attendance at religious services of any school teacher? Speaking to a priest jeopardizes the job of a soldier or civil servant. Officers of the defense service, police, and military may not marry in church or have their children baptized. For civilians, a heavy government tax, varying from $15 to $16 for a wedding and from $50 to $100 for a baptisim, is assessed for legal registration.

What mockery of freedom of religion exists when the government forbids all voluntary collections for the maintenance of the clergy or ecclesiastic buildings whether taken up inside or outside a church, when control of newsprint is manipulated to guarantee the absence of a religious press, when imports regulations are designed to ban the replacement of prayer books and catechisms, when ration permits are refused for wine, wheat, flour, candles, and vestments, so that the very possibility of offering mass is endangered, when candidates for the priesthood and their families are terrorized, when religious instruction is allowed only when classes do not conflict with compulsory Communist party programs, inevitably arranged for the same time as religious services. There is no known instance of a child who attended catechism class obtaining the necessary scholarship for higher studies—or even winning admission to a higher school.

The Yugoslav people hate this situation and the Communists responsible for it with all the deep, emotional anger of a peasant people, rooted in religion and devoted to their national traditions. These are the people who must be our allies in opposing Soviet aggression.

It is in the interest of American security that I call attention to the monstrous tyranny oppressing the Yugoslav people. They will never forgive us if our aid only seats Tito more securely on their shoulders.

In the interest of sound, abiding American security in the Balkans, we must, Mr. Chairman, work persistently, realistically, and honestly, for democracy, for fundamental freedoms, for human decency in Yugoslavia.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Vorys and Case amendments.

Mr. Chairman, in all this legislation I believe we have to be realistic. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] talked about the International Bank. The facts show that at the present time, since the break with Stalin, Yugoslavia has borrowed from the Export-Import Bank some $55,000,000. Yugoslavia has further borrowed from the international fund $11,700,000. I think that the House should understand that until this break in the summer of 1948 the entire Yugoslav economy was dovetailed with the economy of Stalin's Russia. During that time all of its business was going east. It lived on its trade with the eastern satellites and Stalin himself. Since 1948 there had to be quite a reorientation, because there was no longer any question of doing business with the Cominform or the nations in the east.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] has told this House that a loan has been taken from England, and why should we not have the same situation apply with reference to the funds that come from the United States of America. The gentleman from Ohio, I am sure, realizes that Yugoslavia and all European nations have plenty of sterling. The thing that Yugoslavia does not have and which most of the European nations do not have is dollars. What Yugoslavia needs desperately is dollars, and there is no chance of paying this money back. But we know that Yugoslavia has an abundance of strategic materials which we so desperately need and which are flowing into the United States stockpile. The records show that since the spring of 1949 the United States purchased 66 percent of Yugoslavia's copper export, 54 percent of its lead, 35 percent of its quicksilver, and 30 percent of its antimony. These are materials that the United States must have if the United States is to remain strong. Yugoslav economy is very weak.

If the United States is going to make this a grant, or a loan, or an advance from practical considerations, let us be realistic about it; let us give them the money, because basically we are never going to get it back if we lend it to them. We must approach this with a sense of realism.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. FORD. The gentleman gave figures in regard to Yugoslavian exports to this country, and so forth, from 1948 on. Has the gentleman any comparable figures for prior years?

Mr. RIBICOFF. No, I am sorry, I have not.

I should like to point out further that in the exchange of letters between the United States and Yugoslavia over this particular proposed grant an agreement will be entered into and a proposal has been formulated:

> That your government will provide the United States with reciprocal assistance by continuing to facilitate the production and transfer to the United States in such quantities and upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed on, of raw and semiprocessed materials required by the United States as a result of deficiencies or potential deficiencies in its own resources and which may be available in Yugoslavia. Arrangements for such transfers shall give due regard to requirements for domestic use and commercial export of Yugoslavia.

There is no question but that as these materials keep getting in short supply in the United States of America, the United States is going to have to give Yugoslavia or lend to Yugoslavia additional money to get more modern equipment and machinery to increase the production of these most vital materials that the United States so desperately needs.

Mr. LARCADE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, at this point it is difficult to know exactly the final provisions of the bill under consideration. The original bill provided for outright grants, as I understand of either food or money; however, amendments have been introduced which may authorize a loan or loans to Yugoslavia. The amendment under consideration provides for a loan.

Should the final draft of the bill provide that our Government supply Yugoslavia with food or supplies, I desire to bring to the attention of those charged with the administration of the program the commodities of my district and State which in my opinion, would be desirable to send to Yugoslavia. One of these foods is sweet potatoes. There is a surplus in the United States and the caloric content of sweet potatoes is the next highest of all foods to wheat. Another basic food that is available in my district is rice. This is one of the cheapest foods available and at this time is eagerly sought after by Asia and other countries of the world.

I note from the Washington Food Report of December 2 that under the original plan our Government contemplated supplying Yugoslavia with the following foods: Corn, 125,000 tons; flour, 26,000 tons; oats, 60,000 tons, barley, 50,000 tons; dry peas, 30,000 tons; dry beans, 15,000 tons; rice, 5,000 tons, lard, 5,000 tons; dry skim milk, 6,000 tons; seeds, 18,000 tons.

If the above statement is correct, you will note that provision is not made to use sweet potatoes which is considered one of the finest and most nutritious food available.

It will also be noted that while rice is included in the program, only 5,000 tons of rice is allocated, under what is presumed to be an allocation of $38,000,000.

As stated above rice is considered a basic food the world over, and since this basic food is also in surplus in the United States and is one of the cheapest foods obtainable in the market at this time, my people feel that there should be included in this program a greater amount of rice than that mentioned in the statement to which I refer. Certainly, rice should be supplied in an amount equal to oats and barley—50,000 to 60,000 tons.

Rice is grown principally in the States of Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, and California, and present statistics indicate that there is a very large surplus of rice in the United States, and since there is possibly no other market outside of the United States at this time, it seems that since this food is so universally consumed in the world that if the bill under consideration should finally provide for the supplying of food to Yugoslavia that this country should utilize a larger share of this food in the program than that which is indicated in the announcement of the Government, and I am taking this time to place this matter before the committee and the Government officials so that when the time comes for the purchase of food supplies under the bill they will give consideration not only to the purchase of rice, but also to sweet potatoes, both of which are fine and cheap foods.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, during the 4 years of my service in this body I have rarely taken the time of the House for my observations, certainly not on matters which do not come from the committee on which I serve; but I feel that I cannot remain silent longer today.

These amendments offered to the bill now before this committee indicate even more strongly than what transpired here yesterday exactly what we are trying to do, and it seems to me unfortunate if any of us, sincere and honest though we may be, permit ourselves to salve our own consciences by trying to hedge this bill about with amendments and think we are justified in supporting it. We are either going to give this money or not, and no amendment can make this any other kind of proposition.

For 4 years I have gone along with all of our foreign policy, with all of the foreign aid, and with all our endeavors to strengthen the western democracies and extend our own influence. But here we have something entirely different. This is not aid to the friends of freedom as was the Marshall plan for the western democracies. We know that this is tribute, hush money, appeasement to an enemy. This is not building up our own strength but is advertising our weakness. This is not creating good will but is inviting the contempt of the world.

Many years ago at a time in our history when we said what we meant and meant what we said, a great American spokesman stated:

> Not one cent for tribute but millions for defense.

We have now come to the place, and every one of us knows it, when we have lost the respect of the world. No first-class power in history has ever been so discredited, so disgraced, and so humiliated as has our own country in the last few months. The time has come when out from the American Congress should go the message that we are prepared to make America strong, that we are not spending any more time or effort in appeasing our enemies.

This is nothing but an effort to try to immobilize the power of the Yugoslavian Army, an attempt to buy it off. When the five American fliers were slain by the air power of Yugoslavia, one of those boys came from a town neighboring my own. I remember the day when I talked with his father and his mother. I did not want to permit that experience to affect my judgment on this bill. I wanted to accede to the request of the President, if I could, but the more I have listened the more I have become convinced that the time has come when we should let it be known that we are through with appeasement; we are through with buying our peace; we are ready to make America strong and "not one cent" in the words of that great statesman "for tribute but millions for defense."

Let us win back our own respect and the respect of the world and let us start here and now. I shall vote against this bill.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I just listened to the wise words of the gentleman from New Hampshire and I subscribe to everything he said. It seems to me that the time of appeasement has gone about as far as it can go with people and the newspapers, political writers, and others, calling our attention to these things.

It seems to me that in a country as great as our country is, a country that has the fundamentals of freedom at heart, it is about time we start worrying about the United States of America and not be worried at all about this so-called communism they are talking about, because this country believes in the Christian religion and we are going to fight for it. We are going to fight for it maybe with bullets or cannons or airplanes, but whatever it may be we are going to fight just the same as the Christians have since the days of the Holy Roman Empire. They cannot beat us.

I talked with one of the most influential men, in my opinion, who has ever served in this Congress for a great many years. I go to him many times for advice. A great many times I do not take it, but I go to him just the same. He says that we are bribing Yugoslavia. That is all we are doing. When did we sink so low, Mr. Chairman, when the great country that we represent here has got to buy people to carry out battles for us? Mr. Chairman, I am only just talking now for the people I know and I have known for 60 years who believe in a representative, constitutional government. I want to say to you that the letters I get from them abhor the idea of trading with the enemy. We will fight our own battles just as we have through the centuries and we will not have to pay somebody to carry our battles for us. Eighty-five million dollars. Does it not make you kind of laugh to sit here and think that we are selling out for $85,000,000 to some country that has no use for us, that has shot our boys down in the war, and telling us where we could go? Well, they cannot do that to me, Mr. Chairman, and they cannot do it to the people I represent. Eighty-five million dollars. We are just wasting time. There is not a country in this world that does not hate us and there is not a country with any self respect but what has a right to do it, because we are sticking our nose in everybody else's business instead of trying to take care of our own.

Ask me, Mr. Chairman, to appropriate $100,000,000,000 for this country to provide rifles, tanks, airplanes, whatever it may be, and I will vote for it, just the same as everyone of you will. But, when you attempt to tell somebody in Yugoslavia, or make a trade with them, or China or anyone else, we are not in a position to make trades. They are the ones that should make trades. So, we sit here and waste an afternoon or two afternoons over a paltry $85,000,000 and tell the world that we are doing it to have some tramp army, as they say, take care of us. Well, we do not have any tramp armies in this country. We have the kind of boys that went to war when I did. I walked up the streets of Liverpool and an old woman said to me, "What are you doing here when the war is all over?" Well, the war was all over for them but it only just started for us in 1917, and now we take on the responsibility of carrying the load of the world on our shoulders.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in the consideration of this bill, and if you want to know what has happened to the Government of the United States, just walk over to the new House Chambers that are being prepared for us to go into on the 3d day of January and look at the modernistic medallions that are placed over the entrances into the galleries. They are medallions of persons. Now, I will read the names of them to you. I have just now been there and copied them down. I find two Americans among them, and I will give you the entire list: Mason, Poethier, Colbert, Edward I, Alfonso X, Gregory IX, St. Louis, Justinian, Tribonian, Lycurgus, Hammurabi, Moses, Solon, Papinian, Caius, Maimonedes, Suleiman, Innocent III, de Montfort, Grotius, Blackstone, Napoleon, and Jefferson.

Mr. O'KONSKI. No Tito?

Mr. HINSHAW. No Tito.

Mr. MASON. No Truman?

Mr. HINSHAW. No Truman.

Mr. WHEELER. No Stalin?

Mr. HINSHAW. No Stalin.

Mr. WHEELER. No Attlee?

Mr. HINSHAW. No Attlee.

Mr. FULTON. No George Washington?

Mr. HINSHAW. No George Washington that I could find anywhere in the Chamber. I understand, however, that his portrait will be returned. Do we not have enough American heroes that we could find a place for them on these medallions? I ask you what has happened to our country. That room, with its lovely pale blue above and its dark wood below, garnished in gold leaf that they are now putting on, looks something like a cross between a business chamber of what the Good Book of Revelations calls the whorl of Babylon and the Roman circuses where early Christians were martyred.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Did they have a place for the American flag or the UN flag?

Mr. HINSHAW. I trust they will have a place for the American flag behind the Speaker's chair as usual.

Mr. Chairman, I am informed that small busts of the men I have listed have been around the House Chamber since early times, but, as any Member will testify, they were hardly noticeable. Now these men stand out all around the Chamber in large modernistic medallions over the gallery doors. They are the most prominent decorations in the place. Why cannot we have such great Americans as the signers of the Constitution or such great American legislators as Webster, Clay, Calhoun, and others in their places?

Mr. CARNAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, we are soon going to vote on these amendments which are to determine whether or not the proposed aid to Yugoslavia is going to be in the form of a loan or is to be a grant. We should give rather careful attention as to just what the economic results would be of making this a loan instead of a grant.

Yugoslavia, the same as any other country, has only one means of earning dollars and that is through selling us goods, through exporting something to us. In the case of Yugoslavia, they are exporting to us strategic raw materials such as copper, lead, mercury, and zinc. It uses the dollars acquired through these exports to service existing dollar loans, such as the $55,000,000 in credits which it has obtained from the Export-Import Bank, and to purchase from us raw materials, inculding cotton and capital goods which it buys from the United States.

If we make this a loan instead of a grant, the only result would be that Yugoslavia's ability to service existing loans and to buy from us other products would be reduced by the amount of the loan.

This bill provides for the shipment of foodstuffs to Yugoslavia. Foodstuffs do not in themselves produce additional capital. This is an entirely different matter from shipping industrial equipment. Industrial equipment would increase Yugoslavia's ability to earn. If these funds were for the shipment of capital equipment, then there would be more reason to insist that it be made a loan, because the loan would result in increased production in Yugoslavia with which to pay off foreign indebtedness.

I am quite in agreement with loans for this purpose from the Export-Import Bank or from the International Bank, but I repeat, it is different from foodstuffs which are not capital producing. We would therefore gain nothing in the long run by insisting on making this a loan instead of a grant.

This bill will find its justification in our strategic and political interests. We are trying to strengthen the capacity of the Yugoslavs to defend themselves against Soviet imperialism. We also hope through this bill to strengthen the ties between the Yugoslav and the American peoples. I assume no one will claim that a loan would be as conducive to the attainment of these ends as would a grant. Let us not lose sight of our main objectives.

Let us not kid ourselves that we have any real possibility of getting back a net $38,000,000. I am sure all will agree with me that if 10 years from now there has been no war we will be glad to forget the $38,000,000. If war intervenes we will have no more chance of collecting the loan from Yugoslavia than the proverbial snowball.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, no one who has ever taken upon himself the responsibility of voting on these momentous issues and no one who has studied history could have listened to the words of the gentleman from Massachusetts without feeling there should be some discussion of why the obvious fact which he stated here is a fact. We are approaching the Christmas season. I came on the floor and Members were talking about appropriating $38,000,000 to feed starving people. I do not believe I would have had any difficulty in voting for this measure on the basis of Christian charity. It certainly is very little. I do not care how the people who are dominated would get the food. They are human beings. But I find this proposal to feed starving people couched in warlike language. I find that for some reason I must agree with the gentleman from Massachusetts that throughout the world we have but few friends. It is one thing to proclaim that you are a Christian. Sometimes it is quite a different thing to practice Christianity. I want to make a suggestion to explain why we have not won some friends, let us say, in the Orient. We support the United Nations. I do, and I always have. We must uphold its decisions. But I wonder if we have exercised the influence we should exercise in arriving at those decisions. I find in reading current history that France, if she had 40 Joans of Arc and as many divisions, could not protect her own continental borders. Yet we are supporting France in trying to maintain a colonial empire in the Orient. That is only one of many examples. I would like to support this measure on the basis of casting bread upon the waters. But when I come to the point that the very act of passing the measure is in itself because of the tenor of this debate a warlike measure, I sometimes wonder whether or not we are a good deal like Bobby Burns' Holy Willy, when we proclaim our Christianity, but our practice is certainly quite different.

I see in the press a great deal about praying. Almost everybody prays, but some people spell it with an "a" and some people spell it with an "e." Sometimes that causes differences of opinion. In my judgment it may be necessary to pass this bill because of the course we are following. I say I may yet vote for it because being convinced that we will follow that course, it will be better for our country to have cast this bread upon the water with warlike language, than not to have cast it at all. But the course of history does not seem to have been observed by many people. Shall I mention another example? Korea. Certainly Korea was the creature of the United Nations. I do not know all the issues. I am just a country lawyer from out in the Mid-West, but I do know there were some ugly rumors that were going on inside of Korea before the outbreak. I would like to have seen my country appear before the United Nations and call for an investigation to right any injustice, or to determine whether there was any injustice. Then I think we would have been on a much stronger moral ground, if we would have gone in when we went in to uphold the decisions of the United Nations. I wonder how many people had read the history of Korea before the decisions were made.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS] has expired.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. JACOBS. Never since the establishment of Jamestown, save and except the time when the deal was made between this Government under Theodore Roosevelt's administration and Taft with reference to the Philippine Islands, and even before Jamestown was laid out, it had been the consistent historical fact that the Chinese were coming to the aid of the Koreans each time any outsider landed on that peninsula. I wonder how much consideration was given to all these things and to these rumors of injustice in Korea, or consideration given to going before the United Nations and trying to get some decisions based on justice and equity. I do not know. I am not a member of the committee that handles this bill. I may vote for it, simply because I am convinced it is best in the course we are going to take and not because I think it is the best course to take.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS] has again expired.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the question on this particular amendment or group of amendments is whether the amount shall be a grant, which is a gift to Yugoslavia, or whether it will be a loan which she will have to repay. The question comes up whether this is an act of kindness or whether this is a strategic action. For my part, I disagree with the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS] and I agree with my colleague the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MANSFIELD], because he was frank enough to say to me yesterday, in reply to my question, that this was not a humanitarian bill but was a strategic bill, in order to obtain immobilization of 32 divisions in a possible conquest of Western Europe. That is actually what it purports to be.

Then let us see if these people are in dire straits or have the ability to pay. I believe this is a legitimate point of inquiry, in all fairness to the American taxpayer who is called on to foot the bill.

On page 24 of the hearings before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Perkins of the State Department, Assistant Secretary of State for Europe, said in regard to the diet of Yugoslavia:

> The normal diet in the past has been 2,800 calories in Yugoslavia. The estimate is that, with the foodstuffs they have on hand, that will drop to about 2,300 calories.

So the current drop is only about 500 calories. In answer to Mr. VORYS' question:

> That is, this contemplates no tightening of their belts?

Mr. Perkins says:

> About 10 percent of their food ration.
>
> Mr. VORYS. But there has yet been no starvation or any real hunger there?
>
> Mr. PERKINS. No; not up to this moment, if that is what you mean.
>
> Mrs. BOLTON. Do you mean in Yugoslavia?
>
> Mr. VORYS. Yes.

Let us see what else there is. The gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON] on page 68 introduced this in the record of the hearings from a newspaper clipping:

> The hunger in Yuogslavia, once the granary of Europe, has its true cause in the foolish and unnatural communistic economic plan which has been imposed by a minority on the masses of the Yugoslav people against their will.

Mr. Haggerty is a special agricultural assistant for our embassy in Yugoslavia. He has been in Yugoslavia some months making an investigation for this particular bill and this relief program. Mr. Haggerty says this in comment on the newspaper clipping:

> I would classify that as a half truth. It is true that during the three-odd years of the Communist administration in Yugoslavia there has been economic deterioration in every phase of the economy, agricultural as well as others. It is still true this year. There has been to a degree apathy on the part of the peasants to produce, those who are in the collective farms, a great many of them having been coerced into joining. They have no great enthusiasm for it. They would just as soon see the collectives fail. Their attitude is "Let Henry do it."

And we might say here: "Let Uncle Sam do it."

Mr. Haggerty goes on to state:

> There has been this downward spiral, to put a statistical handle on it—I would not state it as a final judgment—but just to illustrate it, I would say that the fallen production between 1949 and 1950 might be due to the extent of 10 or 15 percent to general economic deterioration and apathy, and the rest of it is due to the drought.

With about an 18 percent drop from 2,800 to 2,300 calories per day, it can be seen that a large part of the cause is the inefficiency of the government even on Mr. Haggerty's own statement.

The question is whether 2,300 calories is sufficient for Yugoslavia during this intervening period until the next crop season. If you will go back to June 4, 1948, page 7212 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 94, part 6, you will find where I had an amendment to increase the daily calorie ration of displaced persons in Germany from 1,550 calories that was set up by our Appropriations Committee of this Congress to a mere 2,000 calories. The amendment was voted down 102 to 37 by this Congress; we would not even continue to feed those displaced persons 2,000 calories a day in 1948, on June 4, 1948, when we passed the appropriation bill. The United States policy on Europe, and, for that matter, Yugoslav citizens who were displaced persons, was far short of the calories now available to Yugoslavia.

Let us see what else there is. Italy has helped out temporarily in this situation in Yugoslavia, in the last few months.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] has expired.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLATNIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. BLATNIK. The gentleman mentioned that collectivization has something to do with the decreased productivity of agriculture.

Mr. FULTON. That is correct. The productivity has been decreasing progressively, according to the State Department, as the current Yugoslav Government's collectivization program has been pushed against the people's resistance.

Mr. BLATNIK. But will not the gentleman admit that of all the war torn countries of Europe the one that was most devastated both in physical destruction and loss of human life, loss of livestock, which is the mainstay of life and the principal means of transportation, that the destruction was by far more severe in Yugoslavia than in any other part of Europe with one single exception?

Mr. FULTON. That gets away from the issue. The problem here is why Yugoslav current calories available have fallen from 2,800 daily postwar, to a present 2,300 calories. That war destruction did not prevent them from getting back to 2,800 calories postwar, which everybody agrees was satisfactory before the collectivization program was pushed during the last year or so. Let me proceed. I will quote what the caloric intake was for 1948–49 in Greece: It was only 2,468, and in 1947 it was 2,266. This was not as good as Yugoslavia.

In Italy today there is only 2,243 calories a day being used by the peasants, and yet Italy has been asked by us to send aid to Yugoslavia to increase their calories to 2,600 a day. And to the Italians' everlasting credit, despite all the history of trouble over Trieste, and the previous threats from the Yugoslav Government, they promptly complied. Now how about seeing the Italian calorie supply is increased to 2,800 daily? We like to see the people of Yugoslavia eat better, and the same should hold true for Italy.

May I point out that in 13 countries of the world, which contain over half of the world's population, the people exist on 2,000 to 2,300 calories a day: Brazil, 2,343; Chile, 2,351; Colombia, 2,283; Peru, 1,925. The South American countries run much less than the current rate of consumption in Yugoslavia. How about helping our South American friends, too? Japan has only 1,834 calories today, and we certainly should encourage them. Yet Yugoslavia, even as they say under present drought conditions, has 2,300 calories. Pakistan has 2,028 and the Philippines are living on 1,908 calories. Burma, 1,986; Ceylon, 1,918; China, 2,115. India lives on only 1,621 calories daily. Yet we refused to help India. We should assist our Indian friends to obtain at least a subsistence standard, and I urge you to consider this problem.

So you can see Yugoslavia is not on a starvation basis because over half of the population of the world gets less calories today than the Yugoslavs have. The Yugoslavs have been able to develop their agriculture and their agricultural commodities until they are living better than one-half of the world's population. This bill is not upon a starvation basis at all as was stated.

This is a matter solely of, "Do you want to pay for 32 dictator's divisions? Do you want to give up principle to do that?" If you do, you are not destroying your so-called world enemies. You may be destroying yourself.

Feeding deserving people is an entirely different thing from using their sons and forces in a play of power politics. I want the long-suffering people of Yugoslavia and the whole world adequately fed, but the purpose of this bill is expediency and will cut off hope in America from the democratic and younger elements of Yugoslavia.

Mr. BLATNIK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, reference has just been made to the fact that a slight decrease in productivity can be attributed to the collectivization of the agricultural or rural economy of Yugoslavia. That perhaps is true. Other factors were mentioned. But the major factor was completely overlooked.

Of all of the war-torn countries of Europe the country that by far suffered the most severe and devastating and widespread destruction of physical property, means of livelihod, human life and livestock, which is basic to its economy, which is primarily agrarian, that country was Yugoslavia. Other countries, such as Greece, which too suffered frightfully through years of brutal occupation, then rent assunder by internecine guerrilla warfare, Italy, France, England, and others—all of these countries, needed aid, and substantial aid to prevent them from collapsing right after the war. They would have collapsed if they had not received substantial aid from our country. Aid which totals up into the billions of dollars and runs over a period of several years.

The surprising thing is not that there is a serious food crisis in Yugoslavia and quite some economic hardship. The surprising thing is that they have not long ago collapsed. But they are still on their feet. After the economic sanctions and the economic blockade imposed by the eastern satellite countries of Russia, which cut off completely what trade or economic intercourse was then going on, by all of the economic rules in the book Yugoslavia should have completely collapsed, which was the purpose of the economic blockade. It is very much like a doctor putting a thermometer in the patient's mouth and the temperature reads 120 degrees. By all medical rules the patient should be dead, but somehow or other he is alive.

The past record of the Yugoslav people is perfectly clear—they have exerted themselves to the utmost to carry their own weight, and against great handicaps and difficulties and there is no question that they will continue to do everything they can for themselves before calling for an outside helping hand. The drought of the past season, however, was too much and now they do need an outside helping hand. This aid of $38,000,000 the State Department states has been pared down to the narrowest margin, and even with this plus what other help they may get from other countries, will just enable them to pull through for the coming 6 months of this winter, and then allow them to go on to their spring planting and then to carry on on their own.

Mr. HAYS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to take issue with the gentleman from Minnesota on the question of destruction in Yugoslavia. I traveled extensively throughout some of the countries of Europe which were affected by the war, and I also traveled a good deal through Yugoslavia. I saw less destruction in Yugoslavia than I saw, for instance, in Amsterdam, Holland, or in Frankfurt, Germany or in Warsaw and other parts of Poland, and I think his statement is open to a good deal of question. Of course there was destruction in Yugoslavia but when he says there was more than any other country in Europe I would like to have some figures. I want to tell you a little bit about how some of that destruction came about. The gentleman from Minnesota made a very moving argument here yesterday about how many people were killed in Yugoslavia during the late war and I will not question his figures. But I would like to have a little information about how many hundreds of thousands of those people were killed by Tito or Tito's men. I do know this, that on Easter Sunday in Belgrade during the last year of the war and Easter Sunday in Belgrade does not come on Easter Sunday in the United States because they do not use the same calendar we do—Tito asked that American bombers bomb the city of Belgrade, which was not strategically important; he specified that day and he specified the hour. That day and hour happened, purely by accident I suppose, to be on Easter Sunday when the Serbs were coming out of the orthodox churches. You can still hear about that in Belgrade today and I have more than a little bit of reason to believe that he did it for a purpose, and that purpose was that he wanted the Serbs, who have a natural affinity toward the United States, to hate this country. Tito is like all Communists.

He knew at that time and he knows today where he is going and what he wants. There will not be any debate in Belgrade about any conditions regarding any aid we give them. Why, if you read the little bulletin that the Yugoslav ambassador put out, they even tried to explain away the fact that they do not have any elections in Yugoslavia. You go up in front of a whole lot of people, election officials, and you pick up a ballot which says that you are for Tito's ticket, and you put it in that box, or else you pick up a blank ballot which means you are against the regime, and in front of that same group you put it in the other box. The ambassador in this little bulletin says it is probably pretty hard for Americans to understand this as being a democratic election. Well, some of the people in my district who came from Serbia could tell you in far more colorful language than would be appropriate here it is extremely hard to picture that as being a democratic election. Yet that is the kind of an invidual you are dealing with. Oh, yes, I drove down into Serbia a year ago in one instance the old lady in the door of this little peasant cottage told about Tito's men coming to that door and calling the husband out and asking why he had not contributed more, and before he had a chance to answer they shot him down in front of his grandchildren and his children.

For two whole days we traveled through Serbia. I talked to a good many people those 2 days and the rest of the week in Yugoslavia. Not one single person did I find who, when he knew we were Americans, would say he was for Tito or Tito's regime. As a matter of fact, without knowing that they would not be reported, they took their lives in their hands and said, "Tito is no good. Tito is no good." If those people believed that about him, what could anybody else think about him? What is the use of kidding ourselves? You cannot put it on a practical basis. You cannot put it on a Christian basis, may I say to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS], much as I should like to go along with him on that, because Tito is an atheist to begin with. He does not believe in God. He does not believe in good deeds. He does not have any morals. You just cannot deal with a man without morals on any basis that a moral people understand. It is just impossible to do it. I think we ought to think about that a little bit before we go too far in committing ourselves on any sacrifice of principle in dealing with a character of that kind.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

Mr. SUTTON. Mr. Chairman, some of us have been wanting to speak for about an hour now, and we have not had a chance. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. SUTTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word and ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. SUTTON. Mr. Chairman, ever since this bill came up yesterday I have been on the floor listening to every Member who spoke, with the exception of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. BLATNIK]. I was called to the office and did not get to hear him speak. I was trying to find some justification for supporting this proposal.

Yesterday evening when I went back to the office I called up the Library of Congress and had them browse through the RECORDS of 1938 and 1939 and find the speech our majority leader the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] made on Russia. I wish I had that speech with me today. It is one of the most beautiful speeches I have ever read. It was a condemnation of communism, of all forms of communism. That was at a time when the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] asked that the Ambassador from Russia be withdrawn. He had logical reasoning then, sound reasoning. It was one of the most logical talks I have ever read in my life. I wish some of you would go to the Library of Congress and read that speech. We who were not privileged to be here at that time missed something. I suggest that you who were not here then read it, and I am sure you will feel just as I do, you will hate communism just as our majority leader did then and as I do and other Members do now.

Let us get down to a little realism. I am like my good friend and neighbor down the hall from me, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RIBICOFF]. Let us stop, think, and listen, and get down to realism. Some have said that this is to be done from a humanitarian standpoint, that we are asking for this $38,000,000 to go to the aid of a starving people in Yugoslavia.

About 3 weeks ago I had the privilege of being in New York. I had never been down in the Bowery. I had heard so much about it.

It is not an isolated spot. It is not the only spot like it in the United States of America. I spent one entire Sunday afternoon walking through that section of New York, the great metropolitan center of the world. My friends, had you gone through that section as I did, and had you seen those starving people—Americans, true, patriotic Americans, just as patriotic as you and I are—then you would think twice before you sent any money across before taking care of those people here. Then I came back to Washington on Sunday afternoon, and on Monday afternoon I walked through some of the alleys of Washington, D. C., the Nation's Capital, and the Capital of the world today, the place where the entire world is looking for guidance. I went down on Ninth Street. I went through some of the alleys here in Washington, D. C. The Bowery is not an isolated case. I saw men, American men, patriotic citizens of America, digging in the garbage cans right here in Washington, D. C. You have seen them yourselves. Last evening when I was home thinking about this bill I wondered: Are we true to ourselves in appropriating $38,000,000 for people in Yugoslavia when we are letting our own people starve—people who do not have 2,000 calories a day—and yet we want to build up the calories for the people over in Yugoslavia, which is a Communist country, to more than 2,500 calories a day? I wondered: Are we actually thinking of America first of all?

My friends, from a humanitarian standpoint you do not have to go out of America to spend $38,000,000. You can go to my district in Tennessee and to the district of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK], or any other district in the United States of America. You will find people starving. So from a humanitarian standpoint you cannot grant this $38,000,000 for that reason. These 32 divisions—my friends, you cannot buy friends, it is true—because when your money runs out your friends run out on you. If we want to appease somebody, if we want to buy somebody, if you think that American dollars can buy fighting forces, why do we not appease China? They are fighting and killing our boys today. Why do we not offer them some money? Maybe they will stop killing Americans over in Korea. They are right at our throats now. Not one person on this floor, not one person on this committee, has said that Tito has volunteered in any way to give us any aid at all or any assurance for this $38,000,000. My friends, on what basis can you offer them the $38,000,000? They have critical materials that we need; yes. If they want to trade with us—if they want this food so badly, let us trade with them and give them this food which they need for the materials that we need. Let us think of America. We are in a critical stage today, more serious than many American people think, and probably more serious than you and I think. We who are at the age right now where the chances are that we will have to go back should world war III come find this pretty serious. I was just talking to HUGO SIMS a few moments ago. He is 29 years of age and he is going back into the service of his country. Many more of us will have to go back if we get into an all-out war. We have to think about these things. I am thinking about all of America. Thirty-eight million dollars will buy a lot of bullets. Thirty-eight million dollars will buy quite a bit of ammunition for the boys not only in Korea but wherever America might have to fight.

My friends, think of America and may God help America and God help you and to h—l with Tito and these enemies of ours.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendments to section 2 do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURLESON].

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may again be reported.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the Vorys amendment.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Is it the parliamentary situation that the vote now comes on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] to the Burleson amendment, the Burleson amendment being the amendment which takes the money from ECA, and the Vorys amendment making it available either as a loan or a grant? Then, following the vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS], which I assume is in the nature of a perfecting amendment to the Burleson amendment, the vote will then come on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota as a substitute for the Burleson amendment, either as amended or not?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct in his interpretation.

The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. VORYS) there were—ayes 43, noes 55.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the substitute amendment be again reported.

There being no objection, the Clerk again reported the Case substitute amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CASE of South Dakota) there were—ayes 54, noes 58.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. CASE of South Dakota and Mr. RICHARDS.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 80, noes 93.

So the substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BURLESON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FULTON: On page 1 after the Burleson amendment add "upon express prior assurance by the Government of Yugoslavia—

"(1) to take all necessary action to reduce its relief needs and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies;

"(2) to comply insofar as possible with recommendations of the UN to prevent and resist aggression, and to respect the territorial boundaries of adjoining democratic countries and territories including Austria, Greece, and Trieste;

"(3) to arrange for the release and return under United States and UN supervision of the Greek orphans, as well as all orphans of whatever nationality taken or held by the Yugoslav Government or its agents without legal right;

"(4) to stop imprisonment and persecution of eastern and Roman Catholics, and all persons because of their official position or membership in the church of their choice, or because of their religious beliefs;

"(5) to enforce adequately the provisions of the Yugoslav Constitution to guarantee freedom of speech, religion, press, and assembly;

"(6) to relinquish claim of dual citizenship in respect to nationals who have become citizens of other countries, including the United States;

"(7) to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to reserve a point of order. May I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if he does not think that amendment would come to section 3 rather than section 2?

Mr. FULTON. The point of offering it at this particular place is that before this question comes up the Yugoslavian Government must give assurance as to these seven conditions. It could either be put in under the section 3 agreement or it can be put in preliminarily before you even start to do any talking about an agreement that these conditions must be met by assurance of the Yugoslavian Government.

Mr. RICHARDS. Would not the gentleman offer it to section 3?

Mr. FULTON. I would agree here it can be put on section 3 but I would rather have it right here where you say that there shall be appropriated a certain amount, then say upon the express prior assurance by the Government of Yugoslavia.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation. I have not seen the amendment and I do not know much about it.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to impose certain conditions upon this aid program. These conditions are the conditions that anyone who is in favor of freedom throughout the world will readily agree to. These conditions are prior conditions on which the Yugoslavian Government must assure our Government before we even go into the subject matter of a written agreement under this act.

The first condition is as follows:

1. To take all necessary action to reduce its relief needs and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies.

The condition gives the United States the right to say to the recipient government, "Your policies are again running you right into this very same thing, and if you further collectivize and kill initiative by unfair acts you are further making an inefficient government, and we must have assurance you will not do that before entering into an agreement.

The second condition is as follows:

2. To comply insofar as possible with recommendations of the United Nations to prevent and resist aggression, and to respect the territorial boundaries of adjoining democratic countries and territories including Austria, Greece, and Trieste.

As to the second condition, we must have assurance that the Yugoslav Government will clear up the current long-standing disputes they have with their neighbors.

The third condition is as follows:

3. To arrange for the release and return under United States and United Nations supervision of the Greek orphans, as well as all orphans of whatever nationality taken or held by the Yugoslav Government or its agents without legal right.

Under this third condition, the Yugoslav Government must give their assurance on the detained orphans, of whatever nationality, before the United States representatives sit down to agree with them.

The fourth condition is as follows:

4. To stop imprisonment and persecution of eastern and Roman Catholics, and all persons because of their official position or membership in the church of their choice or because of their religious beliefs.

Under this fourth condition, we should insist on release from imprisonment of all those now incarcerated, and freedom of religion, whether Catholic, Protestant, or Jewish.

The fifth condition is as follows:

5. To enforce adequately the provisions of the Yugoslav Constitution to guarantee freedom of speech, religion, press, and assembly.

Under this fifth condition, we must insist upon the Yugoslav Government guaranteeing freedom of speech, religion, press, and assembly. I might also say that that is required of members by the United Nations Charter.

Condition 6 is as follows:

6. To relinquish claim of dual citizenship in respect to nationals who have become citizens of other countries, including the United States.

The Government of Yugoslavia now claims if a person is once a Yugoslav, he is always a Yugoslav. That means that many United States citizens cannot even get out of Yugoslavia to come back to this country. Many of you have that problem of claimed dual citizenship in your districts.

The seventh condition is as follows:

7. To conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations.

The seventh condition is in response to Mr. CASE's suggestion that this be put in as an express condition. Here it is an express condition that we must have the prior assurance that these seven items are met before we sit down and negotiate an agreement with the Yugoslav Government.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. Are those provisions mandatory or elective?

Mr. FULTON. They are mandatory. The Yugoslav Government must give the assurance that it will conform to these steps before we will discuss with them any agreement that the President might make.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FULTON) there were—ayes 55, noes 66.

Mr. GROSS and Mr. TAURIELLO demanded tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. FULTON and Mr. RICHARDS.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 71, noes 96.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. No assistance under authority of this act shall be made available nor shall any funds appropriated hereunder be expended until an agreement is entered into between Yugoslavia and the United States containing the following undertakings, and any others the President may determine to be desirable, on the part of Yugoslavia:

(a) To make available to the Government of the United States local currency in amounts required by it to meet its local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance supplied under this act.

(b) To give full and continuous publicity through the press, radio, and all other available media in Yugoslavia to the assistance furnished by the United States.

(c) To permit persons designated by the Government of the United States to observe without restriction the distribution of commodities and other assistance made available under the authority of this act, and to the extent necessary for this purpose to permit full freedom of movement of such persons within Yugoslavia and full access to communication and information facilities.

(d) To make equitable distribution to the people of Yugoslavia of the commodities made available under this act without discrimination as to race, color, or political or religious belief.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 2, line 12, after the word "States", strike out the period, insert a semicolon and the following: "and to allow to the United States, in cooperation with Yugoslavia, the use of such media as may be required to accomplish this purpose."

On page 2, line 16, after the word "observe", insert "and supervise."

On page 2, line 17, after the word "distribution", insert "by Yugoslavia."

On page 2, line 22, strike out "of" and insert "in."

On page 2, line 24, after the word "act", insert the following: ", as well as similar commodities produced locally or imported from outside sources."

On page 3, line 2, strike out the word "color."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JUDD: On page 3, after line 2, insert a new subsection (e): "To take all necessary actions to reduce its relief needs, to encourage increased production and distribution of foodstuffs within Yugoslavia, and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies."

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, many of us voted against the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] because it went too far. It practically dictated in detail what the policies of the Yugoslav Government must be in its internal affairs. I do not believe we have the right to do that with any foreign government, whether we like its policies or not. But when this Nation is called upon to provide funds to assist in a food shortage in another country, which in part results from certain definite governmental policies of that country, then I think it is only a matter of good hard sense, and proper Yankee horse trading to have something to say about changes which must be made in those policies which aggravate the food shortage, if American taxpayers are to help alleviate it.

There are three causes for the food shortage in Yugoslavia. One is the drought. That is an act of God, and we want to help with any suffering resulting from it. The second cause is that Tito in order to get foreign exchange to buy machine tools and other things to build up his armaments and industrialization has been taking food right out of the mouths of his own people and exporting it. That ought to be stopped, and this amendment would require that he do it. The third and most important is his policy of land collectivization which discourages the peasants from producing to the maximum, and even more, discourages them from selling or putting on the open market any surpluses that they may produce beyond what their own families need. It seems to me that when our Government sits down to make an agreement with Tito under which we are to send supplies to help feed people there who are hungry, we must as a minimum require that during the period when aid is being furnished by the United States under this act, he will agree to suspend those two government policies and any other actions which contribute to the food shortage. As a condition for receiving American aid he must stop exporting food which is needed in the country, and he must stop trying to collectivize the farms which takes away incentive for farmers to produce and sell all that they possibly can. When our Government is advocating land reform and wider distribution in many countries and is urging family-owned and operated farms here in the United States, it ought not to be helping Tito go in exactly the opposite direction in Yugoslavia.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JUDD. I yield.

Mr. RICHARDS. After listening very carefully to the gentleman, although I have not had an opportunity to study his amendment, it appears a good amendment to me and I would like to say that we are willing to accept it on this side.

Mr. JUDD. I appreciate that decision by the acting chairman of our committee and I think it represents the part of wisdom.

Mr. TACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I must necessarily oppose the amendment which has just been offered imposing certain political responsibilities upon Yugoslavia as a prerequisite to receiving funds from our Government, because our people long ago established a policy of never imposing our political governmental system upon any other nation. This amendment amounts to no less than an effort to infiltrate and impose our policies because of our wealth at a time while we are fighting the efforts of Russia to infiltrate in another form—by force. There is very little difference. Every nation should have the sovereign right of its own type of government, and no nation—the United States, Russia, or any other—should ever be authorized to infiltrate its sovereign rights by money or force.

It has not been but a few days since the European recovery program was being discussed on the floor of this House. Today, I fail to hear those who were then hollering long and loud, "The Marshall plan funds are for the purpose of defeating and preventing communism from spreading all over the world." But, today each and every proponent of this bill comes to the floor prefacing his remarks with an apology for supporting such legislation. You hear them in various phrases and in divers manners apologetically stating in the beginning of their remarks that they are not for Tito; that they are not for Yugoslavia; but that they are realists and necessarily need support this legislation. To do what? To help spread communism in Europe and throughout the world. There can be no other interpretation placed upon this legislation. When insisting upon Marshall plan funds, it was to stamp out communism. Today many of these same Members are providing for the nourishment of communism.

If it be true that this legislation is to assist starving Yugoslavs—however the record upon which these contentions must be based do not reveal these facts—I am wondering the argument for the cause of such a situation in Yugoslavia at a time when a very large percentage of the normal crop yield was produced and gathered this last year. We continuously argue in our democracy that communism will not work; that it is bad; and that only free people can hope to exist and reap the benefits of their entitlements. Where today is that argument about freedom of religion, freedom of press, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom from Government regimentation, and all the other freedoms which we cherish and contend must be the basis of any government if the people are to advance? The predicament of Yugoslavia is exemplary of our contentions on behalf of democracy. Their system of government has failed and regardless of how much food or money is sent there, you well know that it will never reach the people and will be used by Ditator Tito in trade for war armament to foster the communistic ambitions for world domination.

This bill merely proposes to assist in the building within Europe of a Communist government at a time while we are telling the taxpayers of this country that we need spend billions of dollars in Europe to prevent the spread of communism. You cannot buy friendship, and you know it.

We did in World War II for the father of communism, Joe Stalin, exactly what you now propose to do for his underling, Marshal Tito. However, before we assisted Joe Stalin during World War II he had already committed himself to our ball team. In fact, he had already commenced fighting on our side of the fence before we went to his aid. But today, Tito tells you in sum and substance, and in no too indefinite and uncertain terms, "I am not promising you believers in democracy anything; still I want you to give me, in addition to the $55,000,000 loan, an additional $38,000,000 free grant of United States money." None of you has the audacity to predict that Tito would ever fight on the side of democracy, or on the side of any free people. Very few of you would hazard the guess that he will not be supporting our adversary in a time of conflict. You merely insist on a poor gamble while admitting that the cards are stacked against us.

It would be impossible for a committee of three Members of this Congress to stay within a small incorporated town of this country composed of two or three hundred people for a period of 3 or 4 days and be able to ascertain their true convictions concerning the many ramifications of international affairs. Yet, two or three Members of this Congress spent a couple of days with the thousands of people in Yugoslavia; had a conversation with Tito; and came back here advocating assistance to Tito while, at the same time, admitting that he is a dictator of the worst degree; that he and his subjects are full-fledged Communists; that none of them has any faith in our system of government; that all of them think that democracy should be abolished; and that Christian ministers, priests, and nuns are jailed merely because of their belief in and advocacy of Christianity. These gentlemen well know that the slaves within Yugoslavia could never expect to enhance any proposed benefits from us, even should they be entitled to our efforts.

Just a few days ago our top Government officials met with responsible representatives from Great Britain and came forth with a no-appeasement decision. Can it be contended that this bill is anything short of appeasement? This is an effort to buy what Russia is attempting to gain by force, and yet we are stupid enough to demand no performance by Yugoslavia for the receipt of our funds.

Mr. Chairman, there is no earthly excuse for us to support this measure. I am wondering how all of you who profess to be of the Christian faith and believers in democracy can face your people, knowing as you do of the oppression of the Christian belief and the imprisonment of such advocates in Yugoslavia.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield.

Mr. FULTON. I want to compliment the gentleman. May I say this: How can anybody appearing before the Committee on Un-American Activities be asked if he is a Communist if we, by this bill, are supporting communism?

Mr. TACKETT. The proponents of this legislation apologize, Mr. FULTON, for this communistic measure and attempt to circumvent the predicament that you suggest they might find themselves in by merely saying in the beginning they want it generally known that they are not supporters of Tito. That is supposed to make everything all right and hunky-dunky. You know as well as I do—and they should know—that to support this bill is to support a Communist government during our efforts to stop the spread of communism throughout the world.

How are you Members who have been clamoring for the Marshall plan going to explain this to your people when you go back home and they readily recall the speeches you have made about how we have necessarily had to spend billions of dollars to keep communism from spreading?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. TACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. TACKETT. Even though I have realized the necessity of peacetime European aid from this country on behalf of friendly democracies in their efforts to rebuild their war-torn countries which were devastated at a time while they were assisting themselves and us, I have previously voted against aid during peacetime due to the enormous amount involved, sincerely believing that we could not hope to keep our democracy strong while spending on foreign soils more than our economy would allow. At the same time, I must admit that my vote on European aid has given me considerable concern. I have not always known for sure whether my vote was the correct one. It was difficult for me to understand how we could spend so much while receiving so little. My contentions have been pretty well exemplified by the efforts received from even the friendly democracies during the Korean conflict. Some would have us believe that all of the 13 present democracies in Europe would have now been communistic had it not been for our assistance under the European recovery program. I cannot contradict those contentions, neither can the proponents of such contentions sustain their claim. All will admit that we have gained little through the billions of dollars we have spread over the world. It has not precluded war, and we have no defense in Western Europe. I have considered the European recovery program during wartime as a wartime measure and a contribution to our national defense and, therefore, have unhesitatingly voted for the Marshall plan during this emergency as a defense and wartime measure.

After the passage of this legislation, I will be at a loss to know the battle cry for world war III. In World War I and World War II the morale of our men was boosted by the thought that they were fighting for freedom—freedom of religion, freedom of press, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom from government regimentation—a war to end all wars. What are you going to tell them as a battle cry when we enter world war III? Are we to admit today by this legislation that we have been lying to our fighting military personnel since 1917 by giving millions of dollars to a Communist government that knows and cares nothing about freedom, right or wrong, or lasting peace?

Mr. Chairman, I cannot believe that we are in such a predicament that we need sell the principles which have made this the greatest Nation upon the face of the globe.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TACKETT. I yield.

Mr. CANFIELD. I agree with the gentleman in everything he says, and this is my first break with my Government's foreign policy. I do not know but what Tito today is playing Stalin's game. The whole thing is a big fraud on the free democracies. Will the gentleman say something about that? Who knows? Who knows?

Mr. TACKETT. I wish to read a portion of a news dispatch from Egypt wherein an official of that country is insisting upon his government's maneuvering itself into a position of getting money from the United States Government. The official is quoted as follows:

> Britain and America are frightened whenever the eastern block is mentioned. Why should not Egypt use agreements with the eastern block as a bargaining point with Western Powers?

Every nation known to us has awakened to the fact that we are suckers for a pretense of friendship. They merely need hint becoming friendly with Joe Stalin in order to receive funds from us in our efforts to buy friendship.

Tito against Joe Stalin. Joe Stalin against Tito. Now, is not that a laugh? Joe Stalin will take over Tito any time he so desires regardless of the billions of dollars that we are foolish enough to give Tito even if we were willing to protest his abolition. Of course, Joe will delay his taking over Tito until Yugoslavia has been fatted with moneys, food, and military armaments from the United States.

Mr. Chairman, I do not claim to be highly versed on international affairs, but my 10-year-old boy is sufficiently intelligent to vote against this legislation.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it is interesting after all my experience and service here in the House of Representatives to have the opportunity to follow the gentleman from Arkansas. There are a lot of things that this Congress should know about in connection with this situation in Yugoslavia, the so-called Tito dictatorship. I am going to say to you Democrats—and I have been here 18 years with you as a Democrat—if you want to make the American people protection-minded, this is the best way in the world that you can get across to the American people that they must have protection for their domestic industries. About the only things they have over in these so-called Marshall plan countries, particularly Yugoslavia, to use for commercial trading as between countries are what they can dig out of the ground. They have no factories, they cannot manufacture enough material to supply their own needs, their farming has broken down. So the only thing they can send us is what they dig out of the ground—their minerals.

We are doing everything we can to destroy our domestic mining industry. We are bringing in lead under the ECA plan and under the Stockpiling Act from European countries, the dependencies of the Marshall plan countries, particularly Africa; we are bringing in copper, zinc, and lead from Yugoslavia and when this stockpiling business is over, if peace should come to the world and if plans are worked out so that we can abandon this great rearmament program, the mining industry in the United States would go on the rocks. People in the mining communities will be walking the streets of this country in a starving condition because there would be no price for the metals they might produce. We, by the passage of this bill, will do more to make the American people protection minded than anything else we could do.

Mr. Chairman, there are certain avenues of information open to all of us. Over in the Department of Commerce there are different sections which deal with the commercial and financial activities of these various foreign countries. There is over there what we used to call the British Empire unit, now known as the British section. We have the Eastern European section over there also.

I just called to get some information as to how much of a national debt Yugoslavia has. I had some little difficulty reaching the people because they take these long noon hours, but I finally got the Export-Import Bank. The first thing I found out was that there had been $55,000,000 loaned by the Export-Import Bank to Yugoslavia, at 3½ percent, that there was $7,000,000 loaned by Belguim and that Yugoslavia has obtained $9,000,000 from the International Monetary Fund on which they pay no interest. There is also $33,000,000 that they owe on the prewar debt, at 3 percent.

How much of a national debt there is in Yugoslavia—that is war debt—I could not obtain. They have a secret act over there which prevents giving out any industrial, commercial, or financial information by anyone except through government channels; so you cannot find out about the conditions in that country.

Their monetary unit is a dinar, which is fifty to our dollar. In voting for this bill I would like to know how many of the bonds of Yugoslavia are in the vaults of London and how many of those bonds of Yugoslavia are in the vaults of New York and how much of this $38,000,000 we are going to appropriate here will go to maintain the integrity of Yugoslavia and its national debt so that they will not go in default? In other words, are we going to pay interest on our own debt and at the same time contribute money to pay the interest on the national debts of all the Marshall-plan countries, particularly Yugoslavia?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending amendment do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JUDD) there were—ayes 106, noes 4.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I was amused this afternoon when the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY] compared the appeasement of Tito to the tune of $38,000,000 with the courting of an American girl in offering her flowers and candy. Now, I have never been entertained by Tito in his luxurious mansion as has the gentleman. However, I know something about the rudeness of Yugoslav troops toward American GI's and American Congressmen, if you please. Of course, it was back in the fall of 1947 before the so-called incurable divorcement of Stalin and Tito, something I cannot for the life of me believe. I was in Trieste in September 1947 when there were communistic riots in the streets. I could not sleep at night because Tito's partisans were marching up and down the streets singing their favorite songs about Tito. It so happens that on the day I arrived in Trieste two American GI's committed a terrible crime in the mountains outside of Trieste. They stepped over, if you please, a poorly marked boundary line between Yugoslavia and the free zone of Trieste, and they were immediately seized by Tito's troops and jailed. Commanding our forces in Trieste at that time was Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, now superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. I learned one of those boys was a New Jersey boy and I discussed the matter with the general and he told me frankly he could not do a thing with the Yugoslav generals toward effecting the release of those GI's. He asked me if I was willing to undertake a mission to go down to road block No. 5 and talk to some of those Yugoslav military leaders. And, I did. I was given the grandest run-around for several hours, one of the Yugoslav officers saying to me, "Is it not too bad, Mr. Congressman, that on the very day your delegation arrives in Trieste from the United States of America that some of your American GI's thought to step over our boundary line? They are now in jail." One of these boys was from New Jersey and the other from Virginia, from Arlington, Va., represented in this Congress by the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH], who is for this bill. Do you know what they told me when they were released 6 days later? They told me they were briefed hour after hour on the tenets of communism, and they were asked pointed questions hour after hour about the number and disposition of our troops in Trieste. Tito wanted to know. You cannot tell me there is an incurable divorcement between Stalin and Tito.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. RICHARDS. Is not the gentleman talking about something that happened at Trieste several years ago?

Mr. CANFIELD. Yes, in 1947, the very year we were giving Yugoslavia millions of our dollars for food and other aid.

Mr. RICHARDS. That was before Tito broke with the Cominform, was it not?

Mr. CANFIELD. I do not believe there has been such a break. Does the gentleman think that?

Mr. RICHARDS. Sure.

Mr. CANFIELD. Is the gentleman sold on that?

Mr. RICHARDS. Yes, and everybody else is, almost.

Mr. CANFIELD. Wait, then, until you see the vote on this bill in the House of Representatives. Wait then until you see. This bill ought to be defeated here today in the interest of the defense of the free forces of democracy in this world.

Mr. HESELTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HESELTON: On page 3, line 2, after the word "belief.", insert a new section as follows:

"SEC. 4. All of the funds made available under authority of this act shall be utilized to the fullest practicable extent in the purchase of the commodities from the surplus commodities in the possession of the Commodity Credit Corporation."

Mr. HESELTON. Mr. Chairman, this simply expresses what I believe would be the specific intention of Congress. Unfortunately, I tried to place some figures in the RECORD last night so as to make them available to all of you, but they did not reach the printer. Consequently I can give you these figures only hurriedly.

As I understand it, the committee report indicates that in the past program practically all of the commodities that were sent over were taken from the surplus food commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation. I understand from the committee report it is anticipated that something like 71 percent of all the food that is sent will come from that source, but I do not think we should be satisfied to leave it just with the committee report and not express our firm and clear intention that this should be done even to a greater extent, if possible.

I am not prepared to discuss the kinds of food that are being chosen or why they were chosen or whether there can be any other arrangement made to avail ourselves of these tremendous stores of food.

But I can say to you that at the end of October we had 1,743,484,890 pounds of butter, cheese, dried milk, dried eggs, dried beans, and dried peas, that cost the taxpayers of this country $381,838,495.60. But even more important, whether we pass this bill or do not pass it, everyone of us knows we are going to impose upon the great American people greater taxes, greater costs, greater burdens in the days that lie ahead of us. For storing those six commodities alone for only 4 months during the time of the Korean War they paid out $7,537,153.31.

We can accomplish two things if we will only firm this bill up by adopting this amendment.

We can direct those who are going to administer this program to examine it carefully and carry out this mandate. We will also be taking a bit of the burden off of the taxpayers' back.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HESELTON. I yield.

Mr. RICHARDS. May I say that we do not have any objection to the gentleman's amendment. It might help.

Mr. HESELTON. I thank the gentleman. I am sure that it can help. At least we shall have done all we can at this stage.

For the record, under permission granted me, I want to include a breakdown of the figures as to the six commodities.

	Inventory Oct. 31, 1950	Cost	Carrying charges
	Pounds
Butter	168,889,008	$104,253,780.07	$1,567,317.93
Cheese	109,319,543	36,819,645.70	1,150,513.34
Dried milk	383,500,481	49,409,955.86	1,836,367.63
Dried eggs	108,648,358	114,986,624.21	1,021,758.67
Dried beans	902,857,100	73,743,837.99	1,668,642.62
Dried peas	70,270,400	2,624,651.77	292,553.12
Total	1,743,484,890	381,838,495.60	7,537,153.31

LET'S SAVE AMERICA FOR AMERICANS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this will probably be the only opportunity I will have to express my opposition to this legislation to give Communist Tito $38,000,000 out of the pockets of the overburdened American taxpayers.

We have been under the domination in this country, it seems, of wild-eyed internationalists for the last few years. What has it brought us? One ex-serviceman with scars all over him said to me the other day, "We have just been through the most useless war in history. Our boys won the fight, but the victory was turned over to Communist Russia, the worst enemy civilization has ever known."

These wild-eyed internationalists want us to get into a world government. Well, you are in one now, the so-called United Nations; and look at the front page of that paper and see what we are getting out of it. They sent our boys into Korea without consulting the Congress of the United States, which, under the Constitution, is charged with the duties and responsibilities of declaring war. Our boys were sent there to be killed by the thousands, yes, tens of thousands, with instruments and munitions purchased with the money which Congress has given away to the various nations of the earth. And today they are driven off the continent of Asia with tremendous losses and are struggling for dear life to find some method of getting out of Korea.

Already our casualties in Korea are enormous. You talk about the United Nations—where are they? They sent American boys to do the fighting and dying and expect Americans to do the paying, while Tito and Stalin play and laugh behind the lines. Already the casualties in Korea have amounted to more than the casualties in the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the War with Mexico, and the War with Spain, all put together. American boys have suffered more casualties than our forces suffered in all four of those wars, as a result of that irresponsible internationalism while we hear some long-nosed individuals denouncing fellows who follow the policy of George Washington, Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson as "isolationists."

Our boys are being killed with instruments of war which were purchased with the money that the Congress appropriated, and gave to foreign countries, in my opinion without constitutional authority.

Do not kid yourselves about old Tito. Is not this the same old Communist who murdered our aviators who happened to fly across the line, and buried them without notifying us?

Is not this the same old criminal who murdered Mihailovitch, who protected our boys during the direful days of the Second World War? You are not getting anywhere except heading toward that bankruptcy which Lenin in 1920 said was necessary to bring to the United States in order to bring her down to where we could be conquered by communism.

No—I am not going to vote for this measure. I have taken as much abuse from the Communists of this country, and abroad, as any man who ever served in the Congress of the United States, because of my attitude. I have seen, and I have known, who those Reds are and what they are up to. I say to you that we should not go down into the pockets of the overburdened taxpayers of America—a country which owes more money today than all the rest of the world put together—and dish out money to Tito, to a Communist of the vilest type under the pretenses that he might decide to fight on our side if we get into a European war.

Now the boys are getting back home. They are headed for home now. The so-called United Nations has proved to be a miserable farce. If you do not believe it, just wait until you hear from the people at home. We had better spend our money to build up our own defenses, build up a strong air force, provide an adequate supply of atomic bombs, radar facilities, and every instrument of war to save America and enable America to lead the people of the world to freedom by precept and example. We cannot lead them to it by bribery, or drive them to it with the bayonets.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has expired.

Mr. ROONEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, no one can arrive at an accurate appraisal of conditions in present-day Yugoslavia without first being made aware of the religious situation. From a study of the religious situation, it can be determined whether the Yugoslav Government is really democratic, whether as a temporary member of the United Nations Security Council Yugoslavia is keeping its pledge not only to help make the world a more secure place to live in but also whether the Yugoslav Government grants to its own people the fundamental human rights. The issue is not to be judged by a high-minded speech of Marshal Tito or a Yugoslav delegate to the UN. The issue must be judged on the basis of the facts; by what is taking place in Yugoslavia today under the Tito Communist regime.

When the Tito Communist regime took control of Yugoslavia after the Second World War, it was immediately obvious that the regime was fanatically communistic, and that the Communist way of life would be forced upon the 16,000,000 of Yugoslavs. The new Government set the Communist machine in motion. There began the ruthless communization of the land, seizure and confiscation of private homes, convents, great amounts of church property. Thousands and thousands of persons who were thought to prove troublesome to the Communist regime in the future were thrown into prison; many were killed. The schools were filled with teachers with instructions to make Marxism the order of the day. The press and radio, completely in the hands of the regime, blared hourly the party line—the voice of freedom was stifled. The Communist regime was determined to bring to its knees all enemies within its borders, and it was thus that the regime vowed to bring to destruction its greatest known enemy, the Catholic Church. Ever since Karl Marx wrote that religion was the opium of the people, Communists knew that Christianity and communism could not stand side by side; one must give way; one must compromise. Tito was convinced that the compromiser would not be he. Priests were arrested; a number were killed. Convents were confiscated and sisters were made homeless. Catholic schools, hospitals, orphanages were appropriated by the state. The Catholic press was destroyed. The amount of religion taught in the state schools was insignificant; it was difficult to teach religion as such in the churches. Police agents were everywhere, taking note of sermons, listening and reporting conversations. What little property remaining to the church after the outrageous agrarian reform was being taxed so highly that bishops and priests were unable to pay what was exacted from them. With all these events behind him, Tito set out to secure the undoing of his greatest Yugoslav opponent. In this, too, Tito met with success. After a mock trial, which shall live in infamy, the beloved shepherd of the Croats, Archbishop Stepinac was committed to prison for 16 years. Protests from this travesty of justice reached the palace of Tito from all over the free world, but Tito turned a deaf ear. Archbishop Stepinac was where he wished him to be—behind prison walls. By striking the shepherd, Tito hoped to scatter the flock.

June 1948 saw the famous Kominform resolution, expelling Tito from the family of communism. To the western world it appeared that the iron curtain was beginning to fray, perhaps this might be the beginning of the end for communism. Some thought that Tito would be the first to admit that communism was not what his people desired. But Tito soon informed the world of his stand. He had parted ways with Stalin, but not with communism. He was a loyal follower of the Marx-Lenin line. Tito claimed that he was the real Communist; Stalin was a deviationist.

In spite of the split with Stalin, there was no appreciable relief given to the people from the backbreaking requirements of their Communist masters. The persecution of the church continued with so much determination that even in the year 1949 some 100 priests were arrested; most of them without even the benefit of a mock trial. Arrests of priests and seminarians continue in 1950. It is known that two priests died in prison as a result of the treatment received at the hands of their jailers. Religious orders of sisters, with the exception of a few small houses, were dissolved in the Republics of Slovenia and Bosnia-Herzegovina, and in the area known as the Backa. In Slovenia, where the people are 95 percent Catholic, some orders of priests were dissolved and their property confiscated. A number of churches have been destroyed. One church was converted into a movie studio; another was given to a non-Catholic sect.

The Communists have not been too clumsy in pursuing their drive on Catholicism. Churches have been allowed to remain open. Visitors, coming to Yugoslavia, seeing that the churches are open, proclaim that religious liberty exists in Yugoslavia. In spite of open churches, verbal orders have been given that no policeman or member of the military service is to go to church. A soldier, who goes to church in spite of this prohibition, is the exception and a tribute should be paid to his personal courage. Government workers who frequent church do so at the peril of losing their jobs and means of livelihood. They are dissuaded from being married in church or having their children baptized. Students in the lower schools have been ridiculed in class by their teachers because they attended mass. University students have been discriminated against and even expelled because they insisted on being practicing Catholics. In order to wean the children away from the influence of the church, excursions are planned for Sunday morning or meetings held which the youth are obliged to attend. Some cinema houses are built near churches and special films are shown on Sunday morning during mass time.

Untold pressure has been brought to bear on priests and bishops to force them to join priests associations. These associations have been founded and aided by the government for the purpose of usurping the authority of the bishops, and to cause confusion in the church by separating priests and bishops. All these things happen in spite of the fact that the Yugoslav constitution guarantees religious freedom by virtue of article 25.

The facts depicted above are not isolated facts of 1946 or 1947; these same things are happening today while Yugoslav delegates are sitting at the Security Council and General Assembly meetings. Yugoslav delegates protest that they are being discriminated against by the Soviet Union and those countries in its power. We deplore this discrimination, but even more we deplore the ruthless persecution imposed upon the Yugoslav nation, while their delegates protest to the world, through the medium of the United Nations, that they seek nothing but peace. The world press writes little or nothing of the persecution of 16,000,000 Yugoslavs. The voice of the nation is silent through ruthless control.

The question has now arisen of giving unconditional substantial aid to a nation that will be hungry this winter. Any decision taken regarding this aid without considering the facts laid down in the first part of this memorandum is to care little for the destinies of the Yugoslav people. In Yugoslavia today there languishes in prison Archbishop Stepinac of Zagreb, Bishop Cule of Mostar, and over 300 Catholic priests. Thousands of sisters have been made homeless. The prisons are filled with God-fearing Yugoslavs because they are opposed to the communistic régime. In reading the second part of this exposé, section 1 cannot be forgotten.

Christian charity demands that we must help our starving brethren. But the question of placing millions of dollars worth of aid in the hands of the Yugoslav Communist regime poses many difficulties.

First. To help Yugoslavia substantially without exacting certain conditions is to be ignorant of the real situation. Some conditions, which would be welcomed with great joy by the Yugoslav people, would be the granting of freedom from the ruthless control exercised over the people; a sincere recognition of the human rights; a method of food distribution which will ensure that the Yugoslav people are taken into consideration and that the aid given is not monopolized by the Communist leaders, the all-powerful police, and the Yugoslav Army.

Second. Tito demands that unconditioned aid be given to him by the United States. The Communist leader has stressed in his speeches that he will not sacrifice his principles to gain aid from the west. Will the alternative find the United States sacrificing her principles by aiding substantially a Communist police state and, by this aid, enable it to stay in power and continue its ruthless control and persecution of 16,000,000 Yugoslavs, a small percentage of whom favor the Tito regime, whose elections, amounting to a farce, follow the Communist pattern?

Third. Let the United States be fully aware that to aid a Communist state is to aid a potential enemy who is vowed by principle to rise up and destroy all non-Communist nations when the moment is opportune. Nowhere has Tito denounced communism. He has been expelled by Stalin from the family of communism. If Tito has rejected Stalin, he has not rejected a founder of communism but only its major prophet. The communism of Tito is the communism of Marx and Lenin, the sworn enemies of Christian civilization and the western way of life; let it not be forgotten that Tito and his henchmen have been trained a la Russe. There is no such thing as good communism as opposed to bad communism, just as there is no such thing as good evil as opposed to bad evil. The national communism of Tito is founded on the doctrines of Marx and Lenin and kept in power by ruthless control and untold murders. Tito regards himself as the Communist par excellence. The national communism of Tito is dynamic and, being such, it must tend to spread and increase itself. This evil can increase itself only at the cost of a portion of Christian civilization.

Fourth. By giving Yugoslavia enough aid to make her independent of the east and the west even for 6 months, the United States is helping to keep in power a regime which is odious to 90 percent of the Yugoslav people. The Yugoslav people look to the United States as their only hope of salvation. The Yugoslav man on the street seeks something more than food; he seeks freedom from tyrants.

Fifth. Unconditioned substantial aid to Yugoslavia will be a great set-back to the cause of Christianity in this already persecuted country. The Yugoslav Communist regime will be ensconced in power. Will it not be sadly paradoxical to note that America, who depicts herself as the champion of international justice, and the ardent supporter of all those who would throw off tyranny will be largely instrumental, by its policy, in dealing a serious blow to the cause of Christianity in Yugoslavia and the cause of Christianity throughout the globe.

Sixth. It is well to point out that Tito as a loyal follower of communism is a devotee of Communist morality. A Yugoslav publication of 1950, quoting the words of Lenin, explains what is meant by Communist morality:

> Morality is that which serves to destroy the old society of exploitation and the union of all the workers building a new Communist society.

In other words, any means taken to destroy Christian civilization is morally good for the Communist. This, then, is the morality professed and practiced by Tito. Tito, as a follower of this morality, shot down American planes, took American lives in 1946, just at a time when millions in aid were pouring into his country, thus evoking the harsh words of then Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson:

> These outrageous acts have been perpetrated by a government that professes to be a friendly nation.

There is no doubt that the Yugoslav nation is friendly to the United States, but the Tito regime has nothing but hatred for America. Who, then, shall be helped? The Yugoslav nation, by demanding concessions for the people? Or the Communist Government, who, because of their morality, can be counted on for nothing. To aid substantially the Yugoslav Communist regime without demanding concrete acts of good will on the part of the Government not only toward America but also toward its own people would be a drastic mistake. The word of a Communist amounts to nothing. They are masters of verbiage. Lenin himself said that words meant nothing for him; he was impressed only by action.

Seventh. Responsible leaders of the United States, Members of Congress, into whose hands has been placed the commonweal of so many millions, are faced with a serious decision. The question at stake: Whether Yugoslavia, a Communist police state, should be given unconditioned aid, or whether substantial aid should be withheld if the Yugoslav Government is not willing to give freedom to its people. Will the Communists be forced to sacrifice their principles or will America be deluded into violating hers.

America was founded on Christian principles; her founding fathers were men who believed that the Christian way of life must be the sturdy support of the country. As long as tyranny exists any place on the globe the American way of life is faced with a threat. For America to foster tyranny—and that is what unconditioned aid to Yugoslavia would mean—would set a precedent which would result in the utter despair of millions of people in Eastern Europe and Asia who see in America the immovable Statue of Liberty and the unquenchable light of freedom. The task of America is clear; the decision may not be easy. The Tito Communist regime is not only un-Christian, it is anti-Christian; it is not only amoral, it is immoral; it is not only undemocratic, it is antidemocratic; it is not only un-American, it is anti-American. To sacrifice Christian principles so as to preserve the Communist principles of Tito is to betray the sacred trust placed in the hands of American lawmakers by the Christian, God-fearing, liberty-loving, anticommunistic American people. If the policy of the United States is built on the insecure groundwork of expediency, then the Yugoslav question poses a problem. If, as it is hoped, American policy is built on the unshakable foundation of Christianity, then, with God's help, the decision taken regarding aid to the Yugoslav Communist regime should afford no anxiety to Christendom.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment do now close.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, I object. I have an amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN to the amendment offered by Mr. HESELTON: After the word "commodities" insert "at Government cost."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, we will accept the gentleman's amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and the amendment thereto do now close.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RIBICOFF: Page 2, after line 2, insert a new section as follows:

"Nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing measures undertaken by the present government of Yugoslavia which suppress or destroy religious, political, and economic liberty; and the Yugoslav government shall be so notified when aid is furnished under this act."

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is being offered on behalf of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MANSFIELD], the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS], and myself.

I think it is time that we introduce a note of sanity into the present debate. Frankly, no bill that has come out of the Foreign Affairs Committee or before the House has been supported with as little enthusiasm as the measure before us today.

It is true that Tito is a Communist; Tito is a dictator. None of us approve Tito or what he stands for; neither do we condone nor do we approve the religious, civil, and political persecution that has taken place in Yugoslavia.

The purpose of this amendment is to point out to Yugoslavians the complete disapproval of their past conduct and what the American people think of this conduct.

But there is another matter which I think is important to bring to the attention of the House and something which was touched upon yesterday. It is so important for us to understand in the world today that we must be realistic.

Basically, the prime purpose of a nation's foreign policy, if it is to have any value, is to see to it that the nation itself survives and is strengthened. All of us understand the principles for which the United States of America stands, all of us believe in democracy and representative government and the great liberties that have made this country great. But no nation can achieve its ends in the world unless it also exercises power in the world, not power in the concept of naked aggression or indifference to the rights of other people, but power in itself for the purpose of achieving the ends for which that nation stands. A nation to exercise this power must be militarily strong, a nation to have this power must have alined with it other people. A nation such as America must make sure that those forces in this world that help strengthen the forces of the United States of America receive the assistance of this Nation. Keep in mind that the nation which travels alone travels on a road of tragedy. It is understood, and we must understand, that the main purpose of Russia's imperialism is to isolate the United States of America either in peace or at war, to place the United States of America in the position where 150,000,000 people must stand up against 2,150,000,000 other people in the world.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. RICHARDS. May I say that I have no objection to the amendment, and I do not think any other member of the committee has any objection to his amendment.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FEIGHAN. I am in hearty accord with the objectives of the amendment, but I believe also that our State Department should go further, as was expressed in my speech made earlier in the afternoon.

Mr. RIBICOFF. That has been the contention of our committee. In executive session of our committee we have urged upon the representatives of the State Department who are in charge of Yugoslavian affairs to make definite and strong representations of our disapproval of the tactics of Yugoslavia which have been against religion and the clergy. We have urged upon them to mitigate the punishment and to free various Catholic priests and bishops, the various elements of the Orthodox faith, as well as the Protestant clergy who are in the prisons of Yugoslavia. We told them that they cannot expect to come back to the people of this Nation and ask for assistance as long as they disregard those ideals and principles which the people of America hold so dear to themselves and the western philosophy.

We sincerely hope that because of the representations of the State Department and this Congress you will find a gradual change in the philosophy of the Yugoslavian Government. American after American tells us now when he goes to Yugoslavia that the attitude of the people of Yugoslavia is completely different from what it has been in previous years. They are opening up their nation to American newspapermen and American visitors. We are told that the American is appreciated and respected. I hope that because of this amendment the ends sought by the gentleman from Ohio, and I am sure every other Member of this House, will be attained and bring about a good and lasting influence in Yugoslavia.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the pending amendment.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. NICHOLSON. May I ask the gentleman from New York if this section is the Connally amendment in the Senate?

Mr. JAVITS. This section is the McMahon amendment in the Senate.

Mr. NICHOLSON. It says that "nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing the measures undertaken by the present Government of Yugoslavia."

Mr. JAVITS. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLSON. That we cannot do this if they destroy the religious, political, or economic liberties that we enjoy?

Mr. JAVITS. What it says is that nothing in the relief which we are giving shall be deemed in any way as condoning or endorsing what Yugoslavia is doing in respect to religious freedom.

Mr. NICHOLSON. And we tell Yugoslavia that these conditions that we pass here today are on the premise that we are telling Yugoslavia what to do?

Mr. JAVITS. If the gentleman will let me continue for a minute I think I can make that clear. As the gentleman from Connecticut has said, this amendment is offered also on the part of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MANSFIELD], and myself.

I rise to add one further word. When I spoke on this bill yesterday I said that it can only be taken as a measure of economic warfare. If we were taking it as other than a form of economic warfare we would have to attach far more conditions than even contained in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON]. What we are doing now in treating this measure as one of economic warfare, is to give the United States Government an opportunity to make this aid to Yugoslavia as useful to us in our struggle against the Communists as possible, and to make it as harmful to the Kremlin as possible.

But, that does not mean that we should not serve notice on Tito and the Yugoslav people of the fact that this in no way represents any abandonment or weakening of our demands for justice in Yugoslavia already made and reiterated. That it is necessary that religious freedom be assured in Yugoslavia by releasing religious prisoners, such as Archbishop Stepinac and the nuns and priests, who have been incarcerated; that we further give notice that Yugoslavia still has not done anything nearly like it ought to do in regard to the return of the thousands of Greek children abducted by the Communists. I have protested this strongly in the House before. The House itself passed a resolution of protest with respect to this situation upon the motion of the gentlewoman from Ohio [Mrs. BOLTON] and myself, only a few short months ago. I think it is extremely necessary that we do this, and while this bill is economic warfare and therefore we are not imposing as set conditions these matters, we should serve notice that it is not our intention to forego one single issue that we have expressed as demanding rectification and just treatment in Yugoslavia. What we can do here, is put forward a medium that will ultimately get us the very things that we are demanding because we are getting directly into a country, and a situation in Yugoslavia which was heretofore closed to us behind the iron curtain, and for the first time we get a chance to do something to assure our getting results on the issues of religious freedom and imprisoning of Archbishop Stepinac and other priests, the return of the Greek children, the status of United States citizens in Yugoslavia and Yugoslav relations with Greece and Austria and in Trieste.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. NICHOLSON. I would like to ask if the State Department is going to tell Yugoslavia what is in this amendment.

Mr. JAVITS. The gentlemen will note that the amendment itself requires as part of this act, when we pass it, that the State Department do that very thing.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in this booklet here in my hand on Yugoslavia, which must all be true because I received it from the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, it says on the page dealing with the constitution: "Freedom of speech, religion, press, and assembly, is guaranteed."

In committee I offered an amendment which would require measures to carry out those guaranties provided in the Constitution, but it was voted down. Instead, we have this amendment before us which is a new low in timidity, or something. On religious persecution we do not say "stop it"; we do not say "We do not like it"; but we attempt a kind of thought control by telling people of another nation what thoughts they must have about our actions. We say to Tito and the people over there, "You must not interpret this as being what it looks like, an endorsement of persecution." I will go along with it, but I wish to point out what a craven way this is for the great Republic of the United States to stand up for the fundamental freedoms.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. CANFIELD. Could not this be called a flowers-and-candy amendment?

Mr. VORYS. Perhaps.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. Is not this amendment a confession of inefficiency on our part?

Mr. VORYS. Well, you can call it what you want. I am going to vote for it. This is the nearest we can get to a mild hint, not a slap on the wrist, but a gentle touch on the shoulder, with reference to the persecution going on over there.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section close in 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I am supporting this amendment. I would like to see stronger language used. Much as I dislike to give aid or even simulated approval to any kind of totalitarianism, I feel constrained to vote for this bill. It represents a calculated risk as part of an over-all plan for self-preservation.

During the past year or two we have been told and we have had presented to us some evidence indicating that Yugoslavia has shown a growing inclination to cooperate with the western democracies, and particularly with our own United States. We have traveled a long way since 1946 when the relations between our country and Yugoslavia were so strained that they were on the verge of a complete rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

During these 4 years we have patiently made repeated efforts to convince the people of Yugoslavia that the people of the United States are their friends. We have done that in the hope of veering Yugoslavia away from the orbit of Communist Moscow, and I believe that we have attained a certain measure of success in that direction. With a little more patience and endurance we may achieve final success, so that in the not-too-distant future the people of Yugoslavia will be fully and finally aligned with the free nations of the world.

It is for this reason that I support today the effort to extend aid to Yugoslavia at a time when aid is most needed. A friend in need is a friend indeed, is the way the old saying goes. I fervently hope that the people of Yugoslavia will not forget this outstretched hand that is coming to them from the United States at a time when across their immediate borders they see the outstretched rifles and bayonets of Russia's Communist armies in Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania.

Nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, I feel that it should not be a one-way street of all give and no return. Although I dislike to make such aid conditional or to use pressure because of the bad feelings such pressure tactics will arouse, I think we ought to make several things clear to Tito and to the people of Yugoslavia. I have in mind specifically two things:

First, the question of religious freedom in Yugoslavia. What concerns me a great deal—and, I believe, it concerns all of us who are seriously interested in the freedom to worship the faith in which we believe and whose tenets we practice—is the fact that, up until this time, Tito has made no effort to extend to the people of Yugoslavia the right of religious freedom, the right to worship their God in accordance with the dictates of their conscience.

The outstanding example is the case of Archbishop Stepinac, who has been imprisoned now for more than 4 years on trumped-up charges. The Stepinac incident is a tragic commentary on our times, due, to a large extent, to the godlessness of our age. This particular instance can be ascribed directly to a regime which refuses to recognize the meaning of religious freedom and seeks to eradicate all traces thereof. In the modern dictatorships, whether of the left or of the right, oppression is practiced against all who are loyal to their faith—against Catholics, against Protestants, and against Jews. No man with religion in his heart is immune from this persecution. No man who openly espouses his faith is able to avert the wrath of the dictators.

Today, the leaders and the people of Yugoslavia find that they have been double-crossed by Moscow—as many other nations have discovered in recent years, and still more will discover in the future. They have turned to us anxiously seeking our friendship. Up to now their leaders have failed to learn the lesson of religious freedom.

Is it asking too much, when in our willingness to aid Yugoslavia we ask in return that its leaders extend to their own people a basic democratic concept—freedom from religious persecution?

The other question I wish to raise concerns human rights. When the declaration of human rights came up for a final vote in the General Assembly of the United Nations just 2 years ago in December 1948, it won the wholehearted approval of 48 member nations and 8 others abstained on that vote. Yugoslavia was one of the nations which abstained.

That was most regrettable. The declaration of human rights is recognized throughout most of the world as a goal toward which all nations must aspire. It is unique in human history because the rights it declares are applicable to all peoples everywhere on the face of the earth. Human rights are described as the substance of the "moral and intellectual solidarity of mankind." They are a necessary foundation of world peace and respect for justice, law, and order. Those rights belong to every individual, not because of race, nationality, or religion, but because he is a member of the human family.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the Government of Yugoslavia should at once declare its recognition and adherence to the declaration of human rights and to the principles enunciated in that historic document. Coming at this time, it would serve as a source of moral encouragement to the free nations of the world, it would enhance the prestige of Yugoslavia in the eyes of all freedom-loving peoples everywhere, and it would align Yugoslavia on the side of those forces who are fighting for human dignity and a decent approach to world-wide peace.

I believe that if we bring these matters to the attention of Yugoslavia's leaders in a forthright manner and in clear and unmistakable terms they will realize their true significance and their value for their own people, for us, and for the whole free world.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RIBICOFF].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANSFIELD: On page 3, after line 2, insert a new section as follows:

"At the termination of each 3-month period after aid has been extended under this act the Secretary of State shall make a full and detailed report to the Congress. Said 3-month reports shall not be limited to but shall include (1) information as to whether or not Yugoslavia is abiding by the agreement as provided for under section 3 of this act; (2) information as to any developments in the attitude of Yugoslavia with respect to basic human rights."

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, there is not much that needs to be said about this amendment. I am not the author of it. It is the second of the McMahon amendments which have already been adopted by the Senate. The first amendment, offered by my colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RIBICOFF] has already been approved by the House. I think this amendment gives us further safeguards in the consideration of this bill to the extent that the Congress must be furnished with a report every 3 months as to how the stipulations contained in this act are being carried out. I urge the House to give its approval to this amendment so that we may have a better and more frequent check on the administration of and the application of this measure.

Mr. TAURIELLO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have been sitting here the past 2 days listening to the debate on this very important legislation and trying to get all the information necessary from the different Members of this House who have spoken in favor of or against the legislation. There have been some grave doubts in my mind as to whether or not I would support legislation of this kind, and whether it would be a grant or whether it would be a loan to Yugoslavia. I debated back and forth not knowing what course to follow. I finally took it upon myself to wire two men who I think are not only responsible in a particular city, but are looked upon as leaders in religious and civic affairs throughout the Nation. I asked them for their reaction to this type of legislation.

Much has been said about religious freedom in Yugoslavia, and that is one of the biggest questions that has been bothering me as far as this legislation is concerned.

I think it is only fair that the Members of this House should know what these two leaders of the Catholic Church said in answering my wire. One of them is the bishop of Buffalo, the Most Reverend Bishop John F. O'Hara, former president of Notre Dame University. The other is the auxiliary bishop, the Most Reverend Joseph Burke, of Buffalo. The telegrams are as follows:

BUFFALO, N. Y., December 12, 1950.

Congressman TAURIELLO,
Washington, D. C.:

On proposed aid to Yugoslavia I hope Congress will be guided by the law of charity. We don't want people to starve anywhere. We should give American supervision with our aid to make sure it will not be used to feed only Communists while anti-Communists starve. We should press our claim for the release from prison or from work camps of bishops, priests, and nuns whose only offense is recognizing God as the source of human rights as our forefathers did in the Declaration of Independence. We should also investigate the possibility of aiding with the rice crop from Formosa those parts of China that are now said to be suffering famine as a punishment for opposing communism.

Bishop JOHN F. O'HARA,
Bishop of Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., December 13, 1950.

Hon. A. TAURIELLO,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

Favor grant to Yugoslavia under following conditions: If needed to avert famine but not for stockpiling; if distribution of grant is made under strict American supervision to insure no discrimination because of religious beliefs; if Tito will manifest spirit of American justice and humanitarianism by freeing political prisoners, especially Archbishop Stepinac.

Bishop BURKE of Buffalo.

I think this legislation specifically states this aid will only be given under the strictest kind of supervision by men sent there from this country.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAURIELLO. I yield.

Mr. CANFIELD. Does the gentleman now addressing the House think this legislation contains the guarantees that the bishops ask for in their telegrams which he has just read?

Mr. TAURIELLO. I think it does in spirit. I think if this grant or loan is made this Government will follow that spirit.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAURIELLO. I yield.

Mr. FULTON. Did the gentleman vote for my amendment which put in those seven conditions which were in line with what the bishops had asked for?

Mr. TAURIELLO. Yes, I did; I supported the gentleman's amendment. I want to remind the gentleman from Pennsylvania I asked for a teller vote on his amendment and supported it.

Mr. Chairman, I believe the contents of these two telegrams I received from these eminent churchmen should help a great number of the Members of the committee to decide how they will vote on this important legislation.

As for myself, I hate communism and the very word, especially since I had the opportunity to visit Poland and Czechoslovakia last year with a select committee of Members of this House. I saw communism in operation there.

In supporting this legislation I am thinking in terms of what is best for the United States and what we can do to weaken the position of Russia. If we can pull nations away from Russia and to our side, then certainly we are doing what is best for the United States of America. We must take the lesser of two evils, and for all of these reasons I will support this legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MANSFIELD].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. All or any portion of the funds made available under authority of this act may be transferred by the President to any department or agency of the executive branch of the Government to be expended for the purpose of this act. Funds so transferred may be expended under the authority of any provisions of law, not inconsistent with this act, applicable to the departments or agencies concerned, except that funds so transferred shall not be commingled with other funds of such departments or agencies and shall be accounted for separately.

SEC. 5. Local currency made available to the United States by Yugoslavia under the provisions of the agreement required by section 3 may be used for local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance provided by this act without charge against appropriated funds.

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BONNER:

On page 3, line 18, strike out the figure "5" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "6."

On page 3, after line 18, insert a new section reading as follows:

"SEC. 5. At least 50 percent of the gross tonnage of any equipment, materials, or commodities made available under the provisions of this act and transported on ocean vessels (computed separately for dry-bulk carriers and dry-cargo liners) shall be transported on United States flag commercial vessels at market rates for United States flag commercial vessels."

On page 3, line 19, strike out the figure "6" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "7."

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that we have passed the section which the gentleman is attempting to amend.

Mr. BONNER. The gentleman is mistaken. The Clerk just finished reading section 5.

Mr. VORYS. I may be corrected by the chairman, but I understood the Clerk had passed that section.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment may be inserted after section 5. Does the gentleman desire to insert the amendment after section 5?

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, then, to return to the end of section 4.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I realize the futility of this, but because the gentleman from West Virginia, Judge KEE, and I have always opposed this attempt to make relief measures for foreigners into relief measures for the merchant marine, I am constrained to object. I will not aid in any way in getting this into this bill.

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment as a new section after section 5, with the necessary changes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BONNER: Page 3, after line 18, insert the following new section:

"At least 50 percent of the gross tonnage of any equipment, materials, or commodities made available under the provisions of this act and transported on ocean vessels computed separately for dry-bulk carriers and dry cargo liners shall be transported on United States-flag commercial vessels at market rates for United States flag commercial vessels."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FULTON: Page 3, line 18, add a new subsection as follows:

"When the Government of Yugoslavia sells such relief supplies for local currency, (a) the amounts of such local currency shall be deposited by it in a special account; (b) such funds shall be used within such country with the approval of a duly authorized representative of the United States for relief and work-relief purposes."

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, I will explain this amendment shortly, and will not take the full time. This is what is known as the counterpart amendment. It is the provision that allows you to again use that money for relief purposes that the Yugoslav Government may collect for selling this produce in Yugoslavia. For example, this amendment requires when the Yugoslav Government sells this produce in Yugoslavia and collects local Yugoslavia currency, then that currency collected shall be put into a joint account, subject to the joint control of the Yugoslav Government and the United States representative, so that we shall then use it again for relief, and work-relief purposes.

If this amendment is not adopted, you are putting into the hands of the Yugoslav Government this money that it collects when it sells the produce in Yugoslavia, and that Government then uses it for any purpose it wants to. If you really want to use this money for further relief, and make the Yugoslav Government do likewise, on any proceeds it gets from the sale of this food in Yugoslavia, you should vote for this amendment and Yugoslavia will be able to use it subject to United States control. You will recall that under Public Law 84, which is the law that provided funds and relief for countries devastated by the war, we used just this sort of provision.

In addition to that, we used this provision for counterpart funds under ECA. It is our regular practice and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS] will tell you it has been the practice. He and I believe, and many Democratic members of the Foreign Affairs Committee have likewise insisted that the money collected within those recipient countries on the sale of the produce provided, is used for the right purposes and not just thrown into the general support of a dictatorship government. This is a protection and a benefit to the good people of Yugoslavia.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULTON. I yield.

Mr. VORYS. Is not the gentleman's amendment closely patterned after the Fulbright amendment which was unanimously adopted in the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee and is now in the Senate bill?

Mr. FULTON. That is correct; it is along the same lines.

Mr. VORYS. It is not exactly the same, but similar in purpose.

Mr. FULTON. The only difference between this and the Fulbright amendment is that this is the form that the Congress has used consistently, and is the legislative language used for that purpose, while the Fulbright amendment is in new language and not tested by experience.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FULTON] has expired.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this is one amendment that I am not going to agree to. It is the old counterpart proposition. It is, in fact, a part of the same proposition that was voted down awhile ago in the Vorys amendment. It envisions a long-range program just like UNRRA was, like ECA was and still is. If you want to make a long-range program out of this and set up counterpart funds, and imply to Yugoslavia that we are going to keep this up in years to come, go ahead and pass this amendment. Otherwise, vote it down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FULTON) there were—ayes 18, noes 69.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, so far as I know there are no other amendments pending.

There have been questions about the motion to recommit. I shall offer the motion to recommit and shall be able to qualify to offer it without qualification. I am opposed to this bill in the form in which it now is.

The motion to recommit will provide for a loan rather than for grants and will be in substantially the language of the Case substitute which was considered earlier in the day. There are slight changes, but the motion to recommit will provide for a loan such as we made to Spain, using practically the language out of the Spanish-loan provision.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VORYS. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It does not change the provision that is now in the bill that the money comes out of the presently appropriated ECA funds?

Mr. VORYS. No; that provision has been adopted. My motion does not change the McCarran or Burleson amendment which is, of course, in the bill. The money will come out of ECA funds. But if the motion to recommit is adopted the assistance will be in the form of a loan.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, during the 2 days of debate on this measure to give additional millions of dollars of aid to Yugoslavia not a single member of the Foreign Affairs Committee or a single Member of this House has been able to cite a single assurance, much less a guaranty, that Dictator Tito will give definite and specific aid to the United States in time of need.

Virtually every speaker in behalf of this measure has prefaced his or her remarks with an apology and an attempted disclaimer for supporting Tito, an avowed Communist, and the head of a government as dictatorial, ruthless, and brutal as there is in existence on this earth today.

The specious argument is made that somehow we can bribe or buy the friendship of this dictator; that this is another of those calculated risks upon which we must spend millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money.

This Republic was not built and it will not endure on the basis of bribed or purchased friendship. There is no such thing.

And I am one of those who are becoming nauseated by the use of this phrase, calculated risk. It is used whenever there is no adequate explanation for an action that is being taken. In the name of all that is fair and decent, how many more billions of dollars and how much more evil is to be committed in the name of calculated risk?

There are those who have attempted to say there is a food shortage emergency in Yugoslavia. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. DAVIS] answered that argument in a well-documented statement earlier this afternoon. He offered facts and figures to show you that production of most of the major crops in Yugoslavia is from 70 to 100 percent of normal.

There are those supporting this measure who contend that Dictator Tito has "broken" with another dictator by the name of "Dear Old Joe" Stalin. Where is there any convincing evidence that there is more than a propaganda cleavage between these two? There is not a shred of evidence of a genuine rupture between Moscow and Belgrade.

Is there the slightest reason to believe that if real hatred existed between Tito and Stalin that the Yugoslav dictator would not have been put out of the way long ago? Have we forgotten the assassination of Trotsky in Mexico after he broke with Stalin? Have we forgotten that Masaryk, the Czechoslovakian patriot, died in a fall from a window after he publicly announced he would not betray his people and his country by cravenly becoming a puppet in the hands of the Communist regime in his native country?

Are we gullible enough to believe that Stalin and his hirelings could not arrange the exit of Tito and then, perhaps, hang his assassins and place him in the position of a martyr?

I say to you that I am wholly unconvinced that there has been a complete break between Tito and Stalin.

This bill represents another foreign fraud that is being perpetrated upon the American people by an administration that is steadily bringing this Republic to the brink of destruction.

I refuse to be a party to the support of human slavery in Yugoslavia and I refuse to support the Truman administration in its sordid deals and moral sell-outs to such international crooks as Tito.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, we have had 2 days of debate on this very important measure. I think I should be the last person in the world to criticize the motives of anyone who differs with me on this matter, but I do want to give voice to one or two thoughts that are uppermost in my mind before this debate is finally closed. I think just as you do—that we are in a very deplorable condition as far as the world situation is concerned. I should not be presumptuous enough to undertake to say that I know the answers, but there are certain things that I do know in my own common sense and common judgment. Mistakes have been made. Some of you think it would be a mistake if we were to go through with this recommendation, but I call your attention to the fact that it would have been far better from our point of view if this matter had never been debated before the Congress than for it to be debated and then relief denied. I hold no brief for Tito any more than I hold a brief for Stalin. I hope I will not be too intemperate in my language when I say that I differ with some Members who talk about Tito as a Communist. I think Tito is the same type of Communist that Stalin is. They are both ruthless dictators; they are both political adventurers; they are both looking after themselves and using communism as a front to gain their own end.

Now, what are we up against here? We are up against the proposition of whether we are going to make a grant or a loan. It does not make any difference, for that matter, which it is, and I do not agree with the gentleman from Ohio on that. If we are going to do this, let us do it graciously and get everything we can out of it. You know as well as I know that you cannot satisfy yourself or your conscience, politically or otherwise, with the thought that you are going to make this a loan rather than a grant. You are not going to get it paid back, just like you are not going to get back these other millions.

I want to be very realistic about this thing, and I hope I may have the attention of these gentlemen over here for whatever my view may be worth. As I pointed out yesterday, this is a gamble, yes, but it is such a small gamble. There are many people who believe that Tito is on our side. There are some who believe he is not on our side. To the best of our knowledge and information to far he is not going along with the Kremlin.

We have an opportunity here. Somebody said we have already given them three or four hundred million dollars. For the comparatively small sum of $38,000,000, as I pointed out, the cost of a dozen modern bombers or the cost of 5 hours of World War II, we have an opportunity to hold what we have over there and to try to keep him on our side. I rather pride myself that my committee was among the first to advocate a firm policy of dealing with Stalin and I pointed out what we were up against 5½ years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. COLMER. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I took this floor during World War II and defended assistance to Stalin and to Russia in that crisis. I would do it again because we are up against a realistic proposition, now faced with a Communist world headed by Stalin, as we were faced then with a Fascist world headed by Hitler. Let us not get into any religious or any political or any other kind of motives about this problem. For if we lose out to Stalin, there will be no religion permitted here and there will be only one party here—the Communist party. It is purely a selfish proposition and, in my humble judgment the gamble is worth the taking. We are gambling with a comparatively small stake for the assistance of 32 Yugoslav divisions on our side against our and other free peoples' No. 1 enemy.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, as the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] has so well stated, we are indeed in a deplorable condition so far as the world situation is concerned. The problem is how to deal with it so that we can save our country and freedom and Christian decency in the world. We can perhaps gain some help on how to decide the tough question of whether or not to aid the Yugoslavs and thereby aid their oppressor, Tito, by studying how we got where we are. I think the one miscalculation above all others which is responsible for the trouble we are in was this sort of faulty reasoning with regard to another Communist dictatorship, the Kremlin. The pseudo-syllogism went like this: We are fighting Hitler; we are a democracy. The Soviet Union is fighting Hitler; therefore, it is a democracy. That was the erroneous conclusion on which our Government based its whole postwar foreign policy. That is why we are in such peril.

I agree with the gentleman from Mississippi that it was proper for us to aid Stalin during the war. I do not have a single regret about the $11,000,000,000 lend-lease we gave to Soviet Russia as a war policy. It saved thousands of American lives. But it was a mistake to put our chips on Russian cooperation and friendship as a peace policy.

During the war we had two enemies in Europe. The first was Hitler, the second was the Kremlin. It was right to help the second enemy overcome the first. It was wrong to believe that because the Soviets were also fighting Hitler, they were therefore a peace-loving democracy and wanted the kind of world we want, and would cooperate with us to build that kind of a world.

Now we are in a situation where our first enemy is the Kremlin's conspiracy to conquer the world. The enemy is not communism as an economic theory or system, or communism in Yugoslavia. It is the world-wide armed Communist conspiracy dedicated to conquest of every free people and with ourselves as its main target, because we are all that stands between it and victory. It merely uses communism as a weapon to confuse, mislead, and soften other peoples up preparatory to hitting them with armed violence from within as from without. Since our first enemy is the conspiracy directed from the Kremlin, our first concern must be to weaken that conspiracy. Surely no one believes that Tito is a friend of the kind of world we want any more than Stalin ever was. But Tito is not a threat to our security and Stalin's power is. Tito is not on our side but he is not on the side of our No. 1 enemy either.

Whatever weakens the conspiracy that threatens the survival of the United States helps us. To keep Yugoslavia independent weakens that conspiracy, therefore it is in our interest, in my judgment, to help him keep independent of and hostile to that conspiracy, thereby depriving it of Yugoslavia's potential strength and strategic location, and forcing Stalin to tie down part of forces in that area.

It is not a question trying to gain the favor of Tito or of making a friend out of him, as some have suggested. It is a question of making as much trouble as we can for our No. 1 enemy, Stalin's gang, and thereby reducing their threat to ourselves.

The question is not whether Tito deserves our aid. Of course he does not deserve our aid. The question is whether American boys deserve the better chance to survive, which keeping Tito in the right against Stalin may give them. In this bill we are not trying to buy a friend; that cannot be done. We are trying to make as much trouble as possible for our enemy in order to keep the main threat to our world as divided and weakened as possible. It is solely on the basis of this hard-headed concern for our own youth and our own country that I feel we ought to help keep independent a force, which no matter how undemocratic, is weakening Stalin's conspiracy which unless frustrated can lead to our own destruction. On this basis I believe the bill should be passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. All or any part of the assistance provided hereunder shall be promptly terminated by the President—

(a) whenever he determines that (1) Yugoslavia is not complying fully with the undertakings in the agreement entered into under section 3 of this act, or is diverting from the purpose of this act assistance provided hereunder; or (2) because of changed conditions continuance of assistance is unnecessary or undesirable, or no longer consistent with the national interest or the foreign policy of the United States;

(b) whenever the Congress, by concurrent resolution of both Houses, finds termination is desirable.

Termination of assistance to Yugoslavia under this section shall include the termination of deliveries of all supplies scheduled under this act and not yet delivered.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 4, line 6, strike out "of both Houses."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, no Member appreciates more than I do the thoughts that are running through the minds of each and every Member of the House. No matter how any Member may vote, I want them to know that I thoroughly respect the fine motives which prompt them to vote in accordance with their judgment. For 15 years I have vigorously fought communism in and out of the House of Representatives as well as prior to that, and I have a long line of speeches on other occasions testifying to that fact. The Foreign Agent Registration Act is the McCormack Act. The provisions of the Smith bill, under which the 11 Communists were indicted and convicted in New York, were first recommended by a special committee of which I was chairman. I said as long as 3 years ago that Russia was using communism, and the ideology of communism, as a smoke screen for imperialism taking over country after country, then following it up militarily, and ultimately aimed at the United States of America. I have condemned Tito, and I condemn him now.

At this time and in connection with this bill, I am thinking of the United States of America. That is my first interest. During World War II we were dealing with one devil, we were crossing the bridge with one devil, as my friend from Minnesota in other language well said a few minutes ago. We had to help one devil to lick the other devil. If we did not lick the first devil first we would not be seated here today facing the second devil, so to speak, not only descriptively but in expressing my thoughts in relation to Stalin.

Looking at it from the angle of the United States of America and our own national interest, the question is what should we do, not as a policy, not as a principle, but as a matter of expediency.

You and I and this generation of Americans are faced with one of the most trying periods not only in our constitutional history but in the known history of time. We are the guardians of the future. Whether we like it or not, and I wish it were otherwise, we are the guardians of the future, because what we do in these days will determine what the future will be not only for the world, maybe, but at least for the United States of America.

As an American I want to see my country strong as quickly as possible. I have repeatedly said on this floor and off this floor that there is one thing that Stalin and his gang respect, and that is what they fear. The only thing they fear is power greater than themselves. We have the potential power, and we had better develop it just as quickly as we can, not only for a future decent world but for our first job, the best interests of the United States. You and I of these days are and must make our contribution toward preserving the Union which we inherited and passing it on to future generations for their benefit.

As I view this situation, there are two aspects of it. There is the national interest of the United States, based upon expediency. I have publicly stated the only justification we have to deal with Tito is on the ground of expediency in the national interest of the United States, not "expediency" alone, but "expediency" in the national interest of the United States." The question is now whether or not this bill, as amended, is expedient in the national interest of our country.

The second reason is human charity, to which the bishops referred in their telegrams read by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TAURIELLO]. If millions of human beings were starving in China, even people subject to Mao, and there was a bill before this body to try to bring them relief from suffering, it would have to be a cold heart that would say "no," provided there were proper supervision by the American Government. I would agree that to give relief to be administered by a Communist leader would be a mistake, but if there were proper supervision by our Government, as a result of which we would be able to supervise the relief given the human beings, I think it would be a mighty good thing to do, and it would be in accordance with those principles that God himself has given to us, faith, hope, and charity, the greatest of which is charity.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Masachusetts has expired.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. In Yugoslavia at least 95 percent of the people believe in God, just as you and I and the other Members of this body do. Their only misfortune is that they were born over there and not here. If I were able to read the minds of the two bishops on the question of charity, I am strongly inclined to think that they had that very important message from Christ Himself running through their minds, that the greatest gift of all is the gift of charity.

Looking at it in the light of our own national interest, what follows? We have supervision. It is provided in the bill. It says, "to observe and supervise without restriction the distribution by Yugoslavia of commodities and other assistance made available under the authority of this act." Our policy of containment is over. We know that. This is a rapidly changing world. We have to adjust ourselves and think in the light of the practicalities and realities. Unfortunately we have to think in the light of expediency, too. That is the situation which confronts us.

Whatever policy of containment we had is over; that was scrapped in China, and crystallized in Korea. We have to make ourselves strong, and then still try to penetrate behind the iron curtain. Suppose Tito was tied up with Stalin. Assume that Stalin and Tito were embracing one another, and we are trying to get behind the iron curtain. We would spend much more than $38,000,000 if we could do anything in Yugoslavia to weaken those who dominate and control. It is not a question of what we like. We want the people of Yugoslavia to have their own form of government, freely selected. But they are not in the position to do that. I will agree that at least 90 percent of them are against Tito from the information I have received. But as between Stalin and Tito I think Tito represents to them the lesser of two evils. In the light of that situation, having in mind our own expediency in the national interest of the United States, what is the proper thing for us to do? It seems to me, with the world situation as it exists today, with the opportunity of our Government through its officials to go in there with that penetration, a great deal of good can come. If it is actual supervision as it should be, and I hope the Committee on Foreign Affairs, if this bill becomes law, will follow it up and see that it is actual supervision, a tremendous amount of good can come to us and to the national interests of our country and a tremendous amount of good can flow from it, from a world-wide angle.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. How does he justify the encouragement and continuance of communism any place in the world?

Mr. McCORMACK. There is no justification of communism. This is not a justification. My position is not a justification of communism. I am surprised the gentleman should ask that question. He ought to know that.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman think this bill will strengthen communism in Yugoslavia?

Mr. McCORMACK. This bill, as I see it, will help prevent Stalin from taking over Yugoslavia.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Will it strengthen the continuance of communism in Yugoslavia?

Mr. McCORMACK. Let me ask you: What about the national interests of the United States?

Mr. SIMPSON of Pensylvania. I have asked the gentleman a question.

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes, and I have answered the question in the course of my remarks.

Mr. SIMPSON of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman agree that this will strengthen communism in Yugoslavia?

Mr. McCORMACK. In my opinion, it will undermine it with American officials going over there and supervising and going in there freely, together with all of the amendments which have been adopted. I am confident it will tend to swing the leaders of that country more and more toward the Western World, and if not it will enable us to penetrate into Yugoslavia, and it is in the best interests of the United States of America and from the broad angle based upon expediency the passage of this bill is to the best interests of our country.

Every one of us are in complete agreement about the viciousness of the religious and civil persecutions that have gone on in Yugoslavia. Every one of us expects and shall demand that any relief given under this bill, if it passes, shall be given to all persons without regard to their religious or political convictions, and there shall be no discrimination in particular against non-Communists. Tito and his government will and should be watched very closely. I might say that, if he needs aid in the future, the granting of it by our Government will depend upon what Tito does during the next several months. A continuance of his persecutions will not be tolerated by us. He should release at once Archbishop Stepinac and the other Catholic priests, as well as the archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Church and the priests of his church who have been imprisoned, as well as the nuns, and permit religious freedom to again exist in Yugoslavia. He should also stop the collectivization of the farm lands of his country. He will have to do this from our angle; he should do it from his own angle. He ought to know now that Stalin will not deal with him; that Stalin will liquidate him if he can. He should realize that his future best interests lie with the Western World, and he should, and, so far as we are concerned, must make internal adjustments in Yugoslavia accordingly.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, committee work prevented me yesterday from listening to the debate. It was my privilege, however, this morning to read the record of the debate that took place yesterday.

As I understand that debate, the argument that was made by those who advocated the adoption of this bill—and every one of the speakers, if I read correctly, apologized for supporting it—was that there are two "vicious," "murdering," "communistic" crooks in Europe—neither friendly to us—but we should hire one of them to fight and weaken the other, hoping both will eventually be destroyed.

The gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, who made as logical and convincing an argument as I think can be made in support of this bill, followed that same line as did the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

In theory, that argument may be sound, but practically it does not work out that way. We "hired" Stalin to fight Hitler, but we overaided him, and now he threatens our national security.

We have no assurance that Stalin and Tito will not come to terms; that both, being Communists, will not eventually turn on us.

The gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, said that our first consideration should be for the youth of our land, the security of the Nation. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] said that our consideration—and I assume that he meant the same thing as the gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD—was for the future welfare of our Nation. Both were right. No thoughtful man can even consider any other objective.

We have spent billions upon billons of dollars in other countries in an effort to purchase friendship and military aid should there come a time of need. It is now apparent that, while the expenditure of those billions may have accomplished something, England has, even though it injured us, strengthened our enemies, continued to trade with Russia and China, made it easier for the Communists to kill our men.

There is neither in the United Nations nor in those nations which have subscribed to the Atlantic Pact, one single nation which will go all out for the United States of America. After all the sacrifices we have made—after thousands of our men have died in Korea—England, to save Hong Kong, would desert us in Asia, take into the UN an avowed enemy.

If we continue to follow the foreign policy which we have had for the last 10 years, is it not true that we will not only find ourselves committed to fight in world war III, but that we will be forced to carry the burden of that war; and if during that war our interests come in conflict with those of France or Britain, will they not desert us and leave us to stand alone?

If that be true, and that seems to be the opinion of our people, then is not the first question for us this: What prospect have we of winning world war III; of successfully waging that war not only all through Asia, but of going up into Russia, attempting to conquer Russia? Is it not enough that our wounded men have frozen and, because of the cold, died, in Korea? Must others be sent to follow that long, long trail into and through Siberia? Perhaps to lie unburied along the route followed by Napoleon's armies?

Shall our young men beat our their lives against the unsurmountable barriers of cold and hunger which have destroyed every army which ever went north into Russia?

Can we, if we stand alone—and mark well my words, we will, before the end is reached, stand alone—win world war III without destroying the Republic? That is the practical question. Can we win? If we win will we be a free nation? A nation of free people? To my mind it is a question that should be answered before we commit ourselves to follow along with this foreign policy which has given us this disaster in Korea; taken the lives of thousands of our men. A foreign policy which is calling, as the armed services called this morning, for 80,000 young men in January and another 80,000 in February, and which, comes the end, will take every physically and mentally qualified young man, except those required for production, into the armed services.

Is it not time that we count our young men, count our resources, and determine whether or not we should now go on into world war III and fight it, perhaps alone. Determine today, before we go further, whether we can in Asia and in Russia win a world-wide war?

Is it not about time, as the gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, said, that we think about our youth; and, as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] said, that we think about the security of the Republic?

Is it not about time that we consolidated our battle lines, and here in the Americas—take in South America, if you wish—build a defense which will prove to be effective against any nation or any combination of nations?

Is it not our duty to first think of, to first protect, the welfare of the United States of America? To think first of the Republic, its security?

I cannot go along with a policy which will involve us in a war which I do not believe we can win. I cannot go along with a war which will destroy the freedom of our people. A war which will leave us weak and exhausted, easy prey for a dictator. Let us get out of Korea, out of Asia, and, unless England, France, and Western Europe, not only profess to be willing to carry the brunt of the war but give concrete evidence of doing so, I would get out of Europe.

The welfare of my people, the security of the Republic, always has been, is now and always will be, my first concern. I owe allegiance to no other people, to no other nation—no, not even to that heterogeneous collection—United Nations—self-satisfied, ambitious world politicians, who, like leeches, have attached themselves to our Nation and, by forcing our people's sons, brothers, husbands, and fathers into this war, are sucking the lifeblood from our Republic.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. McSWEENEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 9853) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia, pursuant to House Resolution 878, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time and was read the third time.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. VORYS. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. VORYS moves to recommit H. R. 9853 to the Committee on Foreign Affairs with instructions to report it back forthwith with the following amendments:

"After section 2 insert a new section 3 as follows:

" 'SEC. 3. Such assistance shall be extended on credit terms as provided in section III C2 of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948 as amended, subject to the provisions of this act.'

"Renumber the following sections."

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. VORYS) there were—ayes 76, noes 173.

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 225, nays 142, not voting 62, as follows:

[Roll No. 295]

YEAS—225

Abbitt	Fugate	Mills
Abernethy	Gamble	Mitchell
Addonizo	Garmatz	Monroney
Allen, Calif.	Gary	Morgan
Allen, La.	Gathings	Morrison
Andrews	Gordon	Morton
Angell	Gore	Moulder
Aspinall	Gossett	Multer
Bailey	Granahan	Murdock
Barrett, Pa.	Granger	Murphy
Bates, Ky.	Grant	Murray, Tenn.
Battle	Gregory	Noland
Beall	Guill	Norblad
Beckworth	Hagen	Norton
Bennett, Fla.	Hale	O'Hara, Ill.
Bentsen	Hall,	O'Neill
Blatnik	Leonard W.	O'Sullivan
Boggs, La.	Hardy	Pace
Bolling	Harrison	Passman
Bolton, Ohio	Havenner	Patman
Bonner	Hays, Ark.	Patterson
Boykin	Hedrick	Perkins
Breen	Heller	Peterson
Brooks	Herlong	Phillips, Tenn.
Brown, Ga.	Heselton	Polk
Bryson	Hobbs	Preston
Buchanan	Holifield	Price
Buckley, N. Y.	Holmes	Priest
Burke	Hope	Rabaut
Burleson	Howell	Rains
Burnside	Huber	Ramsay
Burton	Jackson, Wash.	Redden
Byrne, N. Y.	Javits	Regan
Camp	Johnson	Rhodes
Cannon	Jones, Mo.	Ribicoff
Carnahan	Jones,	Richards
Carroll	Hamilton C.	Riehlman
Case, N. J.	Jones,	Rivers
Case, S. Dak.	Woodrow W.	Rodino
Celler	Judd	Roosevelt
Chelf	Karst	Sadlak
Christopher	Karsten	Sadowski
Chudoff	Kean	Sasscer
Cole, Kans.	Kearney	Scott, Hardie
Colmer	Keating	Scott,
Cooley	Kelly, N. Y.	Hugh D., Jr.
Cooper	Keough	Shelley
Corbett	Kilday	Sikes
Coudert	King	Sims
Davenport	Kirwan	Smathers
Davies, N. Y.	Klein	Smith, Va.
Davis, Tenn.	Lane	Spence
Dawson	Linehan	Staggers
Deane	Lucas	Steed
DeGraffenried	Lyle	Stigler
Denton	Lynch	Stockman
Dollinger	McCormack	Sullivan
Dolliver	McKinnon	Tauriello
Donohue	McMillan, S. C.	Taylor
Douglas	McSweeney	Thomas
Doyle	Mack, Ill.	Thompson
Durham	Mack, Wash.	Thornberry
Eberharter	Madden	Trimble
Elliott	Magee	Underwood
Engle, Calif.	Mahon	Vinson
Evins	Mansfield	Wadsworth
Feighan	Marsalis	Wagner
Fernandez	Marshall	Walsh
Fisher	Martin, Mass.	Walter
Flood	Merrow	Welch
Forand	Michener	Whittington
Ford	Miles	Wickersham
Frazier	Miller, Calif.	Wier
Wigglesworth	Wolverton	Young
Willis	Woodhouse	Zablocki
Wilson, Okla.	Woodruff
Wilson, Tex.	Yates

NAYS—142

Albert	Goodwin	Nicholson
Allen, Ill.	Graham	Norrell
Andersen,	Green	O'Brien, Mich.
H. Carl	Gross	O'Hara, Minn.
Anderson, Calif.	Gwinn	O'Konski
Andresen,	Hall,	Patten
August H.	Edwin Arthur	Philbin
Arends	Halleck	Phillips, Calif.
Auchincloss	Hand	Pickett
Barden	Harden	Potter
Baring	Harris	Poulson
Barrett, Wyo.	Harvey	Quinn
Bates, Mass.	Hays, Ohio	Rankin
Bennett, Mich.	Heffernan	Reed, Ill.
Bishop	Hill	Reed, N. Y.
Blackney	Hinshaw	Rees
Boggs, Del.	Hoeven	Robeson
Bolton, Md.	Hoffman, Ill.	Rogers, Fla.
Bosone	Hoffman, Mich.	Rogers, Mass.
Brown, Ohio	Horan	Rooney
Burdick	Hull	St. George
Byrnes, Wis.	Jackson, Calif.	Sanborn
Canfield	James	Saylor
Carlyle	Jenison	Secrest
Chiperfield	Jenkins	Shafer
Clemente	Jensen	Short
Clevenger	Jonas	Simpson, Ill.
Cotton	Kearns	Simpson, Pa.
Cox	Kelley, Pa.	Smith, Kans.
Crawford	Kilburn	Smith, Wis.
Cunningham	Kunkel	Stefan
Curtis	Lanham	Sutton
Dague	Latham	Taber
Davis, Ga.	LeCompte	Tackett
Davis, Wis.	LeFevre	Towe
Delaney	Lind	Velde
D'Ewart	Lovre	Vorys
Dondero	McConnell	Vursell
Doughton	McCulloch	Weichel
Ellsworth	McDonough	Wheeler
Elston	McGregor	White, Calif.
Fallon	McGuire	White, Idaho
Fellows	Marcantonio	Williams
Fenton	Martin, Iowa	Wilson, Ind.
Fulton	Mason	Winstead
Furcolo	Miller, Nebr.	Withrow
George	Morris	Wolcott
Gilmer	Murray, Wis.
Golden	Nelson

NOT VOTING—62

Biemiller	Jacobs	Poage
Bramblett	Jennings	Powell
Brehm	Jones, Ala.	Rich
Buckley, Ill.	Kee	Sabath
Cavalcante	Keefe	Scrivner
Chatham	Kennedy	Scudder
Chesney	Kerr	Sheppard
Cole, N. Y.	Kruse	Smith, Ohio
Combs	Larcade	Stanley
Crook	Lichtenwalter	Talle
Crosser	Lodge	Teague
Dingell	McCarthy	Tollefson
Eaton	McGrath	Van Zandt
Engel, Mich.	McMillen, Ill.	Werdel
Fogarty	Macy	Whitaker
Gavin	Miller, Md.	Whitten
Gillette	O'Brien, Ill.	Widnall
Gorski	O'Toole	Wood
Hare	Pfeifer,
Hart	Joseph L.
Hébert	Pfeiffer,
Herter	William L.
Irving	Plumley

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Cole of New York for, with Mr. Smith of Ohio against.

Mr. Herter for, with Mr. Miller of Maryland against.

Mr. Eaton for, with Mr. Lichtenwalter against.

Mr. Poage for, with Mr. Werdel against.

Mr. Hébert for, with Mr. Jacobs against.

Mr. Kerr for, with Mr. Hare against.

Until further notice:

Mr. O'Toole with Mr. Macy.

Mr. Wood with Mr. Jennings.

Mr. Chatham with Mr. Van Zandt.

Mr. Gorski with Mr. Gavin.

Mr. Hart with Mr. Bramblett.

Mr. Biemiller with Mr. Brehm.
Mr. Crook with Mr. Keefe.
Mr. Crosser with Mr. McMillen of Illinois.
Mr. Dingell with Mr. William L. Pfeiffer.
Mr. Whitten with Mr. Scrivner.
Mr. Whitaker with Mr. Scudder.
Mr. Fogarty with Mr. Rich.
Mr. Stanley with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Teague with Mr. Talle.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Powell with Mr. Tollefson.
Mr. Kee with Mr. Engel of Michigan.
Mr. McGrath with Mr. Widnall.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 4234) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia, and to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H. R. 9853, as passed by the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RICHARDS]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950."

SEC. 2. The President is hereby authorized to expend not in excess of $50,000,000 of the funds heretofore appropriated for expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Economic Cooperation Administration Act of 1948, as amended (Public Law 759, 81st Cong.), for the purpose of providing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia under the authority of this act.

SEC. 3. No assistance under authority of this act shall be made available nor shall any funds appropriated hereunder be expended until an agreement is entered into between Yugoslavia and the United States containing the following undertakings by Yugoslavia and any other undertakings the President may find desirable and appropriate:

(a) To give full and continuous publicity through the press, radio, and all other available media in Yugoslavia to the assistance furnished by the United States.

(b) To permit persons designated by the Government of the United States to observe without restriction the distribution of commodities and other assistance made available under the authority of this act, and to the extent necessary for this purpose to permit full freedom of movement of such persons within Yugoslavia and full access to communication facilities.

(c) To make equitable distribution to the people of Yugoslavia of the commodities made available under this act without discrimination as to race, color, or political or religious belief.

(d) To make available to the Government of the United States local currency in amounts required by it to meet its local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance to Yugoslavia.

(e) Whenever relief supplies furnished under this act are sold for local currency by the Government of Yugoslavia, to use an equivalent amount of such currency to provide relief to needy persons and to children, and for charitable, medical, and such other purposes as may be mutually agreed upon.

SEC. 4. All or any portion of the funds made available under authority of this act may be transferred by the President to any Department or agency of the executive branch of the Government to be expended for the purpose of this act. Funds so transferred may be expended under the authority of any provisions of law not inconsistent with this act applicable to the departments or agencies concerned.

SEC. 5. At least 50 percent of the gross tonnage of any equipment, materials, or commodities made available under the provisions of this act and transported on ocean vessels (computed separately for dry bulk carriers, dry cargo liners and tankers) shall be transported on United States flag commercial vessels at market rates for United States flag commercial vessels if available.

SEC. 6. Local currency made available to the United States by Yugoslavia under the provisions of the agreement required by section 3 of this act may be used for local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance provided by this act without charge against appropriated funds.

SEC. 7. All or any part of the assistance provided under this act shall be promptly terminated by the President—

(a) whenever he determines that (1) Yugoslavia is not complying fully with the undertakings in the agreement entered into under section 3 of this act, or is diverting from the purpose of this act assistance provided hereunder; or (2) because of changed conditions, continuance of assistance is unnecessary or undesirable, or no longer consistent with the national interest or the foreign policy of the United States;

(b) whenever the Congress, by concurrent resolution of both Houses, finds termination is desirable.

Termination of assistance to Yugoslavia under this section shall include the termination of deliveries of all supplies scheduled under this act and not yet delivered.

SEC. 8. Nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing measures undertaken by the present Government of Yugoslavia which suppress or destroy religious, political, and economic liberty, and the Yugoslav Government shall be so notified when aid is furnished under this act.

SEC. 9. At the termination of each 3-month period after aid has been extended under this act the Secretary of State shall make a full and detailed report to the Congress. Said 3-month reports shall not be limited to, but shall include (1) information as to whether or not Yugoslavia is abiding by the agreement as provided for under section 3 of this act; (2) information as to any developments in the attitude of Yugoslavia with respect to basic human rights.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RICHARDS: Strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill S. 4234 and insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H. R. 9853, as passed by the House, as follows: "That this act may be cited as the 'Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950.'

"Whereas the Government of Yugoslavia has urgently requested relief due to drought conditions, and has expressed an intention to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations.

"SEC. 2. The President is hereby authorized to expend not in excess of $50,000,000 of the funds heretofore appropriated for expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended (Public Law 759, 81st Cong.), for the purpose of providing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia under the authority of this act.

"SEC. 3. No assistance under authority of this act shall be made available nor shall any funds appropriated hereunder be expended until an agreement is entered into between Yugoslavia and the United States containing the following undertakings, and any others the President may determine to be desirable, on the part of Yugoslavia:

"(a) To make available to the Government of the United States local currency in amounts required by it to meet its local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance supplied under this act.

"(b) To give full and continuous publicity through the press, radio, and all other available media in Yugoslavia to the assistance furnished by the United States; and to allow to the United States, in cooperation with Yugoslavia, the use of such media as may be required to accomplish this purpose.

"(c) To permit persons designated by the Government of the United States to observe and supervise without restriction the distribution by Yugoslavia of commodities and other assistance made available under the authority of this act, and to the extent necessary for this purpose to permit full freedom of movement of such persons within Yugoslavia and full access to communication and information facilities.

"(d) To make equitable distribution to the people in Yugoslavia of the commodities made available under this act, as well as similar commodities produced locally or imported from outside sources, without discrimination as to race or political or religious belief.

"(e) To take all necessary actions to reduce its relief needs, to encourage increased production and distribution of foodstuffs within Yugoslavia and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies.

"SEC. 4. All of the funds made available under authority of this act shall be utilized to the fullest practicable extent in the purchase of the commodities from the surplus commodities at Government cost in the possession of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"SEC. 5. Nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing measures undertaken by the present Government of Yugoslavia which suppress or destroy religious, political, and economic liberty, and the Yugoslav Government shall be so notified when aid is furnished under this act.

"SEC. 6. At the termination of each 3-month period after aid has been extended under this act the Secretary of State shall make a full and detailed report to the Congress. Said 3-month reports shall not be limited to, but shall include (1) information as to whether or not Yugoslavia is abiding by the agreement as provided for under section 3 of this act; (2) information as to any developments in the attitude of Yugoslavia with respect to basic human rights.

"SEC. 7. All or any portion of the funds made available under authority of this act may be transferred by the President to any department or agency of the executive branch of the Government to be expended for the purpose of this act. Funds so transferred may be expended under the authority of any provisions of law, not inconsistent with this act, applicable to the departments or agencies concerned, except that funds so transferred shall not be commingled with other funds of such departments or agencies and shall be accounted for separately.

"SEC. 8. Local currency made available to the United States by Yugoslavia under the provisions of the agreement required by section 3 may be used for local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance provided by this act without charge against appropriated funds.

"SEC. 9. At least 50 percent of the gross tonnage of any equipment, materials, or commodities made available under the provisions of this act and transported on ocean vessels (computed separately for dry bulk carriers and dry cargo liners) shall be transported on United States flag commercial vessels at market rates for United States flag commercial vessels.

"SEC. 10. All or any part of the assistance provided hereunder shall be promptly terminated by the President—

"(a) whenever he determines that (1) Yugoslavia is not complying fully with the undertakings in the agreement entered into under section 3 of this act, or is diverting from the purpose of this act assistance provided hereunder; or (2) because of changed conditions, continuance of assistance is unnecessary or undesirable, or no longer consistent with the national interest or the foreign policy of the United States;

"(b) whenever the Congress, by concurrent resolution, finds termination is desirable.

"Termination of assistance to Yugoslavia under this section shall include the termination of deliveries of all supplies scheduled under this act and not yet delivered."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The proceedings whereby the bill H. R. 9853 was passed were vacated, and the bill was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will be authorized to correct section numbers.

There was no objection.

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, S. 4234, together with a House amendment thereto, insist on the amendment of the House, and ask for a conference with the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mr. RICHARDS, Mrs. DOUGLAS, Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. EATON, and Mr. VORYS.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. RICHARDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have five legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

HEARING ON REAPPORTIONMENT TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 10 A. M.

Mr. BYRNE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNE of New York. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday next, at 10 o'clock a. m. a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary will hold a meeting in room 346, Old House Office Building, for the purpose of hearing Members of Congress who desire to be heard regarding reapportionment. We shall have very little time, of course, in this particular session for that matter; nevertheless, on Tuesday morning next at 10 o'clock the subcommittee will be there to hear all those Members who may wish to be heard on this very important matter.

SPECIAL ORDER GRANTED

Mr. BRYSON asked and was given permission to address to the House for 30 minutes on tomorrow, Thursday, following the legislative business of the day and any special orders heretofore entered.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PATTERSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a letter.

Mr. WIDNALL (at the request of Mr. CANFIELD) was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances, in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. JAVITS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances, and in each to include extraneous matter.

Mr. HESELTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend the remarks he made in the Committee of the Whole and to include copies of certain correspondence and tabulations.

Mr. PHILBIN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances.

Mr. KEOGH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article that appeared in the Brooklyn Barrister.

Mr. DELANEY asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address by Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, associate editor of the Americas.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three separate instances and in each to include extraneous matter.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HART (at the request of Mr. KLEIN), for today, on account of official business.

To Mr. O'TOOLE (at the request of Mr. DELANEY), for the balance of the week, on account of official business.

To Mr. WIDNALL (at the request of Mr. CANFIELD), indefinitely, on account of illness.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. PRIEST. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, December 14, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. SPENCE: Committee on Banking and Currency. H. R. 9802. A bill to grant succession to the War Damage Corporation; with amendment (Rept. No. 3186). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DOLLIVER:

H. R. 9907. A bill to amend the act incorporating The American Legion so as to redefine (a) the powers of said corporation, (b) the right to the use of the name "The American Legion" and "American Legion"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 9908. A bill to amend the act incorporating The American Legion so as to redefine eligibility for membership therein; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LECOMPTE:

H. R. 9909. A bill to amend the act incorporating The American Legion so as to redefine (a) the powers of said corporation, (b) the right to the use of the name "The American Legion" and "American Legion"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 9910. A bill to amend the act incorporating The American Legion so as to redefine eligibility for membership therein; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RANKIN (by request):

H. R. 9911. A bill to authorize the payment by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs of a gratuitous indemnity to survivors of members of the Armed Forces who die in active service, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

By Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin:

H. R. 9912. A bill to limit the retroactive application of the income tax to employees of the United States working in the possessions or in the Canal Zone to October 1, 1950; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CURTIS:

H. R. 9913. A bill to prevent penalties and additions to tax in case of failure to meet requirements with respect to estimated tax by reason of increases imposed by the Revenue Act of 1950; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PRIEST:

H. R. 9914. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize assistance to States and political subdivisions in the development and maintenance of local public health units, particularly in national defense areas, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. RANKIN (by request):

H. R. 9915. A bill to provide that the House of Representatives shall be composed of 450 Members, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ZABLOCKI:

H. R. 9916. A bill to amend section 1700 (a) (1) of the Internal Revenue Code so as to restore the exemptions from admissions tax which applied during World War II with respect to members of the Armed Forces and to theaters operated on military installations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CLEMENTE:

H. Res. 881. Resolution calling upon Attorney General and Postmaster General to investigate television service racket; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

Mr. WALTER introduced a bill (H. R. 9917) for the relief of Peter V. Bishop, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1950

(Legislative day of Monday, November 27, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou seeking shepherd of our souls, from the arid wastes of our own foolish and perverse ways lead us in green pastures and beside still waters. Deepen the wells from which our spiritual strength is drawn. Incline our hearts to keep Thy law, and in that law may we meditate day and night. May the meditations and convictions of the heart be mirrored in wise legislation for the Nation.

In the heat and burden of our swiftly ebbing day may we be the agents of Thy beneficent will for mankind, with honor unsullied, playing our part in the life of our times. With full purpose of heart, wherever we are called to stand in this epic hour, may we strike our blow for the truth of God and the freedom of man. We ask it in the Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, December 13, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 4234) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate; that the House insisted upon its amendment; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. RICHARDS, Mrs. DOUGLAS, Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. EATON, and Mr. VORYS were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

COMMITTEE MEETING DURING SENATE SESSION

On request of Mr. LUCAS, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Public Works was authorized to sit during the session of the Senate today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will take the liberty of asking unanimous consent that the Appropriations Committee be authorized to sit this afternoon. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR THE CALL OF THE CALENDAR TOMORROW

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow following a quorum call the calendar be called from the beginning for the consideration of unobjected-to bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I inquire whether it is contemplated that all bills regardless of whether reports have been filed on them are included.

Mr. LUCAS. I cannot tell the Senator whether reports will be filed on all bills.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection, but I think it would be well if committees reporting bills would file reports on them.

Mr. LUCAS. If they can, they should do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President——

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONE. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I inquire who has the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. LUCAS. I merely want to finish what I have to say. In view of the fact that we have no business to transact today and no bill will be called up for consideration by the Senator from Illinois, I was hoping that we might, by unanimous consent, proceed to the consideration of executive business for a few moments and confirm nominations to which there is no objection and then return to legislative session. I make that request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no reports of committees, the nominations on the calendar will be stated, beginning with new reports.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Hugh W. Cross, of Illinois, to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION—NOMINATION PASSED OVER

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Stephen J. Spingarn, of New York, to be Federal Trade Commissioner.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I have been asked to have that nomination passed over temporarily.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. LUCAS. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The nomination will be passed over temporarily.

Mr. LUCAS. I hope, however, that whoever is objecting to the nomination will make a determination as to what he wants to do about it because I will be compelled, sooner or later, to move to take up the nomination.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Walter M. Bastian, to be United States district judge for the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of William F. Riley, of Iowa, to be United States district judge of the southern district of Iowa.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the nominations of members of the National Science Board, National Science Foundation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nominations of members of the National Science Board, the National Science Foundation, are confirmed en bloc.

The nominations confirmed en bloc are as follows:

For term expiring May 10, 1952:
Sophie Bledsoe Aberle, of New Mexico.
Chester I. Barnard, of New York.
Robert Percy Barnes, of the District of Columbia.
Detlev W. Bronk, of Maryland.
Gerty T. Cori, of Missouri.
Charles Dollard, of New York.
Robert F. Loeb, of New York.
Andrey A. Potter, of Indiana.
For term expiring May 10, 1954:
Lee A DuBridge, of California.
Donald H. McLaughlin, of California.
Edward L. Moreland, of Massachusetts.
Joseph C. Morris, of Louisiana.
Harold M. Morse, of New Jersey.
James A. Reyniers, of Indiana.
Elvin C. Stakman, of Minnesota.
P. H. Yancey, of Alabama.
For term expiring May 10, 1956:
James B. Conant, of Massachusetts.
John W. Davis, of West Virginia.
Edwin B. Fred, of Wisconsin.
Paul M. Gross, of North Carolina.
George D. Humphrey, of Wyoming.
O. W. Hyman, of Tennessee.
Frederick A. Middlebush, of Missouri.
Charles E. Wilson, of New York.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That completes the calendar.

PROGRAM FOR THE DAY

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I stated a moment ago, and will restate for the benefit of those who may have come to the Chamber since, that there will be no business transacted today, and after the speeches have been made a recess will be taken until tomorrow.

I now yield the floor.

TRANSACTION OF MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MALONE obtained the floor.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MALONE. I am glad to yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, inasmuch as the majority leader did not make the request, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Nevada be permitted to yield to Senators who wish to make insertions in the RECORD and to transact routine business, without losing his right to the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MALONE. I shall be very happy to yield for that purpose, if the Senator from North Dakota will defer his remarks for a few minutes.

Mr. LANGER. Certainly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MEMORIAL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a memorial from James Rullcoski, faithful navigator, Knights of Columbus, Iron River, Mich., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing financial assistance in Yugoslavia, which was ordered to lie on the table.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY—RESOLUTION OF FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference, and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, a resolution adopted by the Fraternal Order of Eagles at its 1950 convention, favoring the development of the St. Lawrence seaway.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EAGLEDOM GOES ON RECORD

Following is the text of the resolution on the St. Lawrence seaway project adopted at the 1950 convention:

"Whereas a deep water ship channel from the Atlantic Ocean to the Great Lakes region, where a large share of the American armaments are produced, would be of great value to the national defense program; and

"Whereas the availability of high-grade ore deposits in Labrador and Quebec, combined with a deepened St. Lawrence waterway, would assure full-scale operation of the Central States steel industry; and

"Whereas an inland highway of commerce from the Atlantic Ocean to the ports of the Great Lakes would provide direct access by sea to the ports of the world for the industrial and agricultural heart of America and Canada; and

"Whereas the St. Lawrence power development would generate millions of kilowatts of electrical energy to stimulate the industrial development and economic welfare of the Northeastern States of the United States and the eastern Provinces of the Dominion of Canada; and

"Whereas the building of canals, locks, and dams around the unnavigable sections of the St. Lawrence River would expand and develop the national economies of the United States of America and Canada, thus benefiting all sections of the continent: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Fraternal Order of Eagles urges the Congress of the United States to approve the development, jointly with the Dominion of Canada, of the St. Lawrence waterway project."

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs:

H. R. 8821. A bill authorizing payment to certain States amounts withheld from grazing fees on public lands; without amendment (Rept. No. 2632).

By Mr. LUCAS, from the Committee on Finance:

H. R. 7932. A bill to amend section 2883 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, by Public Law 448, Eighty-first Congress; without amendment (Rept. No. 2634).

By Mr. O'CONOR, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

S. Res. 365. Resolution authorizing an investigation of the administration and enforcement by Government agencies of the export policies and control regulations of the United States; with an amendment; and, under the rule, referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

INVESTIGATION OF FUEL SUPPLIES IN NEW ENGLAND—REPORT OF A COMMITTEE (REPT. NO. 2633)

Mr. BENTON. Mr. President, from the Select Committee on Small Business, I submit, pursuant to Senate resolution 344, Eighty-first Congress, providing for an investigation of fuel supplies in New England, a report, and ask unanimous consent that it be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the report will be received and printed, as requested by the Senator from Connecticut.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. MAGNUSON (for himself and Mr. JENNER):

S. 4254. A bill to redefine eligibility for membership in AMVETS (American Veterans of World War II); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LODGE:

S. 4255. A bill for the relief of Ritsuko Chojin; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. IVES:

S. 4256. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. W. Doodha; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RUSSELL (for himself and Mr. BRIDGES) (by request):

S. 4257. A bill to authorize certain construction at military and naval installations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

CONTINUATION OF INVESTIGATION OF FUEL RESERVES

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 374), which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

Resolved, That the authority of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, under Senate Resolution 239, Eighty-first Congress, agreed to August 15, 1950 (providing for a study and investigation of the fuel reserves and to formulate a fuel policy of the United States), is hereby continued through January 3, 1953.

ADDITIONAL REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

By unanimous consent, the following additional reports of a committee were submitted:

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

H. R. 9780. A bill providing the privilege of becoming a naturalized citizen of the United States to all aliens having a legal right to permanent residence; without amendment (Rept. No. 2636).

By Mr. MAGNUSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. 4254. A bill to redefine eligibility for membership in AMVETS (American Veterans of World War II); without amendment (Rept. No. 2635).

A PLEA FOR NATIONAL UNITY—ADDRESS BY SENATOR LEHMAN

[Mr. LEHMAN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address in the nature of a plea for national unity, delivered by him at a dinner of the Democratic National Committee in New York City on December 12, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

INVESTIGATION OF ORGANIZED CRIME—STATEMENT BY SENATOR KEFAUVER

[Mr. KEFAUVER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement prepared by him calling attention to the assistance extended by the American Bar Association to the Special Committee To Investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE RUGGED PATH AHEAD—ADDRESS BY ERLE COCKE, JR.

[Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "The Rugged Path Ahead," taken from an address by Erle Cocke, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, before the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE IN KOREA—ARTICLE BY ANSEL E. TALBERT

[Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article regarding the United States Air Force in Korea, by Ansel E. Talbert, chief of the New York Herald Tribune Bureau in Tokyo, which appears in the Appendix.]

A SERIOUS HOUR IN THE NATION'S HISTORY—EDITORIAL BY GEORGE LANG

[Mr. HILL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial in the form of a letter to his fellow Rotarians, written by Dr. George Lang, professor of philosophy at the University of Alabama and district governor of rotary for the district of Alabama, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY—ARTICLE BY WALTER MONFRIED

[Mr. AIKEN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Walter Monfried entitled "Seaway to the Midwest," published in the Eagles' national magazine for November 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

MR. ACHESON'S TROUBLES—ARTICLE BY WALTER LIPPMANN

[Mr. THYE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Mr. Acheson's Troubles," written by Walter Lippmann, and published in the Washington Post of December 14, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

CITIZENS' PENSIONS: AN AMERICAN PLAN—ARTICLE FROM THE NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

[Mr. BUTLER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Emily C. Hammond entitled "Citizens' Pensions: An American Plan," published in the New York Herald Tribune September 30, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE TRUMAN-ATTLEE CONFERENCE—EDITORIAL FROM THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS

[Mr. WATKINS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "The People's Voice," published in the Washington Daily News of December 7, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

FOREIGN POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES—COMMUNICATION FROM EMERSON-HOVEY POST, NO. 168, VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

[Mr. TOBEY asked and obtained consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Arlo I. Pierce, commander of Emerson-Hovey Post, No. 168, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Portsmouth, N. H., with enclosed communication from the post to President Truman, which appears in the Appendix.]

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO YUGOSLAVIA

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4234) to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia, together with a message from the House insisting upon its amendment, and requesting a conference with the Senate thereon.

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 4234) entitled "An act to promote the foreign policy and provide for the defense and general welfare of the United States by furnishing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia" do pass with the following amendment.

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That this act may be cited as the 'Yugoslav Emergency Relief Assistance Act of 1950.'

"Whereas the Government of Yugoslavia has urgently requested relief due to drought conditions, and has expressed an intention to conform to its obligations as a member nation of the United Nations.

"SEC. 2. The President is hereby authorized to expend not in excess of $50,000,000 of the funds heretofore appropriated for expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948, as amended (Public Law 759, 81st Cong.), for the purpose of providing emergency relief assistance to Yugoslavia under the authority of this act.

"SEC. 3. No assistance under authority of this act shall be made available nor shall any funds appropriated hereunder be expended until an agreement is entered into between Yugoslavia and the United States containing the following undertakings, and any others the President may determine to be desirable, on the part of Yugoslavia:

"(a) To make available to the Government of the United States local currency in amounts required by it to meet its local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance supplied under this act.

"(b) To give full and continuous publicity through the press, radio, and all other available media in Yugoslavia to the assistance furnished by the United States; and to allow to the United States, in cooperation with Yugoslavia, the use of such media as may be required to accomplish this purpose.

"(c) To permit persons designated by the Government of the United States to observe and supervise without restriction the distribution by Yugoslavia of commodities and other assistance made available under the authority of this act, and to the extent necessary for this purpose to permit full freedom of movement of such persons within Yugoslavia and full access to communication and information facilities.

"(d) To make equitable distribution to the people in Yugoslavia of the commodities made available under this act, as well as similar commodities produced locally or imported from outside sources, without discrimination as to race or political or religious belief.

"(e) To take all necesary actions to reduce its relief needs, to encourage increased production and distribution of foodstuffs within Yugoslavia and to lessen the danger of similar future emergencies.

"SEC. 4. All of the funds made available under authority of this act shall be utilized to the fullest practicable extent in the purchase of the commodities from the surplus commodities at Government cost in the possession of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"SEC. 5. Nothing in this act shall be interpreted as endorsing measures undertaken by the present Government of Yugoslavia which suppress or destroy religious, political, and economic liberty, and the Yugoslav Government shall be so notified when aid is furnished under this act.

"SEC. 6. At the termination of each 3-month period after aid has been extended under this act the Secretary of State shall make a full and detailed report to the Congress. Said 3-month reports shall not be limited to, but shall include (1) information as to whether or not Yugoslavia is abiding by the agreement as provided for under section 3 of this act; (2) information as to any development in the attitude of Yugoslavia with respect to basic human rights.

"SEC. 7. All or any portion of the funds made available under authority of this act may be transferred by the President to any department or agency of the executive branch of the Government to be expended for the purpose of this act. Funds so transferred may be expended under the authority of any provisions of law, not inconsistent with this act, applicable to the departments or agencies concerned, except that funds so transferred shall not be commingled with other funds of such departments or agencies and shall be accounted for separately.

"SEC. 8. Local currency made available to the United States by Yugoslavia under the provisions of the agreement required by section 3 may be used for local currency administrative and operating expenses in Yugoslavia in connection with assistance provided by this act without charge against appropriated funds.

"SEC. 9. At least 50 percent of the gross tonnage of any equipment, materials, or commodities made available under the provisions of this act and transported on ocean vessels (computed separately for dry bulk carriers and dry cargo liners) shall be transported on United States flag commercial vessels at market rates for United States flag commercial vessels.

"SEC. 10. All or any part of the assistance provided hereunder shall be promptly terminated by the President—

"(a) whenever he determines that (1) Yugoslavia is not complying fully with the undertakings in the agreement entered into under section 3 of this act, or is diverting from the purpose of this act assistance provided hereunder; or (2) because of changed conditions, continuance of assistance is unnecessary or undesirable, or no longer consistent with the national interest or the foreign policy of the United States;

"(b) whenever the Congress, by concurrent resolution, finds termination is desirable.

"Termination of assistance to Yugoslavia under this section shall include the termination of deliveries of all supplies scheduled under this act and not yet delivered."

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House of Representatives; agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. CONNALLY, Mr. MCMAHON, Mr. FULBRIGHT, Mr. WILEY, and Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDER FOR RECESS UNTIL TOMORROW

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its business this afternoon it stand in recess until tomorrow at 12 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PRESIDENT RENNER, OF AUSTRIA

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, this is the eightieth birthday of one of Europe's most far-sighted and most courageous statesmen, Dr. Karl Renner, President of the Republic of Austria.

The son of a small farmer, Dr. Renner worked his way up to become Austria's first citizen and to play a leading role in the eventful history of his country. His political career encompasses not less than 50 years, during which time Dr. Renner witnessed his country's transformation from a world power of 50,000,000 inhabitants to a small nation of 7,000,000. He was elected to the Austrian Parliament in 1907 during the reign of Emperor Franz Joseph. In 1918 Dr. Renner headed, as Chancelor, the first government of the new Austrian Republic, and again in 1945 after the Nazis were driven out of Austria it was Dr. Renner to whom the Austrian people turned in their moment of great need and in their desire to rebuild their war-shattered country. Vienna at that time was occupied by the Soviet Union exclusively, and the Western Powers had a hard enough time to assume their position as co-occupants of the Austrian capital.

It was in this atmosphere of want and of fear that Dr. Renner, heading Austria's first and provisional postwar government, had to lay the foundation upon which a sound and democratic nation could be rebuilt. It would have been easy and almost natural for a man of lesser stature to become the willing tool of the occupying Soviet commander. Yet Dr. Renner, with all the wisdom of his age and with the extraordinary experience gained in almost half a century of political life, stood his ground. In September 1945 the Western Powers finally succeeded in entering Vienna to share in the four-power occupation of the Austrian capital. Free and unfettered elections were held and a full-fledged Austrian Government came into power, and Dr. Karl Renner was unanimously elected President of his country. It is a tribute to Dr. Renner's courage and wisdom, displayed under most trying circumstances, that the legislation enacted by his provisional government could be accepted in full by the freely elected Austrian Parliament.

I would like to extend to President Renner sincere and warm greetings on his eightieth birthday, and I would like to congratulate him as one of Western Europe's great democratic statesmen for his outstanding contribution to the cause of democracy. May his courage and wisdom and may the courage of the small Austrian nation be soon rewarded by giving Austria peace and by returning to her her full freedom through the conclusion of her treaty of independence for which the Austrian Government has striven so courageously during those last years.

THE OBJECTIVES OF OUR FOREIGN POLICY

IT IS THE TIME OF DECISION

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, this is the time of decision. Let us start with the obvious conclusion that our real objectives are the ultimate security and safety of the United States of America.

THIS NATION NEVER DEFEATED

This Nation has never been defeated in a war—and there is no likelihood that it ever will be defeated if we maintain our economic strength and understand our objectives, bolstered by a definite foreign and domestic policy directed to that end.

Lincoln once said that "as a Nation we must live for all time or die by suicide."

Diplomatically, we have lost World War II. As usual we won the war but lost the peace.

THE SHIFTY SHADOWS OF ACHESON—YALTA, TEHRAN, AND POTSDAM

We have fumbled ourselves into a position of defending the self-interest of almost every nation in the world at the expense of our own. We have been soft-talked into apologizing that the appropriations passed on the floor of the Senate for the benefit of foreign nations, are not larger—and if someone inadvertently mentions our own best interests, he is immediately branded an isolationist.

The shifty shadows from Tehran and Yalta and Potsdam still play across our foreign policy. We have no accurate knowledge of the definite commitments made by our leaders at these conferences, except the vague, uncertain, and changing foreign programs that uphold the dead hand of colonialism and the selfish trade interests or military ambitions of other nations.

WE SUPPLY THE WEAPONS TO FIGHT AGAINST US

We are at war with the Chinese Communists—those agrarian reformers that our present Secretary of Defense discovered early in 1946 in China—while our so-called European allies are sending them the supplies and equipment they need to slaughter our badly outnumbered troops in Korea. These supplies and equipment are paid for through the Marshall plan countries of Europe by our own taxpayers, the parents of the boys being murdered.

Mr. President, I desire to refer to a dispatch in the Journal of Commerce, to show that this is nothing new. It was public information for many, many months—in fact, this has been going on for 3 years at least.

The dispatch was filed at Frankfurt, Germany, December 12, 1950, by the Associated Press. It adds up to the arming of Russia and the satellite countries by the 16 Marshall plan nations. The dispatch reads as follows:

SOVIET BLOC CONTINUES TO GET STRATEGIC ITEMS IN WESTERN EUROPE

FRANKFURT, December 12.—Highly strategic war materials are flowing behind the Soviet iron curtain from West Germany, and the western allies are powerless to stop them.

Such crucial articles as machine tools, ball bearings, optical supplies, steel tubing, and raw steel are being moved secretly into the Soviet satellite bloc.

Allied officials believe that much, or most, of this material finds its way directly to Russia.

ARMY SUPPLIES

It is authoritatively believed also that quantities of rolling stock purchased from United States Army surplus has been previously shipped to Soviet satellites for relay to Russia.

The western allies find themselves helpless. They have export licensing power only over certain specific strategic materials. The rest are licensed by the West German Government. It does not have the power or means to police the ultimate destination of purchased products.

Allied sources said they have no way of determining the exact amount of contraband that has gone to the Soviets. But we feel it was and is of sufficient quantity to make a substantial contribution to the Communist bloc's war potential, one source added.

Allied sources who declined to be identified explained how the East—at a time when United Nations are sorely upset in Korea, acquires vital materials from the West.

EXAMPLE CITED

A Ruhr firm, for example, exports steel to west Berlin buyers who ostensibly are legitimate. But after the steel reaches Berlin it disappears. The allies believe it is easily taken to east Berlin and from there shipped either directly to Russia, or to one of her satellites.

Officials said perhaps as much as $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 worth of steel has been illegally shipped to the East thus far in 1950.

Another source said a shipment of American lead which arrived in the Netherlands went down the Rhine to Switzerland. The lead then went on to Stetten, Poland. American officials were aware of the transaction but were unable to interfere. Switzerland, until yesterday, had no export controls and had become a favored spot for international speculators. The little nation's decision yesterday to impose export and import controls may close that avenue.

Initial receivers of contraband slipping under the iron curtain have been Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia, Allied officials said, but they make no bones that they are convinced Russia ultimately gets the lion's share.

Recently the Allied High Commission asked West German Chancelor Konrad Adenauer to have his Government take steps to stop these movements of strategic materials to the East. Some officials say the Germans don't have adequate border police to halt the movement of contraband.

These are some of the ways, officials say, that illicit shipments are made:

Some contraband goes east under false papers. Other shipments are sold through Communist intermediaries who have set up dummy firms in West Germany. These are busy milking the strategic industries of the West German Republic.

These dummy firms are "fronts" for other intermediaries in Switzerland, Sweden, or the Netherlands whose job is to see that such shipments roll to Russia and its satellites.

Some authoritative quarters believe that at least a portion of United States Army surplus stocks have been sent to the East.

In this, too, their hands are all but tied.

THE NINETY-SIX TRADE TREATIES

Mr. President, beginning in March 1948 the junior Senator from Nevada started placing excerpts from foreign trade treaties in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which were in full force and effect. They were not contraband. They were open and aboveboard.

What did they include? They included trade in such materials as are mentioned in the dispatch which I have read—and also ball bearings, tool steel, tools to make this material, electrical equipment, heavy machinery of all kinds, locomotives, and other processed and manufactured equipment. Great Britain and the other 15 Marshall-plan countries have continued shipping such material up to the present time, and are still continuing it.

A list of 96 trade treaties was placed in the RECORD in January of this year. Several of them were reprinted in full, to show the type of material which was being shipped.

SHOULD SHOCK THE SENATE AND THE PEOPLE OF THIS NATION

The junior Senator from Nevada thought it would shock the Senate and the people of the country, but apparently they were not shocked. So now we find ourselves at war with Communist China. In our so-called police action in Korea we are fighting against the very weapons which were made from the material to which I have referred. These weapons were made from the tools shipped by our allies to Russia and Communist China through the 16 Marshall-plan countries in Europe, and through Hong Kong in China. And that trade is still taking place.

At this point, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD three newspaper clippings on this very subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

[From the New York Times of November 22, 1950]

GERMANS TO RENEW EAST-WEST TRADE—SHIPMENTS DUE TO START THIS WEEK WHILE BOTH ZONES ARE STILL NEGOTIATING PACT

(By Kathleen McLaughlin)

BERLIN, November 21.—The resumption of shipments between Eastern and Western German concerns is in prospect at the end of this week although some weeks will probably elapse before signatures are affixed to a new reciprocal trade pact on which conferences are continuing here.

The mutually imperative requirements of both zones have dictated this premature implementation of the pending treaty according to a member of the western group of delegates.

The negotiations concerning a trade agreement to replace the one that expired last September were suspended October 1, when the East suddenly cut deliveries of electric current to west Berlin. They were resumed several days ago after adjustment of this controversy.

A study of the relative status of the two zones since the reopening of the talks confirms the contentions of the West regarding the imbalance of exchange on the side of the Eastern Germans. The present gap in shipments from East to West is approximately 10,000,000 trade units (each unit being equivalent to one West Deutsche mark, 23.8 cents).

On the other hand, the statement a few days ago by Otto Grotewohl, Minister-President of East Germany, that the West is in arrears to the extent of 50,000,000 units for which eastern concerns already have made advance payments is acknowledged by the western group to be accurate.

These advance payments, they explain, represent customary deposits on sizable orders for complicated machinery, such as dredges, which are not due for delivery for some months ahead. Such deals, however, are handled in a separate account and do not affect the balances shown in the clearing account.

On Thursday each side will submit lists of all items they wish to obtain under the pact, together with totals of quantities required. These compilations will become the basis of specifications to be included in the forthcoming agreement.

A spokesman for the West said that the prospectus was that negotiations would not be finished by the end of this year.

Josef Orlopp, chairman of the eastern group of delegates is eager to expand the scope of the clearing account to 1,000,000,000 trade units on each side. The western conferees doubt that the ultimate limit will reach that level.

One of the most critical factors in the current conferences concerns the restrictions imposed by eastern authorities on the free interchange of goods between the two zones. Satisfactory guaranties that the creeping blockade tactics employed up to now to interrupt the movement of trains, trucks, and barges to and from west Berlin will cease are being demanded by the West.

To insure that these conditions are met, the western group has established a subcommission that is meeting separately with eastern representatives. Successful termination of their assignment will be a prerequisite for the signing of the impending trade agreement by the western group.

[From the Washington Daily News of November 21, 1950]

TRADING WITH ENEMY

Scripps-Howard Reporter Jim G. Lucas, writing from the Far East, gives a striking account of heavy traffic in strategic materials between Red China and the British ports of Hong Kong and Singapore.

These are the high lights of Mr. Lucas' charges:

An estimated 75,000 tons of structural steel have been shipped to the Chinese Communists from Hong Kong in the last 2 months. The chairman of the Hong Kong Export Association boasts that "recently increased demands by the Chinese Communists for war and strategic supplies have expanded exports to China, and in consequence, prices for exportable goods have seen great improvement." Airplane parts, on the blacklist, are shipped as auto parts. Heavy shipments of rubber, tin, copper, and aluminum go to Red China from Singapore, even though Communist forces are a serious threat to Malaya.

"Some of that war material moves back into Malaya from China to equip and supply the Malayan Reds," Mr. Lucas writes.

A few hours after Mr. Lucas' account was published, Senator O'CONOR, of Maryland, charged that large quantities of sheet steel recently had been shipped to Communist China and Hong Kong from American ports. Senator O'CONOR based his charges on secret testimony made before an investigating subcommittee which he heads.

He said the steel sheets, some of which were tin-plated, were of a type considered second grade in this country. But he emphasized that the materials easily could be turned to war uses.

Senator O'CONOR has asked the Commerce Department to place the second-grade steel plates on its list of controlled exports and thus prevent additional shipments to the Chinese Reds. That should be done promptly.

As to the shipments of structural steel from Hong Kong and Singapore to the Chinese Communists, it should be made clear just what kind of understanding there is between the American and British Governments about such transactions.

If there is important traffic in war materials between Red China and Britain and this country, the State Department must know about it, in which case the remedy is here at home. If such business has been going on behind the State Department's back, then there are woeful deficiencies in our intelligence services.

Red China has been waging war against our forces in Korea since October 20, according to General MacArthur. A United Nations embargo should have been declared against Red China the moment that attack was confirmed and, in any event, should be declared now.

The troops fighting under the UN flag are entitled to that much consideration from the organization they are supporting. Our Government owes it to our own men at the front to see that they get it.

[From the Washington Daily News of November 20, 1950]

THINGS LOOK UP IN HONG KONG—RED CHINA GETS BRITISH STEEL

(By Jim G. Lucas)

TAIPEH, November 20.—An estimated 75,000 tons of structural steel has been shipped into Red China from Hong Kong in the last 2 months.

The bulk of it was bought in England and other Western European countries. Very little of it comes from the United States.

When a London newspaper charged recently that the British Crown Colony was Red China's principal supplier of war goods, Hong Kong professed to be indignant. But a reputable businessman assures me he has seen bills of lading for 35,000 tons of steel shipped into Red China from Hong Kong in a 3-week period of last month.

The British colony's attitude toward Red China is difficult for Americans to understand. Last week the Hong Kong Standard carried a long interview with Yuen Kingsang, chairman of the Hong Kong Export Association.

IMPROVEMENT

Mr. Yuen was complaining that the Nationalist blockade of Red China ports had "brought about a decline of Hong Kong's export activities." But he added: "Recently increased demands by the Chinese Communists for war and strategic supplies * * * expanded exports to China, and in consequence prices for exportable goods have seen great improvement."

However, Mr. Yuen's optimism was under control. He admitted it was too early to say that "a turn for the better" in export business was in sight.

Recently another Hong Kong newspaper editorially remarked that the fact Chinese Communists were killing British soldiers in North Korea had no bearing on England's recognition of Red China. The fact was irrelevant, the paper said, because the Tommies weren't in Korea under the British flag. They were fighting—and losing their lives as United Nations troops, the editorial pointed out.

A FARCE

Hong Kong maintains a positive blacklist of several thousand items which can't be sold to Red China. But it's farcical. Certain kinds of steel can't be shipped because they might be used to make arms. But structural steel is not on the list.

With China's reserves of manganese and other alloys it's not difficult to convert structural steel into a grade suitable for weapons.

Airplane parts are also on the blacklist, but a Hong Kong trader put it this way:

"What's to prevent plane parts from being declared as automobile parts, which aren't on the list? And as a practical measure, who's going to check them?"

Occasionally a shipment is stopped. One was halted in August, another in September. In both cases aircraft parts were listed as auto parts. They were confiscated. But this is an exception.

Portugal's colony, Macao, 40 miles from Hong Kong, is reported to be Red China's principal source of aviation gasoline, outside of Russia. Macao has no blacklist, and it's a simple matter to relay supplies into China.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS

Singapore has no blacklist, either. Heavy shipments of rubber, tin, copper, and aluminum go to Red China from Singapore, well-informed commercial sources say, even though Communist forces are a serious threat to Malaya. Some of the war material moves back into Malaya from China to equip and supply the Malayan Reds.

Hong Kong, of course, has its side of the argument. The colony has always been a free port. It depends on trade with the mainland for its existence. There can be no doubt that a majority of Hong Kong's residents detest the Communists and are ashamed of their uncomfortable role. But they ask, What else can we do?

Most Hong Kongers are desperately afraid of offending the Communists and are almost servile in dealing with them. They accept unbelievable insults without protests. Recently John Keswick, managing director of the Jardine, Matheson & Co., trading firm at Shanghai, started back to Hong Kong with his wife. He was "invited" by Communist police to leave the ship a few minutes before sailing so that "some outstanding questions" could be checked.

MOST POLITE

A week later Mr. Keswick was permitted to sail, without explanation and without being questioned at all. When he arrived at Hong Kong he angrily insisted that nothing unusual had happened. He stressed that the Communist police were "most polite" in asking him to leave his ship. He said he was "not interfered with in any way."

Most arrivals from Shanghai refuse to talk in Hong Kong. One foreign trader told me his Shanghai manager was a prisoner in his own office on bread and water as a result of a labor dispute. The Hong Kong man said he had talked with his employee by telephone—with a Communist labor official listening in. "I wouldn't dare have said a word to jeopardize his safety," the trader said.

THE INSANE PRACTICE SHOULD BE STOPPED

Mr. MALONE. Is it not about time that we here, as representatives of the people, put a stop to this insane course of sending war materials and money to these countries only to find them selling munitions and materials with which to kill our boys?

Let us no longer listen to the voice of these internationalists who would not only have us give up our sovereignty, destroy our freedoms, but sacrifice our boys upon the battlefields of foreign countries.

Mr. President, my constituents and your constituents are demanding action on the part of you and me to put a stop to this insane policy and to oust from office those responsible for it.

WE CAN WIN WITH AN OBJECTIVE

The United States can win any war with any nation or group of nations under a definite foreign policy with our own ultimate safety as the objective.

Why are we fighting these wars? Because we must have concluded that we need to do so for our ultimate safety.

We have the resources; we have the know-how in the air-power and submarine fields; we have the technical manpower; and we have the will to win.

TWO WORLD WARS

Having a part in two World Wars, having watched our boys' terrific performance in both of them, it has made me sick at heart to witness for 4 years, from the floor of the United States Senate, our slow disintegration due to the complete absence of a definite foreign policy that made sense to anybody.

THE HELPLESS, JITTERY EXECUTIVE BRANCH AND UNITED NATIONS

Our American boys are in a bloody undeclared war with Communist China—160,000 of them against an estimated 1,000,000 Chinese troops—as a direct result of the President's declared "police action," later bolstered by the approval of the United Nations. The President immediately laid the entire affair in the lap of that body and then deliberately washed his hands of the entire job. No one wants to go to war with China. The Chinese have been our friends for many years. Unfortunately, the Chinese people today—thanks to our State Department—are under the complete control and domination of Moscow, and they must understand all of the implications. What we should do is to help Chiang Kai-shek and the forces in China that are opposed to our enemies in that country.

The United Nations proceeded to hold General MacArthur on the thirty-eighth parallel for a period of 10 days until the demoralized North Korean forces could regroup and the Chinese Communists come to their aid. The UN refused to allow MacArthur to fly planes across the Manchurian border in order to determine to what extent the Chinese were arming troops or to break up the Communist attack back of the lines. Now that great body of strategists has debated the question for 3 weeks while many of our units have suffered an admitted loss of up to 30 percent of their personnel without any idea of where they were going or what they were supposed to do, and with no reinforcements.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks an article written by William Chapman, entitled "This Once-Proud Army—Haggard, Cold, in Rags," published in the New York Mirror of December 14, 1950.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article is as follows:

THIS ONCE-PROUD ARMY—HAGGARD, COLD, IN RAGS

(By William Chapman)

HUNGNAM, KOREA, December 11.—A transport heavily loaded with Allied troops and equipment is heading out into the Japan Sea today in the first phase of the United Nations Dunkirk-like evacuation of Northeast Korea.

I watched the Allies take Hamhung and Hungnam 2 months ago. And I watched them start out today. I stood on the main pier of this oriental port city, whipped by a bitter Siberian wind, and watched the transport sailing away.

Now there is no band to play stirring music for the troops, no cheers from the North Koreans who watch with inscrutable oriental eyes. There is only the chug of winch motors on the decks of the rust-flecked freighters and the scream of winch cables as they reel in another load of equipment for the hold.

It was different 2 months ago. I stood on a reviewing stand in Hamhung and watched troops of the South Korean Capital Division swing through in a victory parade and onward for the advance up the coast which carried them almost to the border of Russia.

I had watched them take Hamhung and Hungnam the night before. On that warm, sunny day there was no thought of retreat. The troops were swinging smartly through a canyon of welcoming banners and the civilians sent up a deafening chorus of cheers.

Maj. Gen. Kim Pak Il, commander of the South Korean First Corps, congratulated Brig. Gen. Songyon Chan of the Capital Division on a historic march of less than a month which had carried his men through the richest industrial area in Korea.

Now the dock area is covered with the mire of dirty snow, churning trucks and plodding feet, all po'· ting toward the flotilla of ships waiting in the harbor to take the U.! force away.

The mess is littered with empty ration cans and boxes of equipment scattered in the rush of retreat.

It is bitterly cold. The troops and civilians are dressed for warmth in tattered rags, in dirt-stained GI parkas, in ancient Mongolian mountain caps, in mud-coated overshoes.

The troops don't look sharp and confident. They don't smile. They are tired and cold and disgusted. Many are half sick with colds. They slog through the mud with their heads down and shoulders bent.

The South Koreans perhaps are the saddest sight as they wait their turn to board the ships. These are the same proud, cocky troops who marched smartly through on their way to Chongjin.

Now they only huddle in their parkas, their cockiness gone, their young faces immobile in the cold.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, the article which has just been printed in the RECORD was written at Hungnam, Korea, on December 11. I wish to read only a portion thereof, as follows:

A transport heavily loaded with allied troops and equipment is heading out into the Japan Sea today in the first phase of the United Nations Dunkirk-like evacuation of northeast Korea.

I watched the Allies take Hamhung and Hungnam 2 months ago. And I watched them start out today. I stood on the main pier of this oriental port city, whipped by a bitter Siberian wind, and watched the transports sailing away.

A PROFOUND DEBATE WAS IN PROGRESS

Mr. President, all that was going on while debate was proceeding in the United Nations as to whether they would permit MacArthur to use on the Manchurian border anything but his bare hands.

THE UNITED NATIONS

The United Nations, made up as it is of some of the countries who are directing the war against us in Korea and China, are the ones who direct the policies of our troops under MacArthur's leadership.

This organization, 10,000 miles away from the front, seems to believe that a war can be fought like a football game, with time out for them to call signals, regroup, and then stop the charge of the enemy troops on the line of scrimmage, which was represented by the Manchurian border. It took the UN 3 weeks to make the decision whether he could meet that line of scrimmage 2 feet or 2 miles beyond the border or wait for the instant of impact of the Communist hordes. The same was true on the thirty-eighth parallel.

When in the history of any country in the world was an army of that country forced to take directions of an organization made up in part of countries who were directing the war against it? Would our forefathers have stood for this? What happened to Benedict Arnold when he tried to betray our fighting forces?

EXECUTIVE BRANCH RESPONSIBLE FOR FOREIGN POLICY

The Constitution of the United States places the responsibility of fixing our foreign policy in the Executive branch of our Government—but since that branch has shown a complete and utter disregard for the best interests of our Nation it is high time that this body take cognizance of the floundering, helpless condition and come forward with definite constructive suggestions long overdue.

When national policies fail as disastrously as ours have failed, it is time to re-examine the whole process which got us into this predicament. Let us face the fact that we have come to a grave crisis—and then let us decide what must be done.

THE TIME OF DECISION

The American people have proved their resourcefulness. We can reach any reasonable objective we set for ourselves. Not only do we have the resources but we have the manpower to protect our reasonable objectives, we have the industrial production, capacity—and the know-how. In other words, we have the ability to win.

First, we must know where we are going, and why.

What, for instance, are we trying to do in Korea? American boys are dying there. For what purpose?

We must establish a definite foreign and domestic policy and know exactly what our objectives are.

If we take stock of our position and fix an intelligent foreign policy with the security and welfare of our people in mind—if, in other words, we fulfill our responsibility to the people we represent—we will come out of this crisis with flying colors.

But we cannot compromise with plans or deeds dangerous to our Nation. Are we going to temporize while our boys are being murdered in Korea, in this undeclared war being fought under the auspices of a super government other than our own? Recrimination is not going to solve our difficulties; however, neither will it be possible to solve them if we fail to recognize their causes.

Let us face it: We are in our present unhappy situation because we departed from concepts so ably set down in our Constitution. We abandoned principles adherence to which have caused this Nation to stand out above all others.

THE ABANDONMENT OF PRINCIPLES

The abandonment of principles has not been sudden, although it has taken place at a constantly increasing pace. Neither has it been done on the basis of considered decision of the people themselves. Some of our leaders have been charmed by strange medicine men into the use of temporary cure-alls which are foreign in origin and completely alien to our established form of government.

Some of these drugs seem to be habit-forming and to result in the loosening morals and an approach to degradation. This has been going on without the people's realizing what was happening to them.

PEOPLE AWAKENING TO THEIR PERIL

This is the time of decision. At this time of great crisis I feel more hopeful than I have dared to feel for some time—hopeful because the people are at last awakening to their peril, are becoming aware of its causes, and are showing definite signs of doing something about it. I suggest the following:

First. Forthwith stop assistance of every nature to Communist nations and to nations in any way assisting Russia or her satellites to consolidate Soviet gains and to prepare for world war III.

Second. Stop supporting colonial slavery in any form anywhere.

Third. Oppose with every means at our command the recognition of Communist China by the United Nations.

Fourth. Three suggested approaches to the war in Korea and Asia are as follows:

(a) We could do the obvious, namely, arm Chiang Kai-shek's nationalists and guerrillas to furnish the foot soldiers for the job. Then, under General MacArthur, we could make the most efficient use of our air power and our Navy, including submarines, to destroy the war-making power of Communist Korea and the aggressor Communist China troops.

(b) We could withdraw from Korea and could arm and equip Chiang Kai-shek's troops and let him do the job. It would require a longer time, but he would engage the Communist forces to the extent that it would be doubtful if they could harass us for a considerable time.

If the first two alternatives are not acceptable, we could (c) completely abandon Korea and China—with all of its possible consequences and repercussions.

We can then establish our first line of defense through Japan, Formosa, Okinawa, Guam, the Philippines, Indonesia, New Guinea, and Australia, using ground troops recruited from those countries.

(d) If all of these suggestions are discarded, then we can come home and defend the Western Hemisphere. We must be prepared to defend this continent in any case.

The one thing that we cannot do is to continue the present course of indecision and the nervous jittery attitude, and inactivity until our boys out there either are dead or have climbed aboard the ships.

Fifth. We should inform the governments of Europe which still maintain political and economic agreements with the Soviet Union that these should be terminated at the earliest possible date, as a prerequisite to the continued friendship and assistance of Europe by the United States.

Mr. President, the junior Senator from Nevada has brought up this question many times on the floor of the Senate.

NONAGGRESSION PACTS

On March 30, 1949, I inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the full text of the two nonaggression pacts, with all of their military and economic clauses, which England and France, acting separately, have made with Russia. Those pacts are in good standing; there has never been an indication that they are to be canceled. They were good for 20 years from the date of agreement, and provision was made that considerable notice would be required in order that the participating countries might be released from them. No notice has ever been given that the participating nations are seeking termination of those pacts, which read startlingly like the North Atlantic Pact, and mean the same thing.

CAN TAKE THEIR CHOICE

Soon, I believe, a decision on the part of Europe must be made. As it stands now England and France will be able to swing either way, for they are signed up in both "leagues." Whoever seems to have the top spot at the time no doubt will be supported.

This is not the first time I have made this suggestion, but if necessary, loan such funds to private business in strategic areas without weakening our economy.

Sixth. Let us give no more money as gifts to any government. Make loans in the same manner, and under the same rules and regulations, that the RFC loans funds to private business in this country in times of stress. I would not give any money direct to foreign governments as such, and I would not lend taxpayers' funds to private business in a foreign country on less exacting terms than those on which the RFC would make loans to business concerns or private businessmen or GI's in the United States; and furthermore it is not necessary to do so.

BUSINESS AFRAID OF NATIONALIZATION

I do not wish to divert from my central theme; but I shall say that I have examined many of the industries in the Ruhr; in Birmingham, England; in France; in Greece; in Italy, and most of the European countries. A common remark of the businessmen there was that they did not want Marshall-plan money or Government money, but they wanted us to stay out of their hair. That was the expression used by a steel manufacturer in Birmingham, England, who planned a $12,000,000-improvement program—according to the then rate of exchange it meant about £4,000,000. I examined his plan and went over the construction with him. He was very proud of it. I asked where he got the money for it, and whether it came from the Bank of England. He said the money came from the local banks in Birmingham. I asked, "Do you not want some of the Marshall-plan money?"

He replied, "I just want them to keep out of my hair."

All private business there was afraid of nationalization, but they could not successfully fight it.

Seventh. Build as rapidly as possible a military force, spearheaded by an adequate submarine fleet and an air corps of whatever number of groups may be called for, and install radar equipment to protect the Western Hemisphere.

It will be remembered that in December 1947, or early in 1948, the President received the report of his air-policy commission. The Congress also received the report of a committee, which they had previously appointed. The two reports coincided; both reports contained the statement that the United States needed a 35,000-plane striking force which would cost $16,800,000,000, over a 5-year period to be effective in defense and offense.

What happened to that report? It was buried as is usual with reports not meeting the State Department's peculiar ideas of national defense.

When that report was made, I said on this floor, "Let us refer the report to the Armed Services Committee, and have them determine whether it makes sense. If it is found that the air force recommended in the report is what we need, let us build it." If we did that, then we would have sufficient money left over to lend private business in the areas which were important to our ultimate safety. However, those planes have never been built and no further mention of the report was ever made.

Eighth. If the European people will enlist in their own armies and will furnish the ground troops, then—and then only—serve notice on Russia that any move on Europe will be met with an aggressive aerial attack on their means of making war, using every means at our command to defeat their purpose of controlling Europe.

If the people in Europe will not enlist in their own armies, what can we do for them?

The suggestion has been made on the floor of the Senate that we send 20 or 30 divisions of American boys into Europe as bait, to persuade the people of Europe to enlist in their own armies. However, if we sent our boys over there, the European countries would find that they would need an additional 20 or 30 divisions of our American troops, as was the case in World War II, when our forces ultimately constituted approximately 70 percent of the Allied armed forces in Europe.

Ninth. In every possible way, protect and strengthen our national economy, while making all possible speed toward proper preparedness, guard well our national economy; stop wasting the hard-earned dollars of our taxpayers through Marshall-plan and other give-away schemes; and inaugurate a businesslike fiscal policy.

Tenth. Clean up our own Government—throw out the Communists, Communist associates, adherents to foreign ideologies, persons of abnormal moral weakness, and other dangerous security risks. The Armed Services Committees of the Congress should immediately institute a thorough investigation to determine why we are not prepared to fight a war, considering the huge annual expenditures for that purpose. Where did it go—and why is it not effective?

THE UNPREPARED HORDE

In spite of the amount of money which has been appropriated by the Congress and made available, we are yet unable to fight a war with a relatively unprepared horde of Communist Chinese, who have little artillery and no air force, but yet they drive us out of Korea.

THE CHINESE-RUSSIAN MARKET

It may be known that Russia has continually held out to Germany—and this fact might have something to do with our difficulties there—that if the Germans would remain neutral or ally themselves with Russia, she—Germany—could furnish manufactured and processed material, such as raw steel, tools, ball bearings, optical supplies, steel tubing, and other manufactured materials, to Russia and to China. The greatest potential market in the world is the Chinese market, and it is being held out to the people of Germany that they can over the years furnish a vast amount of material to Russia, and also supply the entire Chinese area over the long years ahead.

PROTECTING OTHER NATIONS

Diplomatically we have lost World War II. The administration saw fit to use our part of the victory as a means of protecting the long-range interests of other nations. Our own interests, involving the security and well-being of our own people, were neglected and pushed aside as of no real consequence.

We had no empire nor were we building one. Once we were in the war we had but one real objective—to end it with victory. We told our fighting men that their sacrifices were not made to advance any nationalistic ambitions or goals for this country but for a continuance of the kind of country they wanted for themselves and their families.

But we did not tell them that they were the pawn pledges for the ambitions and goals of other countries.

Let us look at the United Nations.

WE HAVE BEEN INSULTED AND PUSHED AROUND

We have been insulted and pushed around by the Soviets ever since the organization of the United Nations. We continue to witness the degrading spectacle of our representatives in the United Nations being subjected to daily abuse by representatives of Russia, who is responsible for the war in Asia and its atrocities.

Let us go back for a moment.

UNITED NATIONS DOOMED TO LIFE OF INVALIDISM

At the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, the question of voting in the United Nations organization was left open. Obviously it was left open then because the time was not ripe for introducing the idea of the veto to permit Russia to control the organization; thus subsequent arrangements could be made to permit Russia the veto power. At Yalta, the yet unborn United Nations was doomed to a life of invalidism by Communists' insistence on the veto. It was there, too, that our President agreed to permit Russia three votes and the right to invade Manchuria, the bread basket of China. Alger Hiss was adviser to the President at Yalta.

Yes, we have lost every conference.

THE BERLIN AIRLIFT, MAJOR RETREAT

Too long we have used words, appeasement, and retreat, while our enemy constantly grew stronger, and our prestige declined in the eyes of the world.

Our men who flew the Berlin airlift are to be commended on doing a difficult task in a creditable manner, but the Berlin airlift was the first major retreat since Potsdam, and was made necessary by the action of State Department officials, such as Hiss and Wadleigh. The United States made an agreement giving full control of Berlin to the Russians, but reserving to ourselves no means of getting into or out of the area occupied by our troops and officials.

At Potsdam we made concessions to Russia including the isolation of our occupation forces in Berlin, where they are now surrounded by Communist armies. What chance will these brave men have when the blow falls, as it is bound to fall?

We have encouraged the enemy to believe that we would continue to follow the path of appeasement.

Talks with the Red China delegates, who are now in our country, while their armies continue to slaughter our loved ones in Korea, means some more of that encouragement that we have been extending to Moscow. The Red China envoys, together with the representatives of the nations which have recognized Red China have enjoyed the hospitality of Trygve Lie, the original choice of Russia for Secretary General of the United Nations. As a matter of fact, according to an Associated Press dispatch informing the world of it, they were all at his place the other night for dinner whooping it up for recognition of Communist China at a time when these serious battles are going on in Korea between Communist China and the United States.

ELEVEN-BILLION-DOLLAR LEND-LEASE TO RUSSIA

At the close of World War II, Russia, starving and bankrupt, was held up only by an infusion of $11,000,000,000 of lend-lease and other billions of relief and loans from the United States.

Russia's war on the United States and her allies has proceeded from one diplomatic victory to another. They have never lost a conference with us.

Right here in our own Government we have had people working against us. John Foster Dulles told a group of Senators that there was a clique in the State Department who thought that a dose of communism would be good for China.

OUR STATE DEPARTMENT—COMMUNIST AREAS

There is evidence that State Department officials have been advancing the cause of the Communists on a global scale. The Italian Foreign Minister, Count Carlo Sforza, told the Chamber of Deputies on November 10 that the Italian Government had been considering recognition of the Communist regime in China, and he indicated that the Italian attitude on that question had been influenced strongly by some alluring suggestions made to him by very responsible quarters during his trip to the United States last September.

These suggestions, he said, were that the Soviet Union would not veto Italy's admission to the United Nations if the United States and other member states would not veto the admission of Communist China.

ACHESON PROMISED TO GO ALONG WITH ENGLAND IN RECOGNIZING COMMUNIST CHINA

Mr. President, in September of 1949, while the monetary conference participated in by England, Canada, and the United States was being held at Washington, D. C., the junior Senator from Nevada stated that in his opinion the Secretary of State had promised to go along with England in the matter of admission of Communist China to the United Nations; and he has seen no reason yet to change his mind.

So Mr. Acheson held up the program because so many Senators on this floor seemed to have such violent objection to such a procedure. But when he attended the conference in Europe early this year and came back to ask for a joint meeting of the Members of the two Houses of the Congress of the United States, what did he say?

In a 1-hour speech, containing nothing which we had not heard a hundred times before, except for one sentence buried in the middle of the speech, he said, "We will not use the veto to prevent admission of Communist China to the U. N." This would lead to the recognition of Communist China by the United States, as I have forecast for some time. There is a great suspicion, Mr. President, that he is still working with England to bring about sufficient votes in the United Nations to recognize Communist China, with our representatives merely voting against it, and accepting it and then selling it later to our people.

Our foreign policy in Asia brought on our present trouble directly.

When General Marshall went to China in December 1945, to force the Chinese to accept the Communists in a coalition government, the Chinese Nationalist Government was at the height of its power. The Nationalists had surrounded 100,000 Communists near Canton and 70,000 near Hankow and had blocked off the rest from Manchuria.

GENERAL MARSHALL AND THE AMERICAN PERFORMERS

General Marshall pressured the Nationalists into withdrawing their forces and the Communists went north into Manchuria, where they obtained the wartime stock of Japanese arms and ammunition. The Nationalists even agreed to admit 13 Communists into a national council of 40, but the Communists demanded 14 which would have given them veto power, since a two-thirds vote was required for changes of policy. To force acceptance of this outrageous demand, General Marshall placed a 10 months' embargo against all shipments of arms and ammunition to the Nationalists.

CONFERENCE WITH GENERAL FU

Mr. President, the junior Senator from Nevada visited Peiping, China, in November 1948. He landed in a plane, without lights, at night, and a great Chinese general, General Fu, under Chiang Kai-shek, sent a car without lights and took the junior Senator from Nevada to his heavily-guarded camp for a 3-hour midnight conference.

He was a fine looking, efficient, tough general, broad between the eyes, bearing no decorations. He said, "I was defeated early in 1946, when General Marshall stopped the shipment of American ammunition for American guns previously furnished." He said, further, "The Communists can close the area from the harbor to Peking at any moment"—and they were afraid that might be done because of my visit there. He said, "I have kept the railroad from the harbor open, but they can close it at any time they wish to."

Mr. President, he said, without any emotion, "Unless I get substantial help within 30 or 60 days, I will be a prisoner of war." And, Mr. President, he was.

Mr. President, after Congress appropriated $125,000,000 for military equipment for China in April 1948, the State Department placed China on so low a priority that no shipments moved until October and then at prices approximately double their original cost and 15 or more times the prices charged Greece and Turkey.

If we now betray Chiang, one of our few friends of consequence in the Orient, to the enemy, free people everywhere will be asking themselves: "Who among us are next to be betrayed by the appeasers in Washington under the cloak of the United Nations?"

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS SUPPORT DANGEROUS SECURITY RISKS

It may be remembered, Mr. President, that early this year the junior Senator from Nevada rose in the Senate and presented a resolution calling for an examination of the Communist infiltration and the dangerous security risks in the Department of Commerce, and he named one man, a Mr. Lee, formerly bearing another name, as a specific subject for investigation. What happened, Mr. President? We brought two of those persons to the surface, and, in the opinion of the junior Senator from Nevada, proved that they were dangerous security risks. The junior Senator from Nevada did not say they were Communists; he said they were dangerous security risks, and proved it.

Mr. Sawyer, the head of the Department of Commerce, peremptorily discharged both men, and the congressional investigation has not been continued since that time.

One of them took his medicine and went to New York, where he was almost immediately under indictment by a grand jury for the very thing of which he had been accused here. The other man refused to take his discharge. There is a loyalty board established in each of the departments. It is a very handy thing. The loyalty board had not cleared Mr. Lee, who has been under suspicion and investigation approximately half of his employed life.

POOR SECURITY RISK

But the board said it had not had sufficient evidence to prove him disloyal to the Government, which was the only cause for which they could recommend discharge. But it did have sufficient evidence to show that he was a very poor security risk.

On further insistence his own board held another hearing and found him guilty of disloyalty. Then, Mr. Sawyer, in a great display of front-page headlines, cleared him of disloyalty and then discharged him, so that he can now go back to any Government agency for reemployment. He probably has, by this time. We cannot check on all such persons among nearly 2,000,000 others.

GIFT OF CHIANG AND FORMOSA WILL NOT APPEASE RED CHINA

Mr. President, giving Czechoslovakia to Hitler did not appease Germany, nor will the gift of Chiang and Formosa to Red China appease the appetite of the Communist conspiracy.

For 9 years the State Department officials and their advisers told us that there was no connection between the Chinese Communists and the Russian Communists; that the former were just agrarian reformers, innocent peasants, not real Communists at all; that the movement was just an agrarian reform. Mr. Acheson and his coterie of pink intellectuals spent years in building State Department policy and American public opinion to support the theory that these were the leaders of China whom we should support.

Mr. Acheson helped build up and defend the pro-Communists whom Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, then Ambassador to China, sent home from China when he was sent there to represent this Government. It was Acheson and his young men in the State Department who forbade the American military mission to South Korea to do anything more than train the South Koreans to be defense policemen, the avowed reason for that being that they might possibly attack the North Korean Communists.

THE COMMUNIST CHINA AGGRESSORS

We came to the defense of the ill-equipped South Koreans, and now we are being thrown out of Korea by Communist China.

Mr. President, in that connection, I should like to have inserted in the RECORD at this point an Associated Press dispatch headed "Evacuation race on."

There being no objection, the dispatch was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EVACUATION RACE ON—ALLIES TAKE TO SHIPS AS REDS CLOSE IN

TOKYO, December 14.—The 60,000-man UN army of Northeast Korea sped its withdrawal through choked Hungnam Harbor today under the menace of Chinese Reds massing in snow-covered hills nearby.

The Allies strove to clear the beachhead before the Communists—possibly 80,000 strong—can strike in force.

A few Reds in captured American uniforms made a light feeler attack on the perimeter yesterday but were quickly driven off.

The orderly evacuation began in secret 3 days ago. It will take several days to complete. Destination of the troops is a top secret.

Allied officers said they were confident that rear-guard troops, armed with artillery and mortars, could hold off the Chinese long enough to clear the port.

Picked troops from five divisions manned the beachhead perimeter. The line arched out in a 4-mile radius from Hungnam.

LAST TO FLY OUT

The plans included measures for taking out the rear-guard troops by air at the last moment.

The port of Hungnam was crammed. Huge booms lifted equipment and supplies aboard Victory and Liberty ships. What can't be taken out will be destroyed.

Landing craft chugged in and out day and night, carrying troops to big transports anchored at the harbor's outer rim.

Wounded men, who had first priority, already had been placed aboard hospital ships or were flown to Japan.

Allied planes circled overhead, alert for a Red attack from the ground or the air. Warships stood by.

Many Korean civilians in the beachhead were fearful of the Red horde they knew would soon swarm over them. An American officer said there were neither the ships nor the time to remove civilians.

All United States Tenth Corps units were reported safely within the beachhead.

Among them was the Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team of the United States Seventh Division. A week ago it was ordered to pull back from its positions on the Manchurian-Korean border.

Details of its 80-mile retreat were not available. It was the only American outfit to reach the Manchurian border.

Other units within the beachhead were the United States First Marine Division and Seventh Infantry Division elements who fought a bitter, 12-day trap-breaking action; the United States Third Infantry Division which held the beachhead and helped the trapped men escape; a few British Commandos; the Puerto Rican Sixty-fifth Regimental Combat Team; and elements of the South Korean Third and Capital Divisions, which had pulled back from positions only 40 miles from the Siberian border.

Some South Korean troops were taken out by ship far north of Hungnam.

Only patrol action occupied troops of the United States Eighth Army in western Korea, faced with the threat of a Communist assault that could possibly result in evacuation of that Allied force, too.

Hundreds of thousands of Reds were reported moving into positions in mountainous central Korea for a possible attack against the Eighth Army's right flank.

The Eighth was last reported maintaining a few positions north of the thirty-eighth parallel, which divides Red North from Republican South Korea, but its main location was south of that line.

The UN army of western Korea controls roads from Seoul to the ports of Inchon and Pusan. These would be needed should it have to pull out of Korea before the million-man Red army threatening it.

REFUGEE PROBLEM

Huge columns of southward migrating Korean civilians posed a problem for the Allies on both sides of the Korean Peninsula.

Troops of the Tenth Corps turned them away from the Hungnam perimeter whenever possible because there was strong possibility that Red fifth columnists would slip into the beachhead with refugees.

One column winding toward Seoul was reported to contain possibly 500,000 persons. The refugees were suffering heavy losses to the bitter cold and to hunger.

Allied fighter and bomber pilots reported killing 1,200 Reds yesterday in attacks on troop concentrations and supply lines in North Korea.

New F-84 Thunderjets killed 650 Communists at Sariwon, 39 miles south of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

Airfields around Pyongyang were blasted again by Allied bombers.

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, it is a pitiful story, and the end is not yet.

THE DELAY WAS DEADLY

This same State Department group insisted that the United Nations forces be held up at the thirty-eighth parallel for more than a week, until the United Nations could at its leisure grant General MacArthur official authority to go beyond that point—a fact that gave the North Koreans an opportunity to regroup their forces, and provide costly resistance—costly in lives and treasure.

It is this group which dictates, at this minute, that the American forces must not fight the war as it ought to be fought—with the bombing of strategic targets behind the enemy lines, to paralyze their supplies and their reserves.

MR. ACHESON—AND CAPTORS

Public opinion mounts up, demanding that there be a clean-up of the State Department—that the gang of pro-Communists there, who have been protected and coddled and defended and covered up be swept out from top to bottom. I am not one of those who believe we should keep quiet about the mistakes of Mr. Acheson. It is our duty to call the attention of the public to what is wrong in our Government. We are not going to straighten out a deplorable situation by trying to ignore it.

Dismissal of Mr. Acheson is, of course, not the complete solution. His successor would be prisoner of the same forces that have brought us to the present disaster. It must be a complete clean-out. These men, who still sit in control and push the buttons that have brought tragedy and despair and death, said these Chinese Communists, who are slaughtering our boys, were just peasants—just agrarian reformers.

Mr. Marshall and his agrarian reformers.

THE DEMOBILIZATION BLUNDER

One of the most colossal blunders to go down in history was this Government's demobilization program after World War II.

We gave away practically every inch of ground so dearly gained by our boys; we created vacuums which invited the Soviets to move in.

The administration demolished a war machine that was second to none. That equipment and the skills of the capable military personnel today would have meant the difference between preparedness and our present unpreparedness.

And then, after destroying the accumulation of weapons and equipment, we compounded our errors by an appalling misuse of defense appropriations. Fifty billion dollars have been appropriated for our military since the close of World War II—and what is there to show for it?

We here in Congress wanted the best in preparedness; we voted appropriations for the best—and what did we get?

The junior Senator from Nevada joined with other Senators in the preceding Congress in voting the President sufficient appropriations for a 70-group Air Force, while the President said that 58 would be enough. Although the appropriation for the higher number was voted, the President did not construct even the 58-group Air Force.

The President now wants 80 air groups on paper—presumably to show to the "agrarian reformers" the blueprints. But it will take years to build an Air Force up after the scandalous demobilization plan.

At the end of World War II, it is reported, we sold 8,000 war planes, including B–24's and B–29's, for $8,000,000 on the firm condition that they be destroyed and baled, so they could be sold for scrap.

It is also reported that the purchaser sold the instruments with which these planes were equipped and the gasoline in the tanks for more money than he had paid for the entire lot.

We also sold A–26's—many for as low as $2,500 apiece—these fast-flying bombing planes that had cost us more than $1,000,000 each. There was a deliberate program of propaganda which brought this about and could easily have been instigated by subversive elements in our Government.

We destroyed the best weapons we had.

CONTAINMENT OF RUSSIA

Mr. President, the containment of Russia is another fallacy. Instead of adequate defense preparation, the President went all out for the so-called containment of Russia through the financial aiding of European countries; our money has been thrown away on the socialistic program of division of wealth—our wealth with the world.

The policy of containment was always unrealistic. What it amounted to was that Soviet Russia was to stay put. The United Nations said so. Our stipulations were that Russia was not to move into Iran, Greece, Turkey, or Germany.

That, of course, was not staying put. It left an enormous area of the earth's surface into which Soviet Russia could expand. And from the American standpoint, the areas left open were greater and more important than those closed to Russia.

Mr. President, you might as well try to contain a herd of Nevada range steers in a three-sided corral, than telling Russia to keep herself contained.

BLACKMAIL TO SOCIALIST NATIONS

The containment of Russia with Scotch tape and spit, and the paying of blackmail money to the nations of Europe has not worked. The folly of past actions has been demonstrated. It is high time for an effective approach to our defense problems.

Our foreign policy has been just one thing: a gigantic give-away program—without rhyme or reason—except that producers of heavy machinery and other fabricated goods in our country might maintain a superficial market abroad, and hold up a false prosperity financed by the United States Treasury through deficit financing.

And what has it gained us?

GOLD BOUGHT BY MARSHALL PLAN MONEY

We have given foreign nations so many dollars that they were apparently unable to make efficient use of all of them so they have been engaged during the period of the Marshall plan of using much of the Marshall-plan money to buy gold from our Treasury to the extent that our gold supply has been seriously depleted.

A WAR ECONOMY

One thing it has gained for us is that we now have a war economy. We have established free trade under the misnomer of a reciprocal trade and the minute we have peace in this country a flood of foreign goods, manufactured by the cheap labor of the world is immediately imported.

Immediately our people become unemployed. Mr. President, as Mr. Sawyer has said—and I agree with him—the war in Korea has cured our unemployment situation. However, it is a tough way to cure it. In June of this year five or six million men were unemployed in our country, and ten to twelve million were partially unemployed. Why? Because of this State Department foreign policy, meaning free trade.

With foreign goods coming in so fast that they were shutting down our glass factories, coal mines, textile factories, oil wells, and other industries it was the beginning of an economic nosedive.

Consequently, the only way we can exist is on a war economy. We declared a police action in late June, and in 60 days our boys are on the way to the front. War contracts were being handed out, and everyone is happy. It is all coming out of the United States Treasury as usual, however. It is the deficit financing principle. Mr. President, some not-far-distant day it will all catch up with us.

RUSSIA'S AIMS

Of course that is exactly what Russia wants us to do. So we have another propaganda wave.

For nearly 5½ years the United States, under the direction of the State Department, has been pouring into foreign countries $36,500,000,000, plus $6,052,000,000 in military aid. It was to buy for us and the world, peace, and for us friendship—the kind of friendship that will take off its coat when we get into a fight.

The peace is fictional, as Korea has shown. As to the friendship these billions are supposed to have bought, that, too, is proving illusory—as all history proves that it would.

In Korea, the United States has 160,000 men fighting on the ground against the Communists. The Navy is employing 90,000 men in its part of the operation and the Air Force 25,000. The total for the United States is 275,000 men under General MacArthur.

All other nations of the world—recipients of the United States billions—have only sent in 20,000 men. Britain has sent 6,000 ground troops; France, 1,000.

AN AMERICAN FIGHT—WHILE THE UN LOOKS ON

So far, the fight for peace and a free world is almost solely an American one—both as to dollars and as to men—while the UN and other nations look on and pass resolutions.

We can replace the dollars but not these men—many of whom would have become natural leaders in science and industry 10 years hence.

SOVIETS DO NOT UNDERSTAND THE SUBTLE UN ACTION

I read from an article published in the New York Mirror on December 14, 1950. The article is entitled "Soviet Rejects Cease-Fire Bid." The United Nations finally got around, on December 14, to passing, by a 51 to 5 vote, a resolution asking the Soviets and the Communists to cease fire, but the Soviets rejected that vote. The article, by Mr. Seymour Stern, reads as follows:

SOVIET REJECTS CEASE-FIRE BID

(By Seymour Stern)

The 13-nation Arab-Asian cease-fire plan for Korea won the overwhelming support last night of the important United Nations Political Committee at Lake Success despite its rejection by the Soviet bloc. Without that support, however, the plan appeared doomed for cold storage.

The boys are still evacuating. They had been there 3 weeks waiting for this important vote, but the plan will be in cold storage without the five votes which the Soviets were able to get.

Continuing with the article:

Though Russia's Jacob Malik turned down the plan which would set up a three-man commission to negotiate a basis for peace, he announced just before the vote that the Chinese Communist "volunteers" would be withdrawn from Korea if the United Nations forces went home.

Malik's statement came as a surprise since his superior, Andrei Vishinsky, on Saturday had not included Communist China troops in his demand for withdrawal of foreign troops as a condition for peace talks.

WITHHOLD COMMENT

The full import of what appeared to be a Soviet concession was not made clear. Delegates from the western powers withheld comment, but their ringing 51–5 vote was formidable enough to show their strong desire to effect a settlement.

In fact, its passage seemed assured in the General Assembly today. However, if the position of the Red Chinese delegates is similar to that of the Soviets—which it almost certainly is—then the efforts of the three-man commission appointed by Assembly President Entezam would be fruitless.

Malik called the plan an attempt to give General MacArthur a breathing spell so he could reform his ranks and resume the offensive.

This brought home with heavy impact the belief among many delegates that Premier Stalin and not Mao Tse-tung has the final say-so in Korea.

ACCUSES UNITED STATES

Holding to his pattern of accusing America of aggression, Malik insisted on peace on his terms—

What are his terms?—

"The first condition for the restoration of peace is to put an end to American aggression against Korea and China, and, in fact, to put an end to the whole aggressive American policy in the Far East."

This was taken to mean that Malik was making a pitch for a package deal which would include surrender of Korea, Nationalist-held Formosa, and probably Indochina.

COMMUNIST CHINA DEMANDS

One of the things which has not come to light, and which was discussed in the United Nations, was the matter of the demand of Russia and Communist China that the United States pay reparations for all the men killed and the property destroyed in Korea, China, and elsewhere.

They did say, I am informed, that if the rest of the program were agreed to they might temporarily, at least, withdraw this demand.

The pitiful thing is that we are standing idly by, waiting for the UN to make up its mind. First there was a so-called police action, and then an attack by 1,000,000 men. We are standing by to see what the United Nations will allow the boys to do, with the Soviets having the veto power and participating in directing the fight from our side—and totally directing it from the Communist side. They are the people we are really fighting.

Mr. President, it is a great tragedy, but certainly under these auspices this is the most awful tragic thing that has ever happened to the United States in all history.

FIGHT ALMOST SOLELY OUR OWN

So far as the fight for peace and a free world is concerned, it is almost solely our own.

While the leathernecks and other ground troops are out there in the open, bitterly cold, mountainous country, suffering up to admitted 30 percent losses in reaching the get-away ships, the rocking-chair debaters in New York, after 3 weeks, passed a resolution telling the "agrarian Communists" to stop fighting. I suppose they telegraphed to the head of the Communist army to cease and desist. We are not informed as to that, but I suppose the farce would not be complete without that last touch. They might just as well have passed a resolution stopping the Dempsey-Firpo fight in the middle of the first round. That is how effective it would be.

Korea has shown that the Communists mean business. But beyond the United States, does the rest of the so-called freedom-loving world mean business—at least enough to fight? The United States cannot take on single-handedly the whole Communist world.

JUST WHO ARE OUR FRIENDS?

Will Britain help us? Whose side is Britain on, actually?

When Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman reported a meeting of minds on cooperation, what did they mean? Are we going to maintain the present Government of Brtain while it gives comfort and support to our enemy? Are we to wink an eye at England's selling war materials to Russia and her satellites while our boys are being killed with some of those war materials? Is the British stand on recognition of the Communist regime in China consistent with the Prime Minister's statement that the British flag will be found flying next to ours? How do some other nations feel about the conflict between east and west? Here is a dispatch from Cairo that should serve us as a warning.

I ask unanimous consent that part of this dispatch be printed as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CAIRO CHEERS BID TO PLAY OFF EAST VERSUS WEST

CAIRO, EGYPT, December 12.—Parliament tonight applauded a deputy's proposal that Egypt make agreements with Communist-bloc nations and use these agreements to pry concessions from the western powers.

Soliman Abdel Fattah, a member of the ruling Wafdist Party, advanced the proposal. He spoke in debate on King Farouk's recent throne speech which asked that Britain withdraw her troops from the Suez Canal zone and get out of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Applause also had greeted an assertion by Wafdist Deputy Ibrahim Talaat Monday night that Egypt should recognize Communist China and establish an accord with "the Soviet Union and all eastern-bloc nations."

Government ministers joined in a general demonstration after Talaat spoke and his statements were displayed prominently today in Cairo newspapers.

Abdel Fattah also recommended diplomatic recognition of Red China. He said the Egyptian Government should "tear down the iron curtain which Britain has erected around Egypt."

"It should reach political, economic, and military agreements with the eastern bloc," he said. "These agreements with the other camp may stimulate the western bloc to give Egypt its demands (for withdrawal of the British).

"Britain and America are frightened whenever the eastern bloc is mentioned. Why shouldn't Egypt use agreements with the eastern bloc as bargaining points?"

Mr. MALONE. Now, let us face our present problem in Asia. There are several alternatives.

PROVEN FRIENDS

Many thoughtful Americans feel that we should take advantage of the offer of the troops of Nationalist China.

There are 500,000 anti-Communist Chinese troops in Formosa, which is a greater number than the combined total of the UN forces in Korea, the French forces in Indochina and the British forces in Hong Kong and Malaya. There are 1,600,000 anti-Communist guerrillas on the mainland of China.

It is believed that, if the remainder of the funds which Congress appropriated for military equipment for use "in the general area of China at the discretion of the President" are permitted to be used for this purpose in Formosa, and the Nationalists are permitted to aid the guerillas and attack the Communists, they can cut communications and involve the Reds to the extent of preventing them from sending large reinforcements to Korea or Indochina, and may ultimately drive the Reds out of China.

MAC ARTHUR HAMPERED FROM THE START

Our campaign in Korea has been hampered from the beginning. MacArthur has never been given a free hand by the United Nations. It could be that that is the way that some of our State Department personnel want it. General MacArthur should be freed from UN control or the troops removed from the area. The United Nations' method is murder—it is not war.

Our boys have been fighting in Korea under orders from the United Nations. Other nations have been deciding whether American boys should live or die. The business of running a military action from the debating tables of the United Nations organization already has reaped its whirlwind, and it is a whirlwind of death, tragedy, and despair.

WHAT IS OUR OBJECTIVE?

After all, where is our defense line? Apparently, the administration has not thought anything through. If the battle lines could be pushed back to the border of Manchuria again, what would this gain for us? What will those additional miles have earned for us? Are we then to go into Manchuria? And do we stay there forever if we go? Or do we retreat to the thirty-eighth parallel? If so, do we stay there forever? What is there that we do not know about our foreign policy that prevents an appraisal of withdrawing from Korea and supporting the armies of Chiang Kai-shek, or using Chiang Kai-shek's ground troops and utilizing our air power?

Korea is not the most important thing in the world to us. Korea is a peninsula off the coast of Asia which the Joint Chiefs of Staff long ago said was militarily untenable.

If we acknowledge Russia as the real, behind-the-scenes threat to our security, what are we gaining by charging at the cape instead of at the bullfighter who flaunts it?

ULTIMATE SAFETY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Perhaps a good appraisal of our position in Asia will force the definition of another problem: A clear statement of our line of defense. At the present time the only estimate of our defense lines that we can get is from analysis of the piecemeal requests for appropriations for one purpose or another in foreign lands, most of which seems to be prompted by the interest of some other nation or group. We must establish a line of defense before we can formulate a proper military program. And that line of defense must have one aim—the ultimate safety of our own country.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE PRINCIPLE

If we can defend the Western Hemisphere, let us say so and build the kind of military machine that can do the job. If we know what we have to do we can plan the kind of Air Force and Navy that will patrol whatever defense line we feel is required for our ultimate safety.

We could then plan the kind of land forces, air power, and submarine fleet that are of the right size and type to fight in places and under conditions predetermined by that policy. We could say to the rest of the world that here, at this point, is where trouble starts for anyone who tries to destroy us. It would be a continuation of the Monroe Doctrine, which has worked so well in the Western Hemisphere for 127 years.

If we are going to give arms aid to European countries, can we not demand that they relieve our troops of the burden of patrol duties on the borders of the very countries supposed to be our allies? They can furnish the foot soldiers necessary in their own areas. If it is impossible to predetermine our last political retreat in Europe, is it not equally impossible to try to anticipate that area in our military responsibilities?

THE ATOM BOMB

In terms of total war, at what point do we use the atom bomb? And do our enemies know what that point is? The American people do not. The Congress does not. How, then, can we plan world actions when we do not make clear even to ourselves where we stand in the world?

WE CANNOT DEFEND THE WHOLE WORLD

We cannot defend the whole world. We cannot even be sure that the world would welcome that defense. Russia may be the worst offender in seeking to extend its system of government, but she is not the only one.

Mr. President, at a time when England had become one of the greatest powers in the world, and when the subject under debate in the House of Commons was whether England was strong enough in herself to undertake the general redress of wrongs throughout the world, Gladstone wrote a letter to the Queen, in which he said:

> Is England so uplifted in strength above every other nation that she can with prudence advertise herself as ready to undertake the general redress of wrongs? Would not the consequence of such professions and promises be either the premature exhaustion of her means or a collapse in the day of performance? Is any power at this time of today warranted in assuming to itself this comprehensive obligation?

That is what Gladstone said on one of the very vital issues of the day during that period of history. And he said:

> England should keep entire in her own hands the means of estimating her own obligations upon the various states of facts as they arise. * * * That it is dangerous for her to assume alone an advanced, and therefore an isolated, position in regard to European controversies, that come what may it is better for her to promise too little than too much; that she should not encourage the weak, by giving expectations of aid, to resist the strong, but should rather seek to deter the strong, by firm but moderate language, from oppression of the weak; that she should seek to develop and mature the action of a common or public or European opinion, as the best standing bulwark against worry, but should beware of seeming to lay down the law of that opinion by her own authority, and thus running the risk of setting against her, and against right and justice that general sentiment which ought to be and generally would be amassed in their favor.

Whether in the jargon of our day this would be called isolationism or appeasement, I do not know. But a great empire was governed and a long peace was achieved when it was deemed honorable to be that prudent and that wise.

I have been called an isolationist by total, one-world internationalists. I want to make my position crystal clear. I am for America as Churchill is for England; then I am a constructive internationalist.

I have been deeply concerned with the reckless dissipation of our taxpayers' money on all kinds of wild schemes in foreign lands.

I am for cooperation with foreign governments, but cooperation must be a two-way street, and that is what I shall continue to insist upon to the best of my ability upon the Senate floor.

I believe in fairness and honor and integrity between nations as between individuals. If that be isolationism, then make the most of it.

We are using the most powerful industrial machine in the world to build up the industrial might of nations that will not stand firm against our potential enemy.

RUSSIA SWEEP OVER EUROPE

Mr. President, no one doubts the ability of Russia to sweep over Europe in record time. One of the great and outstanding generals of France said, when the arming of the Atlantic Pact nations was under discussion in the Senate, that such arming would require at least $100,000,000,000 and 10 years time to make it effective.

Mr. President, Russia knows she can buy the products of the industrial plants we are building in Europe. She is doing so at this time to arm herself and her satellites, Communist China, and the Eastern European nations. She knows there is no reason for her to overrun Western Europe so long as she can purchase her needed supplies under the known 96 trade treaties—there are at least that many, and probably there are many more now in existence. So long as she can do so, why should she move on Western Europe? But if she wanted to move she knows she could do so, because reports are coming in to us now that France will not fight in such event, that England, unless she is attacked, will not fight, and that no other nation beside Germany can fight, and we have disarmed Germany.

INDUSTRIALISTS ARE FRIGHTENED

What does that mean, Mr. President? It means that the industrialists in that area are frightened, are jittery, are afraid that their industries will be destroyed.

Therefore there will be no opposition when the time comes when Russia moves, and so Russia would take over peaceably and operate the industrial machine which the American taxpayers will have furnished the money to build. Russia's production then, added to European production, will be as great or greater than ours.

WHY SEND AMERICAN BOYS FOR A JOB THEY WILL NOT DO FOR THEMSELES?

Then why, Mr. President, is the suggestion continually made that American boys be sent to Europe to defend nations whose people will not enlist in their own armies for the purpose of defending themselves?

Let us get on some sound basis. Let the nations of Europe enlist the foot soldiers to protect their own nations. Then we can direct our air power and Navy to destroy any nation's war-making potential which may seek to extend its system of government.

It is generally known, Mr. President, that there are 20,000,000 more people in England than can ever again make a living for themselves, unless in the very unlikely event that England can again establish her empire throughout the world and force raw materials to be brought thousands of miles to her—and force those who send in the raw materials to buy her manufactured and processed goods at high prices, and prevent purchases being made from other industrial nations by the peoples they can control.

COLONIALISM IS DEAD

Mr. President, colonialism is as dead as Julius Caesar. It can never be reestablished, even with the use of our wealth. That was proved in Indonesia where the Dutch finally realized that they were at the end of their rope even though we sent huge sums of money which were expended on their armies and their harbor patrols in an attempt to force the Indonesians to sell their products through the Dutch.

Mr. President, I speak with some experience in connection with that matter, for I was there when the two armies were facing each other in the jungle, and I flew across those armies to confer with the cabinet of Dr. Hatta and Dr. Soekarno. The cause of that war was the money exchange methods, as a result of which only approximately 20 percent of the money received for the materials produced there was received by those who produced them. The remainder was kept by the Dutch government. Those conditions cannot be reestablished.

TOO BUSY TO PROTECT OUR OWN RIGHTS

So, Mr. President, we are so busy protecting the rights of other peoples that we neglect to protect our own. We do not even give our own people the right to know where they are going and at what speed they are going there.

SOCIALISTIC SCHEMES UNDER COVER OF WAR

Under cover of war this administration is continuing to fasten its socialistic schemes upon the public, which is watching its sons being slaughtered in an undeclared war, on soil which our generals say could not be defended in the event of a general emergency.

UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE TO EXIST ON PEACETIME ECONOMY

At Torquay, England, today, Mr. President, more than 100 bilateral agreements are being made with foreign nations, with several hundred of our State Department personnel dealing with the representatives of from 30 to 40 foreign nations, in an attempt to complete the job of establishing free trade and making it utterly impossible for the United States to exist on a peacetime economy basis and have any employment at all.

RUSSIA REALLY FAVORS MARSHALL PLAN

Mr. President, there has long been a strong suspicion on the part of many informed persons that Russia in reality favored the Marshall plan in order that additional industrial equipment would be installed throughout Europe for the manufacture of needed war material and supplies—knowing full well that she would benefit by this construction, she would, by infiltration and by purchase, be able to obtain the manufactured supplies and war material—as the Russians have been able to do through the known 96 trade treaties which the 17 Marshall-plan countries have with Russia and their satellite countries of Eastern Europe. In the last analysis Russia could always occupy Europe within a few weeks and probably have the friendly assistance of much of the population of these nations, including the industrialists, who are extremely nervous and jittery that their plants may be destroyed.

It is maintained the psychological, the real effect of the Russian opposition, was to make more certain the passage and continuation of the Marshall plan and ECA.

PIECEMEAL POLICIES

Mr. President, this is a time of tensions that cannot be relieved by piecemeal policies. We must chart a course that is consistent with our survival as a Nation. We can provide answers that will chart that course efficiently and honestly when we know the components of the problem.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH FIXES FOREIGN POLICY

The Constitution of the United States places in the hands of the President, in the executive branch of the Government of the United States, the power to fix the foreign policy. That policy cannot be fixed on the floor of the Senate, except by means of a refusal by the Senate to accept a treaty or declaration of war which may be sent to it.

CONGRESS NOT CONSULTED

However, no such treaty or declaration has been sent here for some time, or apparently is very likely to be sent here again. A declaration of war by us will follow a police action which will lead into such a mess.

At least, those in the executive branch of the Government pretend they had no knowledge that the so-called police action in Korea would result in the present situation; they say they did not believe it would result in the tragedy which is now taking place there.

Mr. President, the only surprising thing in connection with our finding that we are in an undeclared war with an aggressor Communist army of a million men is that anyone should be surprised, after knowing the policies which have been followed for the 5 or 6 years following the close of World War II.

Mr. President, the American people demand that the ship of state stop drifting—that the administration decide where we are going, and why, in accordance with its responsibilities under the Constitution of this Nation.

REALITIES OF THE SITUATION CONFRONTING THE UNITED STATES

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, the grave concern and deep gloom in which the people of America find themselves are not due, in my opinion, to the military reverses in Korea. Our people can absorb temporary defeat and come back stronger than ever. Our concern and gloom are caused by the painful and shocking fact that, so far as preparations at home are concerned, we have largely lost the precious time since the Korean invasion in June, and do not yet have a plan of action, much less any tangible accomplishments on the home front.

I am not complaining, nor am I seeking someone to blame. Present and future action is the only thing that will bring results. We cannot longer ignore hard, cold, stubborn facts. Our United Nations allies are not effectively backing us up in Asia on the fighting front or on the diplomatic front. I have been a strong supporter of the United Nations, and I said on the Senate floor soon after the Korean invasion, when our armies were the only ones in the field, that the fighting in Korea was the test as to whether the member nations were standing together on a paper plan or were going to support each other with actual fighting strength on the battle line. We can look at the casualty lists after 6 months of fighting, we can look at the list of matériel furnished, and see that we are carrying the great brunt of the load in blood, in guns, and in money. This fact, in my opinion, was a large contributing factor in Red China's decision to advance into Korea in such crushing numbers.

From what facts I have before me, I think we Americans might just as well realize now that we are without effective allies in Europe or in Asia to help us materially in maintaining our position in Asia. While we argue as to whether our future depends on happenings in Asia or on happenings in Europe, we are now committed in both those areas, and are ineffective in both of them, due in large part to a lack of effective aid from anyone either in Asia or in Europe. We miss the realities of life unless we recognize this fact and reappraise our position. As one group emphasizes the importance of Asia and another group the importance of Europe, I do not find here anyone with an over-all view of the entire picture who is seriously attempting to measure what commitments we shall make throughout the world in proportion to our ability to perform. It is well enough to say that we will resist aggression throughout the world; but in view of the feeble support we get from other nations, I think it is high time that we take another careful look at our own resources, our manpower, and our other capacities, and then make our commitments accordingly. There is no surer way to our eventual destruction than a careless use of what power we do have.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. YOUNG in the chair). Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. STENNIS. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator has referred to commitments on the part of the United States to protect other nations. Does not the Senator understand that was a mutual commitment? In the event that the United States happens to be the one needing support, if support is not forthcoming, does the Senator believe that then the United States will still be fully committed to rush to the aid of any other nation which fails to keep its own commitments in support of our country?

Mr. STENNIS. No, I certainly do not, and I am very glad the Senator brought that point out so clearly.

Mr. AIKEN. It seems to me that when an agreement is broken, the party injured thereby should not be morally bound to continue to carry out the agreement to the letter, regardless of what might happen to him in the process.

Mr. STENNIS. I think the Senator is entirely correct. It is a painful fact that I am reluctantly driven to the conclusion that the commitments are not being kept. I have been a very enthusiastic supporter of the commitments, and, if they are being carried out, I want us to keep on in the way of arms, but I realize we must take another look at the matter.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator from Mississippi, I think, understands that the commitments are not only not being kept, but that the Chinese Communists at present actually seem to be obtaining the means of enabling them to continue fighting against the United States and killing American soldiers from those countries which ought to be assisting us in restoring order in that area of the world.

Mr. STENNIS. Yes, I think that very clearly points up the facts.

Mr. AIKEN. I may say, in the vernacular, it is adding insult to injury, or injury to insult, whichever way one may prefer to express it.

Mr. STENNIS. The Senator from Vermont is entirely correct. I thank him very much for his contribution.

In view of the conditions we now face, I think the only thing left for us to do is to plan to build up a balance of power in the Pacific. It is clear that our resources and our manpower will not permit us to defend and maintain all of Asia. Before it is too late Japan must be rearmed—if she will rearm—together with any other group, including the Chinese Nationalists, who appear to have a will and a capacity to fight the Asiatic communistic trend. Failing in this, it seems to me that we should draw a defense line in the Pacific that will serve our own defense, a line which we have the means to defend, and stake our future and our chances of survival so far as the Pacific is concerned on defending that line.

Based on what further facts I have within my knowledge, it seems clear to me that militarily we do not have a single effective ally on the continent of Europe and that there cannot be effective opposition to Russia in Western Europe unless Western Germany is rearmed. From present indications Western Germany does not seem to be interested in rearming as our ally. Precious time has been lost in failing to reach an agreed military plan for Western Europe that would have long since placed a commander in chief in the field with authority to act. In view of these facts, and in order that we may know what our own situation is, I think we should offer a definite miiltary plan to the Atlantic Pact countries, after full consultation with them, of course, and consideration of their abilities, and then state that we submit the plan on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

Mr. President, the junior Senator from Mississippi has been in the Senate for only three short years, but that has been long enough for him to hear most of the debates concerning the European situation, in the course of which I have been led to believe that we have active allies under all circumstances and conditions. I think we are faced today with the painful fact, however, that we do not have one single effective ally on the continent of Europe possessing any material power at all, or having any interest or any inclination to stand with us on the line as I understand it was marked out in the Atlantic Pact.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STENNIS. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. KEM. The Senator says we have no effective ally on the continent of Europe. Would the Senator include all of Europe?

Mr. STENNIS. I have in my mind a reservation as to England, I may say to the Senator from Missouri. I have not reached the definite conclusion that she would not be our ally. I should want to exclude her from the general over-all statement that I made.

Mr. KEM. What interpretation does the Senator from Mississippi place on the agreement which is now being negotiated with England to discontinue temporarily at least the flow of American funds to England under the Marshall plan?

Mr. STENNIS. I am not familiar with the specific terms of the agreement. I am familiar with the news items regarding a temporary suspension of such aid, which I think is entirely proper. I had assumed it would be a permanent withdrawal of aid, in the absence of additional material facts being developed.

Mr. KEM. Does the Senator not feel that that decision was reached a little too late?

Mr. STENNIS. Personally, I think so; yes. I was shocked by facts which were brought out a short time ago regarding the bank balances which were being built up in England as a direct result of Marshall-aid funds.

Mr. KEM. What interpretation does the Senator place upon the fact that the British apparently acquiesced so readily in the discontinuance of the flow of this aid?

Mr. STENNIS. Frankly, I may say to the Senator from Missouri, I have not gone into that in the last 2 or 3 days. I know as a matter of newspaper reports, but really the junior Senator from Mississippi has not inquired into the real situation as to what the conditions were. Frankly, I was surprised, I remember, last evening, to hear a radio announcement that there was not more of a reaction in Great Britain than there was; but I have not looked into that.

Mr. KEM. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. STENNIS. Continuing, Mr. President, the plan I have mentioned will be designed to effectuate our efforts to restore a balance of power in Europe, with our taking a part therein; but if no effective plan can be agreed upon and a start made toward carrying it out, we should know it within a matter of days from now.

In other words, I think the time for decision is here, and if there is not going to be an actually effective plan put into operation now, I think we ought to know it, for we shall have to make altogether different arrangements. There is nothing harsh about this position. It is necessary to meet the realities of the occasion.

Now, Mr. President, a word about the domestic front. I am amazed, as are the other people of the country, at the way we have shamefully dragged our feet on the question of military and economic preparation. Whether the delays were due to bad judgment, lack of a plan, or other consideration, the bald fact is that we are not economically prepared for the immediate crisis on our hands. The people are certainly not to blame for this condition, and I have recently had many contacts with the people out in my State. During the month of October while in my home State, I traveled more than 4,100 miles, spoke in 34 counties to more than 12,000 people, and answered over 500 questions from the audiences. Although the people have not been told as much of the facts as they think they should have been told, they are well informed generally and are entirely willing to endure the hardships that are necessary for our protection. What they want is a plan of action behind which they can unite. They already have the willingness. That plan has not been forthcoming from the executive branch of the Government although we adopted a controls bill and authorized mobilization months ago. The people sense the danger to the Nation and are amazed that nothing more is being done, as we were amazed on our return here on November 27 to find such a feeble start having been made in our war plans.

I am told that General Bradley described our defeat in Korea as the worst military defeat suffered by our Armed Forces. Think of that. And we are still talking about voluntary controls, something that is an idle dream and contrary to the acquisitive system of free enterprise.

Mr. President, the people who are going to carry the major part of the burden of this military program, and the war itself, when it comes on a large scale, are having to stand by and see their taxes and the cost of living rise, with runaway inflation which is also well on its way. I call for the immediate imposition of effective control of prices and wages, with full-scale priorities and allocation of all war materials. I am no newcomer to this position because I advocated on the floor of the Senate just such a plan within just a few days after the invasion of Korea. The people have had to stand by week after week and month after month and see prices rise and rise and rise, until now they are out of reason and out of bounds. These are the same people, as I have said, who will be called on to make most of the sacrifices in any war that is to be fought.

Mr. President, after preparing this speech I received a letter, which I should like to read, from a very intelligent, patriotic, and down-to-earth-thinking man in Mississippi, who is occupying a responsible position. The letter is dated December 9. I think it represents facts and demonstrates the viewpoint on the part of a substantial number of sound-thinking persons of our great Nation. The letter reads as follows:

EAST CENTRAL JUNIOR COLLEGE,
Decatur, Miss., December 9, 1950.

Senator JOHN STENNIS,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR STENNIS: I am very much concerned about this matter of what seems to me to be unwarranted increases in prices.

I will give you one example. A few days ago we wanted to buy some fire hose and were quoted 96 cents a foot. The town of Decatur, earlier this week, had to pay $1.36 a foot and today we were quoted $1.51. All this has been in the course of 2 or 3 weeks. There are two ways we can lose the war in which we are engaged: to the enemy without and to the profiteers within. If the Government does not have power to give relief to a situation like this, it does not have much power. I have heard some mighty fine people say recently that they would about as soon be destroyed by Russia as to unconscionable profiteers who will, figuratively, stand us against the wall and destroy us. That is a strong sentiment but it represents some elements of truth. Unreasonable excess profits should be confiscated and we must have a relief on this matter of prices. The middle class is about destroyed as is. In 1942 a Chinese consul stationed at New Orleans spoke to a group here in Decatur and said that inflation in his own country would destroy it if something was not done about it and it has come about just as he said. Big business and big labor are paving the way for the same thing in this country. The enemies of this country can win without ever firing a shot.

You know it is very seldom that I ever write a Senator or Congressman and I do not think I have ever written when I have felt more strongly in the matter than I do in this. The solution of this problem is in the hands of our representatives in Washington. I hope you can find the way to do something in this matter.

With highest personal regards, I am,
Yours truly,

L. O. TODD,
President.

Mr. President, that letter speaks for itself. I should like, as an aside, to emphasize the point which the writer makes in his letter, namely, that the people are looking to the Members of Congress to get action. There is where the solution will rest.

Of course, these controls will involve temporary hardships, but it is the grim hand of necessity at work; the penalty for our failure to prepare could be the loss of our freedom. Let me clearly point out, Mr. President, that direct controls alone are not enough. Within themselves, no such controls will acomplish the intended purposes. We must continue to have monetary controls and fiscal controls, including taxes, that we shall not like to impose. Direct controls will create a logjam of pent-up buying power that will break out of bounds unless effective monetary and fiscal controls are continued within reasonable limits.

One gets the impression that those chosen to places of responsible leadership do not want to tackle the difficult task of mobilizing our manpower and our economic production and resources. Such a step of course carries tremendous burdens, but again it is the grim law of necessity dictating the terms. The people feel the need. On my responsibility as an elective official, I call for all-out mobilization of our manpower and industrial and economic production, just as fast as our military machine can absorb the output. We shall not get the job done with more timid methods.

Mr. President, the 8-hour day, the 40-hour week, the one shift per 24 hours, must go. We can never build a war machine on any such basis, and it is idle folly to think of a war program in terms of a 40-hour week.

While the people cry for action and yearn for leadership from Washington, we are spending at least a part of our energy here discussing the idea of making plans to spend almost $200,000,000 for a place of refuge for ourselves and other Government workers here in case of an attack by an atomic bomb. I hope the proposal will be dropped forthwith. I think the Members of the Congress can serve the people better by making up their minds that in case of an atomic-bomb attack on the District of Columbia, perhaps many of us will not survive anyway. In my opinion, we could not do a more shameful thing than to set this example before the American people, which dress it up as you may, is nevertheless largely a matter of those in the Government running for cover when the rest of the people will be told to stick by their posts. If additional buildings are needed, let them be added in the regular course, but not under the guise of a dispersal plan to avoid the effects of an atomic bomb, especially if the removal is for only 20 short miles. If the military needs an additional communications center, let it be built as such.

I do not speak here today just to criticize the President of the United States, or General Marshall, or any group. I have patiently waited for an effective, forward-looking plan of action but it has not been forthcoming. The President must surround himself by many men with ability who can inspire the American people with confidence in a definite plan of further action.

I fail to see where the calling of a national emergency would change the picture. An emergency already exists and this is well known by the American people. What we need is a plan of action and action on the plan. General Marshall has said recently that we do not need mobilization now. Someone is badly mistaken as to our needs, just as we were badly mistaken as to the situation in Korea where an evacuation race is under way. It seems to me that the time for further postponement and an attitude of waiting for developments has long since passed. We are still trying to operate on what I shall call the "minimum plan." Conditions call for a "maximum plan," which I trust will be forthcoming from the executive and from the military and be based on the elemental and fundamental considerations briefly outlined in these remarks. I have an abiding faith that the people will respond in a most magnificent way.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bills of the Senate:

S. 297. An act for the relief of Ruggiero DiCostanzo;

S. 995. An act for the relief of Irene George Livanos;

S. 1344. An act for the relief of Gerda Moller Uldall and her son, Mikkel Moller;

S. 1528. An act for the relief of Elmer Beller;

S. 1816. An act for the reimbursement of the S. A. Healy Co.;

S. 2179. An act for the relief of Stephen A. Patkay and his wife, Madeleine;

S. 2420. An act for the relief of Shaoul Minashi Shami, Emily Shami, Joseph Clement Shami, and Charles Henry Shami;

S. 2513. An act to give a short title to the act of July 1, 1898, commonly known as the Bankruptcy Act;

S. 2702. An act for the relief of Louis E. Gabel;

S. 2799. An act for the relief of Johan Wilhelm Adriaans;

S. 2803. An act for the relief of Angela Maria Pisano;

S. 2961. An act for the relief of Magdalena L. Jardeleza, Jr.;

S. 2968. An act for the relief of Chen Hua Huang;

S. 3066. An act for the relief of Dionisio Aguirre Irastorza;

S. 3067. An act for the relief of Andres Aguirre Irastorza;

S. 3091. An act for the relief of Master Stanley (Zachne) Hiller;

S. 3250. An act for the relief of Marne Post No. 28, American Legion, New Martinsville, W. Va.;

S. 3329. An act for the relief of Kiyomi Kitamura;

S. 3406. An act for the relief of Lee Yee Yen;

S. 3430. An act for the relief of Martina Arnaiz Zarandona (Sister Blanca Eugenia);

S. 3444. An act for the relief of Victor Francis Oberschall;

S. 3484. An act for the relief of Barbara Sugihara;

S. 3519. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to James Chester Stevens;

S. 3965. An act to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Lamm Lumber Co.;

S. 4072. An act for the relief of Ella Stufka and her son;

S. 4074. An act for the relief of Pamela Bentley; and

S. 4111. An act for the relief of Southern Fireproofing Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 2734. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended; and

H. R. 8136. An act for the relief of Joseph Umberto Montalban-Troy.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9840) to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 7445. An act authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.;

H. R. 8546. An act to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946;

H. R. 9484. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights;

H. R. 9524. An act to supplement the District of Columbia Teachers' Leave Act of 1949; and

H. R. 9840. An act to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons.

CONFERENCES BETWEEN THE PRESIDENT AND PRIME MINISTER ATTLEE

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, I move that Senate Resolution 371, calling for a report on the discussions between the President of the United States and Prime Minister Attlee, and submitted on behalf of myself and 23 other Senators, be considered the unfinished business before the Senate.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be read, so that we may know what the measure is, now that a motion has been made to make it the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 371), submitted by Mr. KEM (for himself, Mr. WHERRY, Mr. KNOWLAND, Mr. BRICKER, Mr. CAIN, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. SCHOEPPEL, Mr. AIKEN, Mr. THYE, Mr. HENDRICKSON, Mr. MUNDT, Mr. DONNELL, Mr. BREWSTER, Mr. NIXON, Mr. BUTLER, Mr. MALONE, Mr. DWORSHAK, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. CAPEHART, Mr. WATKINS, Mr. JENNER, Mr. CORDON, Mr. MCCARTHY, and Mr. ECTON) as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that, after the discussions now being carried on between the President and Prime Minister Attlee have been concluded, the President should forthwith make a full and complete report concerning the same to the Senate; and that the President should not enter into any understandings or agreements with the Prime Minister which might have the effect of committing the United States to any course of action, except by treaty entered into with the advice and consent of the Senate in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KEM. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, as I understand, the parliamentary situation is that the distinguished Senator from Missouri has made a motion to consider the resolution. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, on December 6 I introduced, on behalf of myself and 23 other Senators, Senate Resolution 371. This is a resolution designed to accomplish two things:

First. To obtain a full report from the President on the results of the recent conference between him and the British Prime Minister.

Second. To prevent the President from making agreements with the Prime Minister affecting in any important way the course of action of this country, except by treaty entered into with the advice and consent of the Senate, as provided by the Constitution.

1. WE DO NOT KNOW WHETHER THE SO-CALLED COMMUNIQUÉ IS THE WHOLE STORY

Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee concluded their series of conferences at the White House last Friday. That afternoon a so-called communiqué was issued which, it has been assumed, covered the results of the conference. But in justice to Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee it should be said that it is nowhere stated in the communiqué that it is a full and complete report or that no further business was done at the conference.

As the Washington Evening Star commented:

It is something of a misnomer to speak of the official statement issued on the Truman-Attlee conversations as a communiqué, for it communicates very little in the way of information.

Indeed, if the vague and indefinite statements contained in the communiqué are all that was accomplished at this momentous conference then it is fair to say "the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse." But we should not conclude too easily that no other business was transacted. It is said that a confidential briefing session was held at the British Embassy last Thursday, open only to British newspapermen. From the dispatches subsequently sent out by the newspapermen present it seems fair to assume that those present were given to understand:

First. Mr. Attlee got everything he came over here to get.

Second. Mr. Attlee made no concessions.

Third. Mr. Attlee secured from Mr. Truman a number of side agreements.

The London newspapers, on December 9, carried dispatches from their Washington correspondents saying that Prime Minister Clement Attlee's trip to Washington was a complete success. The nonpolitical London Times headlined its account "Successful issue at Washington." The Socialist Party paper, the Herald, began an editorial with The Washington Talks Have Achieved Their Object. The Tory Daily Express dispatch summed up: "Mr. Attlee's visit is therefore regarded as a 100-percent success."

An American cannot help but wonder what is the basis for this exultation.

2. THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAVE REASON TO FEAR AND TO RESIST SECRET DIPLOMACY

Mr. President, it is said that a burnt child fears the fire. If so, the American people have every reason to fear, and to resist, secret diplomacy.

On March 1, 1945, the then President of the United States had just returned from the momentous Yalta Conference. On that day he appeared before a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives. He stated, among other things:

Quite naturally, this conference concerned itself only with the European war and with the political problems of Europe—and not with the Pacific war.

We know differently now. The China white paper released by the State Department last year states:

On behalf of the United States, Great Britain, and the U. S. S. R. on February 11, 1945, Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin signed at Yalta an agreement containing the political conditions upon which the Soviet Union would enter the war against Japan.

The white paper proceeds to list in detail the concessions made to Stalin which in their effect sold China down the "Red" river.

James F. Byrnes, who attended the Yalta Conference as an adviser, had this to say about the Yalta deal in his book Speaking Frankly:

Another agreement was made at Yalta which was to confront me later. This was the top secret—

The top secret, Mr. President—protocol in which it was agreed that in return for Soviet participation in the war against Japan, the Kurile Islands would be "handed over" to the Soviet Union. It also provided that the former rights of Russia violated by the treacherous attack of Japan in 1904 shall be restored, and listed these as the return of the southern half of Sakhalin Island, internationalization of the port of Dairen, the lease of Port Arthur as a Russian naval base, and joint Russo-Chinese operation of the Chinese Eastern & Southern Manchurian Railroads. The United States was to use its influence to have China agree to that part affecting China's territory.

Mr. Byrnes, although serving as a confidential adviser to the President at Yalta, did not know of this agreement. It was kept from him. He said that the President, upon returning to the United States, kept the Yalta protocol locked in a safe at the White House.

It was not until some time after I became Secretary of State—that a news story from Moscow caused me to inquire and learn of the full agreement. I presented the matter to President Truman, and he requested Admiral Leahy to transfer to the State Department those documents at the White House containing agreements with foreign governments. I wanted to know how many I O U's were outstanding.

Mr. Byrnes wrote—

At Potsdam, in late July and early August 1945, the notorious war reparations agreement was made with Russia, an agreement bearing the following signatures: J. V. Stalin, Harry S. Truman, C. R. Attlee. Under this deal Stalin was permitted to strip Eastern Germany. Scores of war plants in the allied zones of Germany were dismantled and shipped to the Soviet Union. Included among those shipped from the United States zone of occupation alone were plants for the manufacture of ball bearings, aircraft engines, high explosives, sea mines, and shell casings. These very plants must now be turning out products of war for use by the Reds in Korea.

At Potsdam, the agreement to divide Germany and isolate Allied Forces in Berlin—initially approved at Yalta—was confirmed. The result was the costly Berlin blockade. Furthermore, if war with Russia should come, thousands of American troops stationed in Berlin would be surrounded before firing a shot. The Potsdam agreement was never submitted to the Senate.

The lesson of Potsdam is enough to warn us against permitting the President to enter into further secret pacts without affording the American people a chance, through their representatives in the Senate, to accept or reject them.

Mr. President, 33 years ago next January 8 President Wilson announced his famous 14-point peace program. President Wilson's first point was:

Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at, after which there shall be no private international understandings of any kind, but diplomacy shall proceed always frankly and in the public view.

It will be recalled that Mr. Wilson also said:

For my own part, I am not willing to trust to the counsel of diplomats the working out of any salvation of the world from the things which it has suffered.

That was good advice in 1920, Mr. President, and it is good advice in 1950. It is time indeed for our international relations to be "open, above board, and explicit."

A statement made by Mr. Wilson in Washington on May 16, 1914, also contains food for thought:

We cannot form alliances with those who are not going our way.

Mr. President, the American people are no longer satisfied with oily platitudes. They want to know exactly what took place at the Truman-Attlee conference. They want to know exactly what was agreed upon. As the Washington Daily News said editorially on December 7:

If the President expects to have public confidence, he must take the people into his confidence and conduct our international relations in the manner provided by the supreme law of the land.

I regret that the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], has heretofore refused to cooperate with efforts to obtain early action by his committee on the resolution to bring this about. I regret that he has not taken more interest in preserving and strengthening the constitutional functions of the Senate in the field of foreign relations. I regret that he is apparently willing to acquiesce in the attempts of the President to bypass the Senate. Whether we like it or not it is the business of the Senate to prevent another Yalta or another Potsdam.

3. AN AGREEMENT OF SAME SORT TO CONTINUE THE TRADE BETWEEN BRITAIN AND COMMUNIST CHINA WAS EVIDENTLY MADE

Mr. President, the so-called communiqué on the Truman-Attlee conference was strangely silent on an important question, that is—British trade with Communist China. The communiqué had only this to say:

We are fully conscious of the increasing necessity of preventing materials and items of strategic importance from flowing into the hands of those who might use them against the free world.

But the London newspapers are not so reticent. They list as a major achievement on the part of Mr. Attlee the fact that he persuaded President Truman and his political advisers not to try to stop foreign trade with Communist China even though she is now our enemy on the battlefield.

The London Daily Mail dispatch from Washington of December 9 put it this way:

The fact that there is no suggestion in this communiqué of economic sanctions against China is regarded as most significant. Some advisers around President Truman favored sanctions as a method of conducting limited war, but the military advisers of both President Truman and Attlee maintained their position and won.

The objective that Mr. Attlee was so sucessful in achieving is put as follows by a distinguished Washington newspaperman, Arthur Sears Henning, in an article printed in the Washington Times-Herald on December 11:

The Attlee expedition to Washington was precipitated by President Truman's statement that he was considering the use of the atom bomb in Korea and China.

That scared the British interests, which have a billion dollars worth of investments and trade that would be jeopardized by war in China, and scared Attlee's Labor Party left wingers, who are fighting an increased defense budget and who favor appeasement of Red China and Russia.

The left wingers, numbering about 100, easily could wipe out Attlee's eyelash majority of 5 in parliament and force a parliamentary election in which the Labor Party might lose its shirt.

Mr. President, Hong Kong is a funnel through which Great Britain is now pouring vast quantities of war materials to equip the human sea armies of Communist China. I am informed by the Department of Commerce that, according to the latest information available, a veritable flood of war materials is pouring from Hong Kong to Red China.

Take copper, for an example. In June 1950, the United Kingdom exported $1,910,146 worth of copper wiring to Hong Kong. During the same month, $934,330 worth of copper wiring was exported from Hong Kong to Red China. The same thing is happening in the case of many other war materials, including zinc, iron, and steel products, and so forth.

Mr. President, this is a list of selected items exported from Hong Kong to Red China during June 1950:

	Exports
Rubber and manufactures thereof	$4,035,073
Iron and steel	7,333,445
Nonferrous base metals	2,412,159
Manufactures of base metals	2,092,936
Machinery, apparatus, and appliances other than electrical	3,364,478
Electrical machinery	755,784
Vehicles and transport equipment	1,307,921

These figures do not include exports to middle China, which in the Department of Commerce tabulation includes Formosa.

Hong Kong is a British crown colony and as such is under the control of the British Government. What is shipped from Hong Kong to Red China is in effect shipped from Britain to Red China. It is interesting to note that items in at least five of the seven classifications listed were furnished by the United States to Britain under the Marshall plan.

Belated steps have been taken by our Department of Commerce to curb the shipment of war materials from the United States to Communist China. Certainly it would be outrageous to continue to permit the export of war materials to Red China. It is equally outrageous for Great Britain, supposedly our ally, to continue to ship materials of war to Red China—in many cases the same items which we are giving Britain under the Marshall plan. Britain has recognized Red China. Now she is helping arm Red China while American—and yes, British—soldiers are shot down by the Reds in Korea.

Did Mr. Truman agree not to take any action which would interfere with British trade with Red China through Hong Kong?

The American people have a right to know the answer to that question.

It is incumbent upon their elected representatives in the Senate to make every effort to obtain it.

Yesterday it was announced that effective January 1 next, Marshall-plan aid will be discontinued to Great Britain. The communique on the Truman-Attlee conference is silent as what discussion took place with regard to this and what agreement was reached. The question arises: Just where does the agreement with reference to Marshall-plan aid to Great Britain fit into the picture of the conference?

4. TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE

Our magnificent army in Korea is in retreat before overwhelming numbers of the enemy. But this is no time for the Congress to retreat. This is no time for the Congress of the United States to avoid its governmental duties, or to abdicate its constitutional functions. Certainly no one wants us all to go to our ruin singing in unity, "Hallelujah, Hallelujah."

The hour is late. The most important question before the Congress today is our foreign policy. It should have our attention before it is too late. We should act now to prevent further secret covenants, secretly arrived at.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion I have made.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I regret very much that the Senator from Missouri has seen fit to make the motion this afternoon, because the Senator from Missouri was on the floor of the Senate when I advised the Senate there would be no business transacted this afternoon. Consequently many Senators have left the Chamber for the day with the understanding there would be no business transacted. If the Senator from Missouri, who was on the floor and heard me make that statement at the time, had expected to bring up the motion, it seems to me that as a mere matter of courtesy to myself and other Members of the Senate he would then have served notice that he was going to move to bring up the resolution which has been lying on the table since December 6.

Mr. President, in view of the statement I made, I regret that the Senator has seen fit to make his motion. The Finance Committee is working overtime in an attempt to prepare and report a bill dealing with excess-profits taxes in order that the Congress might adjourn sine die perhaps a week from tomorrow night or a week from Saturday night. The members of that committee, who are now sitting in the committee meeting, do not like to come back to the Senate Chamber if they can possibly avoid doing so. That was one of the things I had in mind when I made the statement I did earlier this afternoon, hoping to avoid any business of any kind being transacted today, or any quorum calls. Certainly if we are going to vote upon a matter of this kind there will be some discussion, there will be quorum calls, and so forth, and it will disrupt the progress of the Finance Committee. I understand the Appropriations Committee is also meeting on important matters.

Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Missouri will withdraw the motion for the time being, because of the understanding the Senate had this afternoon shortly after we convened. If the Senator from Missouri had not been on the floor that would be something else. Certainly when I came to the Senate Chamber at noon I had every intention of moving that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon. Had I been present last evening when the Senate took a recess I would have moved that the recess be until tomorrow, because I knew of nothing of importance that was going to take place today.

I explained to the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. WHERRY] when I came on the floor that I thought I would move that the Senate take a recess or adjourn until tomorrow. The Senator from Nebraska advised me that two or three speeches were to be made by Members on his side of the aisle. Obviously I had no objection to that. But I doubt if the Senator from Nebraska knew that the Senator from Missouri was going to move to consider the resolution, which was submitted on December 6, and, as I have said, has been lying on the table since that time. At least the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, were not advised as to the intention of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. President, we can secure a quorum, we can debate the resolution the remainder of the afternoon and settle the question. Tomorrow the calendar will be called. But I had hoped we might not disturb with a matter of this kind Senators who are engaged in committee meetings this afternoon.

Mr. President, in view of the agreement we had, or at least in view of the statements I made, I plead with the Senator from Missouri not to press the motion; but that he withdraw it for the time being. He certainly can obtain the floor at any time he desires when a quorum is present. If the Senator from Missouri was vitally interested in a measure, and some Senator moved its consideration in his absence, without a quorum call, particularly if there were an understanding, more or less, such as was had this morning, I am satisfied the Senator would probably be in here registering a rightful complaint.

I hope the Senator from Missouri will withdraw the motion and not press for the yeas and nays on it, because if he does so, it will result in bringing a number of Senators, probably, from their homes, and bringing others from important committee meetings, because they understood thoroughly there would be no business transacted this afternoon.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. KEM. It is hard not to accede to any request of the able Senator from Illinois, who has acted as the majority leader with such credit to himself through the present Congress, and whom we so greatly regret to lose. However, I think he has correctly stated that so far as the Senator from Missouri is concerned any agreement was "more or less." So far as the Senator from Missouri is concerned, it was "less"; that is, there was an utter or entire absence of any agreement with the Senator from Missouri.

I heard the statement made by the majority leader at the opening of the session today, which was, as I recall, to the effect that the majority leadership had agreed that there would be no business transacted today. It did not occur to me that a Member of the minority was in any respect foreclosed from making a motion by an agreement made by the majority leadership. I have always understood that if one is to be foreclosed in a case like that he should be present and be given an opportunity to be heard. I certainly was not present at any majority conference at which the agreement was reached. A mere ex parte statement by the able majority leader certainly would not bind me or any other Member of the minority with respect to his statement.

I know the minority leader will have something to say about this matter. Of course, I shall follow his views.

However, so far as I am concerned, I should like to make it perfectly plain and entirely clear that I recognize no understanding of any kind or character to which I was a party which would bind me or prevent me from making the motion I have made.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I wholeheartedly concur in what the Senator has said in respect to the right of the minority Members to do anything the rules permit them to do. Certainly a minority Member has a right to move to consider any measure which he desires to have considered; and certainly I have never attempted, by any procedure I have followed in the last 2 years, to curtail the activities of any minority Member.

I have sent for the remarks I made earlier in the day, and I know the Senator from Missouri was on the floor when I made them. I now read them:

> I merely wish to finish what I have to say. In view of the fact that we have no business to transact today and no bill will be called up for consideration by the Senator from Illinois, I was hoping that we might, by unanimous consent, proceed to the consideration of executive business for a few moments and confirm nominations to which there is no objection and then return to legislative session. I make that request.

That was the statement I made. The Senator from Nebraska had no objection at the time to that course.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MAGNUSON in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. KEM. I ask the Senator whether, either earlier or later in his remarks, he referred to the fact that an agreement in this respect had been reached by the majority leadership.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not recall that I did, but I now have before me only the earlier remarks.

Mr. KEM. Unless my memory has played me a trick——

Mr. LUCAS. It would not, I am sure.

Mr. KEM. Otherwise it will be found, I believe, that the Senator from Illinois made such a statement earlier.

Mr. LUCAS. If I did say that, it is perfectly all right, for I see no harm in such a statement.

Mr. KEM. I see no harm, either; and it is perfectly proper and certainly within the authority and rights of the majority leader to say so. However, I think he will also agree that any agreement reached in that manner is not binding on a member of the minority.

Mr. LUCAS. I understand all that, Mr. President. I merely repeat that the statement to which I have referred was made. Now the Senator from Missouri buttresses my remarks by saying that I also said that the majority had reached that agreement.

If the Senator from Missouri had intended to call up the resolution, certainly it seems to me that at that time he should have entered the colloquy and should have propounded a question about the resolution. If at that time I had said that I did not intend to move that the resolution be taken up, the Senator from Missouri then should have said that at the proper time he intended to move that the resolution be taken up.

Certainly I said that it was my intention not to have any votes taken in the Senate today.

I yield now to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I was on the floor at the time when the Senator from Missouri made the motion. At that time there was not an acting majority leader on the floor of the Senate. Because of that fact, I asked that the clerk read the motion and read the resolution. I made that request in order to gain time, so that some Senator representing the majority could come to the floor of the Senate.

Finally the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS] appeared, after the motion had been made. Of course, he would have asked for a quorum call. I stated to him that the Senator from Missouri had made the motion, but that I understood the question would not be put at once, in that I understood that the Senator from Missouri, who had made the motion, would make a speech on it. Therefore I said that I understood that if the Senator from Mississippi wanted to have a quorum call had, there would be time for it. I further said that inasmuch as I understood that the Senator from Missouri would make a speech on the resolution, ample time would be provided for the majority to consider the motion.

I prevailed upon the Senator from Missouri to have the resolution read so that ample time would be afforded all Senators.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, would the Senator have any objection to permitting me to ask the minority leader a question? Will the majority leader yield to me for that purpose?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. KEM. I should like to ask the minority leader whether it is true that before the convening of today's session, I advised him of my intention to make the motion.

Mr. WHERRY. That was the second matter which arose.

I said several times to the Senator from Missouri—for he has asked me about the matter bringing up the resolution—that he could bring up the resolution by motion when some other measure was before the Senate; and I told him that if a motion to have the Senate consider the resolution carried, it would automatically displace any other business which had been pending. I also advised him that if early in the session today there was no unfinished business, it would be proper for him to move that the resolution be taken up. The Senator from Missouri said he wished to make a speech.

Mr. President, I do not know what is in the minds of all Senators, of course. I will say now that I told the majority leader that I had no objection to having the Senate take a recess when the work of the Senate for today was concluded. I also informed him that speeches were to be made today by three Senators on this side on the aisle.

What procedure Senators will adopt, I never can tell, of course. However, certainly I advised the Senator from Missouri that the way for him to bring up his resolution was to make a speech on it, and then he could press for action on it.

I made no agreement with the majority leader about not having Senators on this side of the aisle transact any business today in the Senate Chamber. I agreed with the majority leader that, so far as I was concerned, I was perfectly willing to have a recess taken. I advised him that speeches were to be made by three Senators on this side of the aisle, and that, when they were concluded, I did not know of anything else to be taken up today.

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. KEM. I wish to make it clear for the RECORD that there is no basis whatever for an intimation that the Senator from Missouri acted surreptitiously at all in this matter. He advised the minority leader in advance about it.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Illinois will yield to me——

Mr. LUCAS. Certainly.

Mr. WHERRY. Certainly the Senator from Missouri advised me about the resolution. He did so several times before today. I advised him how I thought he could obtain the floor. Of course, it is up to the best judgment of any Senator to decide how he will proceed. I do not want the RECORD to show that I am not in every way protecting the rights of the Senator from Missouri, for that is my job; and I did advise him as to the procedure which I thought should be followed in making the motion.

I also wish to have it clear that the minority leader was perfectly fair, in that he did not have the question on agreeing to the motion put immediately, although that could have been done, but the minority leader had the clerk read the resolution and read the names of the sponsors of the resolution, until the acting majority leader reached the floor, at which time those on the majority side could exercise any right they chose to exercise.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not care to debate this matter any longer. However, the members of the minority know that the Senator from Illinois time without number has stood on the floor of the Senate and, at the request of the Senator from Nebraska, has advised the Senate what the program would be. If the minority have a program, we certainly should be advised likewise in respect to what they are going to do.

I dare say there is no Member of the Senate who would complain more bitterly—and justifiably so—than would the Senator from Nebraska if I had laid down a program, and subsequently, at a time when there were only about four Senators on the floor—after I had told all Senators that they could leave—moved to have the Senate consider a highly controversial measure.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. WHERRY. I agree with the Senator that I think he has been extremely courteous, and forthrightly so, in announcing to the Members of the Senate the program of the majority. I feel that his statement is absolutely correct, and should be made. I have no complaint whatever about the fine courtesy relative to the program, which has been extended through the years by the majority leader. However, he knows as well as I do that, even though he and I might state what the program will be, any Member of the Senate, either on the majority side or on the minority side, can exercise any prerogative he wishes to exercise on the floor of the Senate.

I desire to call particular attention to the fact that as minority leader, I did everything I possibly could do to alert the majority and inform them of the motion which was made.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President——

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to continue for a further moment?

Mr. LUCAS. Certainly.

Mr. WHERRY. As I understand, the only thing before the Senate is a motion. It is, I suppose, now the unfinished business. I am sure the Senator from Missouri is not pressing for a vote on the motion this afternoon, and that it can remain the unfinished business. I believe he will be agreeable, if the majority leader will let me work it out with him, to have the motion laid aside temporarily, in order to expedite the business of the Senate and the call of the calendar tomorrow, without any difficulty whatever. Is not that correct?

Mr. KEM. Mr. President, I should like to say that any arrangement the minority leader makes with reference to the matter will be agreeable to me.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I merely want to conclude this statement. I do not want to be placed in a false light with respect to the position I am taking. I know that the Senator from Illinois stands on solid ground so far as the dignity of the Senate of the United States is concerned, and so far as desiring that Senators be fair one to another in the Senate. If the Senator from Missouri had not been on the floor when I made my statement earlier in the day, but had entered the chamber later, it would have been another thing, perhaps. But the Senator from Missouri knew exactly what I said, which was that I had conferred with Members on this side of the aisle, that there were no other bills to be taken up today, and that, so far as the majority was concerned, there would be no business transacted in the Senate.

I immediately went to the Senator from Nebraska when I came into the Chamber at noon, and told him that I had planned to move an immediate recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow. The Senator from Nebraska said, "I do not feel very well, and I wish you could do that, but," he said, "there are three Members on my side of the aisle who desire to make speeches." They make speeches here all the time, without saying much of anything. There is no harm in that, either, so far as that goes. But I know that, as a general rule, we do not transact any business when speeches are being made, because to do so would, ordinarily, only confuse and clutter up the RECORD. But certainly no Senator on this side of the aisle had any idea that the Senator from Missouri was going to move to consider the resolution. I know how I should have been criticized and condemned, and rightfully so, by Senators on the other side of the aisle, had I waited until this afternoon for an opportunity to take up some measure of a controversial nature, after I had told Senators they could go home if they wanted to. I would have been crucified by Members on the other side, and the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Missouri would have been two of the gentlemen who would have been on their feet to do that very thing.

Mr. President, I think what has been done is absolutely unfair. I do not believe it is in accordance with good ethics in the Senate of the United States. It is not what we have been accustomed to in the Senate, so far as dealing at arm's length and as men to men on the floor of the United States Senate.

That is all I have to say. I shall have to suggest the absence of a quorum. I shall have to drag Senators from wherever they are, to get them here, after I have advised them they could safely leave, no one having advised me to the contrary. I was about ready to go home, myself, when someone said, "You should come to the floor of the Senate, because there is an important motion pending before the Senate of the United States."

I am trying to get my files in shape, so that I can leave here on January 3, without being boosted out by the Sergeant at Arms. I have a great deal of work to do. I am still trying to fulfill the duties of the position which the majority gave me 2 years ago. I again say that in all fairness, and as man to man, in the Senate of the United States, this is unfair, it is uncalled for. The distinguished Senator from Missouri, who is an honorable man, a gentleman, and my friend, I think should withdraw the motion now and take an opportunity, at another time, when we have a quorum present, to move the consideration of the resolution. I am not at all objecting to taking it up; I do not object to that. I object to the method which has been pursued.

Mr. President, if the motion is not going to be withdrawn, I shall have to suggest the absence of a quorum. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Anderson	Hayden	Mundt
Capehart	Hendrickson	Myers
Carlson	Hickenlooper	O'Conor
Clements	Johnston, S. C.	O'Mahoney
Connally	Kefauver	Smith, N. J.
Donnell	Kem	Smith, N. C.
Douglas	Lehman	Stennis
Dworshak	Lucas	Thye
Ecton	McClellan	Wherry
Flanders	McFarland
Fulbright	Magnuson

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senators from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON and Mr. MCMAHON], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. FREAR], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LEAHY], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are unavoidably detained on official business.

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senators from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE and Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HOEY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. HUNT], the Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR], and the Senators from West Virginia [Mr. KILGORE and Mr. NEELY] are absent on official committee business.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Mr. WHERRY. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] is absent by leave of the Senate conducting hearings for the Committee on Small Business.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER], the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MCCARTHY], the Senator from California [Mr. NIXON], the Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS] are detained on official business.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BUTLER], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] are detained at a meeting of the Committee on Finance.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] is detained at a meeting of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GURNEY], the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL] are detained at a meeting of the Committee on Armed Services.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is not present. The clerk will call the names of the absent Senators.

The legislative clerk called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. CORDON, Mr. GILLETTE, Mr. HILL, Mr. JENNER, Mr. MAYBANK, Mr. MCCARRAN, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. THOMAS of Utah, Mr. WATKINS, and Mr. YOUNG answered to their names when called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair). A quorum is not present.

RECESS

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, in line with the previous unanimous-consent request which I made earlier in the afternoon, that the Senate would recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow, and in accordance with the order previously entered, I now move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Illinois that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, just a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. WHERRY. Is this a motion to recess?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Will the Senator yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the motion is not debatable.

Mr. WHERRY. That is correct. I merely asked the distinguished majority leader if he would permit me to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I have made the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is that the Senate stand in recess, in accordance with the order previously entered, until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MILLIKIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MILLIKIN. What is the question before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is whether or not the Senate will recess until tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon, in accordance with the agreement heretofore entered into that when the Senate takes a recess it be until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The Senate will be in order. The clerk reports that it is impossible to hear the responses of Senators to the roll call. Let us start in the rear of the Chamber. Let members of the press be in order and continue in order. With respect to staff members of Senators, if they cannot find seats, let them please retire toward the walls and be quiet. The Chair is sure that with that good example the Senators will be quiet.

The clerk will proceed with the roll call.

The legislative clerk resumed and concluded the call of the roll.

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senators from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON and Mr. MCMAHON], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. FREAR], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. TAYLOR], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are unavoidably detained on official business.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is absent on official committee business.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] is absent by leave of the Senate conducting hearings from the Committee on Small Business.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] is absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. LANGER] is detained at a meeting of the Committee on the Judiciary, and if present would vote "nay."

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN] are detained on official business.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] is necessarily absent.

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 36, as follows:

YEAS—37

Anderson	Johnson, Tex.	Maybank
Byrd	Johnston, S. C.	Myers
Chavez	Kefauver	Neely
Clements	Kerr	O'Conor
Connally	Kilgore	O'Mahoney
Douglas	Leahy	Pepper
Fulbright	Lehman	Russell
Gillette	Lucas	Smith, N. C.
Hayden	McCarran	Stennis
Hill	McClellan	Thomas, Okla.
Hoey	McFarland	Thomas, Utah
Holland	McKellar
Hunt	Magnuson

NAYS—36

Aiken	Flanders	Mundt
Brewster	Gurney	Nixon
Bricker	Hendrickson	Saltonstall
Bridges	Hickenlooper	Smith, Maine
Butler	Ives	Smith, N. J.
Cain	Jenner	Taft
Capehart	Kem	Thye
Carlson	Knowland	Tobey
Cordon	McCarthy	Watkins
Donnell	Malone	Wherry
Dworshak	Millikin	Williams
Ecton	Morse	Young

NOT VOTING—23

Benton	Humphrey	Robertson
Chapman	Johnson, Colo.	Schoeppel
Eastland	Langer	Sparkman
Ellender	Lodge	Taylor
Ferguson	Long	Tydings
Frear	McMahon	Vandenberg
George	Martin	Wiley
Green	Murray

So the motion was agreed to; and, at 3 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m., the Senate took a recess, the recess being, under the order previously entered, until tomorrow, Friday, December 15, 1950, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate December 14 (legislative day of November 27), 1950:

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

Paul C. Daniels, of New York, a Foreign Service officer of the class of career minister, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Ecuador.

Horatio Mooers, of Maine, now a Foreign Service officer of class 3 and a secretary in the diplomatic service, to be also a consul general of the United States of America.

William N. Fraleigh, of New Jersey, now a Foreign Service officer of class 4 and a secretary in the diplomatic service, to be also a consul of the United States of America.

Charles H. Whitaker, of Rhode Island, now a Foreign Service officer of class 5 and a secretary in the diplomatic service, to be also a consul of the United States of America.

The following-named Foreign Service staff officers to be consuls of the United States of America:

Henry F. Arnold, of New Jersey.
Arthur G. Lund, of Utah.
Reed P. Robinson, of Colorado.
Girvan Teall, of New York.

The following-named Foreign Service reserve officers to be secretaries in the diplomatic service of the United States of America:

Jack C. McDermott, of Texas.
Forney A. Rankin, of North Carolina.
Charles A. Thomson, of Maryland.

IN THE COAST GUARD

The following-named officer of the United States Coast Guard Reserve to be a lieutenant (junior grade) in the United States Coast Guard:

Gerald Joseph Fallon

The following-named persons to be chief radio electricians in the United States Coast Guard:

August Dannenberg	Frederick Baldwin
Edward C. Brichta	James G. Leadbeater
Gabriel V. Denisov

The following-named person to be a chief gunner in the United States Coast Guard:

Donald A. MacLean

The following-named person to be a chief carpenter in the United States Coast Guard:

Milo Taber

The following-named persons to be chief pay clerks in the United States Coast Guard:

Harold E. Major	Floyd Bieri
Hobart W. Means	James W. Winchester

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

The following-named distinguished military students for appointment in the Regular Army of the United States, effective January 1, 1951, in the grade of second lieutenant, under the provisions of section 506 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.), subject to designation as distinguished military graduates, and subject to physical qualification:

Norman H. Abreu	Junie L. Clough
Doyle R. Avant, Jr.	Arthur F. Cochran
Walter J. Avery	James C. Cole
James D. Bates	William A. Connelly,
Adolph E. Baumann	[redacted]
David J. Baumgardner, [redacted]	Wolfert Conover, Jr., [redacted]
Robert B. Beck	Max A. Craig
Rodney G. Benson	Louis A. Daigneau, Jr.,
Louis R. Birkmeyer, [redacted]	[redacted]
	Earl E. Daly, Jr.
William C. Bowden, [redacted]	William E. Davis, [redacted]
Albert B. Brown, Jr., [redacted]	Ward W. Derryberry, Jr., [redacted]
Dewey E. Brown	John F. Dickson, Jr.
Russell E. Brubaker, [redacted]	George M. Donovan
	Ernest M. Eberhardt, Jr.
Frank E. Burk, [redacted]	Robert W. Elliott, [redacted]
John P. Burke
Jack W. Burns	Robert H. Erdrich
Angelo J. Carmassi	Donald Esper
Donald B. Carmichael	Van E. Estes, Jr.,
Allen R. Champlin, [redacted]	[redacted]
	Randall G. Eubanks
James P. Flood, [redacted]	Frank W. Nadeau, Jr.
William F. Flynn	Razeal Nash
Thomas H. Gause	Stanton K. Nethery, Jr.
Thomas M. Gemmell	William H. Olson, Jr.
Joe Genualdi, [redacted]	Donald J. Opitz, [redacted]
John O. Girardeau	Don A. Palmer
Frederick J. Gormley	James M. Paris
Raymond D. Hall	Roger F. Pearson
James A. Hammond	Robert M. Penor
David A. Harpman	James I. Perkins, [redacted]
Gerald E. Harris
Edward A. Hart, Jr.	William C. Petty
Jesse E. Hart	Donald N. Plants
Bernard T. Hassett	Jack B. Porterfield, [redacted]
Gene L. Haupert, [redacted]
	Wayne W. Reed, [redacted]
Joseph E. Hayden, Jr., [redacted]	Ralph E. Renken
Christopher R. Haydon	John H. Richardson
Clarence T. Hewgley	Errol D. Rodda
James T. Highland, Jr.	Norman H. Ruddle
	Gordon C. Russell
Irving A. Hill	Clifford T. Rutledge
Leslie L. Hittle, Jr.	Frank W. Sample
Donald H. Huffine	Horace M. Sanders, Jr.
Robert L. Hurd, [redacted]	Erle O. Sandlin, Jr. [redacted]
Rudolph W. Jackson	Robert M. Schlemmer
David L. E. Jacobs	Albert A. Schmidt
Stephen H. Janovick, Jr.	James D. Schultz, [redacted]
	Jerrold R. Scribner
John O. Jensen	Paul R. Seeley, Jr.
Ivan R. Johnson, [redacted]	Philip D. Sellers
	Joseph A. Shewski
Robert R. Johnson	Richard B. Shields, [redacted]
Miles T. Jones
Sheldon Jones, [redacted]	John M. Shipley
	George B. Skinner
Thomas H. Joyce	Kulman B. Smith
Herschell K. Kelley	William H. Smith
William N. Kelt	Thomas A. Spencer, [redacted]
George R. Kennedy
John P. King	William F. Squires
Kenneth A. Lagoni	Jerry H. Stilson, [redacted]
Clem R. Lakin
Marshall A. Lanter	Stephen W. Stith, Jr., [redacted]
Billy D. Lee
Robert S. Lewis	Donald L. Strange-Boston
Delmas V. Lippard	Ernest E. Street
Carroll D. Logan	Eugene D. Sweeters
Jay C. Lowe, Jr.	Darwin D. Talafuse
Lon U. Lutz	Albert P. Taylor, Jr.
James R. McClure	Robert S. Taylor, Jr., [redacted]
Everette G. McGhee, Jr.
	Walter M. Taylor
Charles D. McKeown, [redacted]	James J. Tolson
	William W. Townsend
Norman W. McNabb	Vestal J. Vaughn, Jr.
Arlen A. McNeil	Bynum P. Ward
Thomas J. McQuade, Jr.	Lawrence L. Wathey
	John C. Webber
Frank D. Maglione, [redacted]	William E. Westerbeck
Donald P. Malloch, Jr.	Herbert W. Wheeler
William D. Manahan, [redacted]	Paul A. Whetstone
	Peter L. White, [redacted]
Frank A. Matthews
Wallace M. Maurer, [redacted]	Nelson L. Whitmire, [redacted]
Warren M. Maurer, [redacted]	Walton S. Williams, [redacted]
Norman R. Metz	Preston E. Williamson
George E. Mills	Robert J. Wilson
Sidney E. Mitchell, [redacted]	Whitfield F. Woodhead
	Glenn H. Woods, Jr.
Conrad X. Mizer, [redacted]	Thomas B. Wynegar
	Donald A. Yoder, [redacted]
John T. Moore
James C. Morris	Fletcher R. Young, Jr.
Robert W. Muller	Richard G. Zeller
Jimmy D. Myers

The following-named distinguished military student for appointment in the Medical Service Corps, Regular Army of the United States, effective January 1, 1951, in the grade of second lieutenant, under the provisions of section 506 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.), subject to designation as a distinguished military graduate, and subject to physical qualification:

Robert D. Short

The following-named distinguished military students for appointment in the Regular Army of the United States, effective June 15, 1951, in the grade of second lieutenant, under the provisions of section 506 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.), subject to designation as distinguished military graduates, and subject to physical qualification:

Thomas L. Abrahams
Howard A. Acheson, Jr.
John W. Addison, Jr.
Guy B. Agnor, Jr.
Francis J. Aiken, Jr.
Lloyd A. Alaback
John A. Albree
John D. Albritton
Richard A. Alexander
Shelby G. Alfred
Robert D. Allen
Willard G. Alverson
Owen L. Anderson
George N. Andrews
Robert C. Andries
Burrel D. Angell
John C. Anthony, Jr.
LaMar Argyle
Charles E. Armstrong
Robert A. Arnet
Peter E. Arnold
David S. Asbill, Jr.
John S. Autry
Malcolm E. Avery
William T. Avis
Gordon C. Bailey
Robert F. Baisley
Thomas R. Balke
Frank P. K. Barker, Jr., [redacted]
Gregory D. Barnes
Wilman D. Barnes
William B. Barnhart
Jack M. Bass, Jr.
Lewie L. Bates, Jr.
Henry E. Batson
James C. Bauer
Harold G. Beal, Jr.
Richard D. Bearden, Jr.
Roy Beaty, Jr.
Charles C. Beazley
Calvin R. Beck
James N. Beil
Arnold F. Bellini
Frank R. Beloy
Edward A. Bender, Jr.
Ernest L. Bennett
Robert C. Bennett, Jr.
James R. Bergman
Jacques W. Bernier
Robert E. Bescherer
Frederick W. Best, Jr., [redacted]
Walter F. Biggs, Jr.
Russell D. Bird
George Bjotvedt
John R. Black, [redacted]
Robert E. Blackwell, [redacted]
Patrick J. Bohen
Alfred W. Bohlen, Jr.
Fred P. Boljen
Lesil S. Bomar, Jr.
Emanuel F. Bosio
Allen B. Bostad
John S. Bowdidge
Douglas C. Bowers
Richard P. Boyd
Arthur H. Boyer
Thomas H. Branch
John N. Brandenburg
Frederick B. Breece
Thomas A. Breen
James P. Broady, [redacted]
Elmer G. Brooker, Jr.
Vincent I. Brosky, [redacted]
Gerald J. Brown
Samuel T. Brown, Jr.
Thomas J. Brown, Jr.
Wade T. Buchanan, Jr.
Charles A. Bundy
Eugene L. Burch, Jr.
Walter T. Burch
Paul V. Burger
Jack Burgess
Richard K. Burk
John T. Busbee, [redacted]
William F. Byron
William V. Call
Ishmael G. Callaway
Jack G. Callaway
Jackie W. Calvert
Thomas D. Canary
Marcus J. Cannady, [redacted]
Norris R. Capers
Harry E. Carlsen, [redacted]
James B. Carr, Jr.
Regis J. Carr, Jr.
Arnold R. Carrillo, [redacted]
Joseph E. Cartan, Jr.
Charles H. Carter, Jr.
George W. Carter III
William G. Carter
Joseph Caruso
Walter A. Caskie
Earl L. Casner, Jr.
Joseph F. Castro
Richard E. Cavazos
Francis C. Chadwick
William N. Chalfant, [redacted]
Stephen J. Chamberlin, Jr.
John C. Champeny
George A. Chandler
Kenneth L. Chesak
Thomas B. Christiansen, Jr.
Francis R. Cipolla
Joe T. Clark
Noble N. Clark
Steven T. Clark
Thomas J. Clark, [redacted]
William L. Clark
Jack H. Clay
Harold W. Clift, Jr.
Stanley W. Cogan
Richard H. Cole
James P. Coley
Braxton W. Collins
Percy W. Collom, Jr.
Byron R. Coltrin, [redacted]
Breck Combs
William T. Comisky
Donald G. Conrad
Edward T. Conroy
George R. Cook
Harold E. Cook
Herbert R. Cook
James M. Cook, Jr.
Raymond K. Cooley
John P. Cooper
William E. Cooper, Jr.
Charles D. Corbett
William U. Corbett, Jr.
John G. Couris, [redacted]
George E. Craft, [redacted]
Samuel E. Craig, Jr.
Frank P. Crimi
Roger M. Crosby II
Fred P. Culbreth
Gene S. Cunningham, Jr., [redacted]
Lee D. Cunningham
Jack V. D'Agostino
Addison D. Davis III
Ernest J. Davis
Francis J. Davis
Max S. Davis, [redacted]
William H. Davis
Bobby F. Deas
James R. Decker
Oscar C. Decker, Jr.
Stanley G. DeLaHunt
Charles H. Detweiler
Willys D. DeVoll
Charles B. Dickinson
Walter J. Diggles, [redacted]
Simon L. Dingfelder
Rosario J. Di Salvo
Roy J. Dittamo
Henry C. Doan
Steven F. Donarski
Joseph A. Donnan
Jesse B. Doss, [redacted]
Charles A. Dougherty, [redacted]
Walter J. Dougherty
Ralph S. Dover
Robert E. Dowden
Miles H. Downes
John J. Doyle, Jr., [redacted]
Joel E. Drucker
John W. Duffett, [redacted]
Thomas N. Duffy
William D. Duffy
David D. Dukes
Roy E. Duncan
Robert E. Dunn
Paul L. Dutton
Henry H. Duval, Jr.
Austin J. Dwyer, [redacted]
Eugene L. Eastmoore
Robert D. Ebert
Joel I. Ellis
Robert H. Ellis, [redacted]
William B. Ellis
Richard H. Emerson
Harvey E. Emig
Albert J. Engelberg, Jr.
Malcolm L. Ernst
Louis A. Eubank
John H. Evans
Richard C. Evans
Dale D. Evenson
Charles T. Fabian
Edward J. Fahey
Frank A. Faison
John E. Farnham
Donald H. Faulkner
Richard J. Fegley
Jack C. Ferguson
Homer J. Finch
Vincent J. Fisher
Theodore P. Fix, Jr.
Edwin A. Fluevog, Jr.
Lyon A. Flynt
Robert F. Folker, [redacted]
Neil Folsom
Robert H. Forman
James B. Forster
John L. Fossett
Richard L. Fowler
John K. Fox, [redacted]
Michael P. Foy, Jr.
John E. France
David D. Francis
Gordon H. Francis
Robert S. Francis
Robert F. Franz, Jr.
Danny P. Fraser
James R. Frawley, Jr.
Edgar V. Friend, Jr.
John H. Friend, Jr.
Charles J. V. Fries III
Veryl L. Fritz
Michael A. Fucci
James F. Fulton, Jr.
Jonathan W. Fulton
Charles S. Furuya
Robert J. Gaige
Gerald O. Galvan, [redacted]
Barney L. Garrett III
William H. Garrett, Jr.
Charles E. Gates
Daniel M. Gauger
Edwin B. Gentry, [redacted]
Frank G. George
Robert L. German
John A. Gesell
Raymond C. Giesecke
Clinton Gilbert, Jr.
Oscar T. Gilbert, Jr.
William R. Gillingham
Charles A. Gillis
Ronald J. Gillis
Robert E. Girardin
James E. Glover
Donald J. Goettel
Roger Gohrband
Harry G. Goode, Jr.
Robert J. Goodwin
Warner S. Goodwin, Jr.
George W. Grady
Daniel P. Gray
William W. Gray
James R. Green, Jr.
William C. Gressette
Henry L. Griesbach, Jr.
Edward F. Griger
Richard A. Grimes
William S. Grover
John E. Gudgel, Jr.
Charles B. Guest, Jr.
Robert Gunning, Jr.
Jess H. Hackney
Joseph L. Hadaway
Donald A. Hadley
Warren C. Hale, [redacted]
Charles W. Hammond
Clayton B. Hammond
David R. Hampton
Delbert B. Hankins
John W. Hannigan
Karl W. Hansen
William M. Hanser
Robert C. Hanson
Willard E. Hardwick
Robert W. Harper
Charles H. Harrison
William J. Hart, Jr.
John F. Harte, Jr.
Charles D. Hawn
Robert M. Heaney
Donald J. Hecht
Robert J. Heidel
John M. Henchman
James M. Henderson
William J. Herlihy, Jr.
John H. Hesterly
Robert T. Hewitt, Jr., [redacted]
William H. Hexner [redacted]
Wayne C. Hickey, Jr. [redacted]
James R. Hillas, Jr.
James R. Hinkle
William F. Hirschmann, Jr.
James E. Hoctor
Rice R. Holcombe
Robert L. Holderman
Rex L. Holland
William C. Hood
Roy S. Hooper, Jr. [redacted]
Robert L. Hope
Jack E. Hopper
Charles R. Horton
Samuel R. Horton, Jr.
Philip J. Howard
John K. Hoyle, Jr.
Richard R. Hubbard, [redacted]
Johnson Hubbell, [redacted]
Richard G. Huber
Jack P. Huddle
Virgil R. Hudnall, [redacted]
Robert D. Hughes III
Robert F. Hume
Billy B. Humphreys
Amede O. Hungerford
Charles W. Hunter
Horace L. Hunter, Jr.
Merrel E. Hyne
Merritte W. Ireland
Salvatore M. Iuliano
Donald A. Jackson
Louis F. Jacob, Jr., [redacted]
Bill P. Jacobs, [redacted]
Alden W. Jahnke
Alfred B. Jarden
Donald F. Javete
Kenneth G. Jenkins
Jay R. Jensen
Robert J. Jepsen, Jr.
Earle S. Johnson
Richard F. Johnson
Sven G. Johnson
Vernon D. Johnson
Clifford M. Jones
Ralph W. Julian
James O. Kadel
Edward W. Kahelin
Frederick K. Kamaka
Harlan E. Kamm, [redacted]
John J. Keating, Jr.
Milous H. Keith
Lloyd R. Kelly
Harold G. Kelso, Jr.
Clinton R. Kennedy, [redacted]
Lester R. Kerfoot, Jr.
Joseph F. Kijauskas
Rupert H. Kinard
Edward J. Kirby
Dwight A. Kirk
George R. Kirmse, O971432
Arthur L. Kirts
Robert A. Kizer
Theodore W. Kleinsasser
Theodore S. Klimaszewski
David M. Klinger
Jere I. Klivansky
William R. Knill
Carl L. Krueger, [redacted]
Frank M. Kulik, Jr.
Raymond J. Kunze
Richard E. LaBrode
William L. Lam
Charles I. Lambert
James O. Lambert
Roy P. Lambert
Jerome J. Lane
Clarence A. Lange, Jr.
Ronald V. Lange
Robert G. Latchford
Thomas L. Lawley
Walter A. Lawry
Rufus C. Lazzell
Hugh U. Leach
Francis E. Leavens
Irwin E. Lecker
Harry H. Ledbetter
Anderson T. LeDeaux
Luke D. LeFevre, [redacted]
James M. Leslie
Rufus E. Lester, Jr.
Louis N. Levinson
Clark H. Lewis
Gerald H. Lewis
Robert G. Lewis
Samuel S. Lewis, Jr.
Robert A. Liday
Carl B. Lind
John P. Lindley
Roger M. Little II
Richard L. Livermore
Marvin W. Livingston
Otis W. Livingston, Jr.
Stanley J. Lobodinski, Jr.
Raymond M. Loeb, Jr.
Howard K. Loenshal, Jr.
John R. Loftin
Edward L. Lokey
John W. Lowden, Jr.
Fred D. MacLean, Jr.
Benjamin B. McAlpin III
Frederick J. McCabe
Gerald W. McCarty
James C. McCraw
John J. McCreary, Jr.
Albert W. McDaniel
James B. McGillis
Thomas E. McGinty
Donald B. McGregor
Gene W. McGrew
Daniel T. McHugh, [redacted]
Jes D. McIver
James T. McKeel, Jr.
Leonard F. McLaughlin
William G. McLaughlin
Lawrence C. McLean, Jr.
Joseph M. McMahon, Jr.
Walter L. McMahon
James E. McMurrer, Jr.
Dwight S. McVicker
John D. Mackay
Harold E. Mackin
Ramon D. Maguire
Richard H. Malanaphy
Richard A. Manion
Lloyd H. Manjeot
Clarence C. Mann
Thomas C. Mann
Jerry V. Mannering
William E. Manning
Andrew Mansinne, Jr.
Hugh N. March
Ralph E. Marker
Marshall D. Markham
David H. Maroney
Thomas L. Marr
Richard C. Marsh
St. Julien R. Marshall, Jr.
Alfred D. Martin, Jr.
Donald F. Martin
Donald W. Martin
Paul G. Martin
John W. Martin
Richard L. Martin
Bob H. Martz
Robert F. Mason
LeVon Massengale, Jr.
Grover A. Masterson
Miroslav H. Mateja
Ronald G. Matteson
Robert S. Matthews
Marvin A. Matusek
Clarence E. May, Jr.

G. W. Mayben
Anton F. Mayer
Donald G. Mayhall
Charles W. Mays, Jr.
David A. Mays
Glenn S. Meader, Jr.
Robert A. Meese
Frank C. Meine
Frederick J. Mellin, [redacted]
Joseph P. Mellor, Jr.
John E. Merrill, Jr.
William L. Merrill, [redacted]
Samuel L. Metcalfe, Jr., [redacted]
Thomas R. Mewborn
Myles H. Mierswa, [redacted]
Charles M. Milam, [redacted]
Richard J. Milford
Carlton H. Miller, [redacted]
Charles D. Miller
William B. Milliken III
Herbert G. Mills
Donald B. Millson
Joseph B. Millwee
Hughie G. Milner
Jonathan L. Minear
Clarence G. Modjeski
Wilbur L. Moeller
Edward J. Moffatt
Forest C. Monkman, Jr.
Edward W. Mooney, Jr.
Allen C. Moore
Gene L. Moosman
Stanley E. Morgan
Samuel P. Morrah III
Edward L. Morriss
Harold E. Mortimore, [redacted]
William J. Mottel
Jack E. Mowery
Robert W. Muldrow
Forrest C. Murphy, Jr. [redacted]
Charles W. Murray, Jr.
Kenneth L. Myers
Walter N. Nahmensen
Robert B. Naler
Raymond J. Nalty, Jr.
Charles R. Nelson
Robert W. Nelson
John J. Nesbitt
Milton E. Nichols
Paul W. Norris
Richard L. Nunley
Ehard F. Nutting
Sammie E. Oates
Edwin F. O'Brien
William C. O'Connell
John T. Oglesby
John R. Olson
Joe W. Orr
William A. Osterman
Alfred R. Otte
Michael A. Pannucci
William T. Panttaja
Alan H. Park
Harry E. Parr, Jr.
Kenneth B. Parris, Jr.
Melvin W. Parse, Jr.
David R. Patterson
George E. Patterson
Jack M. Patteson
William H. Paules
Charles J. Paulin
Hilton D. Payne
Charles A. Peabody
Robert M. Peach
Alton L. Peck
Michael Peck, Jr.
John A. Pedigo, [redacted]
Paul J. Peeples
Robert L. Pendarvis
Adolph Perez
Angelo Perri
Robert D. Perry, [redacted]
Fred A. Pesek
Chester C. Phillips, Jr.
David D. Phillips
Peter L. Philp
James E. Pianta
Robert M. Pinkham
Robert S. Pittman
Richard V. Plat
Robert L. Plavnick, [redacted]
Jack D. Pointer
Don C. Polley
James W. Porter, Jr.
Robert D. Porter, [redacted]
Isadore A. Powell, Jr.
George B. Price
Robert S. Priver
Theodore O. Prossner
Ronald A. Pruitt
Melbourne E. Rabedeau, Jr.
Rodney D. Ramsey
Jay A. Rasmussen, [redacted]
LeGrand W. Randall
Robert E. Ready
Aaron G. Reames
Clark H. Reber
Paul L. Redden, Jr.
John R. Redman
DeLyle G. Redmond
James N. Reeves
Herman D. Regan, Jr.
William L. Rehm
James M. Reid
Robert Reinke
Michael G. Rekoff, Jr.
Raymond G. Rennebaum, [redacted]
John B. Reynolds
John R. Reynoldson
Arthur B. Rhodes
James E. Rice
Maurice D. Rice
Philip S. Richardson, Jr.
Julia R. Ridgdill
William J. Rigby
Ralph J. Ritchie
John C. Roberts, Jr., [redacted]
Richard B. Robertson
Claude N. Robinson, [redacted]
Willard L. Rodgers
Charles C. Rogers
Vernon D. Rogers, [redacted]
Rudy F. Roof, Jr.
John C. Rose, [redacted]
Donald E. Rosenblum
Verlyn R. Roskam
Francis M. Rothwell
Thomas H. Royder
Carroll Ruben, Jr.
Charles R. Ruble
Otis G. Rucker, Jr., [redacted]
David D. Rudd
James M. Ruedin
Edward A. Rusek
Albert L. Russell, Jr.
Byron H. Russell, Jr., [redacted]
Donald N. Russell
Robert B. Rutledge, [redacted]
Joseph A. Saplis
Jack E. Sappenfield, [redacted]
Sam C. Sarkesian
George M. Saunders
Tom A. Saunders
Hal R. Savage
Sam M. Savas
Joseph M. Saye
George M. Schabacker
Richard B. Schaefer
Chesley Schart
John W. Schlegel
Edward A. Schlirf
Phillip D. Schlosser
John C. Schmidt
John W. Schnurr
Allen E. Scholz
Edward R. Schowalter, Jr.
Ernest J. Schultz, Jr.
John T. Schulz
Sam V. Scolaro
James H. Scruggs
Robert W. Sennewald
Don W. Shaffer
Earl W. Sharp, [redacted]
Fred Sharp
Daniel Shatrich
James F. Shea
Edgar L. Shealy, Jr.
Frank L. Sheffield
Lamar L. Sheldon
George F. Shelton
Sanford T. Shepardson, Jr.
Harold R. Sherman
Paul R. Shirk
Leon R. Simon
Eugene M. Simonson
Dwight M. Simpson, Jr.
James L. Slade
Charlie B. Smith, Jr.
Glenn E. Smith
John A. Smith, Jr.
Kenneth W. Smith
Rees R. Smith
Robert F. Smith
John M. Smoak
Robert W. Sorensen
David H. Souser, [redacted]
Laurence W. Souville, Jr.
Francis H. Spaulding, Jr.
Samuel B. Spicely
Norman A. Spiro
Derrell W. Spiva, Jr.
Augustus C. Spotts III
Warren G. Sprague
Archie L. Stamper, [redacted]
John W. Stark
Paul M. Stavnitzky
Louis A. Stefanic, Jr.
Thomas E. Steimer, [redacted]
William C. Stephens
Joseph E. Stevenot
Chris W. Stevens, Jr.
John R. Stevens
Don V. Stigall
Paul J. Stimac
Frank L. Stolsits
John K. Stoner, Jr.
Charles H. Stout
George M. Strickland, Jr.
James M. Strickland, Jr.
Royce M. Strickland, Jr.
Warren A. Strong, Jr.
William B. Strong, Jr., [redacted]
Duane H. Stubbs
Lyle D. Stucker
Robert B. Studnick
Joseph H. Sullivan, [redacted]
Thomas S. Summers, Jr.
Richard S. Sweet
Roland B. Swift
Willie E. Taliaferro, Jr.
Vincent J. Tanzola, Jr.
Frank S. Tarbell
Norman E. Tate
Donald L. Taylor
Paul A. Teehan
John J. Tencick
Duane M. Tester
Charles B. Tharp
Lloyd A. Thomas, Jr.
Nathaniel R. Thompson, Jr.
Ralph E. Thompson
Sam K. Thompson
Richard D. Tikiob
Spencer R. Titley
Roy C. Tompkins
Felix T. Troilo
Cuthbert M. Truex
Marvin G. Twenhafel
Furman S. Ulmer
Clyde J. Umphlett
William M. Valencia
John Van Putten
Edward R. Vaughn, Jr.
Herbert B. Voelcker, Jr.
Richard C. Wagner
John R. Walker, Jr.
William B. Wallace
Philip P. Walpole
Daniel J. Walsh
Alvah H. Ward, Jr.
Samuel B. Ward, Jr.
Charles L. Warner
Kurt O. Wassen
John G. Watson, Jr.
John J. Watson
William O. Watson, Jr.
Paul T. Webb, Jr.
Thomas E. Weber
Richard D. Webster
Walter H. Weeks
David A. Wetherby
Frank O. Wetmore II
Ralph L. Westrich
Alfred K. White
Harvey M. White, Jr.
Isaac S. White
Robert W. White
Jack G. Whitted
Seth Wiard, Jr.
Christian M. Wicks
Gene B. Wiens
Richard S. Wilkins
Don A. Wilkinson, [redacted]
Aylwyn D. Williams
Don W. Williams
Edward L. Williams, Jr.
Oscar D. Williams, Jr.
Paul S. Williams, Jr.
Harold B. Williamson
Oliver J. Williford III
Francis G. Wilmot, Jr.
Perkins Wilson
Alton S. Windsor, Jr.
Walter W. Winkler
Kenneth L. Winter
Herman L. Wirth
Robert M. Wise
Frank Wong
Donald M. Wood, [redacted]
Dan P. Woodard, Jr.
Arthur Q. Woodward, Jr.
Charles K. Woody
Richard M. Wooten
Louie E. Wright
James M. Wroth
Richard C. Wysong
Landon D. Wythe, Jr.
Allen V. Young
James Young
Edward D. Younis
George W. Yount
Vitte V. Yusas
John H. Zak
Robert F. Ziems
Richard J. Zuccaro

The following-named distinguished military students for appointment in the Medical Service Corps, Regular Army of the United States, effective June 15, 1951, in the grade of second lieutenant, under the provisions of section 506 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 (Public Law 381, 80th Cong.), subject to designation as distinguished military graduates, and subject to physical qualification:

Ward E. Falor
Marcel F. Laventurier
Lewis C. Miner

IN THE AIR FORCE

The following officers for appointments to the positions indicated under the provisions of section 504, Officer Personnel Act of 1947:

To be general

Lt. Gen. Nathan Farragut Twining, [redacted] (major general, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States, to be vice chief of staff, United States Air Force, with rank of general with date of rank from October 10, 1950.

To be lieutenant generals

Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, [redacted] (major general, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States, to be commander in chief, United States Air Forces in Europe, with rank of lieutenant general with date of rank from October 1, 1947.

Lt. Gen. Idwal Hubert Edwards, [redacted] (major general, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States, to be deputy chief of staff, Operations, Headquarters, USAF, with rank of lieutenant general with date of rank from October 1, 1947.

The following-named officers for temporary appointment in the Air Force of the United States under the provisions of section 515, Officer Personnel Act of 1947:

To be major generals

Brig. Gen. Warren Rice Carter, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Brig. Gen. Emery Scott Wetzel, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Brig. Gen. John Alexander Samford, [redacted] (colonel, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States.

Brig. Gen. Robert Kinder Taylor, [redacted] (colonel, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States.

Brig. Gen. John Paul McConnell, [redacted] (colonel, U. S. Air Force), Air Force of the United States.

To be brigadier generals

Col. John Stewart Mills, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Edwin Minor Day, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. William Preston Nuckols, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Joseph Harold Hicks, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Herbert Miller Kidner, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Monro MacCloskey, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Frederic Ernst Glantzberg, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Dudley Durward Hale, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Marshall Stanley Roth, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Donald John Keirn, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Pearl Harvey Robey, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. John Walker Sessums, Jr., [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Roy Henry Lynn, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. William John Clinch, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Thetus Cayce Odom, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Morris John Lee, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Jacob Edward Smart, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Hunter Harris, Jr., [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Leigh Wade, [redacted], United States Air Force Reserve.

Col. Gabriel Poillon Disosway, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Charles Raeburne Landon, [redacted] United States Air Force.

Col. Charles John Bondley, Jr., [redacted], United States Air Force.

Col. James Clyde Selser, Jr., [redacted], United States Air Force.

Col. Frederick Jensen Dau, [redacted] United States Air Force.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate December 14 (legislative day of November 27), 1950:

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

Hugh W. Cross, of Illinois, to be an Interstate Commerce Commissioner for the term expiring December 31, 1957.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES

Hon. Walter M. Bastian, to be United States district judge for the District of Columbia.

William F. Riley, to be United States district judge for the southern district of Iowa.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

To be members of the National Science Board, National Science Foundation, for term expiring May 10, 1952

Sophie Bledsoe Aberle	Gerty T. Cori
Chester I. Barnard	Charles Dollard
Robert Percy Barnes	Robert F. Loeb
Detlev W. Bronk	Andrey A. Potter

To be members of the National Science Board, National Science Foundation, for term expiring May 10, 1954

Lee A. DuBridge	Harold M. Morse
Donald H. McLaughlin	James A. Reyniers
Edward L. Moreland	Elvin C. Stakman
Joseph C. Morris	P. H. Yancey

To be members of the National Science Board, National Science Foundation, for term expiring May 10, 1956

James B. Conant	O. W. Hyman
John W. Davis	Frederick A. Middlebush
Edwin B. Fred	Charles E. Wilson
Paul M. Gross
George D. Humphrey

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1950

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and ever-blessed God, who art too wise to err and too kind to injure, we pray that Thou wilt be present and favorable unto these Thy servants.

Grant Thy divine guidance, Thy fatherly benediction and the seal of Thy divine approval upon their decisions as they earnestly seek the welfare of our Nation and all mankind.

Help us to cleave with increasing tenacity of purpose and determination and devotion to those God-ordained ideals and principles which are eternally real and true.

May we daily take up with renewed faith and courage and indomitable will the great task of extending the frontiers of freedom and justice to the uttermost parts of the earth.

We pray that in all our longings for peace and in our conflicts with the forces of evil and darkness we may be supremely concerned about vindicating Thy righteousness and maintaining the honor and glory of Thy great and holy name.

Hear us for the sake of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Woodruff, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 7445. An act authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.;

H. R. 8546. An act to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946;

H. R. 9484. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights; and

H. R. 9524. An act to supplement the District of Columbia Teachers' Leave Act of 1949.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 2734. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended; and

H. R. 5902. An act for the relief of the Pan American Union.

FURLOUGH TRAVEL OF SERVICE PERSONNEL

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 9840) to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, line 2, line 3, strike out "2" and insert "2.025."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, on H. R. 9840 the Senate amendment makes a minor change to carry out the intent of the House in granting an exemption from tax on furlough travel of service personnel. The amendment is necessary to insure uniform application throughout the United States.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT TO BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2513) to give a short title to the act of July 1, 1898, commonly known as the Bankruptcy Act.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, is amended by inserting immediately after the enacting clause a new sentence as follows: "That this act may be cited as the 'Bankruptcy Act'."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNLAWFUL RESTRAINTS AND MONOPOLIES

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 2734) to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 4, line 7, strike out "Authority" and insert "Board."

Page 4, line 9, after "Commission" where it appears the second time insert "in the exercise of its jurisdiction under section 10 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the United States Maritime Commission."

Page 4, line 11, strike out "Authority."

Page 4, line 20, strike out "Authority" and insert "Board."

Page 5, line 3, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 5, line 13, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 5, lines 18 and 19, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 5, line 22, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 5, line 23, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 6, lines 12 and 13, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 6, line 18, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 6, line 19, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, line 1, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, line 8, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, line 9, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, line 16, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, line 18, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 7, lines 20 and 21, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, lines 6 and 7, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, line 11, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, lines 12 and 13, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, lines 13 and 14, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, line 18, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, line 19, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 8, lines 20 and 21, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 9, lines 2 and 3, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 9, lines 6 and 7, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 9, lines 10 and 11, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

Page 9, lines 12 and 13, strike out "Commission, Authority," and insert "Commission."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, these are merely technical amendments, are they not?

Mr. BRYSON. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELECTION TO COMMITTEE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 882) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That DONALD L. JACKSON of California be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Un-American Activities.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Veterans' Affairs may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill H. R. 9911.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

AID-TO-YUGOSLAVIA BILL

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, yesterday some of those who were advocating the gift of thirty-eight million to Tito, in particular the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from Minnesota, Dr. JUDD, based their arguments on the premise that here were, as characterized by Members, two crooked, murdering Communists in Europe—Stalin and Tito—and that we could help ourselves by strengthening the smaller one, Tito, to fight the bigger one, Stalin. In theory that might be said to work out all right. But from a practical standpoint that idea just does not work. We helped Stalin to fight Hitler. What happened? Just what I feared. Hitler went down in defeat. With our help, Stalin rose to power; with our help, became a military giant, threatens our existence, has caused the death of thousands of our men. Are we to repeat our error? I would not trust either Stalin or Tito. I would not give either anything. We do not know just when they will get together, turn on us, and rip us up the back. Let them fight it out; let us look to our own defenses.

PRIVATE CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Private Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first individual bill on the Private Calendar.

GERDA MOLLER ULDALL AND HER SON, MIKKEL MOLLER

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1344) for the relief of Gerda Moller Uldall and her son, Mikkel Moller.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws Gerda Moller Uldall and her son, Mikkel Moller, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of their last entry into the United States upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Denmark.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELMER BELLER

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1528) for the relief of Elmer Beller.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Elmer Beller (formerly an employee of the Office of War Information), the sum of $8,593.05. Such sum shall be in full compensation of his claim against the United States for hospital and medical expenses paid by him as the result of an injury received on August 18, 1944, while training for service with the Psychological Warfare Division, SHAEF: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

SEC. 2. Nothing contained in this act shall require the said Elmer Beller to repay any sums received by him as compensation for such injuries under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARNE POST, NO. 28, AMERICAN LEGION, NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. VA.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3250) for the relief of Marne Post, No. 28, American Legion, New Martinsville, W. Va.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Marne Post, No. 28, American Legion, New Martinsville, W. Va., the sum of $100 in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for reimbursement of expenses incurred in providing transportation for James L. Anderson, a veteran, from New Martinsville, W. Va., to the Veterans' Hospital, Roanoke, Va., on January 18, 1950: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LAMM LUMBER CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3965) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Lamm Lumber Co.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 2103 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 25, sec. 81) and notwithstanding any statute of limitations or lapse of time or any limitation upon the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims with respect to claims upon any contract implied in law, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such court to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Lamm Lumber Co. either against the United States in a fiduciary capacity for the Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians or against said Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians in connection with the contract construed by such court in its decision dated January 12, 1938, in the case of Lamm Lumber Co. against the United States (86 C. Cls. 171).

SEC. 2. The amount of any judgment awarded by the Court of Claims upon such claim shall not exceed the amount of the judgment heretofore awarded by such court in the case of Lamm Lumber Co. against the United States (86 C. Cls. 171, 188).

SEC. 3. Suit upon such claim may be instituted by or on behalf of the Lamm Lumber Co. at any time within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act. Proceedings for the determination of such claim and review thereof shall be had as in the case of claims over which such court has jurisdiction under section 1491 of title 28 of the United States Code, and the Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians shall be entitled to be represented in such proceedings, if they so desire, by legal counsel employed in conformity with the provisions of section 2103 of the Revised Statutes (25 U. S. C. 81). In the trial of any such suit the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine any defenses available under the rules of law and equity applicable to contracts made by the United States, defenses of waiver or estoppel based on the course of dealing between the parties, and defenses based on mistake of law or fact, including any failure to collect sums payable under the contract involved in such suit by reason of mistake of law or fact, and shall determine the liability, if any, of the parties defendant as the facts and law require. Parol evidence shall be admissible for the purposes of proving or disproving such defenses notwithstanding any limitation upon the admissibility of parole evidence in suits involving contracts in writing. Any set-off, counterclaim, claim for damages, or other demand set up on the part of any defendant shall be heard and determined by the court in accordance with the provisions of section 2508 of title 28 of the United States Code.

SEC. 4. Any part of any judgment rendered hereunder which represents sums actually deposited to the credit of said Klamath and Modoc Tribes and Yahooskin Band of Snake Indians for timber cut from tribal lands shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon appropriation by the Congress, from any funds in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of said tribe. Any other part of any judgment rendered shall be payable in the same manner as in the case of claims over which the Court of Claims has jurisdiction under section 1491 of title 28 of the United States Code.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FOREST LUMBER CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3966) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Forest Lumber Co.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

There was no objection.

ALGOMA LUMBER CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3967) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Algoma Lumber Co. and its successors in interest, George R. Birkelund and Charles E. Siddall, of Chicago, Ill., and Kenyon T. Fay, of Los Angeles, Calif., trustees of the Algoma Lumber Liquidation Trust.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

There was no objection.

ZYGMUNT PAKULA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2466) for the relief of Zygmunt Pakula.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General be, and he is hereby, directed to cancel forthwith the outstanding warrant of arrest, order of deportation, warrant of deportation, and bond, if any, in the case of the alien Zygmunt Pakula (also known as Pakuta), now residing in Cambridge, Mass. Hereafter, for the purpose of the immigration and naturalization laws, such alien shall be considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence on November 24, 1945, at the port of Boston.

Upon enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the Polish quota for the first year that the said Polish quota number is available.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That, in the administration of the immigration laws, section 4 of the Displaced Persons Act, as amended (62 Stat. 1011· U. S. C., 50 App. 1953), shall be held to be applicable to Zygmunt Pakula, a native of Poland, notwithstanding the illegal nature of his entry on November 24, 1945."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARIO PUCCI

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6500) for the relief of Mario Pucci.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Mario Pucci, who entered the United States at the port of New York on July 29, 1948, as a visitor, shall be deemed to have entered as a permanent resident on that date.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is instructed to deduct one number from the current quota for Italy.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Mario Pucci, Giacomo Favetti, Giuseppe Omati, Vincenzo Andreani, Lambruno Sarzanini, and Alessandro Costa shall be considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the respective dates of their entry into the United States at the port of New York, N. Y., upon the payment by them of the required visa fees and head taxes.

"SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct six numbers from the quota for Italy for the first year that such quota is available."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Mario Pucci, Giacomo Favetti, Giuseppe Omati, Vincenzo Andreani, Lambruno Sarzanini, and Alessandro Costa."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARIA MANFRINI

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 9286) for the relief of Maria Manfrini.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, solely for the purpose of section 4 (a) and section 9 of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended, Maria Manfrini shall be considered the alien natural-born child of his adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Manfrini, United States citizens.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CAPT. MARCIANO O. GARCES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 9845) for the relief of Capt. Marciano O. Garces.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Capt. Marciano O. Garces, of Cebu City, Republic of the Philippines, the sum or $810, in full settlement of all claims against the United States in reimbursement of a like sum of money advanced by him on May 21, 1942, to an officer of the United States Army for the purpose of hiring laborers to bring food to a Japanese prison camp for the use of American and Filipino prisoners of war held therein: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RUGGIERO DICOSTANZO

The Clerk called the bill (S. 297) for the relief of Ruggiero DiCostanzo.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Attorney General of the United States shall record the lawful admission for permanent residence of Ruggiero DiCostanzo, a native of Italy, as of July 28, 1947, the date on which he was originally admitted to the United States as a visitor upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax.

SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference portion of the quota for Italy for the first year that such quota is available.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

IRENE GEORGE LIVANOS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 995) for the relief of Irene George Livanos.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, Irene George Livanos, of New York, N. Y., shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of November 24, 1947, the date of her last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. Upon enactment of this act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Greece.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

E. J. ALBRECHT CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 752) for the relief of the E. J. Albrecht Co.

Mr. D'EWART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

S. A. HEALY CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1816) for the reimbursement of the S. A. Healy Co.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the S. A. Healy Co., as the contractor under contracts numbered NOy–12759 and NOy–19806, amounts not to exceed $51,485.99 and $40,887.97 under the respective contracts, as reimbursement for, and in settlement of, claims against the United States for increased compensation resulting from action by the Government's Wage Adjustment Board in authorizing increases in the rates of wages payable under the contracts: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000: Provided further, That the said sum of $92,373.96 shall be accepted in full payment of every claim of every kind or character involved in this transaction between the S. A. Healy Co. and the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STEPHEN A. PATKAY AND WIFE

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2179) for the relief of Stephen A. Patkay and his wife, Madeleine.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws Stephen A. Patkay and his wife, Madeleine, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of December 23, 1947, the date of their last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head taxes and visa fees,

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number each from the nonpreference categories of the first available immigration quotas for nationals of Hungary and France.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SHAOUL MINASHI SHAMI ET AL.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2420) for the relief of Shaoul Minashi Shami, Emily Shami, Joseph Clement Shami, and Charles Henry Shami.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, the aliens, Shaoul Minashi Shami, Emily Shami, Joseph Clement Shami, and Charles Henry Shami, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date on which they last arrived in the United States, upon the payment of the visa fees and head taxes. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct the necessary numbers from the appropriate quotas for the first year that such quotas are available.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOUIS E. GABEL

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2702) for the relief of Louis E. Gabel.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Louis E. Gabel, an individual trading as Gabel Construction Co., of Orlando, Fla., the sum of $38,956.42, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for uncompensated losses and damages sustained by him under contract No. NOY–9336, for the construction of a water-softening plant at Florida City, Fla., for the navy yard at Key West, Fla., as a result of a delay in receiving materials and equipment provided for in said contract: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JOHAN WILHELM ADRIAANS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2799) for the relief of Johan Wilhelm Adriaans.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, the alien Johan Wilhelm Adriaans shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of June 20, 1949, the date on which he was admitted as a visitor, upon payment of head tax and visa fee. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANGELA MARIA PISANO

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2803) for the relief of Angela Maria Pisano.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of sections 4 (a) and 9 of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended, Angela Maria Pisano shall be deemed to be the natural-born alien child of Mrs. Mary Levato, a citizen of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MAGDALENA L. JARDELEZA, JR.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2961) for the relief of Magdalena L. Jardeleza, Jr.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding order and warrant of deportation, warrant of arrest, and bond, which may have been issued in the case of Magdalena L. Jardeleza, Jr., of Washington, D. C. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the said Magdalena L. Jardeleza, Jr., shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and order have issued.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the said Magdalena L. Jardeleza, Jr., shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of the Republic of the Philippines.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CHEN HUA HUANG

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2968) for the relief of Chen Hua Huang.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purpose of the immigration and naturalization laws, Chen Hua Huang shall be held and considered to be the natural-born alien minor child of Mr. and Mrs. Chun Ku Huang, citizens of the United States, and shall be deemed to be a nonquota immigrant within the purview of sections 4 (a) and 9 of the Immigration Act of 1924.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DIONISIO AGUIRRE IRASTORZA

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3066) for the relief of Dionisio Aguirre Irastorza.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Dionisio Aguirre Irastorza, of Mountain Home, Idaho, who was admitted into the United States on a temporary visa, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon the payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Spain.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANDRES AGUIRRE IRASTORZA

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3067) for the relief of Andres Aguirre Irastorza.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Andres Aguirre Irastorza, of Twin Falls, Idaho, who was admitted into the United States on a temporary visa, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon the payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Spain.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MASTER STANLEY (ZACHNE) HILLER

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3091) for the relief of Master Stanley (Zachne) Hiller.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Master Stanley (Zachne) Hiller shall be deemed to be the natural-born alien child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Berger, citizens of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KIYOMI KITAMURA

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3329) for the relief of Kiyomi Kitamura.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the immigration laws relating to the exclusion of aliens inadmissible because of race shall not hereafter apply to Kiyomi Kitamura, the Japanese fiancée of James W. Whitfield, a citizen of the United States and a member of the United States Marine Corps, and that Kiyomi Kitamura may be eligible for a visa as a nonimmigrant temporary visitor for a period of 3 months: Provided, That the administrative authorities find that the said Kiyomi Kitamura is coming to the United States with a bona fide intention of being married to said James W. Whitfield, and that she is found otherwise admissible under the immigration laws. In the event the marriage between the above-named parties does not occur within 3 months after the entry of said Kiyomi Kitamura, she shall be required to department from the United States, and upon failure to do so shall be deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (U. S. C., title 8, secs. 155 and 156). In the event the marriage between the above-named parties shall occur within 3 months after the entry of said Kiyomi Kitamura, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of said Kiyomi Kitamura as of the date of her entry into the United States, upon the payment by her of the required fees and head tax.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LEE YEE YEN

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3406) for the relief of Lee Yee Yen.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Lee Yee Yen, the minor child of Lee Bing Hong, a citizen of the United States, shall be deemed to be eligible for admission into the United States under the provisions of sections 4 (a) and 9 of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended, if otherwise admissible under the immigration laws.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARTINA ARNAIZ ZARANDONA (SISTER BLANCA EUGENIA)

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3430) for the relief of Martina Arnaiz Zarandona (Sister Blanca Eugenia).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Martina Arnaiz Zarandona (Sister Blanca Eugenia), a nun in the Order of the Religious of Assumption, presently residing in Miami, Fla., shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of her last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VICTOR FRANCIS OBERSCHALL

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3444) for the relief of Victor Francis Oberschall.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Victor Francis Oberschall shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BARBARA SUGIHARA

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3484) for the relief of Barbara Sugihara.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws of the United States, the provisions of section 13 (c) of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 213 (c)), which excludes from admission to the United States persons who are ineligible to citizenship, shall not hereafter apply to Barbara Sugihara, of Hiroshima, Japan, the minor daughter of Mary Sugihara, a citizen of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ELLA STUFKA AND HER SON

The Clerk called the bill (S. 4072) for the relief of Ella Stufka and her son.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Ella Stufka, the fiancée of John Donald Webb, a United States citizen and an honorably discharged veteran of World War II, and her son, Thomas Roland, may be eligible for visas as nonimmigrant visitors for a period of 3 months: Provided, That the administrative authorities find that the said Ella Stufka is coming to the United States with a bona fide intention of being married to said John Donald Webb and that she is found otherwise admissible under the immigration laws. In the event the marriage between the above-named parties does not occur within 3 months after the entry of said Ella Stufka, and her son, Thomas Roland, they shall be required to depart from the United States and upon failure to do so shall be deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (U. S. C., title 8, secs. 155 and 156). In the event the marriage between the above-named parties shall occur within 3 months after the entry of said Ella Stufka, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of said Ella Stufka and her son, Thomas Roland, as of the date of their entry into the United States, upon the payment by them of the required fees and head taxes.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PAMELA BENTLEY

The Clerk called the bill (S. 4074) for the relief of Pamela Bentley.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws,

Pamela Bentley shall be held and considered to be the natural-born alien minor child of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Griffin, citizens of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SOUTHERN FIREPROOFING CO., OF CINCINNATI, OHIO

The Clerk called the bill (S. 4111) for the relief of the Southern Fireproofing Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States Tax Court to finally determine the amount, if any, of excessive profits received or accrued by Jacob Lichter and Jennie L. Lichter, partners doing business as Southern Fireproofing Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, in an amount either less than, equal to, or greater than that determined by the Secretary of War (now the Secretary of the Army) for the calendar year 1942, under the applicable provisions of the Renegotiation Act of 1942, as amended: Provided, That the suit authorized hereunder shall be instituted within 90 days after the effective date of this act: Provided further, That the passage of this act shall not be construed as an inference of liability on the part of the Government of the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PATENT IN FEE TO JAMES CHESTER STEVENS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 3519) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to James Chester Stevens.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue a patent in fee to James Chester Stevens for the following-described lands in the State of Montana: The east half of the northwest quarter, the west half of the northeast quarter, the west half of the east half of northeast quarter, the east half of the southwest quarter, and the southeast quarter of section 22, and the west half of the southwest quarter of section 23, township 9 south, range 33 east, Montana principal meridian, containing approximately five hundred and twenty acres.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF JOSEPH UMBERTO MONTALBAN-TROY

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8136) for the relief of Joseph Umberto Montalban-Troy, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert "That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Giuseppe Umberto Montalban-Troy, of Boise, Idaho, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his actual entry into the United States, upon the payment by him of the visa fee of $10 and the head tax of $8.

"SEC. 2. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available Italian immigration quota."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act for the relief of Giuseppe Umberto Mantalban-Troy."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LAMM LUMBER CO.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings by which the bill (H. R. 3965) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Lamm Lumber Co. was passed be vacated and the bill be restored to the calender.

I make this request for the reason that it is in the same category as the next two bills which were passed over. Furthermore, the attorneys for the lumber companies and the attorneys for the Indians are now in conference here in Washington, and they advised me this morning that they thought they might get together.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota?

Mr. LANE. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully regret that I must object. I object.

THE FATE OF THE KOREANS

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, we are approaching the Christmas season when our thoughts are focused on peace on earth, good will toward men.

Last night I read in the Washington Star, as I presume many others did, a news item which called attention to the fact that many of the Koreans were suffering undue hardship, terrific hardship, because the war cost them the loss of homes, food, loved ones, and the loss of faith and hope. I call your attention particularly to this portion of the story:

NATIVES WATCH SADLY

The natives of Hungnam and Hamhung were aware of the evacuation. Some stood off in the distance and watched sadly as the ships were loaded.

For days, hundreds of frightened refugees had been pouring in from the mountains to escape probable death at the hands of the Chinese.

An American-educated doctor living in Hungnam said, "We had expected that we could now really enjoy freedom and democracy with United Nations help * * * but look now."

To reveal his name would endanger his life.

"Our people here know that when the Americans are evacuated most of the citizens of this area will be killed by the Chinese and North Korean Communists," he said.

"They will know that we cooperated with the Americans and they will kill us all. We would like to go. We can't escape by land because we are cut off on all sides. If we could only go with you we would go only as we are. We ask only that our lives be saved.

"There are a lot of young men here who would like to join the United Nations forces. You need men. We have men."

But there was little chance that they could be saved. Time was too precious and shipping space was too short.

DISAPPOINTED IN AMERICANS

The doctor said his people were disappointed in the Americans.

"They understand that the United Nations were defeated because of overpowering hordes of Chinese Communists who came down from Manchuria, but they feel that the Americans are deserting them in a time of great need.

"They will find it hard to ever trust the American promises of democracy again."

The short, brown-eyed doctor said, "You can see that our people here have no place to flee. We are not as fortunate as our friends over in Pyongyang (the capital of Red Korea). They could flee south where there were no Chinese.

"But we who are trapped around Hamhung and Hungnam have no place to turn. Our backs are to the sea. If only we could be saved."

Some troops who lived in Hamhung or Hungnam became friends with Korean youngsters. They affectionately called them "boysan" (boy).

Some said they should try to take them along. The little boys were willing.

One officer said, "We would like to take all of them but we just cannot."

One of the great tragedies of war is the suffering of those innocent men, women, and children who are pawns in the great cross current of battle too terrible to comprehend.

Many of these people have lost hope and in great suffering flee from the advancing aggressor in the hope that the United Nations somehow might be able to help them.

It makes me feel the great weakness we labor under in seeking to bring peace to the world and in keeping faith with those who have put their trust in us.

It is my profound hope that as many as possible of these people may be rescued and that those who survive will one day realize that we will do our best—that we do not willingly abandon them to their fate.

It is sad that after all these centuries in which men have sought peace on earth and good will toward men we again approach the holy season of Christmas knowing that all is not well in the world.

Let us all hope and pray that the day will come when the little, innocent people of the world can live without the fear of oppression, starvation, and destructive war.

GOLGOTHA IN KOREA

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LYLE. Mr. Speaker, today I received a letter from a dear friend, a godly woman who is a teacher in Incarnate Word Convent in Corpus Christi, Tex., Sister Benedict. She enclosed a poem written by a young American soldier in Korea which I shall insert in the RECORD with the hope that all of the Members will read it, for they cannot do so without profit.

Truly this is a great land, Mr. Speaker, a great land inhabited by great people with great hearts. Crisis is not uncommon in our heritage. Our weapons for victory against our enemies are not available to them, for no slave nation that has outlawed God can manufacture the power that comes to a nation whose individuals believe in and have faith in God, nor can they strike the spark that will kindle the spirit to fight that is ever-present in the breasts of freemen.

Mr. Speaker, it is my sincere prayer that those of us here, charged with authority, may act with all speed, with all wisdom and forthrightness that the millions of young Melvin Nicholsons may not have fought in vain.

(The poem reads as follows:)

TO A MOTHER'S SON

O Lovely Lady—come bend
Thy ear to my plea,
For long have I endeavored
To love you and your Divine Son.
My lips are muted now
By the pain
Of these wounds.
I have wept here in these Muddy waters
And mingled my
Salt with their filth.
The enemy is about me
Slaughtering my brothers,
And pouring forth
Blood upon the rice.
I have no other solace
Save prayer.

(This I commission to carry to your Son):

"O Lord, O God—
O Triune One,
I was born in a land
Of quiet towns
And bristling cities.
I loved life and
Laughter and wine and song.
I was free,
I was young,
I had all gifts of Thy treasure—
And knew no cold,
Nor war,
Nor hate,
Nor far-off lands
Where brewed disaster.
Now I lay on
A field of blood
In a far-off land;
A bewildered,
Helpless child—
Dying for a people
Not my own
And yet my own
In the brotherhood of man.
O Lord, grant me this Last plea—
That those who
Rule and are destined
For power—
May know that Man must be free—
For this I have given
My last breath
My last bit of life.
Turn back hate,
O Lord.
Conquer all with Thy love—
Fill mankind's soul
With charity
That others will not
Have to die like this."

Lovely One, Mater Dei,
I am so weary now,
So cold and weak—
Come let me
Lay my muddy head
On your bosom.
Wipe away my grime
With your veil,
For once—far off—
Thy heart ached
And longed
To press another bloody,
Sweat-streaked brow
To your breast—
Your Son's Golgotha in Palestine.
My Golgotha in Korea.

—Melvin Nicholson (Korea, October 1950).

REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE TOMORROW MORNING

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce, at the request of the minority leader, that there will be a Republican conference in this room tomorrow morning at 10:30.

Mr. PHILLIPS of California. Is it this room or is it the caucus room?

Mr. MICHENER. It will be this room. The caucus room is all torn up.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAVITS] is recognized for 15 minutes.

FOUR POINTS FOR PEACE

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. Speaker, the situation in the Far East has put the United States on the alert as to the grave situation which is now facing the whole world, for we have learned that the Russians propose to use force, whether directly or by proxy—as through the North Korean and Chinese Communists. We have learned also that this force is to be utilized for aggression through populations more massive in size than anything the world has ever known before to be so used.

Obviously the Soviet Union, which it is generally accepted was behind the North Korean aggression against South Korea and is now behind Communist China's aggression there against the United Nations, is now on a new level of its effort to subvert the world for communism. On this level of the aggressive use of massive military power, anything may be expected anywhere at any time. Under these circumstances, the American people have a right to feel that the efforts which we were making before in the fight against communism to increase our military forces and those of the other free peoples, to greatly increase production, to avoid inflation, to put ourselves in a position for the maximum economic effort on behalf of the underdeveloped areas and the unreconstructed economies of the free peoples and to explain the actions and aspirations of the free peoples to the world must now be succeeded by efforts on a new level commensurate with the increase in the threat directed against us and all the other free peoples.

I am convinced, and I believe many Americans are convinced, that our time is much shorter than we think, that we will require great forces in being not later than next spring—4 to 6 months away—if we are to discourage the Communist aggressors from moving against the free world on an even larger scale than they already have in the Far East and, indeed, from unmasking and moving directly in Western Europe.

With these considerations in mind and speaking as an American and as a Representative in the Congress of a community deeply concerned about our national security, as are all Americans, and about the remedies for it, I make the following four-point recommendation for peace:

First. Mobilization: Declare the United States in a national emergency and step up industrial production 50 percent on a wartime basis. Consider the marshaling and the training of a substantial part of the proposed West European army here in the United States where it will be out of reach of the Russians. Concentrate immediately upon establishing and equipping 20 effective divisions by the spring of 1951; as an interim measure activate, if need be, National Guard and Reserve units to meet this goal while giving Europe its chance to rearm. Accelerate materially the 1952 target date for the 82-group Air Force, and advise the United Nations under the terms of the resolution of the General Assembly of November 3, 1950, that such air power is available to defeat aggression. Reactivate enough shipping to transport, if need be, these forces to repel aggression where it strikes or threatens.

Second. Economic: Launch a broad-scale offensive to improve standards of living for the free peoples of the world and to increase their defense capabilities, under an expanded program of technical assistance. Back this up by an investment program of sufficient magnitude to impress the peoples of underdeveloped areas like India, and other Asiatic countries, that there is real hope, through us, for improvement in their conditions of life. Such a program we should be willing to support with a capital investment of $10,000,000,000 and a 50-year life; most of which investment will come back to us. It will require the mobilization of United States technicians and businessmen as never before, joint Government and business development activities, and a direct tie-in with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. Investment in Asia should be largely through United Nations agencies like the World Bank, as best designed to effect the end result in that part of the world.

Third. Ideological: Greatly expand our information media reaching the Soviet-bloc peoples. But also do a Voice of America job in the United States and among the free peoples who will be benefited by our technical assistance and investment program.

Fourth. Equality of sacrifice: Impose price controls now on basic cost-of-living items as a condition upon which wage-stabilization formulae may be developed in high-level collective-bargaining conferences. Make sure of equality of distribution of scarce goods and services. Levy excess-profits and similar taxes on a wartime basis. Be scrupulously fair with respect to family obligations, hardship, essential employment, and length of previous military service in the calling up of men and women for the armed services.

One other point is important. Americans everywhere are thinking deeply about the conviction and zeal with which the free peoples are prepared to resist the aggression of communism and of Communists. We want to do everything we can to marshal in the free world the greatest moral conviction as an incentive to the willingness to work and to accept the hardship which may be required for the free peoples to win.

With these views in mind, Mr. Speaker, I have suggested to the President that the situation is also changed with respect to the assignment which, it seems to be an open secret, the President has in mind for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. It is commonly supposed that General Eisenhower is destined to be appointed as supreme commander of the North Atlantic Treaty forces. Before the situation in Korea developed as it did, that was undoubtedly logical and certainly deserved. The situation being what it is today, I believe there is a higher call for General Eisenhower's services. What he so justly means to the country should now be utilized in its broadest sense in the national interest, and this requires, I believe, that he should be put in overall charge of the mobilization effort, under the President, a position popularly considered that of "Assistant President."

Important as is the military phase alone, I believe that in the position which I have suggested, General Eisenhower would have a post of broader responsibility and one in which that confidence in him of the American people, which he so well deserves, will have even greater opportunity for expressing itself in effort and enthusiasm with respect to the mobilization effort. This is very necessary to inspire the American people in that leadership of the free peoples of the world so essential to our very survival and to theirs.

Our time, I repeat, is much shorter than we think. The President, in his message to us of December 1, 1950, on this crisis, calling for additional appropriations for defense for the Atomic Energy Commission, referred to the fact that the aggression by Communist China in Korea "casts a more ominous shadow over the prospects for world peace." The message also closed on the following note. The President said:

> In this critical time the national interest is paramount, and all partisan or selfish considerations must be subordinated.

These recommendations which I have just made, Mr. Speaker, are designed to carry out the purpose and the spirit of the President's message in realistic terms and are based upon the fact that today time, as lawyers say, is of the essence.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may have until midnight tonight to file a report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BRYSON] is recognized for 30 minutes.

COTTON TEXTILES IMPORTED FROM INDIA

Mr. BRYSON. Mr. Speaker, entwined in the very warp and woof of our national economy is the production of raw cotton and the manufacture of cotton textiles. All my mature life has been spent in close proximity to cotton and its products. My very livelihood depends on it, for I represent the largest cotton-growing and cotton-spinning and weaving electorate in these United States. My very kith and kin owe their livelihood to it. Anything that affects cotton and its production in the United States, therefore, affects me.

As a wise man said in olden times, "Whereof the heart is full, the mouth must speak." I am always concerned with cotton, and hence I rise again to speak on its behalf in this country of ours.

Mr. Speaker, on August 29 I spoke in this very House against the increased importation of cotton textiles from Japan. At that time I showed how the Japanese cotton textile industry was being rehabilitated, how it has been given new life, as it were, by having factories redesigned and having new machinery installed, thus creating greater production than before the war. I showed how low Japanese labor costs are. In fact, they are 12 times less than those in this country. I showed how the terrific advantage gained by devaluation has more than offset our present tariffs on imported cotton textiles. In addition, I showed how our tariff reductions are working to the benefit of foreign nations; how our customs procedures have been simplified, and that we are manifesting a great willingness to assist foreign countries to export their goods to the United States so as to obtain scarce dollars. I showed how our national foreign policy is oriented toward the giving of economic aid and assisting nations to get their economies on a sound footing; in fact, we are assisting industries in foreign areas which will compete with our own in this fair land of ours. I showed what effects the increasing imports from the textile production of Europe and Japan will have on the textile industry and other related industries in this country. You and I have been told repeatedly how the textile production in Europe is currently 20 percent greater than prewar, how the Japanese textile industry has been rehabilitated; in fact, how Japanese industry has gone so far as to produce modern textile machinery which machinery is being exported in large quantities, thereby assisting other nations to expand their cotton textile production. It is with these facts in mind as background terms of reference that I wish to draw your attention today to the Republic of India, one of the newer Dominions of the British Commonwealth.

The Republic of India is one of the largest cotton growing areas in the world, second only to these United States. At the same time, according to trade statistics her principal import is raw cotton.

Mr. Speaker, you may recall how Great Britain's textile industry was built up by the export of cotton textiles to India. Yet, Mr. Speaker, today the very mills in Lancastershire and Lanarkshire in England are importing cotton sheetings from India.

India is the looming menace in the cotton textile world. She is rapidly taking over traditional British markets, even to the extent of selling her products in England itself. She is rapidly taking the Japanese traditional markets in the Indian and Pacific Ocean areas. In fact, she has learned from Japan to use well-known chop-marked goods—brands—without permission of the Japanese owners, and underselling Japan in her own markets. Furthermore, she is rapidly orienting the economies of large areas in the world toward her own by buying their major cotton crops, notably in the lands surrounding the Indian Ocean.

Now we find her on our shores. Her knock may sound timid at present in the over-all picture, and under the stress and strain of rearming ourselves for a greater conflict—a regirding of our loins as it were for battle—we may be inclined to minimize the menace of the coming insistent knocking on our door by the Indian textile community.

Mr. Speaker, you may have seen the statements in the influential Journal of Commerce or the Wall Street Journal about the increasing influx of Indian textiles into the United States market. I am sure that many of my colleagues here who also represent cotton have no doubt been importuned to do something about this importation and the impending torrent of such imports from India. I mention specifically the flood of cotton sheeting that is coming in in increasing quantities. Mr. Speaker, allow me to expatiate a bit on the insidious character of this new trading opponent which we cotton men have to face.

Indian exporters are sending us cloths of a merchantable character and which are being bought because of our national emergency. At the same time we have been told that we in the United States are confronted with a real or fancied sheeting shortage. Certain importers in this country are beginning to know Indian methods of business as well as their standards of textile products. They are also beginning to know the available quantities and qualities of Indian textiles, and because of the decided price advantage, in spite of our tariffs, are placing large bookings for future delivery. I am vitally concerned with the competitive prospects when these enormous bookings materialize and Indian textiles flood our markets.

Since the Indian textiles mills are beginning to supplant British and Japanese traditional markets, which markets require mostly coarse and medium cloths, a very large proportion of such manfacture will go primarily to the soft currency or sterling area. A small proportion is finding its way to the dollar markets, but it is the better cloths, such as sheeting, which is finding its way in ever-increasing quantities to the American market. It is this better class sheeting that is competing with our medium cloths at a decided price advantage.

Mr. Speaker, why are these Indian textiles so cheap? The reasons may be simply noted:

First. I have noted before that India is the second largest cotton-growing area in the world. She, therefore, has access to large quantities of home-grown short-staple cotton. Most of her older mills are using this type of cotton.

Second. There was a throttling of imports from her fellow Dominion of Pakistan so that the denial of that traditional market to Indian textiles has made more textiles available for other markets.

Third. At the same time, the Republic of Pakistan used to supply a substantial portion of India's raw cotton. Arrangements have not yet been finalized whereby this raw cotton finds its way into Indian mills. There has thus been a pronounced effort to expand the production of Indian cotton.

Fourth. There is the stimulating effect of devaluation of the Indian rupee, which devaluation has given India a decided advantage over the exports from Pakistan which has refused to devalue its money.

Fifth. In addition, there is a Government need for dollars. The sterling area has been able to supply only a limited portion of India's needs for machinery and other imported goods. Perforce, therefore, India has had to turn to the dollar area for the balance of her requirements. She needs dollars and she is making every effort to obtain as many dollars as possible to pay for her ever-increasing needs.

Sixth. I have another fact in mind, namely, a Government subsidy on raw cotton from overseas. This fact has not yet been conclusively proved, although there is current information that the Indian Government is subsidizing part of the cost of raw cotton to Indian mills. It has been stated that Indian mills pay only 68.5 percent of world cotton prices, and the Government then foots the difference of the bill. As I said, this fact has not yet been conclusively substantiated, but if there is a semblance of truth in it, then I fear that our private enterprise system in this country will have to compete with a governmental cartel to the disadvantage of our free system.

Seventh. One further fact that I should draw to your attention, namely, is the matter of price controls in India. There are strict regulations under which mills may charge only a specific profit of 14 percent to their retailers, and these in turn may charge only a specific profit from the consuming public of 14 percent. Exporters have now been advised that they may not charge more than the current domestic price for goods exported, but may even charge less. I will come back to that point in a few minutes.

Let me diverge for a few moments on the production of raw cotton. The average annual production of raw cotton in India amounts to approximately 3,000,000 bales—392 pounds per bale. As I stated before, there is a pronounced effort to increase the production of long-staple fiber by the importation of newer strains, and the reclamation of large areas of unused land.

In spite of this large production, there is also a large import of raw cotton. For example, during 1949, India imported 1,026,678 bales of raw cotton—392 pounds net weight. Since devaluation in September 1949, the Indian Government has made enough foreign exchange available for the importation of 800,000 bales of cotton, even at rising world prices. This cotton will come mainly from East Africa, Egypt, British areas, and California.

India also exports raw cotton, mainly short-staple fiber, which fiber is used in the making of mattresses and upholstery. Chief importers are the United States and Belgium. There is an export duty on this type of cotton of 100 rupees or $20.94 per bale. At present the limit of 200,000 bales has been license for export in 1950.

As regards the production of cotton textiles, India has two methods of manufacture, namely, power looms and hand looms. Her optimum annual production is approximately 6,300,000,000 yards; divided into 4,800,000,000 yards for power looms and 1,500,000,000 yards for hand looms. Official production of cotton cloth in India has been as follows:

	Million yards
1947	3,761.97
1948	4,319.45
1949	3,909.75
1950	4,000.00

An export quota of 800,000,000 yards has been set for 1950, and this export target is exclusive of exports of fine and super-fine cloths and hand loom cloths, as well as the export of any cloths to the so-called hard currency or dollar areas. The expectation is that during 1950, the Indian export total of cotton textiles will amount to approximately 1,000,000,000 yards. In other words, approximately 25 percent of the anticipated production will be exported.

Mr. Speaker, in several of my previous speeches on the competition of Japanese textiles, I mentioned the fact that the newest and most modern up-to-date textile machinery is also being manufactured in Japan. And I mentioned the hundreds of thousands of new spindles being exported to India. Many of the mills of India have installed these new spindles, and this modern, efficient machinery is producing cotton textiles in ever-increasing quantities. Why, Mr. Speaker, one could send to the Library of Congress for a copy of the Indian Textile Journal and check for one's self the large number of Japanese firms supplying the most modern power looms to India. If the trend continues, then the increase in the number of power looms in India will be astounding.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw your attention to the matter of wages prevailing in the textile industry in India. As you are well aware, we have a minimum wage law in this country guaranteeing 75 cents an hour to the lowest paid worker in any of our textile mills. Yet, the average textile wage is far higher, namely, $1.12 per hour. This is three times as high as wages prevailing in the United Kingdom, and 12 times as high as wages prevailing in Japan. Now, if India's textile manufacturers claim that they can always undersell Japanese cotton textiles, when these textiles are made entirely from imported cotton, then there is sufficient evidence that in India, where such large quantities of home-grown cotton is available, labor must be very much lower than even in Japan. In fact, Mr. Speaker, wages must be on a near-starvation level. To show how the average Indian textile worker spends his meager 320 rupees annual wage, $67 per year in American money, you merely have to study statistics to note that 70 percent of his annual income goes for food, 5 percent for housing, and the balance for all other essentials of life.

And yet, Mr. Speaker, when one studies such influential papers as the Indian Textile Journal, the Indian Export and Importer, the Eastern Economist, as well as the Indian Cotton Growing Review, one finds that the Indian textile worker is considered so well paid that he has, therefore, the least case for asking an increase in wages in India today. When the textile worker is considered to be so well off, I shudder to think what the wages in other industries must be. And, yet, the product of the very textile industry, produced by this so-called well-paid laborer may be, ironically, the very products that compete on our domestic market at a decided price advantage.

Mr. Speaker, soon after partition of the land area of India into the two Republics of India and Pakistan, the Government of the Republic of India instituted a cotton textile development plan. This over-all planning agency announced that 75 cotton mills should be established immediately. Thus far, of this total, 2 mills came into production in 1948, 10 in 1949, and 19 in 1950. The balance should be in production in the near future.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned with the competition that these new mills will offer to us.

I mentioned price control before. In order to obtain revenue, the newly constituted Indian Government imposed export duties on all exports, but to enable India to obtain precious dollars by expanding the export of cotton textiles, this export duty on cotton textiles was repealed in June 1949. Internal price-control regulations limited the amount of profit a mill may charge a retailer, and he, in turn, the consumer. This internal price control on the movement of cotton has now been made applicable to cotton moving to all destinations. In other words, cotton for export is to be made available by the exporter with a profit that cannot be more than charged to the domestic consumer. Since domestically produced cotton textiles in India are very cheap, such textiles, when exported, therefore, can be quoted at a very low price, considering the devaluation of the Indian rupee, as well as the low-import duties in the United States. As the influential Indian Textile Journal said in August 1950:

The difference between the price levels of the Indian textile products and those of other countries are so profound that even the weaker mills will get a stimulus, as during the war.

If the less efficient mills in India—whose overhead costs are higher than the highly modern, efficient mills—can make a handsome profit, how much the more can such a profit be made by the highly efficient mills.

Mr. Speaker, importers of Indian textiles into the United States will say that there is no competition in ordinary print cloths because Indian mills have to use imported raw cotton for making fine yarns. These higher costs, plus import duties applicable, will bring the current price levels out of range to American users. In competition with domestic products, however, Mr. Speaker, the importer does not speak for the grower or the manufacturers of cotton cloths in this country. Very seldom does the importer have the interest of the domestic producer and manufacturer at heart. He is here to make a quick profit, and especially to benefit because of the present conflict.

Allow me to bring to your attention the following. In February of this year the Honorable Mr. Neogy, Minister of Commerce of the Republic of India, stated in a speech before the Export Advisory Council, meeting in New Delhi, the following concerning the export of fine and superfine cloths:

I hope everything possible will be done to increase exports of these varieties by selling at the barest possible margins, and even at cost, if necessary. To facilitate exports of fine and superfine varieties, we have decided to fix a rebate of the import duty on imported cotton in this country of such textiles.

Mr. Speaker, if this is not a patent attempt at stating that price control need not even be applied to prices quoted to overseas importers, then I think I am misreading his words. In other words, these two varieties of cloth may even be sold at cost so as to provide dollars for India's needs. This aspect of our import trade in cotton textiles from India disturbs me profoundly, because I think that it borders on a dumping practice, which is contrary to our tariff and custom law. I do not see how our domestic producers of cotton textiles can possibly compete on this basis with the Indian textiles.

Mr. Speaker, I have, therefore, felt it incumbent upon myself to write to the Commissioner of the Bureau of Customs to express my personal concern about the increasing shipments from India, and at the same time expressing my fear that export prices of these cotton textiles may actually be lower than the fair market value of similar goods being sold in India. The dumping of such goods, if it can be proved conclusively, will incur serious injury to our domestic market. I have asked him to alert his appraisers at all ports of entry concerning this matter because if the charge of dumping can be proved conclusively, then certainly the countervailing duty section of our tariff laws should be invoked immediately.

Mr. Speaker, let me quote you one illustration of Indian competition which is taking business from all competitors. Recently, an Indian 37-inch, 48 by 44, 3.15 yard sheeting was sold in the United States at 17½ cents, duty paid. A similar Japanese construction was quoted at 24½ cents, f. o. b. The lowest American figure that can be quoted is 25 cents, if bought in this country. There simply is no competition at that price.

Mr. Speaker, I refer you once again to the Indian Textile Journal of August 1950; namely, that there is a cloth shortage in India, and that this cloth shortage is growing rapidly. The lowly Indian consumer whose annual per-capita consumption is less than 12 yards is now facing further curtailment of his minimal requirements, and, yet, we are faced with the prospect of India exporting a billion yards in 1950.

Mr. Speaker, I think that our importers of cotton textiles in this country should not be allowed to import textiles from India when this very same importation deprives the Indian himself of his lowest minimal requirements.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to stress the relentless pressure of imported cloths on our domestic economy. Our importation of countable cotton cloths from all areas is running at the rate of 82,000,000 square yards for 1950, as compared with less than 20,000,000 square yards in 1949. It has been said that even this current rate of import is misleadingly conservative, and that actual imports will be very much higher.

Mr. Speaker, most of us here remember the avalanche of Japanese goods such as velveteen, corduroy, table damask, cotton rugs, and other goods whose damaging effects proved most injurious to our domestic textile industry in the 1930's. Only the beginning of World War II stopped this trend. We have the beginning of the same competition from another quarter, namely, India. I say again, to be forewarned is to be forearmed. In my previous speeches I proved how the vast importation of one specific fabric, such as osnaberg, threatened to close mills in this country. This apparent bargain for the American consumer is being bought at the expense of 500,000 textile jobs in this country, as well as 1,500,000 cotton-growing families.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to stress the effects these incipient imports of Indian textiles will have on the United States of America.

First. We have assisted Western Europe and Japan to rehabilitate their economies. Textile production in Western Europe is 20 percent above prewar. We are already facing increasing exports from England, the Netherlands, France, Belgium, and also Japan. All of these countries can undersell us because of our high labor standards.

Second. The Indian rivulet of cotton textiles will soon grow into a little stream, and later into a torrent of unwanted textiles, not only supplanting the exports from the other areas previously mentioned but also our own domestic production.

Third. Importers of cotton textiles do not have a responsibility to the American cotton industry. They are exploiting a national emergency and actually assisting a foreign country to do injury to a vital war industry in the United States.

Fourth. If we allow this competition to increase, unemployment in the textile industry will come just as sure as fate, with concomitant suffering and relief.

Fifth. There will be injury to the farm markets and 1,500,000 cotton-growing families will have to reduce their standard of living, which is low enough as it is today.

Sixth. An injury to one segment of our important national-defense program will have repercussions on other segments.

Seventh. The American cotton-textile industry has always used American cotton; the two sections of the American cotton industry go hand in hand. Foreigners owe no allegiance to American cotton and will buy cotton where it is cheapest. If India is able to buy cotton cheaper than in the United States in either of the 80 foreign cotton-growing areas, then she will not hesitate to do so.

Eighth. India is installing modern textile machinery. Granted that we in the United States claim a threefold advantage in per operative production, how long can we maintain this advantage against increasing competition from overseas?

Ninth. Foreign countries also need dollars, and as India supplants other countries who have been getting a certain amount of dollars for their textiles in this country we should not allow her to supplant others in our home markets at the expense of these other nations.

Mr. Speaker, I think the matter is even more urgent than I have outlined, because there is now talk that there will be a semi-Government agency in India called the Textile Export Agency, which agency will have the sole right to export cotton products. In other words, all mills in India who have cotton exports will combine and, regardless of cost, millions of yards may be dumped in foreign areas.

India needs dollars, and I assure you that she will make every effort to dump these textiles on our markets. How our private-enterprise system here can possibly compete with a semigovernmental cartel is beyond my comprehension.

Mr. Speaker, we have simplified our custom procedures. We have cut down our tariffs. In fact, we have men in Torquay, England, right now negotiating for further reductions in our cotton tariffs. I think that our course of action is clear. We should stop injuring our private-enterprise system.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to reiterate that this question of cotton textile imports from India to our shores, and the subsequent competition disturbs me greatly. We are living in an age of tension and conflict. I cannot see how our national defense effort can attain its maximum potential if our very friends follow commercial practices that injure one of our primary domestic industries.

India is supplanting the cheaper Japanese competition under which our cotton industry suffered just before World War II. There is a growing shortage of cotton textiles in India, yet 1,000,000,000 yards are being exported, and a sizable portion of that total export will land here, to the detriment of our own producers. Low-cost labor, the element of cheap export prices, the devaluation of the rupee, the building up of a new, mechanized textile industry, plus the driving need for dollars, is throwing an article upon our markets that cannot do otherwise than upset one of the basic segments of our economy.

Cotton is part of the American scene, but it is the wholesome competitive aspect that I am interested in, and not the exploitation of labor and unfair competition. Allow one nation today to invade our markets successfully with just one commodity in which we are supposed to excel, and tomorrow another nation will come with another commodity. One of these days it may be newsprint, then steel, then plastics, and soon our successful industries will have to cut corners to compete on our own home markets. Gradually, dislocation spreads until private enterprise is driven to the wall.

Cotton textiles may be the first instance where potential damage may be done to our economy. I am raising my voice against unfair competition because it concerns my people, and I will continue to do so in the future. I am sounding a clarion warning against the potential threat of the flood of textiles that will hit us from India. A foreign nation like India is going to great sacrifice to obtain its export goal, even at the expense of shortages at home. I say that our efforts should not be less to protect our own cotton industry. In fact, we cannot afford, at this time in our history, to let a great industry like cotton be injured. If we do that now the flood will hit us when we are least prepared.

WILLIAM M. BOYLE, JR.

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, as a Democrat and a patriotic American I am glad to know that William M. Boyle, Jr., has made it clear that he is going to serve out his full term as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, because Mr. Boyle has consistently demonstrated that he is a political leader with the wisdom and vision to reject partisanship in areas which affect our national security and internal relations.

In a speech at a dinner of leading Democrats from all over the Nation, held in New York City on December 12, and broadcast nationally, Mr. Boyle made it plain that he would continue to serve as chairman until the Democratic National Convention in 1952 in these words:

> I believe that each of our two great parties has an important part to play in maintaining our free way of life in these times. That is why I intend to stick to my job as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. I intend to do the best I can to help make sure that democracy works at home while the free world looks to the United States to help bring victory and peace.

In this address Mr. Boyle patriotically called on the people of the United States to put aside partisanship and to work together as Americans, not as Democrats or Republicans, in meeting the serious crisis which faces our country.

I am proud of the Democratic leadership Mr. Boyle expressed in that talk and I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to insert Mr. Boyle's address in the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WELCH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a speech.

Mr. BURKE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. JENKINS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an article.

Mr. MASON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a statement by former Congressman Luckey, of Nebraska.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. COLE of Kansas asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an address by Henry A. Bubb.

Mr. HORAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. CRAWFORD asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in two instances and include in each a statement.

Mr. RICH asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

Mr. SMITH of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. JONAS asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a newspaper article.

Mr. SADLAK asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include a report from the Employment Security Division of the Department of Labor of the State of Connecticut.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks in three instances and include in each extraneous matter.

Mr. LYLE asked and was given permission to extend his remarks and include an editorial.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mrs. NORTON, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 7445. An act authorizing the village of Baudette, State of Minnesota, its public successors or public assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.;

H. R. 8546. An act to amend the Philippine Property Act of 1946;

H. R. 9484. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to effect the settlement of claims for losses and damages inflicted upon the Portuguese territory of Macao by United States Armed Forces during World War II in violation of neutral rights;

H. R. 9524. An act to supplement the District of Columbia Teachers' Leave Act of 1949; and

H. R. 9840. An act to exempt furlough travel of service personnel from the tax on transportation of persons.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. MILES. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, December 15, 1950, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1780. A letter from the Acting Secretary, Department of Agriculture, transmitting a proposed bill entitled "A bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended"; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1781. A letter from the Chairman, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, transmitting a report of professional and scientific positions in the headquarters and research stations of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, pursuant to Public Law No. 167, Eighty-first Congress; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. RANKIN: Committee on Veterans' Affairs. H. R. 8848. A bill to provide for a study of the mental and physical sequelae of malnutrition and starvation suffered by prisoners of war and civil internees during World War II; without amendment (Rept. No. 3188). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. RANKIN: Committee on Veterans' Affairs. H. R. 9900. A bill to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 27, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended; without amendment (Rept. No. 3189). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. RANKIN: Committee on Veterans' Affairs. H. R. 9911. A bill to authorize the payment by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs of a gratuitous indemnity to survivors of members of the Armed Forces who die in active service, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 3190). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HOBBS: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2513. An act to give a short title to the act of July 1, 1898, commonly known as the Bankruptcy Act; without amendment (Rept. No. 3191). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk

for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. BYRNE of New York: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1139. An act for the relief of Mrs. Robert P. Horrell; without amendment (Rept. No. 3187). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HEDRICK:

H. Con. Res. 294. Concurrent resolution to express the sense of the Congress that a civilian physical fitness and training program should be established in the interest of national security; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CROSSER:

H. Res. 883. Resolution providing for one additional clerical assistant for the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mr. RAYBURN:

H. Res. 884. Resolution granting 6 months' salary and $350 funeral expenses to Mrs. Amlye E. Aston ,widow of J. Lee Aston, late an employee of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on House Administration.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts introduced a bill (H. R. 9918) for the relief of Henry Ty, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

2411. The SPEAKER presented a petition of Francis Jean Reuter, Silver Spring, Md., relative to a redress of grievances pertaining to compensations, payments for damages, and other moneys, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1950

(Legislative day of Monday, November 27, 1950)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal Spirit, whom we seek in vain without unless we first find Thee within: In the night of the world's darkness may the hush of Thy presence fall upon our souls, quiet our minds of their fretting fear, allay the unhappy irritations and resentments of our spirits, and hallow our lives through the grace of contrition and humility. We pray for ourselves the more earnestly because we are important to others.

At this altar of prayer we are thinking of our sons and daughters, many of them in far and perilous places. We are remembering all who rely upon our strength of character, our fidelity in service, and our power to endure, to be unafraid. We would not disappoint them. As the winds grow harder, may our roots strike deeper. Whatever outward things these dangerous days take from us, by Thy grace may they make us inwardly more adequate and wise, dependable and strong. We ask it in the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. HILL, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, December 14, 1950, was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5902) for the relief of the Pan American Union.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 2466. An act for the relief of Zygmunt Pakula (also known as Pakuta);

H. R. 6500. An act for the relief of Mario Pucci, Giacomo Favetti, Guiseppe Omati, Vincenzo Andreani, Lambruno Sarzanini, and Alessandro Costa;

H. R. 9286. An act for the relief of Maria Manfrini; and

H. R. 9845. An act for the relief of Capt. Marciano O. Garces.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE

On request of Mr. WHERRY, and by unanimous consent, Mr. SCHOEPPEL was excused from attendance on the session of the Senate today.

On his own request, and by unanimous consent, Mr. KEFAUVER was excused from attendance on the sessions of the Senate on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week.

CALL OF THE ROLL—THE CALENDAR

Mr. HILL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Hill	Maybank
Anderson	Hoey	Millikin
Brewster	Holland	Morse
Bridges	Hunt	Mundt
Butler	Ives	Murray
Byrd	Jenner	Myers
Capehart	Johnson, Colo.	Neely
Carlson	Johnson, Tex.	Nixon
Chapman	Johnston, S. C.	O'Mahoney
Chavez	Kefauver	Pepper
Clements	Kem	Russell
Connally	Kerr	Saltonstall
Cordon	Kilgore	Smith, Maine
Donnell	Knowland	Smith, N. J.
Douglas	Langer	Smith, N. C.
Dworshak	Leahy	Stennis
Eastland	Lehman	Taft
Ecton	Lodge	Taylor
Ellender	Long	Thomas, Okla.
Flanders	Lucas	Thomas, Utah
Fulbright	McCarran	Thye
George	McCarthy	Tobey
Gillette	McClellan	Watkins
Gurney	McFarland	Wherry
Hayden	McKellar	Williams
Hendrickson	Magnuson	Young
Hickenlooper	Malone

Mr. MYERS. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BENTON] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. FREAR], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCMAHON], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. O'CONOR], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] are absent on public business.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a representative of the United States to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL], and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] are absent by leave of the Senate.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. FERGUSON] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business, having been appointed as a delegate from the Senate to attend the meeting of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association in Australia.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN] is absent on official business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

Under the order entered yesterday, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of bills on the calendar to which there is no objection, beginning with the first order of business thereon, which will be stated.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this time Senators may have the opportunity to make insertions in the RECORD, introduce bills and resolutions, and so forth, without debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator withhold that request for a moment, and let the first bill be stated?

Mr. HILL. Very well.

The bill (S. 130) to provide for the demonstration of public library service in areas without such service or with inadequate library facilities was announced as first in order.

OUR STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to take 5 minutes, under the rule, on the first bill on the calendar.

There are two outstanding features of the struggle for existence in which we are now engaged.

The first relates to the question of who does the fighting and is made acute by the fact that our opponent fights without expending his own manpower. We Americans, on the other hand, have been required to shed the blood of our own young manhood in order to combat those who fight at our opponent's bidding. The first urgent question of our time is therefore: How long we can tolerate an arrangement in which we, in terms of manpower, can never win and they, in the same terms, can never lose?

We must never forget that while money and material have great importance, our greatest and inestimable treasure is our manpower. Certainly one great object of a successful foreign policy is that there be other people who have a common cause with us and who are both willing and able to fight for that cause. This means that our Allies in the Atlantic Pact must promptly get in a strong defensive posture. It means integrating into the defense against Communist imperialism the former enemy nations, Germany and Japan. It means removing the obstacles which now exist to the participation of the former neutrals—Ireland and Spain. It means immediate formation of military units composed of stateless anti-Communist Slavs. These measures should all be taken at once. They will all mean that our American manhood will not in the future be required to carry alone the full load of combat.

The Soviet Union, ever since 1945, has used puppets and satellites to do its fighting for it and to work behind the lines, using political and subversive methods. We Americans will always do our full share of the fighting ourselves, but we must meet this new threat with as much imagination and as much willingness to use new methods as the Soviets do.

Coming to the Senate in 1947, I introduced legislation authorizing the enlisting of selected aliens in the United States Army, thereby making use of some of the millions of anti-Communist young men in the world who would like to fight on our side. It was only last August—more than 3 years later—that this bill finally became law, but the figure had been cut down to 2,500 men. Legislation which I have introduced is now pending for a volunteer freedom corps of 250,000 men. Surely the staggeringly effective use which the Soviets are making of puppet armies must at last have aroused us to the value—not of having puppets of our own—but of having stouthearted and enthusiastic allies on our side, whether in the uniform of their own country or in the uniform of the United States.

In a recent issue of Life magazine this was the subject of the leading editorial. Because this touches squarely the central world issue of our time and because the Life editorial, written several weeks before our reverse in Korea, grasped the magnitude of the problem in such a superior way, I ask unanimous consent that this editorial be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AN ARMY OF THE FREE—ANTI-COMMUNIST REFUGEES SHOULD BE WELCOMED TO ITS RANKS

It has taken a long time for the Western World to wake up to the fact that 190,000,000 Russians and some 600,000,000 serfs in the Soviet satellite states are organized, not for peace, not even for static defense, but for violently aggressive war.

The sudden shock of the realization that a tremendous avalanche of crude manpower could be thrown at a moment's notice against the free world has caused a flurry of excited stocktaking. Secretary of State Dean Acheson has set forth a plan for designated armed forces on UN call in each UN country outside the Soviet orbit. Winston Churchill, among others, has called for some 60 divisions to defend Europe.

It is a burdensome thing to raise 60 divisions in an industrial economy that must keep strong to avoid trouble from local Communists. But with all the old western Allies—England, France, the Low Countries, the United States—contributing, the job can be done. Moreover, a 60-division minimum can be supplemented by permitting Germany and Japan to raise divisions for their own defense.

The very fact that western civilization is at last talking of defending itself is a vastly encouraging thing. But there is one shortcoming that must be eliminated from the official atitudes toward rearmament—and that is the tendency to think of defense in purely static terms. It is good to think of Americans and Englishmen, Frenchmen, and west Germans, all contributing to the defense of freedom. But if France and Germany, for instance, are really to be free, the defense of Europe cannot forever rest on an arbitrary line somewhere along the River Elbe.

What is really needed to dramatize and inspire the unity of the west is an army of the free that will include thousands of young men from countries inside the iron curtain who wish to rescue their homelands from the grip of a terrible tyranny. None of the official plans for a western army contemplates the use of freedom-loving Poles and Czechs, Lithuanians, and Hungarians. But one man has a plan for forging an army out of the violently anti-Communist refugees from iron-curtain lands. That man is HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR., the Senator from Massachusetts.

The Lodge plan is to enlist under the United States flag a voluntary army from among the million or more potential soldiers who are refugees from the east European satellite states. The political and propaganda value of such an army would be incalculably great. Raised by voluntary means, it would truly dramatize the idea of free devotion to a cause. With such an army in existence, the Voice of America would really begin to speak to the enslaved populations of Poland and Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Rumania.

The problems involved in the voluntary recruitment of an international legion to serve under the American—or the UN—flag are no doubt considerable. But there would be plus factors working to mitigate the difficulties of training, officering, and integration. To begin with, the potential soldiers who are refugees from iron curtain lands hate Stalin with a fierce and bitter hatred. All of them speak one or more of the languages of Central and Eastern Europe—Polish, German, Czech, Slovak, Lithuanian, Hungarian, Rumanian, or Bulgarian. Since they are people who have known the horrors of Soviet occupation from close up, they would fight to the death to keep Stalin from catching up with them in their new western homes or billets. But since they are also people who have been deprived of their old homes in the east, they are the very people the western democracies need to carry the war against Stalin once he has started his eventual great retreat to the legitimate Russian borders.

An army of the free raised by voluntary enlistment from among the displaced nationals of Central and Eastern Europe would be extremely effective in promoting the ultimate defection from Russia of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria. Such an army, raised in time to provide it with officers who come up from its own ranks, would eventually go home to the enduring cheers of thousands of oppressed people who don't want to fight for communism. No Polish, Rumanian, or other satellite troops fighting under Russian officers could oppose such an army with any real conviction in their hearts.

The Lodge idea for raising a voluntary army of the free has had a brief mention on this page before (Life, August 14). A year ago the Senate passed a bill authorizing the enlistment of aliens in the United States Army, with a promise of citizenship after 5 years' service. Lodge hoped originally to get the figure for enlistment set at 25,000, but Congress ultimately trimmed the number down to a paltry 2,500. On September 14 of this year the Senator from Massachusetts returned to the subject. He still wants to see the United States enlist 25,000 aliens under the American banner. But he also would like to have the United States Army authorized to enlist up to 250,000 aliens for 2 years' overseas service in a Voluntary Freedom Corps. That would be a beginning toward organizing a voluntary army of the free from among those with the greatest stake in the overthrow of communism. Eventually, as it must be seen, the Lodge idea can be applied to Asia as well as to Eastern Europe. Only free Chinese armies can reconquer China for freedom.

Why is it that the Senator from Massachusetts has had such meager support for his idea? In the American Revolution the Colonials enlisted the voluntary aid of men named Lafayette, Kosciusko, Von Steuben, and so on. They were professional soldiers, but they were also amateurs (i. e., lovers) of freedom. Freedom is a banner that knows no boundaries. It attracts ardent souls everywhere, as Americans have recognized in the past. When the Lodge idea finds lodgment (no pun intended) in the popular imagination, as it must do once journalism has performed its proper function, we look to see United States citizens take it to their hearts in a way that is in keeping with their own American past.

Mr. LODGE. The second outstanding feature of our struggle for existence relates to the question of where our main effort is to be made. Without trespassing into the technical field of military strategy, it must be set down that we are sure to be asked by virtually every area in the world to rush to its defense and that, if we attempt to respond to every call, we shall be bled white. We must, therefore, choose the area which most closely involves our own security and concentrate our main effort on that. We must not fall into the Russian trap and fritter away our strength on the tail of the monster while neglecting its head. If we can win the decision against aggression in some one place, we shall most effectively expedite the liberalization of all parts of the world. We must not forget for a moment that the Soviets are both a relentless and a tricky foe. It is therefore folly to wear ourselves out without ever even meeting the first team.

It is clear that the prime target today is the Ruhr. It is toward the Ruhr that the monster's head is pointing. It is toward the Ruhr that the bulk of our efforts and the bulk of our Army should be directed. It is in that area that successful military operations can have constructive results. If the Soviets could add the Ruhr to their other gains, they would feel that they had an industrial potential somewhat equal to ours and that they could then attack the United States directly. We do not face the choice of being all in or all out of the world. That is dangerous oversimplification. We face the challenge of applying our strength in those places which will best promote our security.

There is no time to lose. Even with a maximum effort on our part we cannot be strong wherever we would like to be. Even with a maximum effort we cannot carry the whole load alone. It is a long time now that I have been standing in this place asking "What are we waiting for?" and demanding immediate mobilization. I repeat: There should be at least 30 American divisions well under way by June 30, 1951. Governor Dewey's speech of last night is exactly right. We are terribly late. Senators, we must end this handwringing and this creeping paralysis which at present infects us. We have had two Pearl Harbors and still there are those who are not awake. We must stop stumbling around on the threshold of disaster.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I renew my request that Senators at this time be permitted, without debate, to make insertions in the RECORD and introduce bills and joint resolutions, and so forth.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

REPORT OF PHILIPPINE ALIEN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATION — MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying report, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the third annual report for the Philippine Alien Property Administration for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
December 15, 1950.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following communications and letters, which were referred as indicated:

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION—GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION (S. DOC. NO. 242)

A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental appropriation in the amount of $1,834,911,000, for the General Services Administration, fiscal year 1951 (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON FUND TRANSFERS IN DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE

A letter from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on fund transfers in the Department of the Air Force (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Armed Services.

PEANUT ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

A letter from the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation relating to peanut acreage allotments under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

SUSPENSION OF DEPORTATION OF ALIENS—WITHDRAWAL OF NAMES

Three letters from the Attorney General, withdrawing the names of Francesco Romano, Parashos Georgios Spanolios, and Alexander Sevanik from reports relating to aliens whose deportation he suspended more than 6 months ago, transmitted to the Senate on January 15, 1950, January 16, 1950, and May 15, 1950; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORT ON OPERATION OF TRADE AGREEMENTS PROGRAM

A letter from the Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the operation of the trade agreements program, for the period April 1949 to June 1950 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT ON ADMINISTRATION OF ADVANCE PLANNING PROGRAM

A letter from the Acting Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the administration of the advance planning program, for the period July 1 to September 30, 1950 (with an accompanying report); to the Committee on Public Works.

MEMORIAL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a memorial from Alli F. Ruvani, faithful navigator of Monsignor Rezek General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, Houghton, Mich., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing financial assistance to Yugoslavia, which was ordered to lie on the table.

UNLIMITED DEBATE, ETC.—RESOLUTION OF UNITED COUNCIL OF CHURCH WOMEN, CINCINNATI, OHIO

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD resolutions adopted by the biennial assembly of the United Council of Church Women, held in Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 13 to 16, attended by about 3,000 church women from all parts of the United States, relating to unlimited debate, and so forth.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas there have been certain privileges granted to Congress for the purpose of enhancing the democratic process; and

Whereas abuse of some of these privileges actually works to thwart the democratic process: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we call upon Members of Congress to discipline themselves to the use of the privileges of congressional immunity and unlimited debate with the greatest sense of responsibility so that these privileges may serve their intended useful purpose rather than the ends of partisan politics; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge Congress to discontinue the practice of granting admittance to the floor to ex-Congressmen during any period when they are registered as lobbyists; and be it further

Resolved, That we call attention to the fact that failure on the part of Congress to remedy these abuses will undoubtedly lead to a demand for legislation curtailing such privileges.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF THE UNITED COUNCIL OF CHURCH WOMEN.
NOVEMBER 1950.

RESOLUTIONS OF NORTH DAKOTA AND MONTANA RECLAMATION ASSOCIATIONS

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD resolutions adopted by the North Dakota Reclamation Association at their last convention, which was held jointly with the Montana Reclamation Association, at Sidney, Mont., relating to certain pending legislation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions will be received, appropriately referred, and, without objection, the resolutions will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears no objection.

To the Committee on Public Works:

"RESOLUTION NO. 1—JAMESTOWN DAM

"Whereas through the able representation of Hon. MILTON R. YOUNG, member of United States Senate Committee on Appropriations, concurred in by the other Members of the North Dakota congressional delegation, the Eighty-first Congress appropriated $750,000 for starting construction on the Jamestown Dam; and

"Whereas the James River is an intrastate stream, which creates a flood problem in its basin both in North Dakota and South Dakota: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we commend Senator YOUNG and his North Dakota congressional colleagues for their successful appropriations efforts and urge the North Dakota State Water Conservation Commission to solicit the assistance of South Dakota to obtain an early release of the construction funds frozen by the Bureau of the Budget so that construction can begin on this unit of the Missouri Basin development in 1951 as a safeguard against the ravages and suffering caused by previous disastrous floods of the James River in both North Dakota and South Dakota."

"RESOLUTION NO. 2—MONTANA DIVERSION DAM UNIT

"Whereas the Eighty-first Congress approved $1,000,000 for construction purposes on the Montana diversion dam unit of the Missouri-Souris project, an integral part of the Missouri Basin development; and

"Whereas the Bureau of Reclamation have found sufficient lands for irrigation; and

"Whereas a new site at Porcupine Creek assures all the original benefits plus a hydroelectric power output of over 100,000,000 kilowatt-hours annually; and

"Whereas the need for water for municipal and industrial use in northeast Montana and western North Dakota is becoming increasingly grave, coupled with a constant threat of drought to farmers in the area: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we urge the Bureau of the Budget to release funds that are presently frozen so that construction can be launched in 1951 and thus speed the multiple benefits of this unit of both the Missouri-Souris project and the Missouri Basin development."

"RESOLUTION NO. 4—FLOOD CONTROL

"Whereas the recent recurring floods in many sections of the State have emphasized greater flood damage in the State than had supposedly existed; and

"Whereas it appears that in many areas, such as at the city of Mott, where there has not been a full recognition of such damage and the step to be taken to alleviate such flood losses:

"Therefore, we urge and request that the State conservation commission and Federal agencies charged with such work take expeditious action to coordinate and initiate the necessary work to cure such situations."

To the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs:

"RESOLUTION NO. 5—SMALL PROJECTS

"Whereas the major emphasis on reclamation development in North Dakota has thus far been on major projects; and

"Whereas small projects in other areas in the United States have proven economically sound; and

"Whereas the National Reclamation Association, through its small-projects committee, has made specific recommendations for furthering the program in all western reclamation States by securing national legislation: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we fully endorse the program so proposed and direct officers of the North Dakota Reclamation Association to lend every possible aid in securing national legislation by the Eighty-second Congress to carry out the recommendations so made, and that a special committee be appointed by the President to work with the water commission toward further development of small-project program in the State."

"RESOLUTION NO. 6—INTERSTATE COMPACT FOR THE RED RIVER OF THE NORTH

"Whereas the Red River of the North watershed in Minnesota and North Dakota is an interstate basin; and

"Whereas the matter of allocating and dividing the waters of the Red River and its tributaries is an interstate problem which can be dealt with only through a compact between the two States with the approval of the Congress: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend to the North Dakota State Water Conservation Commission that early action to accomplish such compact be initiated."

"RESOLUTION NO. 7—DECENTRALIZATION OF INDUSTRY

"Whereas the discovery of atomic energy with its terrible implications during the stress of war has created a trend toward decentralization of industry in our Nation; and

"Whereas we have adequate space for industry in western North Dakota, coupled with an inexhaustible supply of lignite, cheap potential hydroelectric power, together with highly suitable waters for industrial use through the development of the Missouri-Souris diversion: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we urge the North Dakota congressional delegation to solicit the Congress to speed construction of the Missouri-Souris project, not only from a reclamation angle, but as a potential for future defense security by decentralization of industry in this specific project area."

"RESOLUTION NO. 8—LIGNITE DEVELOPMENT

"Whereas research efforts have established the feasibility of developing byproducts from lignite coal to supplant vital scarce commodities needed for the welfare of our national economy; and

"Whereas scientific research has been limited on account of lack of funds: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend to the North Dakota congressional delegation to support and/or initiate any legislation or appropriations that will speed the development of our lignite coal industry through continued research for lignite byproducts."

"RESOLUTION NO. 15—CANNON BALL AND KNIFE RIVER PROJECTS

"Whereas the Cannon Ball and Knife River projects are contemplated structures under the Missouri River Basin development; and

"Whereas studies and engineering looking toward the construction and development of these projects have been proceeding for many years under the facilities of the North Dakota State water conservation commission and bureau of reclamation; and

"Whereas these projects are of the type contemplated for first construction under the early program of the North Dakota water conservation commission; and

"Whereas there are good reasons that such type of development should be hastened and completed for a better programing of the larger development in North Dakota: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the North Dakota Reclamation Association urges that the agencies charged with the development and construction thereof do everything to speed the additional studies thereto and that the schedule for such construction may not be further delayed."

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

The following report of a committee was submitted:

By Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

H. R. 1789. A bill for the relief of the Shelby Shoe Co., of Salem, Mass.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2637).

INTERIM REPORT ON EMPLOYMENT OF HOMOSEXUALS AND OTHER SEX PERVERTS IN GOVERNMENT (S. DOC. NO. 241)

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I am going to submit a report of the Senate Investigations Subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. I ask unanimous consent that I may make a brief statement in connection with the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina? The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator may proceed.

Mr. HOEY. Mr. President, I submit to the Senate a unanimous interim report of the Senate Investigations Subcommittee of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. This is a report of the subcommittee's investigation and study of the employment of homosexuals and other sex perverts in Government, which study was undertaken in accordance with Senate Resolution 280, adopted by the Senate on June 7, 1950.

My committee did not find it to be a very pleasant task to conduct an inquiry into this particular subject, but having undertaken this investigation at the specific direction of the Senate, we pursued every facet of the subject in order to make sure that our inquiry was a complete and thorough one, and to be able to make a full and complete report to the Senate.

At the very outset it was realized by the subcommittee that to mishandle or allow an investigation of this type to get out of control could easily turn the investigation into a witch hunt, which not only would be a reflection upon the subcommittee, of which I am honored to be the chairman, but it would be to the discredit of this august body, which authorized the investigation. Furthermore, an even more serious problem was the possibility of doing irreparable harm to innocent persons in the event of any erroneous public disclosures. Being fully aware of these pitfalls, the subcommittee, as is stated in the report, decided at the very outset to hold all of its hearings in executive session and it was determined that the investigation should be conducted with a minimum of fanfare and publicity. In this regard I wish to commend the members of the subcommittee and staff for the discreet but thorough manner in which this entire inquiry was handled.

Prior to the adoption of Senate Resolution under which this investigation was conducted, the District of Columbia Subcommitee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, composed of Senators HILL and WHERRY, made preliminary studies in this field and both members submitted reports covering their findings. I wish to state that the preliminary work of that subcommittee was of considerable assistance and guidance in our subsequent investigation.

In order to investigate fully and completely the employment of homosexuals and other sex perverts in Government, the members of the subcommittee and the staff conferred with and took testimony from intelligence experts, medical authorities, police officials, judges, prosecutors, and others who by training or experience were qualified to render expert advice and assistance to us. In addition, detailed information was obtained from every department and agency of government regarding the methods and procedures used or to be used in the handling of this serious problem in the Federal Government. This report was prepared only after thoroughly reviewing and digesting all of the testimony and other data obtained by the subcommittee. In the report which has been submitted to the Senate, the subcommittee has attempted to present a full, fair, and unbiased résumé of the findings and recommendations of the subcommittee.

The Subcommittee came to the definite and positive conclusion—and gives the detailed reasons for its conclusion—that overt homosexuals and other sex perverts should not be tolerated in the Government service because they are generally unsuitable and furthermore they do constitute security risks. Throughout the report the subcommittee points out that sex perverts must be put out of Government and kept out. As is clearly set forth in the report, the subcommittee found it necessary to criticize the manner in which homosexual cases have been handled by many of our Government departments and officials, including the treatment of these cases in our own legislative branch. However, I am convinced that this particular problem can be handled adequately in the Government without any drastic legislative changes. The subcommittee found that if the Government agencies will investigate properly each complaint of sex perversion and thereafter follow the present adequate civil-service rules, these perverts can be put out of Government and kept out of Government. In view of the very serious consequences of dismissal from the Government on charges of sex perversion the subcommittee has recommended that some type of appeal machinery be set up to review the dismissals of these persons from the civilian branches of Government. It is my belief that no special legislation will be necessary to set up such review machinery which could be adequately handled by an Executive order.

The only specific legislation recommended by the subcommittee has to do with amendments to the Criminal Code of the District of Columbia. It has been recommended by the subcommittee, after a conference with the local officials, that these proposed amendments will strengthen greatly the present laws of the District of Columbia with reference to the handling of sex-perversion cases, and for that reason I am submitting to the Senate a proposed bill incorporating these amendments to the District of Columbia Code. These amendments are fully explained in the report which is submitted.

The Senate appropriated $10,000 for the conduct of this investigation and I am happy to be able to report that approximately $3,000 of that amount was not used during the course of the investigation and will be returned to the general fund of the Senate.

I am glad to report that a great many sex perverts have been removed from the Government service and it is believed that they can be kept out of government if the recommendations and suggestions of the subcommittee are followed by the various departments of the Government. It is not the intention of the subcommittee to drop this entire subject with the submission of this report. The subcommittee will from time to time reexamine the handling of this problem by the various agencies of government to determine whether these agencies are handling properly the cases of sex perversion which might arise in the future. In the event it is deemed necessary to make a further report to the Senate, such a report will be submitted by the subcommittee at the appropriate time.

I now send the report to the desk and ask that it be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be received, and, without objection, it will be printed as a Senate document.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. RUSSELL (for himself and Mr. BRIDGES, by request):

S. 4258. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code in order to allow extensions of time for the filing of returns and the payment of income taxes by certain persons serving in zones of combat between January 1, 1951, and March 15, 1951, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. MUNDT:

S. 4259. A bill to permit certain lands heretofore conveyed to the city of Canton, S. Dak., for park, recreation, airport, or other public purposes to be leased by it so long as the income therefrom is used for such purposes; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. HOEY:

S. 4260. A bill to amend the laws relating to obscene or indecent exposure acts committed in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

REPORT OF CONFERENCES BETWEEN THE PRESIDENT AND PRIME MINISTER ATTLEE—AMENDMENTS

Mr. FLANDERS submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the resolution (S. Res. 371) favoring the transmission to the Senate by the President of a report of his current discussions with Prime Minister Attlee, and opposing the making of certain agreements in connection therewith, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

H. R. 2466. An act for the relief of Zygmunt Pakula (also known as Pakuta);

H. R. 6500. An act for the relief of Mario Pucci, Giacomo Favetti Giuseppe Omati, Vincenzo Andreani, Lambruno Sarzanini, and Alessandro Costa;

H. R. 9286. An act for the relief of Maria Manfrini; and

H. R. 9845. An act for the relief of Capt. Marciano O. Garces.

LUBEC CHANNEL, MAINE (S. DOC. NO. 243)

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, on September 15, 1950, the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, transmitted to the Senate Committee on Public Works a report on Lubec Channel, Maine, together with accompanying papers and an illustration, requested by a resolution of the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate, adopted on July 16, 1945. On behalf of the Committee on Public Works, I ask unanimous consent that the report be appropriately referred and printed as a Senate document.

There being no objection, the report was referred to the Committee on Public Works and ordered to be printed as a Senate document.

NATIONAL MOBILIZATION—ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR DEWEY

[Mr. IVES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the text of Governor Dewey's address delivered on December 14, 1950, at the dinner of the New York County Lawyers Association, at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York City, and published in the New York Times of December 15, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

EDITORIAL TRIBUTE TO SENATOR HUMPHREY

[Mr. DOUGLAS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial paying tribute to Senator HUMPHREY, published in the December 1950 issue of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor News, which appears in the Appendix.]

OUT OF CRISIS, A SPIRIT OF UNITY—ARTICLE FROM THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE

[Mr. KEFAUVER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Out of Crisis, a Spirit of Unity," published in the New York Times magazine of December 10, 1950, which appears in the Appendix.]

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting several nominations, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

OUR NEW WAR IN KOREA AND AID TO YUGOSLAVIA—STATEMENTS BY SENATOR CAIN

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, on behalf of the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN], who will be absent from the Senate for the next 2 days, I ask unanimous consent to place in the body of the RECORD two statements prepared by him, the first one of which contains newspaper articles which the Senator from Washington asks unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD in connection with his statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the statements will be printed in the RECORD, as well as the newspaper articles.

(The statements and articles are as follows:)

STATEMENT BY SENATOR CAIN

On November 28 the junior Senator from Washington offered a brief statement to the Senate. This statement addressed itself to the new war in Korea, which came into being at the moment in late November when Chinese Communist forces crossed the Yalu River in strength.

In this statement, which was offered but several short and tragic weeks ago I submitted some completely logical observations from which I wish to quote briefly:

"The only possible action in the present crisis, as I see it, Mr. President, is equally clear: Gen. Douglas MacArthur ought immediately to be given the right to strike wherever military necessity dictates, behind the Yalu River, or anywhere else.

"I think our troops ought to have immediate authority to strike at the supply lines, at the heart, at the marshaling areas, of the enemy. Until that is done—and I hope again my guess is completely wrong—we can only expect an accumulation in Korea of one disaster after another disaster.

"One of two things must inevitably happen very shortly; the enemy's supply lines must be destroyed, consumed, and done away with, or the United States of America, together with those allies fighting with her must—not will or shall, but must—inevitably be humiliated, be hurt deep down inside, and be badly defeated on the field of battle.

"The only answer we can give the men whose lives are sacrificed is 'Go ahead and protect yourselves by fighting back with all your strength and with every weapon which America and the United Nations can make available to you'."

No decision was made by the United Nations or by the United States to permit our field commander in Korea to attempt to destroy the enemy's power to destroy us. The President of the United States did not delegate his authority to employ the atom bomb to our field commander in Korea. Whether the use of the atom bomb and other conventional bombs would have prevented the recent Korean disasters I am not qualified to say. I can only say again, as I have said before, that we have not employed in Korea some of the major weapons which have been available to us.

Many Americans have been in opposition to employing the atom bomb in Korea. Many have maintained to me that the atom bomb could not successfully be used as a tactical weapon. I have not shared this view but I am not an authority on the question. The question, however, will remain before us for a long time. I think we ought to think about the views of those authorities who consider the atom bomb to possess great tactical value.

A recent issue of the United States Army Combat Forces Journal carries an article on the atom bomb and its potential use as a tactical weapon by Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin. General Gavin is a former commander of the famed Eighty-second Airborne Division. He fought with this division during the last war and trained it for a period after that war. His present assignment is with the weapons systems evaluation group in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, as Chief Adviser of Weapons.

I ran across this article in the Denver Post of December 5, 1950. The article ought to be made available to every member of the Senate and I ask unanimous consent that there be printed as a part of my remarks at this point the article entitled "Atom Bomb Seen Tactical Weapon if Blow Warrants Cost," written by Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin.

The article is as follows:

ATOM BOMB SEEN TACTICAL WEAPON IF BLOW WARRANTS COST

(By Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin)

Retrospection is a blessing for those who must plan and fight our wars. Never do we appreciate the full meaning of the events in which we participate. Only time can give us the answer to knotty problems of tactics, strategy, and weapons systems. We now have 5 years to look back upon our ideas and plans for the use of the newest weapon in our arsenal, the A-bomb.

Its first use was to destroy a Japanese city. Then followed the fanciful claims of what it would do. Typical of much public opinion were the ideas expressed by William Bradford Huie in the December 1948 issue of Reader's Digest:

"We now have enough improved atomic weapons to immobilize the Russian Nation. * * * A staggering proportion of the inhabitants of Russia's key cities—millions of persons—can be killed or maimed in the first raid."

Little thought seems to have been given to other possible uses. The mere threat of its use on urban and industrial areas was credited with maintaining the uneasy postwar peace.

Now, this exclusive acceptance of the bomb as a weapon of final decision when employed against the economy and the noncombatant elements of a nation's population is hard to understand. For never has a weapon been developed that is better suited for use against enemy combat forces.

The model T bomb (Hiroshima) packs a wallop of 20,000 tons of TNT. But since it does not make effective use of all of its potential energy and it largely overkills, its actual destructive effect is closer to 1,300 tons. The relative effects of conventional bombing and atomic bombing are described in the report of the United States strategic bombing survey:

On the basis of the known destructiveness of various bombs computed from the war in Europe and the Pacific and from tests, the survey has estimated the striking force that would have been necessary to achieve the same destruction at Hiroshima and Nagasaki. To cause physical damage equivalent to that caused by the atomic bombs, approximately 1,300 tons of bombs (one-fourth high explosives and three-fourths incendiaries) at Hiroshima and 600 tons (three-fourths high explosives and one-fourth incendiary) would have been required at Nagasaki—in the target area.

EQUALED 2,100 TONS

To place that many bombs in the target area, assuming light attacks under essentially the same conditions of weather and enemy opposition that prevailed when the atomic bombs were dropped, it is estimated that 1,600 tons of bombs would have to be dropped at Hiroshima and 900 tons at Nagasaki. To these bomb loads would have to be added a number of tons of antipersonnel fragmentation bombs to inflict comparable casualties. These would add about 500 tons at Hiroshima and 300 tons at Nagasaki. The total bomb loads would thus be 2,100 tons at Hiroshima and 1,200 tons at Nagasaki. With each plane carrying 10 tons, the attacking force required would have been 210 B–29's at Hiroshima and 120 B–29's at Nagasaki.

In addition to the blast and heat effects, nuclear radiation accompanying the explosion of an atomic bomb also causes casualties, some 15 percent of the total.

The vulnerability of combat forces to atomic attack will vary greatly. It will depend upon how much they happen to be shielded by hills, buildings, trenches, and so on—and upon how far they are from the point of burst. We can readily conceive of land forces in dugouts and heavy fortifications that would give them almost complete protection from an explosion at 2,000 feet altitude. On the other hand, land forces not dug in and massed at night to force a river crossing, for example, might be completely destroyed by a well placed atomic bomb. Massed aircraft on take-off airfields, and concentrations of shipping such as those off the Normandy beaches, would be quite vulnerable. The vulnerability of each combatant in each set of conditions does not lend itself to exact definition. There is no doubt, however, that land combat forces moving in the offense or not well sheltered in defense would be prime targets.

Whether or not it would be worth to the enemy the expenditure of one or several bombs would depend upon the contribution of the destruction. One particular aspect should be noted: Lingering radioactivity following an air burst at, say, 2,000 feet, will not last more than a few minutes. In other words, highly mobile forces could at once attack into the area of the bomb detonation with reasonable immunity from radioactivity.

Most veterans seeking a comparison from their own combat experience would describe an atomic-bomb attack as like the simultaneous detonation of hundreds of high-explosive and incendiary bombs. It would be concentrated in an area of 3 to 5 square miles and would be accompanied by intensive radioactivity. Compared with artillery, it would approximate a high density of well mixed high explosives and incendiaries. Approximately 8,000 medium artillery shells per square mile, over a 3- to 5-square-mile area, with a much heavier concentration in the center of the area than on the fringes, makes a reasonable comparison with the model T bomb. The intense fragmentation characteristic of artillery would of course be absent. This would be somewhat compensated for by radioactivity and objects sent flying by the blast.

For further purposes of comparison we can consider situations in World War II in which actual comparable tonnages of HE were delivered—actual battles in which heavy bombers gave direct tactical support to ground forces. There were many situations in which an atomic bomb could have been decisive. In addition to contributing decisively to the achievements of the Army, its use could have saved many lives and much equipment.

Perhaps the best-known concentrated nonatomic attack of World War II is Cassino. The Air Force alone dropped 1,100 tons on Cassino in one attack. The defenders at Cassino were well dug in and protected. The attacking forces would have been much more vulnerable to atomic attack than the defenders.

In the battle of Normandy, in July 1944, carpet bombing first found a place in the soldier's and airman's lexicon. The ground forces needed all air support they could possibly get when the critical break-out from the beachhead faced them. On July 24–25, 1944, the Air Force, using its heaviest bombers available in ETO, delivered 5,200 tons of bombs in ground support. They were dropped in an area of approximately 2,500 by 7,000 yards. This was equivalent to the destructive forces of perhaps two atomic bombs. This was the battle of St. Lo, a battle decisive in the larger battle of Normandy. The performance of the Air Force's strategic bombers in this significant role contributed largely to gaining that decision. Ironically, the dispersed nature of the bombing caused the death of the Army's foremost enthusiast for air-ground training and cooperation, Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair. A more striking example of the need for close teamwork between the Ground and Air Forces would be hard to find.

GREAT TACTICAL GAIN

Iwo Jima is another example of a battle in which the atomic bomb could have been used to great tactical gain. Iwo Jima was a well-defended bastion directly astride the air route from Guam to Tokyo. In area, it compares closely to the destroyed area of Hiroshima. Its capture was costly—21,000 casualties, an escort carrier, and an LCI sunk, major damage to 30 ships, and 168 aircraft lost. How much less the battle cost and achievement would have been if an A-bomb could have been used, then followed immediately by air assault and air-landed forces.

Crete and Okinawa had much in common tactically. The capture of Crete was an essential preliminary to an assault on Suez. The capture of Okinawa was the necessary first phase of our assault on Japan. Both islands had several good air strips and were well defended.

Crete was given a conventional softening up of high-explosive bombing followed by an airborne assault. It was a costly venture. The attacking Germans lost 12,000 men and 170 air transports, and in the words of the German commander, General Student, it was the graveyard of German parachutists."

Okinawa's capture was just as important tactically. After the usual non-atomic softening up it was assaulted by amphibious forces. When the last shot was fired and the costs were tabulated they amounted to 36 ships sunk, 368 ships damaged, 763 airplanes lost, and 48,025 casualties. A high price to pay for what one marine called "a lousy piece of real estate."

In both battles a preliminary atomic bombing would have immeasurably aided the assault forces in establishing their initial lodgment. With an airborne assault following on its heels, an A-bomb could have been used tactically with decisive results. Among those best known to our Army are Anzio, Bastogne, Salerno, and Normandy.

COST CONSIDERED

Any consideration of the bomb's employment will take into account its cost. Actually its cost may be expressed in two ways—in actual intrinsic worth and its strategical and tactical worth. From the dollar viewpoint, Dr. J. R. Oppenheimer has estimated that its cost would run to about $1,000,000. Tactically, however, the bomb may be given an entirely different value. For example, with a limited stockpile, it would be highly uneconomical to expend a hundred bombs for the purpose of destroying a ground division that costs $100,000,000 if there were other divisions available as replacements. But if a single bomb could render one division ineffective, it would probably be a worthwhile one-bomb investment. Between these two extremes are many situations in which a bomb might be used to advantage. The chief military consideration must be this: What will its use mean in terms of battle decisions at the time and place of its employment? The tactical or strategic gain achieved would usually be more important than the intrinsic worth of the bomb in any determination of whether it should be used. The airman must also weigh the cost of giving the needed ground support in terms of what it will cost to deliver it. The operational cost and losses in an attack by 150 to 200 medium bombers may be so high, compared to that of a few bombers escorting and carrying an A-bomb, that the A-bomb would most often be the better choice.

For months one of the toughest battles in American history has been fought in Korea. Greatly outnumbered, and attacked by a foe that throws in masses of men and equipment regardless of losses, the United Nations forces in Korea tasted the bitterest experiences of war. The issue has been in doubt. But one aspect of the battle does seem clear. The United Nations land forces, using every weapon that can be got to them with our limited mobility, took heavy casualties. They shared a common battle achievement with their fellow combatants in the air force and the navy—the holding of some 3,000 square miles of real estate in South Korea. The weapons systems of the land forces, judging by the casualty reports, have been the hardest hit. Their fighting has been heaviest and their available weapons most taxed. A greater participation by the air-weapons system would add greatly to the successful outcome of the fighting. The most powerful tactical air weapon is the atomic bomb. Its delivery by our air forces would contribute greatly to the common battle achievement.

Setting aside the very serious moral and political considerations and considering only the tactical effects, large concentrations of division or larger size should not be allowed to go unscathed by atomic attack. Certainly several bombs on massed enemy forces, wherever they can be attacked without endangering our own, would contribute greatly to their final, if not immediate neutralization. It is hard to think of anything that would add more to the effectiveness of the United Nations forces. Here was an enemy forced to mass his means for a crossing both because of our defense and his own lack of mobility. He follows the traditional Soviet tactics of massing the men and means to do a job regardless of losses.

The bomb is the tactical answer to this problem whenever it is possible to deliver it profitably.

The military man recognizes the deep-seated political and moral convictions and ideals of our Nation and its leaders, when the possible use of atomic weapons arises. He has no wish to override these vitally important considerations. But no one, military or civilian, who is conversant with modern weapons, including the atomic, can avoid comparing the tactical capabilities and limitations of those weapons. Nor can he help but see that in many tactical situations, the use of atomic bombs may greatly reduce the ultimate total of United Nations casualties.

RETALIATION WEIGHED

Most certainly the possibilities of retaliation by the enemy will also be weighed by all who must give serious thought to the tactical uses of atomic weapons. These possibilities, however, can only be determined by the highest national authorities on the basis of estimated comparative availability of atomic weapons. Certainly, if the struggle for freedom continues, they will one day be faced by such a decision. And the military man would be completely lacking in judgment and common sense if he did not consider the tactical possibilities of atomic weapons in every combat situation that arises.

In summary, the A-bomb is an excellent tactical weapon. It is much higher on the curve of deadliness than either the conventional bomb or the artillery shell. The greater the explosive effect of the atomic bomb the more effective it will be as a tactical weapon. If there is validity to this view of the bomb as a tactical weapon there is a clear implication of a need for considerable development to make its combat employment readily possible. A higher accuracy of delivery is needed than at Hiroshima or Nagasaki. Any means that will aid our ground forces to meet on terms of combat parity an enemy much stronger in numbers deserves our closest attention. And finally, if an H-bomb is developed and A-bombs become available for tactical employment, we should realize now that this will radically revolutionize land warfare.

Land warfare will change in character, both offensively and defensively, to accommodate itself to this new force. Great and continuous dispersion out of immediate close contact with an enemy, an ability to fight effectively in all directions, better communications, lighter and more numerous automatic weapons, electronic systems to close the gaps between physically isolated units, and a high degree of air and land mobility should all characterize the defense of tomorrow. These, plus an ability to concentrate in a global sense at the time and place of decision, should characterize the attack.

With foresight we should be able to develop these capabilities in our Armed Forces. So it is well to note in conclusion that in this air-atomic age retrospection is good but foresight is better.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR CAIN

On the front page of the Denver Post of December 5, I found a letter by a father whose son lost his life in Korea. The father's grief is evident through every word of his letter but the father seeks to justify the death of his son by reflecting on past mistakes only for the purpose of anticipating the future. I think the father's letter ought to be joined with General Gavin's argument. I ask unanimous consent that the letter in question be made a part of my remarks at this point.

The letter is as follows:

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR—USE A-BOMB NOW, HERO'S DAD URGES

(Capt. Eugene R. Guild, a retired Army officer, has written a letter to the editors of the Denver Post in which he blames himself and all other complacent Americans for the death of his son and the 5,000 other fighting men. Here are his views on the use of the atom bomb.)

I am writing as the father of 1 of the 5,000 boys killed by the Reds in Korea. I let my boy down because I did not help him here at home by fighting against the cowardly appeasing policies of those in Washington who sent him to fight. I think that many of the fathers of the other 5,000 boys let their sons down in the same way.

He and the rest of that tragic legion whose bodies lie rotting in Korean graves died not only because of Red bullets and barbarity but because our leaders in Washington as well as the mouse-men of Lake Success were too timorous and weasling to face up to the real aggressor and demand a halt. These men scolded like so many Donald Ducks at the Kremlin, but when the time came for action they pretended that the stooges, the ignorant North Koreans, the gooks were the real aggressors, and killed 5,000 of our sons while killing 250,000 hapless stooges.

These men pretended not to see the munitions coming from Russia and Manchuria which killed our lads. They would not allow supply lines to be bombed or attacking jets to be pursued over the border. It would cause war they said—the age-old cry of the appeaser. Our sons were not given a fair fighting chance for their lives; it was not an honest fight, it was a dishonest, hypocritical fight; and so they died.

And now in a welter of double talk and plausible misrepresentations from Washington, we are told that we must not strike back in defending ourselves against the Reds. They make war on us but we must not make war on them because then they will make war on us; what supreme gibberish is that? We are actually and in fact in war, a killing, maiming war; yet we are warned not to fight back too hard with our best defensive weapon, the A-bomb, or we will find ourselves in a war. The words are sheer idiocy, but they are spoken in Washington with a straight face.

We are being prepared for surrender to the Reds, sugar-coated, of course, with a name like armistice or negotiated peace. Our A-bomb is our best defensive weapon and last resort, but a stream of propaganda tells us that it would be ineffective—no targets, kill women and children and the like. Yet General Gavin, weapons adviser to the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs, and the President, in a signed statement last month wrote of the Korean War that the A-bomb was the answer to the Red tactics of massed infantry assault. It is not for destroying cities, he wrote, "Never has a weapon been devised that is better suited for use against enemy combat forces." And Gen. Omar Bradley backed him up, saying, "The atomic bomb will make a formidable defensive weapon." Our appeasers are contradicting their own experts in their haste to kneel before the Reds.

WEAPON A SOUND MILITARY DEFENSE

The A-bomb is a sound military defense. What moral or political considerations are there in defending our beleaguered Army and marines with our A-bomb used against attacking troops? The appeasers say, as of yore, let's not do it; let's surrender and have peace in our time. How that smells of Munich.

Suppose, at the start of Korea, we had used leadership instead of Donald Duckism in the UN and pushed through a resolution telling Stalin to stop it within 48 hours or, ready or not, we would hit him with everything we had, including the A-bomb. He would have either backed up or fought. If he had fought, and there is some doubt that he would have, would my son be any deader, would the other 5,000 be any deader, would the other thousands now destined to die because of appeasement be any deader? At least they would have died in an honest war. And we would have been further along in mobilization and total defense.

Friends in Denver and through the State have sent condolences about my boy and asked what they could do. I can tell them now what they can do. They cannot let their own sons down like I did mine. By post card, telegraph, telephone, and public meetings they can tell the men of Washington what they want; perhaps they can stiffen the backbones and drive out the appeasers; they can try, at least—as I am doing, too late for my son but not too late for the thousands of others. I ask them and all the other fathers and mothers:

Are you going to let your sons down as I did mine?

EUGENE R. GUILD,
Captain, United States Army, Retired, Glenwood Springs, Colo.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR CAIN

We have not heard the last of Korea or of comparable situations elsewhere which may result from Korea. It is proper and useful for us to understand all of the weapons which are available to the free world and to think about the feelings of those whose loved ones have given everything they possess in fighting for you and me at home.

FURTHER STATEMENT BY SENATOR CAIN

On Monday, December 11, 1950, the Senate voted to authorize $38,000,000 in emergency aid to Yugoslavia. Although the measure was passed by a substantial majority, it is perfectly obvious that some of us who voted for the Yugoslav aid bill did so with serious misgivings and profound doubt about its effectiveness in promoting the interest of the United States and the free world.

The incongruity of the situation is apparent; we were asked and we agreed to vote aid to a Communist country in the interest of the struggle against communism; we were asked and we agreed to offer assistance to a dictatorship in the interest of freedom and liberty.

The junior Senator from Washington was persuaded to vote for the Yugoslav emergency assistance, in part, because of the urgency with which the measure was pressed by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, but more importantly by the hope that perhaps the action taken was the beginning of an integrated foreign policy program.

It is my sincere prayer that before the next foreign assistance proposal is brought before the Senate, we shall have available to us two things: 1—a comprehensive integrated and fully developed global foreign policy—permit me to underline by way of emphasis the word global; 2—a detailed statement of the functions and purposes of each foreign aid proposal in the over-all policy—that is a justification for each item in relation to our American over-all foreign policy.

The Senate of the United States is charged by the Constitution with both rights and responsibilities in shaping our Nation's foreign policy. Yet, the complete facts which are necessary to permit us to recognize and discharge this vital function have not been before the Senate in recent years. We are sometimes asked to legislate in the dark and to legislate piecemeal; we have yet to be presented with a single over-all picture of what we are endeavoring to do or are expected to accomplish. In my 4 years of experience in this body it has been a race from one emergency to another, along an uncharted course.

The Senate ought to demand a charted course before any future ventures are undertaken or launched.

It is my earnest and sincere purpose to serve notice here today that I shall not again vote for any foreign assistance measure unless a master plan and detailed justifications are made available to us for guidance. I do not believe that America can continue to extend and commit itself overseas unless we are certain that such commitments will contribute to the defense and security of our Nation.

I want further to make it clear that any future request for foreign aid will be measured by me by the yardstick of what other nations are doing in the common effort. We have so far, at least since 1946 when I came to the Senate, accepted the burden of proof of international good will. I am convinced that this has, in part at least, been wrong. There is no reason whatsoever why we of America—after our contributions and sacrifices in two world wars—should be required to give any additional proof of our good and honest intentions and of our willingness to assume a large share of the burden of world peace, as well as world defense.

Measured in terms of military capacity, we have carried, for example, a large part of the fighting in Korea. The defeats the United Nations forces have suffered have largely come about because our Nation has tried to do too much and other nations have undertaken too little. This is one condition which can and must be remedied. The stake of America in freedom is no greater than the stake of any other member of the free community of nations.

Any future request for aid and assistance from such questionable nations as Yugoslavia will be decided, in my mind, by the degree of cooperation which each nation is willing to give to the overwhelming majority of the United Nations. So far, the record of Yugoslavia has not been particularly encouraging. The Yugoslav Government has voted against us in the United Nations more often than with us. The Yugoslav Government has often recognized and supported our enemies.

Is it too much to expect that the Yugoslav Government ought now to show its good will to us free people and to show it in solid, concrete ways? Is it unreasonable for me, an American, to hope and expect the Yugoslavs to send a military force of useful proportions to join the United Nations in Korea? Have I not the right to expect the Yugoslav Government to join with us in voting for a program of international lawfulness in the United Nations? Have I not the right to expect that the Yugoslav Government, out of its appreciation for our assistance which is gladly offered to prevent starvation, will move in the direction of bringing to an end the brutal dictatorship which has been fastened on the people; to restore to these people the right to choose their own government and to end the persecution of religions and the clergy.

To my mind, I have a right to expect these things from the government of Yugoslavia. These are not only reasonable expectations but necessary conditions to international cooperation and good will. What right have we to expect the people behind the iron curtain to take our declarations of freedom and justice seriously if they cannot expect more than to have their Stalinist oppression exchanged for the Tito variety.

To our sorrow and lasting distress we compromised with communism in and after World War II. The result has been more war, more oppression, more hatred, and more fear than ever before in history. We ought not to compromise again.

We are faced now, I believe, with a last chance to preserve our Nation and free institutions; that the chance before us is the last we have have in our lifetime. Another catastrophic compromise and that chance will have slipped from our hands.

With but several exceptions, I have voted for and supported the foreign-aid programs of the administration. I have done so on the strength of assurances—assurances given every time—that every measure was the one and only road to world peace.

The peace which was promised by the foreign-policy makers, and the peace which was our fondest hope, has not been realized. It is possible, of course, that no other course of action would have brought world peace. My purpose today is not to judge or fix the blame but merely to exercise the right of a Senator in urging, not only a reexamination of our foreign policy, but an integration of our foreign policy on a world-wide basis.

Past proposals and programs which were offered and sold to us as a guaranty of peace are now being offered as defense measures. There is a considerable doubt in my mind that such measures as the aid-to-Yugoslavia program will succeed any more in building a strong defense than past programs did in guaranteeing peace.

The reasons for these doubts are obvious. Our foreign-policy strategy has been confused, uncertain, and amazingly contradictory. There is no apparent global foundation upon which the foreign policy of this country can rest. The obvious contradictions are the things which puzzle and trouble me.

The administration has constantly refused to give aid to Spain for the stated reason that the Spanish Government is not democratic. Yet, we are asked with considerable fanfare to give immediate aid to Yugoslavia, whose dictatorship is far more absolute than that of Spain.

The administration has sometimes refused and sometimes neglected to give aid to the independent Republic of China, which has fought for years against both communism and Japan, but we are sending aid to the French colonial forces in Indochina.

The administration is asking the German people to join in the fight for freedom and the independence of the west, yet it continues to maintain a technical state of war with Germany and continues to deny to the German people the very rights for which those people are asked to fight.

If our foreign policy is to be effective or make sense, our strategy must be total and global in character; it must evaluate and meet problems with equal decisiveness, both in the east and in the west. We are competing around the globe with an enemy who understands total strategy. The strategy of this enemy is unified; it has central direction and concentrated purpose.

We cannot meet this strategy with anything less.

IS THIS OUR LAST HOUR?—EDITORIAL FROM THE WASHINGTON EVENING STAR

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, on Tuesday of this week the distinguished junior Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON] delivered a truly notable address in the Senate on the very critical position in which the United States finds itself today in the world. In today's Evening Star the lead editorial deals with that address. I ask unanimous consent that the editorial may be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IS THIS OUR LAST HOUR?

"Is this the hour of our Nation's twilight, the last fading hour of light before an endless night shall envelop us and all the Western World

"That is a question which we still have in our power to answer. If we delay longer, we can expect nothing but darkness and defeat and desolation. If we answer the challenge with courage and confidence and with the ability of which we are capable, we can, I am sure, triumph over our foes."

It was in these words that Senator LYNDON JOHNSON of Texas summed up an address to the Senate this week—an address which deserves a great deal more attention than it has received. It was a talk which deserves attention because Senator JOHNSON was addressing himself to the most urgent question of our time: What must we do to survive?

There are men—men of ability and integrity—who advocate something less than a total, all-out effort. General Marshall spoke for them when he testified on December 1 before a House committee. The Secretary of Defense wants a greater effort. But he does not favor an all-out war mobilzation at this time. He fears that if we go to total mobilization the Communists might then ease up and leave us in a difficult position. General Marshall is worried about the reaction of the people in that situation. He is concerned with the matter of cost. In short, he is against an all-out wartime mobilization until we clearly have to do it.

Senator JOHNSON takes the stand that that time is now—that the need is clear and will never be clearer while we still have a chance to survive.

The Texas Senator is in a position to speak with some authority on this question. As chairman of the Senate Military Preparedness Subcommittee, he has seen at first hand the hesitations, the uncertainties, the fumblings of the rearmament program. And he has come away from that experience with this conviction: "I say that the policy of wait and see must end, and it must end now. For what are we waiting? What do we expect to see tomorrow that we cannot see clearly today—or could not see, when the Korean War began, on June 25?"

What Senator JOHNSON sees is this:

"First, we are at war. We are at war not merely with Communist China, but with all the military strength and both the physical and human resources behind the iron curtain. We have been at war for 6 months. We may well be at war for 10 or 20 years more.

"Second, our primary and immediate goal in this war is survival. This is a bleak, disturbing reality. In other wars, our goal has been simply victory. Now, however, we must make our survival certain before we can hope for victory, because we cannot be confident of survival.

"Third, we are not getting ready for war. We are in a war, but all our effort is seemingly directed toward staying out of the war that we are in already. This is adolescent nonsense."

The Star believes that these are facts, and that no rational appraisal of the rapidly mounting evidence can lead to any other conclusion. It is possible, by an emotional process of wishful thinking, to arrive at some other conclusion. If one resolutely turns his face away from the evidence, if he merely shrinks from the 34,000 American casualties in Korea, if he will not look through his mind's eye at the Russian jet fighters which have appeared in some force over the Korean battlefield, if he ignores the words of Russia's Mr. Malik, if he closes his ears to the Communist threat to drive our armies into the sea—if a man will do these things he can make himself believe whatever he wishes. But he cannot convert a state of war into a state of peace. And such a man will never be ready to take the steps that must be taken in the interests of our self-preservation.

What should be done? This question cannot be answered with any absolute assurance. Senator JOHNSON has some definite opinions. He says that first, and above all else, we must have a long-range global plan of strategy for the war to which we are committed. We must not let the Russians decide where we shall fight and where we can fight. We must not fall into the tragic error of squandering our young men in futile, indecisive little wars before the real enemy is ever directly engaged. Second, we must fully mobilize for military service all of our available manpower—that if we do not do this we will be weaker by next June than we were when we went into Korea in June of this year. Third, he calls for immediate mobilization of our economy, including tight controls and an urgent drive to organize and greatly increase our productive capacity.

There are others who say in all earnestness that we should not go this far now. They give reasons for their stand. They say that the necessary plans have not been made, that the machinery has not been set up, that the need is not finally clear. One might ask why, after 6 months of war, so little planning has been done, so little machinery is ready. But that serves no useful purpose. We have to go on from where we are and do the best we can.

Those who would move slowly are gambling on the time factor. This must be so, for certainly if we should find ourselves at war with Russia tomorrow they would urge all possible haste.

But how much reliance can be placed in this assumption that we will have the time required? Some of these people thought that the Russians, at earliest, would not get the atom bomb until 1952. They got it in 1949. Our military planners once looked to 1954 as the period of greatest danger. Now they have moved that date up to 1952. Will they be saying in a few weeks or months that next spring or summer will be the critical time?

Let us think a moment about this. Every hour of delay is a gamble with the life of the Nation. If the Russians should strike before we have had time, at our present pace, to get ready, the problems that bother us now, the difficulties which loom so large, will seem trivial by comparison. We will not be worrying then about the cost or about the psychology of the people. We will be much too busy burying our dead, caring for our wounded, and trying to save what is left of our country.

Time is not, and never will be, on the side of those who waste it. As it is, there may not be enough time left. Even so, is it better to do too little or too much? We have trifled too long with the security of this country, with all of the beliefs and the traditions and the things that are dear to us. Opportunity is slipping away. How shall we answer if we are called up on some desolate tomorrow to explain why we did not make the most of it?

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE SENATE

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately upon the conclusion of the call of the calendar I be given the floor before a motion to adjourn or recess is entertained; and that immediately upon the conclusion of my remarks the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON] may obtain the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wisconsin? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CHARLES J. TREES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. JENNER. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 5244) for the relief of Charles J. Trees, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The report was read by the legislative clerk, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5244) for the relief of Charles J. Trees having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and to recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum inserted by the Senate amendment on page 1, line 4, insert "$9,448.86"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JAMES O. EASTLAND,
(By W. E. J.)
W. E. JENNER,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

WILLIAM T. BYRNE,
WINFIELD K. DENTON,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the report was considered and agreed to.

DEMONSTRATION OF PUBLIC LIBRARY SERVICE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The call of the calendar will be resumed. Is there objection to the first bill on the calendar, which has been stated?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 130) to provide for the demonstration of public library service in areas without such service or with inadequate library facilities, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, there was so much confusion on the floor when the first calendar number was called that I did not hear it called. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. Does the Senator from New Jersey object to the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that Senate bill 130, Calendar No. 2, go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 206) relating to the immigration status of the lawful wives and children of Chinese-treaty merchants was announced as next in order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 45) for the relief of the owners and operators of certain gold mines which were closed or the operations of which were curtailed by War Production Board Limitation Order L-208, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON and Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 110) to broaden the cooperative extension system as established in the act of May 8, 1914, and acts supplemental thereto, by providing for cooperative extension work between colleges receiving the benefits of this act and the acts of July 2, 1862, and August 30, 1890, and other qualified colleges, universities, and research agencies, and the United States Department of Labor, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DONNELL and other Senators. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 734) to provide for the appointment and compensation of counsel for impoverished defendants in certain criminal cases in the United States district courts was announced as next in order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 2660) to prohibit the parking of vehicles upon any property owned by the United States for postal purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 33) suspending the legislative budget pending further study was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 478) for the relief of Carl Piowaty and W. J. Piowaty was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1464) to amend the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act relating to marketing agreements and orders was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1955) to authorize certain persons to accept decorations tendered them by the United Kingdom for services rendered the Allied cause during World War II, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILL INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

The bill (S. 595) relating to the internal security of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I should like to point out that this bill should be taken off the calendar, for it is a part of legislation already passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be indefinitely postponed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 458) to provide for a survey of physically handicapped citizens was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 91) to provide for the better assurance of the protection of persons within the United States from lynching, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL AERONAUTICS ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED

The bill (S. 12) to amend the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 802 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, approved June 23, 1938, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new language:

"No agreement with any foreign government restricting the right of the United States or its nationals to engage in air-transport operations, or generally granting to any foreign government or its nationals or to any airline representing any foreign government any right or rights to operate in air transportation or air commerce other than as a foreign air carrier in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, or respecting the formation of or the participation of the United States in any international organization for regulation or control of international aviation or any phases thereof, shall be made or entered into by or on behalf of the Government of the United States except by treaty."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3368) to amend sections 356 and 365 of the act entitled "An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, to increase the maximum sum allowable by the court of the assets of a decedent's estate as a preferred charge for his or her funeral expenses from $600 to $1,000, was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

TITLE TO LANDS ACQUIRED IN ADMINISTRATION OF RECLAMATION LAWS—BILL REFERRED TO JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

The bill (S. 1606) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to determine the validity of titles to lands acquired in the administration of the reclamation laws was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Upon objection, the bill will be passed over.

Mr. McCARRAN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we may revert to Senate bill 1606, Calendar No. 685, to which I previously raised objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada? The Chair hears none.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in the judgment of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, this bill relates to certain matters which should be passed upon by the Judiciary Committee. I hope the author of the bill is present at this time. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be removed from the calendar and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. WATKINS. Will the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee give the bill consideration in the committee and have a hearing on it, so that the matter may be determined one way or another?

Mr. McCARRAN. I say to the Senator from Utah that the bill will not be pigeonholed, but we will give the Senator a hearing on the bill, and will do so promptly.

Mr. WATKINS. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Nevada is approved, and the bill is referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 660) to amend the act of June 27, 1944, Public Law 359, and to preserve the equities of permanent classified civil-service employees of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1031) amending Public Law 49, Seventy-seventh Congress, providing for the welfare of coal miners, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Upon objection, the bill will be passed over.

MRS. JUAN A. RIVERA AND OTHERS—BILL PLACED AT FOOT OF CALENDAR

The bill (S. 1976) for the relief of Mrs. Juan Antonio Rivera, Mrs. Raul Valle Antelo, Mrs. Jorge Diaz Romero, Mrs. Otto Resse, and Mrs. Hugo Soria, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Jersey be so kind as to withhold the objection for a moment?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I shall be very glad to do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I do not know the parties involved in the bill, but they happen to be Bolivian citizens.

The information I have obtained as to the reason why the Judiciary Committee approved the payment of this amount to the parties named in the bill is as follows: It appears that during the war the Government of the United States made arrangements with the Government of Bolivia—at our instance, I believe; the Senator from Nevada can correct me if I am mistaken—to use in this country some of the members of the Bolivian Air Corps, either for training or for reasons of our own. One of our transport airplanes was on its way with a group of Bolivian officers, at our instance and request, when the plane crashed. The crash was not the fault of the crew of the airplane, I presume, and certainly was not the fault of the passengers who were our guests, and at that time were under our service. All persons on the plane, including the crew of the plane, were killed. As a result, the women named in the bill became widows. They have children and families.

The United States thought it was only proper that some sort of gesture be made to show our good will and good intentions; it was felt that the widows of those Bolivian Air Corps men, who were willing to come to the United States and do our bidding, at least should be recompensed in the amount stated in the bill.

It seems to me that as a matter of American fair play, this bill has much merit.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, apropos of the subject matter now before the Senate, let me say that this measure involves five separate, individual awards, to widows of members of the Bolivian air force. The bill was introduced at the request of the Department of the Air Force, on the theory that these officers had been invited as guests of the United States under the provisions of the congressionally approved orientation program, and lost their lives while traveling in an Air Force plane as special guests of our Government.

The Department of the Air Force takes the position that there is a moral obligation on the part of this Government to compensate the widows of these officers.

The committee did not feel that it could act contrary to the statement of the Department of the Air Force in this regard, although there is clearly no legal obligation involved. However, the committee voted to reduce the amount of the allowances from $10,000 to $7,500 in each case, thus cutting the total amount involved in the bill from $50,000 to $37,500.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I am objecting by request. I realize that there are equities involved in this matter. If we may have the bill placed at the foot of the calendar, perhaps I can see my way clear to withdraw the objection when the bill is reached at the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator ask unanimous consent that the bill go to the foot of the calendar?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that will be done.

BILLS INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

The bill (S. 1681) to prohibit the picketing of courts, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. This bill should be removed from the calendar, because it is a part of legislation which has already been passed at this session.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore Without objection, the bill will be indefinitely postponed, as will also a similar bill, Order No. 968 (H. R. 5647), to prohibit the picketing of United States courts.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2294) to amend the Contract Settlement Act of 1944, so as to authorize the payment of fair compensation to persons contracting to deliver strategic or critical minerals or metals in cases of failure to recover reasonable costs, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1741) to extend the unemployment allowance benefits of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 for a period of 2 years was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 2886) to provide for the killing of starlings in the District of Columbia, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

INCREASE OF LIMIT ON TRAVELING EXPENSES OF JUDGES—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 48) to amend title 28, United States Code, section 456, so as to increase to $15 per day the limit on subsistence expenses allowed to justices and judges traveling while attending court or transacting official business at places other than their official stations, and to authorize reimbursement for such travel by privately owned automobiles at the rate of 7 cents per mile, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection temporarily, so that I may make a very brief statement?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I withhold the objection temporarily.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill to which objection has been made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] and also by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS]. I am informed that the Senator from New Hampshire has withdrawn his objection. Until he objected at this time, I was unaware of the position of the Senator from Illinois. There is a companion bill from the House, which is Calendar No. 932, House bill 2166.

Mr. President, this bill has received serious consideration by the Judiciary Committee. There has been a very concerted movement to increase the salaries of judges. There are the two bills which would avoid increasing their salaries, of which this bill is one. The Federal judges have to travel under orders from the Chief Justice, going from place to place. When they do, it is of course necessary that they live in proper manner. The sum of $15 per day is not out of line, when Senators will recall what it costs Members of the Senate to travel in this day and age. I wish the Senator from Illinois might be of a little more temperate turn of mind toward Federal judges.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should like very much to reply to my good friend from Nevada by saying that Federal judges already receive a travel allowance of $10 a day. This is a proposal to give them a travel allowance of $15 a day. I think the judiciary might take upon itself some of the qualities of Spartan simplicity. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2432) restoring to tribal ownership certain lands upon the Colville Indian Reservation, Wash., and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over, by request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will go over.

The bill (S. 806) authorizing the erection of a monument to Sacajawea, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 384) to authorize the Commisisoner of Public Buildings to convey to the Temple Methodist Church, a nonprofit corporation, of San Francisco, Calif., a portion of the federally owned building known as 100 McAlister Street, San Francisco, Calif., and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will go over.

The bill (S. 1439) to provide for assistance to State agencies administering labor laws in their efforts to promote, establish, and maintain safe workplaces and practices in industry, thereby reducing human suffering and financial loss and increasing production through safeguarding available manpower was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 62) creating a Joint Committee on Lobbying Activities was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, in view of the time that this concurrent resolution has been on the calendar hitherto, and because of the fact that it has previously been objected to, and also because of my complete lack of knowledge of it I ask that the resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the concurrent resolution will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2166) to amend title 28, United States Code, section 456, so as to increase to $15 per day the limit on subsistence expenses allowed to justices and judges while attending court or transacting official business at places other than their official station, and to authorize reimbursement for such travel by privately owned automobiles at a rate of not exceeding 7 cents per mile, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Since this House bill is the same as a previous Senate bill which was passed over, this bill will also be passed over.

TOLL HIGHWAY CROSSING AND APPROACHES, SAN FRANCISCO BAY, CALIF.

The bill (S. 1390) to authorize the conveyance to the State of California of easements for the construction and maintenance of a toll highway crossing and approaches thereto over and across lands of the United States in the vicinity of San Francisco Bay, Calif., and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I myself am going to ask that the bill go over, but I desire to make a brief statement under the 5-minute rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mr. KNOWLAND. This bill is designed to deal with a problem affecting the State of California only, and relating to a toll highway crossing and approaches in the vicinity of San Francisco Bay. However, there is now a difference of opinion between the municipalities on opposite sides of the bay, and by various groups on both sides, and the State of California. Discussions are now under way to see whether the differences can be ironed out by appropriate legislation which will be acceptable to both the municipalities involved and the California State Toll Bridge Authority, which has the responsibility for building, financing, and operating such a bridge. So I am asking at this time that the bill go over. We expect to have new legislation ready for introduction at the beginning of the next session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1596) to authorize the Postmaster General to enter into special agreements for certain switching service by railway common carriers, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that this bill go over, by request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

PYRAMID LAKE INDIAN RESERVATION, NEV.—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 17) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents for certain lands to certain settlers in the Pyramid Lake Indian Reservation, Nev., was announced as next in order.

Mr. LEHMAN. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, may the objection be withheld until the Senator from Nevada can make a statement?

Mr. LEHMAN. I objected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator object to the request of the Senator from Nevada that the objection be withheld to permit him to make a brief statement?

Mr. LEHMAN. No; I do not object to that. I was objecting to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this bill involves more of equity and justice toward the white settlers within the lands of the Pyramid Lake Indian Reservation than appears on the surface. The white settlers and their predecessors took up these lands long before the Pyramid Lake Indian Reservation was created. They and their successors in interest have lived on these lands, and the Government of the United States sold and issued a patent to the white settlers for adjacent lands, within the confines of the Pyramid Lake Indian Reservation.

Then, in 1924, the Congress passed and the President signed an act permitting the white settlers to purchase these lands. Arrangements were made with the Interior Department, whereby the purchase was to be made on terms. The white settlers paid year by year until the crash of 1932 came along, at which time it became impossible for them to borrow money.

Today the Interior Department objects to these white settlers being permitted to renew their contracts, and to continue with the purchase of these lands, but nevertheless he retains all of the money which the white settlers have paid, and it is now held by the Indians in their treasury.

Today, the white settlers own the waters which irrigate these lands. The Indians have no water for the lands. The white settlers have all the adjacent lands, holding them by title in fee simple under the present arrangement—and we are seeking a solution of the problem—if an Indian drives his fence through an alfalfa field, and he may leave the stockyard of a white settler on one side of the fence, with the white settler and his family living on the other side of the fence. The result is that the Indian cannot even irrigate the land which he has by subterfuge taken away from the white settlers.

So, in all fairness, whoever is objecting to the consideration of this bill has been ill advised. I happen to know where the objection comes from. It comes from a mind that should not be given the consideration of the people of America. It comes from one Harold Ickes, formerly the Secretary of the Interior. The sooner we quit listening to that individual, the better off America will be in every respect.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I still object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION AND RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 240) to stimulate the exploration, production, and conservation of strategic and critical ores, metals, and minerals, and for the establishment within the Department of the Interior of a Mine Incentive Payments Division, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 58) providing for a rehearing in the matter of the Bellows Falls Hydro-Electric Corp. (project No. 1892), known as the Wilder Dam project, and a review of any order of the Federal Power Commission, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, by request I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 4815) to provide for medical services to non-Indians in Indian hospitals, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2197) to amend the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, as amended (59 Stat. 526, 666, 61 Stat. 130), to vest in the Export-Import Bank of Washington, the power to guarantee United States investments abroad, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 250) to authorize the Federal Security Administration to assist the States in the development of community recreation programs for the people of the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2006) to amend the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 with respect to Federal savings and loan associations, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 211) to amend the act entitled "An act to create the Inland Waterways Corporation for the purpose of carrying out the mandate and purpose of Congress as expressed in sections 201 and 500 of the Transportation Act, and for other purposes, approved June 3, 1924, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. IVES. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 187) favoring a review of the policy of dismantling German industrial establishments, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LEHMAN. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1728) to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, or national origin, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 4453) to establish a Fair Employment Practice Commission and to aid in eliminating discrimination in employment because of race, creed, or color, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2595) to provide for the establishment of a Commission on Human Rights in the government of the District of Columbia, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

The bill (H. R. 4703) relating to the internal security of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, House bill 4703 and Senate bill 2311, Calendar No. 1365, Senate bill 2311, the so-called Mundt bill should be indefinitely postponed because they are embodied in legislation previously passed at this session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection the bills are indefinitely postponed.

RONALD CLIVE JACK—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 891) for the relief of Ronald Clive Jack was announced as next in order.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, by request I ask that this bill be passed over.

Mr. McCARRAN. Before objection is made——

Mr. HILL. I withhold my objection, Mr. President.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is a bill in which the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] has been much interested. The bill was introduced by him.

This is a private relief bill for a man about 37 years old, a native of Australia, and a recognized expert in accountancy.

This man is of good character, on the basis of the record available to the Committee on the Judiciary, he is employed by the firm of Ernst & Ernst of Cleveland, Ohio, working in the Chicago office of that firm. The firm has stated that the loss of his services would result in very definite and serious impairment of benefits to a number of its clients.

The Australian immigration quota is oversubscribed, and he is therefore unable to obtain a visa. He is in the United States under a temporary visa which has expired.

The committee was of the opinion that this is a man of outstanding character who will make a good citizen, and that he should be permitted to remain in the United States.

The bill has been objected to on several occasions by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN]. I do not know whether the Senator from Alabama has withdrawn his objection; though it is my understanding that following the last call of the calendar, the matter of this bill was discussed with him at some length in the hope that he might come to see the merit of the proposal.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, in the absence of my colleague the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN], who, as we all know, is representing the United States Government in the United Nations, I shall have to ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 272) to facilitate the admission of certain foreign workers desiring to perform agricultural work in the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF SECTION 138 OF THE LEGISLATIVE REORGANIZATION ACT OF 1946—CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 38) to amend section 138 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, relating to the legislative budget, which had been reported from the Committee on Rules and Administration with amendments, on page 2, line 9, after "July", strike out "1949" and insert "1950."

The amendment was agreed to.

On page 3, line 6, after "February 15", strike out:

After the legislative budget shall have been reported, all bills authorizing appropriations reported by legislative committees shall be referred to the Joint Committee on the Legislative Budget, which shall render a report within 15 days to Congress showing the estimated cost of such legislation and the effect of that cost on the legislative budget.

And insert:

All bills and joint resolutions authorizing appropriations reported from committees of the Senate or the House of Representatives shall be accompanied by reports in writing, which shall be printed; and there shall be included in each such report or in an accompanying document an estimate from the department or other agency of the legislative, executive, or judicial branch of the Government primarily concerned with the expenditure of any funds required to meet the probable cost of carrying out the legislation proposed in such bill or resolution over the first 5-year period of its operation or over the period of its operation if such legislation will be effective for less than 5 years. Estimates received from departments or agencies under this subsection may be submitted by the committees to the Bureau of the Budget for review, and such reviews shall, when practicable, be included within the accompanying documents before said bills and joint resolutions are reported. It shall be the responsibility of the committee to study such reports and report to the Congress as soon as possible thereafter the effect of that cost on the legislative budget.

The amendment was agreed to.

On page 5 beginning with line 1, strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. Commencing with the second session of the Eighty-first Congress, all appropriations for each fiscal year shall be consolidated in one general appropriation bill to be known as the "Consolidated General Appropriation Act of ——," (the blank to be filled in with the appropriate fiscal year). The consolidated general appropriation bill may be divided into separate titles, each title corresponding so far as practicable to the respective regular general appropriation bills heretofore enacted, but the aggregate total to be appropriated for expenditure in such year, including any amount reserved for deficiencies, shall approximate the maximum total recommended by the legislative budget committee. As used in this paragraph the term "appropriations" shall not include deficiency or supplemental appropriations, appropriations under private acts of Congress, or rescissions of appropriations.

(a) The consolidated general appropriation bill for each fiscal year, and each deficiency and supplemental general appropriation bill containing appropriations available for obligation during such fiscal year, shall contain provisions limiting the net amount to be obligated during such fiscal year in the case of each appropriation made therein which is available for obligation beyond the close of such fiscal year. Such consolidated general appropriation bill shall also contain provisions limiting the net amounts to be obligated during such fiscal year from all other prior appropriations which are available for obligation beyond the close of such fiscal year. Each such general appropriation bill shall also contain a provision that the limitations required by this paragraph shall not be construed to prohibit the incurring of an obligation in the form of a contract within the respective amounts appropriated or otherwise authorized by law, if such contract does not provide for the delivery of property or the rendition of services during such fiscal year in excess of the applicable limitations on obligations. The foregoing provisions of this paragraph shall not be applicable to appropriations made specifically for the payment of claims certified by the Comptroller General of the United States and of judgments, to amounts appropriated under private acts of Congress, to appropriations for the payment of interest on the public debt, or to revolving funds or appropriations thereto.

(b) The committee reports accompanying each consolidated general appropriation bill, and any conference report thereon, shall show in tabular form, for information purposes, by items and totals—

(1) the amount of each appropriation, including estimates of amounts becoming available in the fiscal year under permanent appropriations;

(2) estimates of the amounts to be transferred between such appropriations;

(3) estimates of the net amount to be expended in such fiscal year from each appropriation referred to in clause (1);

(4) estimates of the net amount to be expended in such fiscal year from the balances of prior appropriations;

(5) the totals of the amounts referred to in clauses (3) and (4); and

(6) estimates of the total amount which will be available for expenditure subsequent to the close of such fiscal year from the appropriations referred to in clause (1).

The committee reports accompanying each deficiency and supplemental appropriation bill containing appropriations available for obligation or expenditure during such fiscal year, and each appropriation rescission bill, and any conference report, on any such bill, shall include appropriate cumulative revisions of such tabulations.

(c) The committee reports accompanying each consolidated general appropriation bill, and any conference report thereon, shall show in tabular form, for information purposes, for each wholly owned Government corporation or other agency of the Government which is authorized to receive and expend receipts without covering such receipts into the Treasury of the United States and which uses a checking account maintained with the Treasurer of the United States for that purpose (A) the estimated expenditures (other than retirement of borrowing) to be made out of such checking account for the fiscal year, (B) the estimated receipts (other than borrowing) to be deposited in such checking account for such fiscal year, and (C) the difference between (A) and (B).

(d) The provisions of paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) shall not be applicable to appropriations of trust funds or to transactions involving public debt retirement.

(e) No general appropriation bill shall be received or considered in either House unless the bill and the report accompanying it conforms with this rule.

(f) The Appropriations Committees of the two Houses may hold hearings simultaneously on each general appropriation bill or may hold joint hearings thereon.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that there is an incorrect date——

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I object. I notice that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] is now on the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The date is incorrect, and it should be stricken out and the proper date inserted.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I object.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I think the concurrent resolution had better go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will be passed over.

MEASURES PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3050) to amend Public Law 359, chapter 287, Seventy-eighth Congress, second session, was announced as next in order .

Mr. LEHMAN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 35) requiring committee reports to include estimates of the probable cost of proposed legislation, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HILL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3049) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. MURRAY. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 7185) to amend Public Law 359, chapter 287, Seventy-eighth Congress, second session, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LEHMAN. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3560) to rescind the order of the Postmaster General curtail certain postal services, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 261) favoring rescission of the order of the Postmaster General curtailing certain postal services was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 4653) for the relief of the New York Quinine & Chemical Works, Inc., was announced as next in order.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1981) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon certain claims for basic and overtime compensation, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that this bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

NEW YORK QUININE & CHEMICAL WORKS, INC.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection? I am not addressing myself to Senate bill 1981, but I should like to discuss Calendar No. 1596, House bill 4653. Do I correctly understand that there was objection to the consideration of that bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON] objected to it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Will the Senator withhold his objection?

Mr. CORDON. I shall withhold my objection. However, I should like to explain that my objection is made by request.

Mr. McCARRAN. Then it would be uselessly taking up time if I made an explanation.

Mr. President, I am serving notice at this time on the Senator from Oregon that at the conclusion of the call of the calendar I shall move to take up Calendar 1596, House bill 4653, for the relief of the New York Quinine & Chemical Works, Inc.

BILL PASSED TO FOOT OF CALENDAR

The bill (H. R. 5051) for the relief of Mrs. Juan Antonio Rivera, Mrs. Raul Valle Antelo, Mrs. Jorge Diaz Romero, Mrs. Otto Resse, and Mrs. Hugo Soria, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, a similar bill has been passed to the foot of the calendar, and I ask that the same course be taken in connection with this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3358) to prohibit transmission of certain gambling information in interstate and foreign commerce by communications facilities was anounced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3314) to authorize the appointment of Joseph F. Carroll and Bernt Balchen as permanent colonels in the Regular Air Force was announced as next in order.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2196) to legalize maritime hiring halls was announced as next in order.

Mr. DONNELL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

The bill (S. 3245) to give effect to the Medical Examination (Seafarers) Convention, 1946, adopted at the twenty-eighth (maritime) session of the International Labor Organization held at Seattle, Wash., June 6–29, 1946, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2786) to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to further promote the development and maintenance of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3244) to give effect to the Certification of Ships' Cooks Convention, 1946, adopted at the twenty-eighth (maritime) session of the International Labor Organization, held at Seattle, Wash., June 6–29, 1946, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3246) to give effect to the Food and Catering (Ships' Crews) Convention, 1946, adopted at the twenty-eighth (maritime) session of the International Labor Organization, held at Seattle, Wash., June 6–29, 1946, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3687) to require the armed services to utilize private American shipping services for the overseas transportation of commodities and civil personnel was announced as next in order.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED TO THE FOOT OF THE CALENDAR

The bill (S. 3682) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, with respect to the time of taking effect of annuities of Members and elected officers of the Senate and House of Representatives was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Delaware withhold his objection?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be passed to the foot of the calendar.

BILLS AND RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3147) to establish a temporary National Commission on Intergovernmental Relations was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over.

The bill (S. 3350) to amend the minimum-wage law by extending the application of minimum-wage orders to men, and for other purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

The bill (H. R. 4237) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate the practice of optometry in the District of Columbia" was announced as next in order.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2923) to authorize the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to acquire or construct, with its own funds, a building within the District of Columbia suitable for the Corporation, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3257) to amend the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation Act to provide for unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 49) to enable the people of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 331) to provide for the admission of Alaska into the Union was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 8083) to amend the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, as amended (59 Stat. 526, 666; 61 Stat. 130), to vest in the Export-Import Bank of Washington the power to guarantee United States investments abroad, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 6606) to provide that the district judge for the eastern, middle, and western districts of Pennsylvania shall become a district judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania alone when the first vacancy occurs in that district was announced as next in order.

Mr. LANGER. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 490) for the relief of Frank Miller was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 6616) to provide for the expeditious naturalization of former citizens of the United States who have lost United States citizenship through voting in a political election or in a plebiscite held in Italy was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 291) to investigate the causes of gasoline-price increases during the past 5 years and whether supplemental antitrust legislation is needed was announced as next in order.

Mr. CORDON. Mr. President, by request, I ask that the resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

CANADIAN RIVER RECLAMATION PROJECT, TEXAS

The bill (H. R. 2733) to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance by the Secretary of the Interior of the Canadian River reclamation project, Texas, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, when the bill was last called on the consideration of the calendar I objected on the ground that enactment of the bill would entail an unnecessary expense during wartime. I should like to ask the Senator from Texas what his present plans are with respect to the bill. I understand no request for an appropriation is being made at the present time, or while the present emergency exists.

Mr. CONNALLY. The senior Senator from Texas and the junior Senator from Texas are prepared to make a statement with reference to the bill. We shall not ask for any funds under the bill during the pendency of the national emergency.

Mr. AIKEN. I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. CONNALLY. If objection is made, I see no reason for making a statement with reference to the bill.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief statement. House bill 2733 has had the most careful consideration of both the Committee on Public Works of the House of Representatives and of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the Senate. The bill was unanimously reported by both committees. I regard it as a very important bill, because under it municipal water would be furnished to approximately 11 cities in west Texas. It would also furnish irrigation water for some 20,000 acres of land.

The cities involved are unable to secure water by means of loans from the RFC or other sources because of inability to finance the project with short loans. They have expressed their willingness, and the bill so provides, that they pay interest upon the money which would be furnished for securing water for municipal purposes, which cost constitutes $78,498,000 of the $84,656,000, the estimated cost of building the project.

Senators who are interested in the project, as well as other persons who have shown an interest in it, have stated that they would be willing not to ask for an appropriation so long as a shortage of lumber and material exists, and the money is needed for national defense.

The people living in the cities involved are very much concerned, because the water is being pumped to a lower level all the time, and it is very difficult to get water for municipal purposes. It is being made very difficult for the farmers to pump water for irrigation purposes. If relief is not given, it will mean, in the end, that the areas involved will practically dry up. There are many important defense establishments located in the area, such as refineries and airports, which are very important to the national defense.

I hope the distinguished Senator from Vermont will withhold his objection because of the importance of the bill. It was first objected to by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ]. It was objected to until a compact had been reached between the States involved. Such a compact has been made. It should be noted that practically all of the money involved is repayable to the Government with interest, and at the same interest the Government would have to pay. This is one project which would not cost the Government a great deal of money. I deem it to be a very important project, and I hope that the Senator from Vermont will not object.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, the Senator from Arizona has very well stated the case. There is no doubt in my mind as to the necessity of taking some action in order to get a supply of water for the cities and towns in west Texas. Originally I had objected to the bill, and I am not apologizing for having made the objection. The water which would be necessary to supply the cities and the irrigation projects in Texas would come from New Mexico. I did not want to see a bill passed by the Senate until New Mexico was amply protected by a compact between the States involved.

The State of New Mexico, the State of Oklahoma, and the State of Texas are involved.

On the 4th of December, at Santa Fe, N. Mex., there was signed a compact by which the rights of the various States were outlined. That compact will have to be approved by the individual States, and also by the Congress.

What appeals to me more from the municipal standpoint is this: Heretofore, under reclamation law, the Government has advanced the money for a project to be used for irrigation purposes, and the only money for which the Government could obtain reimbursement was the actual amount which was advanced. Under the proposed legislation not only would the money advanced for this particular work be paid back, but interest on the money would be paid to the Federal Government.

I have now no objection to the bill, although if it is to be considered at this time, I wish to submit two clarifying amendments which will carry out the purposes of the compact signed at Santa Fe, N. Mex.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Vermont still desire to object?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, have I permission to speak under the 5-minute rule?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 5 minutes.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I beseech the Senator from Vermont not to insist upon his objection. If this were a charge on the Treasury of the United States, not repayable, I would certainly recognize the right of the Senator to object. But under the terms of this bill any money which the Federal Government advances will be repaid with interest, with the exception of an item for wildlife and another small item for flood control. Other than those two items, everything will be repaid. The entire territory, including the 11 municipalities, will be organized into districts, taxes will be imposed, and the money will be collected and paid back to the Federal Treasury.

I can understand the difficulty of the Senator from Vermont, where the snows accumulate upon the mountains and the water is drained back, in understanding our problem. The people of Vermont have plenty of water. They have no water problem.

Let me say to the Senator from Vermont that the area involved in this bill was traveled over by old Coronado, in 1540, as I recall, as he marched across the arid plains. It is a wonderful section of the country, but it needs water. The people must have water to subsist. They must have water for domestic uses. This plan is certainly not hostile to the Reclamation Act. Under the Reclamation Act, as I understand, no interest is charged on western lands for 40 years. We hope that this condition will not last for 40 years. Under the terms of the bill the stricken areas—stricken in the sense that they have not sufficient water—will be forced to pay interest on the money which the Government advances.

The water table in this area is being constantly lowered by drafts upon it for irrigation and for domestic use. The water level is constantly going down. That will mean the wreckage and ruin of many municipalities, and of a wonderful agricultural area which produces much of the food we need.

There is no request for an appropriation at this time because of the national emergency. But we want the authorization in order that the people of the area may go ahead with their planning and with their engineering studies, so that when the time comes for us to get the money we can proceed with the work and not be delayed over an indefinite period of years.

I trust that the generous and noble Senator from Vermont will keep his heart open to these appeals of needy people and will forget for a moment the demand for economy. He might as well forget it, because the money will come from the people who are to be benefited, with the exception of the two items which I mentioned, one for wildlife, which is a small item, and the other for flood control. There will not be much flood control. We would like to have a flood occasionally. If we could control the flow of water by a dam across the Canadian River, that would solve our problem. There comes down from New Mexico and other sources sufficient water to take care of all these municipalities if we could but harness it, arrest it, and control it by a dam across the Canadian River.

Mr. President, I salute the Senator from Vermont. I appeal to all his noble impulses. I appeal to his love for his fellow man. I appeal to his statesmanship. He looks far into the years of the future. Let us not be governed by the temporary situation. The situation of the people in that area is not temporary. It is a situation which is going to damn the municipalities and the people residing in that great area unless we can get this relief, which will not cost the Government anything except for the two items which I mentioned, which are inconsequential.

I hope the Senator from Vermont will not insist upon his objection.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont is not without a heart; and when the senior Senator from Texas beseeches, it is only natural that that heart should be touched. I am particularly pleased with his tribute to the snow country and the amount of water which we have in that area. But, Mr. President, we do not have everything up there. It is true that we have a great deal of water. We have so much water that if the Senator from Texas would permit that water to be harnessed, it would perform the work of 135,000,000 Chinese coolies. We have water, but we are not permitted to harness it. We have copper, but we are not permitted to mine it, because there is not enough electricity, and our output is restricted to 8,000,000 pounds a year. We need power in that section of the country. For many years—ever since 1934—the senior Senator from Texas has opposed the northeastern section of the United States having the power it needs to carry on its industries, to operate its mines, to light its homes, and to contribute all we should to the war effort whenever war occurs.

The great north-central region needs access to the sea. It needs the right to bring about the development of the project which would enable ocean-going vessels to proceed to Duluth, Chicago, and Detroit. It has not been permitted to exercise that right because the senior Senator from Texas has seen fit to oppose legislation which would be beneficial to other parts of the United States.

So I say that my heart is touched. I might say that my heart was touched a little more by the pleadings of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], who has always supported legislation beneficial to other parts of the country.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

Mr. AIKEN. It has been called to my attention that the good people of Texas, as well as New Mexico, have supported us generally in our efforts to obtain power and transportation in the northeastern area of the United States. I believe that the Texas area is on record as supporting us to this end.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AIKEN. I have only 5 minutes. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I invite the attention of the Senator from Vermont to the fact that every time the St. Lawrence River project, or any other New England project, has come before us for consideration, so far as this Senator from New Mexico is concerned, he has always gone all-out, and will continue to do so.

Mr. AIKEN. The Senator from New Mexico is stating the facts. However, if I remember correctly, the last time this particular bill was called, he stopped it. Perhaps there has been a reconciliation since that time.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I do not think so.

Mr. AIKEN. It might have been some other bill sponsored by the Senator from Texas that the Senator stopped.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I stopped this particular bill, yes, because New Mexico was not protected. But on the first of December Texas signed a compact with New Mexico, and claimed she would not take all the water; but would actually leave a little to New Mexico. For that reason I am willing to withdraw my objection, though, if the bill is to be considered today, I wish to submit a couple of amendments.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, in the belief that the good people of Texas will some time be able to convince the Senator from Texas of the error of his ways, I withdraw my objection to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The objection to the consideration of the bill on the part of the Senator from Vermont has been withdrawn.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, as I said, I shall submit a couple of amendments to the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware objects. The bill will go over.

Mr. McFARLAND subsequently said: Mr. President, I give notice that I deem House bill 2733, Calendar No. 2113, of such great importance that at the first opportunity next week, if there shall be a lull in the legislative program of the Senate, I shall move that the Senate proceed to consideration of that bill. The objection with respect to the proposed legislation was ironed out with members of our committee on both sides of the aisle. I cannot see how there could be any valid or serious objection to the legislation.

Mr. McFARLAND subsequently said, during Mr. McCARTHY'S address: Mr. President, it was understood by those of us who were interested in Calendar No. 2113, House bill 2733, that it would be placed at the foot of the calendar and later considered. There is no objection to considering it, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Wisconsin may yield for that purpose without losing the floor, and that the pending business be temporarily laid aside but not displaced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WHERRY. Reserving the right to object—and I shall not—and I do not want to—this is one of the bills which was placed at the foot of the calendar, is it not?

Mr. McFARLAND. It is. It was agreed it would be taken up subsequently, after having been placed at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. WHERRY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2733) to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance by the Secretary of the Interior of the Canadian River reclamation project, Texas, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That, for the purposes of irrigating land, delivering water for industrial and municipal use, controlling floods, providing recreation and fish and wildlife benefits, and controlling and catching silt, the Secretary of the Interior, acting pursuant to the Federal reclamation laws (act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto), is authorized to construct, operate, and maintain the Canadian River reclamation project, Texas, described in the report of the Commissioner of Reclamation approved by the Secretary May 3, 1950, entitled "Plan for Development, Canadian River Project, Texas," Project Planning Report No. 5–12.22–1, at an estimated cost of $86,656,000, the impounding works whereof shall be located at a suitable site on the Canadian River in that area known as the Panhandle of Texas. In addition to the impounding works, the project shall include such main canals, pumping plants, distribution and drainage systems, and other works as are necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act.

SEC. 2. (a) Notwithstanding any recommendations in the above-mentioned report to the contrary, only the costs of construction allocable to flood control and, upon approval by the President of a suitable plan thereof, to the preservation and propagation of fish and wildlife, and operation and maintenance costs allocable to the same purposes, shall be nonreimbursable.

(b) Actual construction of the project herein authorized shall not be commenced, and no construction contract awarded therefor, until (1) the Congress shall have consented to an interstate compact between the States of New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas, in conformity with Public Law 491, Eighty-first Congress, and (2) repayment of that portion of the actual cost of constructing the project which is allocated to municipal and industrial water supply and of interest on the unamortized balance thereof at a rate (which rate shall be certified by the Secretary of the Treasury) equal to the average rate paid by the United States on its long-term loans outstanding at the time the repayment contract is negotiated minus the amount of such net revenues as may be derived from temporary water supply contracts or from other sources prior to the close of the repayment period, shall have been assured by a contract satisfactory to the Secretary, with one central repayment contract organization, the term of which shall not exceed 50 years from the date of completion of the municipal and industrial water supply features of the project as determined by the Secretary.

(c) The repayment contract shall provide, among other things, (1) that the holder thereof shall have a first right, to which right the rights of the holders of any other type of contract shall be subordinate, to a stated share or quantity of the project's available water supply for use by its constituent industrial and municipal water users during the repayment period and a permanent right to such share or quantity thereafter subject to payment of such costs as may be incurred by the United States in its operation and maintenance of any part of the project works; (2) that, subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, the care, operation, and maintenance of such portions of the pipe line and related facilities as are used solely for delivering such water to the contract holder and its constituent organizations shall, as soon as is practicable after completion of the municipal and industrial water supply features of the project, pass to the contract holder or to an organization which is designated by it for that purpose and which is satisfactory to the Secretary; and (3) that title to such portions of the pipe line and related facilities shall in like manner pass to the contract holder or its designee or designees upon payment to the United States of all obligations arising under this act or incurred in connection with the project.

SEC. 3. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of many moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be required to carry out the purposes of this act.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I have two amendments which I desire to offer to the amendment of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, in the amendment of the committee, line 18, it is proposed to insert after the period, the words, "The use by the project of waters arising in Ute and Pajarito Creeks, N. Mex., shall be only of such use as does not conflict with use, present or potential, of such waters for beneficial consumptive purposes in New Mexico."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The second amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4 of the committee amendment, line 3, after the word "until", it is proposed to strike out "(1) the Congress shall have consented to an interstate compact between the States of New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas," and to insert, "(1) the Congress shall have consented to the interstate compact between the States of New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas agreed upon by the Canadian River Compact Commission at Santa Fe, N. Mex., December 6, 1950."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I am not going to take the time of the Senate, but I really think that this bill should be voted down at this particular time, for the reason that the President has already issued a directive to the effect that work shall not begin on the construction of projects which are not necessary to the national defense.

The Senator from Arizona and the Senator from Texas have already conceded that this project could be delayed until such time as the emergency period is over. The only way we can stop the spending of money is to stop passing bills. I see no reason in the world why we should pass the authorization, if it is not planned to go ahead with the project until after the emergency is over. After the emergency is over, I think we would be in a better position to legislate more intelligently than we can today. I therefore urge that the bill be defeated.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I do not want to delay the Senate. I have already made a statement on the importance of the bill.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, may I interrupt? I have a meeting at 4:30 which I must attend. If there is to be any extended discussion——

Mr. McFARLAND. I am willing to have a vote, because I have already made my statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Do I correctly understand that there was some sort of unanimous-consent agreement arrived at this morning?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that the Senator from Wisconsin asked and obtained unanimous consent to have the floor for the purpose of making a speech following the completion of the call of the calendar.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is that the unanimous-consent agreement which entitled the Senator from Wisconsin to the floor?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as amended, to the bill (H. R. 2733).

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938—BILL PASSED OVER

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, I was called out of the Chamber when Senate bill 3049, Calendar No. 1521 was reached. The bill then was objected to by the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY]. I have spoken to the Senator from Montana, and he has indicated he is prepared to withdraw his objection. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to consideration of Senate bill 3049, Order No. 1521. The bill was introduced by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, may I inquire what calendar number was referred to?

Mr. BREWSTER. No. 1521, Senate bill 3049.

Mr. LUCAS. I object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois objects.

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois withhold his objection for 3 minutes?

Mr. LUCAS. I am glad to do so.

Mr. BREWSTER. I shall not undertake to labor the argument with the Senator from Illinois, who is in the rather curious position of objecting to his own bill. I had hoped that before the session expired he might be prepared to let his child see the light of day. I shall not, however, discuss that matter.

CHARLES E. WILSON, ECONOMIC MOBILIZER

I want to speak briefly on a far more profound matter which affects us. As it seems to me, the time has arrived to raise the old Harry.

Out of the vasty deep of current chaos there emerges today a glimpse of the man who helped more than any other Member of the Congress to mobilize America industrially in the Second World War and I refer to Senator Harry Truman.

In the naming of Charles E. Wilson as economic mobilizer, with power, the country may find assurance that the lessons learned by the Truman committee in 1942 are about to be applied. Every experience of 1918 and 1942 in industrial mobilization taught the vital necessity of concentration of power and responsibility.

Further steps in the foreign field to put responsibility in those in whom both the President and the country have full confidence as to their judgment and their surroundings and background will at one stroke unite the country and the Congress behind the President.

Forgetting all the past, all Americans may get together on a program at home and abroad that is utterly consistent with the commitments of our country and the proposal last night of the technical leader of his Missouri majesty's loyal opposition.

No individual must be permitted to hamper the all-out effort upon which America must immediately embark.

The elected officials of this country are going to rise to their responsibilities on both sides, and America is going to start the new year with a new look.

Vox populi; vox Dei.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point an article entitled "Second Wilson Job in War Production," published in the New York Times today, and an article written by Robert J. Donovan, dealing with the appointment of Mr. Wilson, which was published in the New York Herald Tribune today.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times of December 15, 1950]

SECOND WILSON JOB IN WAR PRODUCTION—IN 1942, GENERAL ELECTRIC HEAD RESPONDED TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SUMMONS

Recognized as one of the country's outstanding production men, Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Co., is taking the second Government post he has accepted at the request of a President in wartime.

President Roosevelt summoned Mr. Wilson to Washington in 1942 to become vice chairman of the War Production Board, in charge of production scheduling. Mr. Wilson, who celebrated his fiftieth anniversary with the General Electric organizaiton last year, resigned the corporation presidency when assuming his new job in World War II.

"It took me 40 years to climb to the presidency and 40 seconds to step out," he said then. "But hell's loose and I've got to do something about it."

At that time Ferdinand Eberstadt, vice chairman of the War Production Board in charge of program determinaiton, favored Army control over the Government agency. The former corporation head believed the board must go into plants, work out production schedules and then tell each plant where the production was to be sent and when. He insisted that Mr. Eberstadt's scheme kept war contracts out of the hands of small business.

MORE AUTHORITY FOR WILSON

In December of 1942, a compromise was completed whereby Mr. Wilson was permitted to survey military production schedules, balance them against industrial capacity and arrange for their completion. Later that month Donald M. Nelson, head of the board, dismissed Mr. Eberstadt and promoted Mr. Wilson to the post of executive vice chairman of the agency in charge of all programs.

In August of 1944, the former General Electric president resigned his WPB office on the ground that his value to the wartime production program was being impaired by attacks made upon him through the press and radio.

He asserted that the attacks were made at the instigation of "subordinate officials connected with the personal staff of Mr. Nelson." President Roosevelt accepted his resignation with reluctance.

Mr. Wilson goes this time to a Washington post with specific ideas again on defense production. Last week he said defense spending in 1952 would reach a level of $46,000,000,000, but would decline in the following year to about $41,000,000,000.

In a speech before the National Press Club, Mr. Wilson declared that the figures he cited were based upon estimates by his company's own experts. He added that his organization assumed that there would be some increase of the workweek and estimated power requirements at a wartime level of industrial activity.

In Mr. Wilson's opinion, there will be sufficient electric power to meet present needs with a safe reserve margin. There will be no power shortage, he said, unless one or more of these steps is taken:

If major war-production projects are placed where power will not be available to them.

If present manufacturing facilities for utility power-supply equipment is diverted to other purposes.

If materials necessary to produce equipment is not made available as a vital part of over-all defense-program schedules.

STARTED WORK AT 12 YEARS

The 6-foot 2-inch energetic executive of General Electric was born on Hudson Street in Manhattan on November 18, 1886. His father was hurt in the crush at the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge and died soon afterward. His mother supported him by working as a housekeeper. When 12 years old he stopped school and went to work as an office boy for the Sprague Electric Co., one of the organizations that finally made up General Electric.

He learned accounting at night school and enrolled later for correspondence courses in engineering.

Mr. Wilson advanced from office boy through various departments until in 1939 he was elected the fourth president of General Electric. After his resignation in 1944 from the War Production Board, he was again elected president and a director of the corporation.

In 1946 a strike of 10,000 General Electric workers held up production of a large part of the country's supply of electrical appliances for home and industrial use. It lasted from January 15 until March 13. It was settled on the basis of a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour. During the labor controversy Mr. Wilson had lashed out against the fact-finding boards.

"Uncontrolled fact finding can be notoriously abused," he said. "If the proceedings already taken on this principle are representative of what we could expect, it is apparent that the search is likely to be not for facts but for some sort of a framework on which to bring wages into line with the currently announced Presidential wage-price policy."

President Truman named Mr. Wilson chairman of the Civil Rights Committee in 1946. That same year he also appointed him to the Advisory Commission on Universal Military Training.

Mr. Wilson married in 1907 the former Miss Elizabeth Maisch. They have an adopted daughter, Margaret.

[From the New York Herald Tribune of December 15, 1950]

WILSON, OF GENERAL ELECTRIC, TO RUN AMERICA'S WAR PRODUCTION—NATION AWAITS MOBILIZATION TALK TONIGHT—TRUMAN CONSIDERS GRADUAL CONTROLS—MAY DELAY FULL FREEZE OF PAY AND PRICES IN PLAN FOR VAST RISE IN OUTPUT

(By Robert J. Donovan)

WASHINGTON, December 14.—Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Co., who was Executive Vice Chairman of the War Production Board in World War II, agreed today to head America's new industrial-mobilization program.

President Truman, it was learned, intends to announce the appointment of the 64-year-old New York executive in his speech to be broadcast and televised at 10:30 p. m. tomorrow outlining new plans for vastly building up this country's industrial and military power to meet the threat of Communist aggression.

Reports that Mr. Wilson would become head of a new over-all defense production agency to be established by the President circulated throughout Washington all day. The White House refused to confirm or deny them. Tonight, however, Mr. Wilson announced through a spokesman in New York that he had accepted the Mobilization post. There were no further details about the scope of his new job.

GRADUAL CONTROLS PLANNED

The announcement topped these other developments:

1. It was reported that President Truman inclined toward gradual wage and price controls instead of an immediate freeze of the economy as he worked on the final draft of tomorrow's speech. Under this plan the area of controls would be expanded as rapidly as a staff could be assembled to administer and enforce them. The first controls to be applied would be in the field of commodities in critical demand for military production.

2. In the first move of its kind, the Government tonight invited labor and management in the automobile industry to meet with Economic Stabilization Agency officials here next Wednesday "for an informal discussion of wage stabilization problems in the passenger-automobile industry."

Cyrus S. Ching, Chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, said the action was not a result of the refusal yesterday of automobile manufacturers to cancel price increases on 1951 models, as the Government asked. He said the meeting is being called because the Board cannot avoid the conclusion that some kind of controls, either voluntary or mandatory, are in the realm of possibility."

3. Officials indicated that the proclamation of a state of national emergency, which the President originally planned to issue before his speech tomorrow night, is now expected to come soon after it, probably on Saturday.

VINSON FOR 4,000,000 FORCE

4. A proposal that the Armed Forces should plan for a total of 4,000,000 men by mid-1952 was made by Representative VINSON, Democrat, of Georgia, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, one of those who discussed expansion of the Armed Forces at a conference with President Truman at the White House yesterday. The present manpower goal of the armed services, as revealed by budget requests, is 2,771,000 by next June 30, although it has recently been agreed within the administration that this total would be inadequate.

5. The National Production Authority served notice that the use of copper and brass in the production of nonmilitary products soon would be cut. The products to be affected reportedly range from plumbing and radiators to hub caps and coffins.

Mr. Wilson's announcement through a spokesman tonight that he had accepted the top industrial mobilization job caught many Washington officials by surprise. They knew he had been offered the post, but they expected the announcement to come from the President tomorrow, so they would not officially confirm the appointment. Thus, the job has been accepted publicly before there has been any official announcement as to the exact nature of it.

OVER-ALL ORGANIZATION

The President has not revealed what kind of production agency he plans to set up under Mr. Wilson. Reports are it will be an over-all organization supervising allocation and production of essential commodities. It would take over jurisdiction now scattered throughout a number of agencies and departments, including the Commerce Department and the National Production Authority, headed by William Henry Harrison, president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

In his speech tomorrow night Mr. Truman is expected to explain the necessity for a state of national emergency and to announce a vast new mobilization program, including enlargement of the Armed Forces, greatly expanded war production, and imposition of economic controls.

Some officials said tonight Mr. Truman still had not come to a final decision as to whether he would immediately order complete across-the-board wage-and-price controls, thus freezing the whole economy at once, or begin with controls on selected commodities, especially those like steel, needed for defense production.

It was learned on good authority, however, that Mr. Truman and his advisers were tending to favor selective controls since there is not yet an adequate staff to administer and enforce controls on a great many items.

The economic stabilization agency, to which the task would fall, has fewer than 200 employees and no field offices outside Washington. Its World War II predecessor, the Office of Price Administration, had about 70,000 employees and, according to testimony before congressional committees, a similar number would be required now to enforce general wage-and-price controls.

For the second consecutive day, Mr. Truman conferred this morning on controls with high-ranking Democrats and Republicans in Congress, meeting with a group different from the one which went to the White House yesterday, and this afternoon he went over his plans with the National Security Council and other administration leaders.

Senator BURNET R. MAYBANK, Democrat of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, said he and several other legislators present urged the President to declare a state of emergency and move as rapidly as possible toward complete controls. The Senator indicated he favored selective controls on key commodities until the ESA has a staff adequate to enforce general controls.

Members of the Atomic Energy Commission and of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy also attended the morning meeting.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I desire to take a moment to associate myself with the remarks of the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] with regard to the appointment of Mr. Wilson. During World War II I had the opportunity to observe the industrial statesmanship of Mr. Wilson as he worked on the home front in connection with our economic stabilization program. I wish to say that in my opinion he made one of the most brilliant records on the home front in connection with the war effort of any man in a civilian capacity.

I believe his appointment by President Truman will be reassuring not only to American industry but to the American people. They will be pleased to know that we have such an able man performing a vital task in the emergency which confronts us, in whom all can have complete confidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection by the Senator from Illinois, Senate bill 3049 will be passed over.

The next bill on the calendar will be stated.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 5098) to authorize the leasing of restricted Indian lands for public, religious, educational, recreational, business, and other purposes requiring the grant of long-term leases was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that the bill go over by request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3972) to stimulate exploration for the conservation of strategic and critical ores, metals, and minerals, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 7303) to amend section 120 of the Internal Revenue Code was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3108) to provide for payment of an annuity to widows of judges was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not personally object, but I have a request from my colleague to object to that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 3069) to establish a Bureau of Passports and Visas to be headed by a Director was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 10) to facilitate the deportation of aliens from the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, that bill should be indefinitely postponed. It is a part of a measure which already has been passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill is indefinitely postponed.

The bill (H. R. 6114) to set aside certain lands in Oklahoma, formerly a part of the Cheyenne-Arapaho Reservation; and also known as the Fort Reno Military Reservation; for the Cheyenne-Arapaho Tribes of Indians of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill is passed over.

RECLASSIFICATION OF POSTMASTERS, ETC.—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1978) to reclassify postmasters, assistant postmasters, and other positions in the postal field service was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the Senator who is chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service whether he will accept as an amendment to the bill the text of House bill 2945, which is the bill by which it is proposed that postal rates be increased. I notice that the committee has reported the bill for increasing the salaries of postmasters, but has failed to report the bill which would increase the income of the postal service. If the Senator is willing to accept as an amendment the bill increasing the postal rates, I shall not object to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go over at the present time, and I will discuss the matter with the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill goes over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 5965) to provide for the construction of certain Veterans' Administration hospitals, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, in light of the situation in the world today, I think the bill should go over. Therefore I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 2984) to consolidate the Parker Dam power project and the Davis Dam project was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, there is involved in this bill a question concerning the distribution of power from consolidated projects. That question should be settled before the bill is enacted. Therefore, I must object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (S. 706) providing equal pay for equal work for women, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (S. 3499) to grant persons entitled to vocational rehabilitation under part VII, Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), as amended, a minimum of 4 years training was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (H. R. 8195) to rescind the order of the Postmaster General curtailing certain postal services was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (H. R. 5187) to protect consumers and others against misbranding, false advertising, and false invoicing of fur products and furs was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

WILHELM ENGELBERT

The bill (S. 560) for the relief of Wilhelm Engelbert was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wonder whether the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] will give us an explanation of the bill. I am concerned lest the recipient of the proposed relief is connected with certain Nazi influences.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I shall make a statement, and I shall try to reach the Senator's specific question.

This bill cancels the deportation proceedings against a 45-year-old native and citizen of Germany, who last entered the United States as a seaman in December, 1926. He is a former member of the National Socialist Labor Party, and was interned as an alien enemy during World War II.

On July 1, 1948, the Attorney General ordered his release from alien enemy proceedings.

This man is married to a citizen of the United States. It appears that the wife, who depends upon the beneficiary of the bill for her support, is in delicate health, and has had medical and surgical care over a period of years.

So far as is disclosed to the Committee on the Judiciary, there is nothing in connection with this man which would warrant his being excluded from the United States.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Is it true that this man refused to serve in the Army of the United States, against Germany, in the last war?

Mr. McCARRAN. I think that is true, according to the information we have. On the other hand, this relief is not proposed for this man, but for his wife, who is dependent upon him, and is a citizen of the United States.

However, the question propounded by the Senator from New Jersey must be answered in the affirmative.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. The wife is the one who will receive the benefit of this measure; is that correct?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I withhold objection.

Mr. McCARRAN. This measure permits this man to remain in the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 560), which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment at the top of page 2 to strike out:

SEC. 2. In the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the said Wilhelm Engelbert, who entered the United States illegally on December 31, 1926, shall be considered as having been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of December 31, 1926, on payment of the required visa fee and head tax.

SEC. 3. Upon enactment of this act, the Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Germany.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Attorney General is authorized and directed to discontinue any deportation proceedings and to cancel any outstanding order and warrant of deportation, warrant of arrest, and bond, which may have been issued in the case of Wilhelm Engelbert. From and after the date of enactment of this act, the said Wilhelm Engelbert shall not again be subject to deportation by reason of the same facts upon which any such deportation proceedings were commenced or any such warrants and order have issued.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3463) to amend the Railway Labor Act, as amended, so as to prevent interference with the movement of interstate commerce, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. By request, Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 7240) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate barbers in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, approved June 7, 1938, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] requests that I object, in his behalf.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (S. 2362) to provide for flight experience for certain students in senior high schools of the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I object to the consideration of this measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

The bill (S. 3980) to extend the requirements for fixing the minimum number of deck officers on steam vessels to certain additional vessels of the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, on behalf of the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the bill goes over.

STUDY OF CERTAIN TRIBES, BANDS, AND GROUPS OF INDIANS—JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 490) to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to study the respective tribes, bands, and groups of Indians under his jurisdiction to determine their qualifications to manage their own affairs without supervision and control by the Federal Government was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President——

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President——

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not care who objects to the present consideration of this measure; one or the other of us will object, I assume.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I was going to object, by request.

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey, for that purpose.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I object to the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard, and the joint resolution will be passed over.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I desire to make a statement regarding the joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator who objected withhold his objection for that purpose?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I gladly do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, I intend to take a few minutes to discuss briefly House Joint Resolution 490, which is a resolution to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to study the respective tribes, bands, and groups of Indians under his jurisdiction to determine their qualifications to manage their own affairs without supervision and control by the Federal Government.

Mr. President, this joint resolution is not as simple as the above statement would indicate it to be. In making my comments today on this joint resolution, I want it to be distinctly understood that I am thoroughly convinced that we should do everything possible to help the American Indians become independent and self-supporting American citizens. The sooner that result can be accomplished, the better it will be for the Indians and for all the rest of us. For one thing, the demands on the Treasury will be greatly lessened.

Our Government has been the guardian of the Indians for over 100 years. On the surface it would appear to be entirely unnecessary now to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to make a study of these Indians to determine their qualifications to control and manage their own affairs. If the Bureau of Indian Affairs has not made that study in the last 100 years, and if it now does not have a definite program for the emancipation of Indians, it would appear to me that it would be a waste of time and money to ask that Bureau to undertake the job now.

The fact is that numerous studies, both by the Bureau and by outside institutions and persons, have been made over the years to determine how to bring about the fullest development of the Indians, in order that they may become independent Americans, with all the rights and responsibilities of citizenship. In the beginning of the Eightieth Congress, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs was requested to file with the Senate a report naming the Indian tribes which then were ready for immediate release from the guardianship of the United States. He was also requested to name other tribes and detail their status of preparation for full citizenship and conduct of their own affairs. This report was given. It stated that 10 Indian tribes were then ready for management of their own affairs, and could be released within a reasonable time.

The report, also indicating the status of other tribes, was rather full and complete. Definite and specific recommendations were made to the Senate. For the most part, these recommendations appeared to be sound and desirable, but for some reason the administration blocked nearly every move made to make them effective.

The new study to be authorized by the joint resolution will not hasten release of Indians to manage their own affairs. In my opinion it will delay it. The Indian Bureau representative told the Senate committee that the Bureau did not have the staff to make this investigation, and would have to make contracts with schools or outside consulting agencies to do the work. Obviously, neither the schools nor the consulting agencies would be prepared to do this work as well as the Indian Bureau itself. It should also be remembered that we are now facing a manpower shortage.

Indian and native race tribes are scattered all the way from Point Barrow, in Alaska, to the Florida peninsula, and east and west across the country. It would be a mammoth undertaking to study in the field each of these Indian tribes. Obviously, the only other place to get the information is from the files of the Indian Bureau and from the Indian Administration itself. It should be clear that outside institutions would have to be educated to do this job. It would take years to accomplish the investigations proposed, and in the meantime all Indian legislation would be held in abeyance until the study had been completed. Action on studies and recommendations already made, and not new investigations, is the need of the hour.

The resolution authorizes the use of $50,000 out of funds appropriated for the benefit of the Indians. In addition, there is an authorization to use, out of the funds to be appropriated for the Indian Bureau, whatever funds are deemed necessary to carry out the purposes of this joint resolution. This is an open-ended authorization. Some of the money which would be used would be furnished by the Indians themselves. Obviously, the Indians should be heard from before this proposed legislation is enacted.

Indians are badly in need of all appropriations which have been made or are likely to be made in the future. To take money from their needs for sustenance, health, and education to make a study to get information which should be, and is, already in the possession of the Indian Bureau, certainly is not in the interests of the Indians. Indian associations complain that the Indians themselves who would be the most affected did not have an opportunity to appear before the committees which considered this measure. They say it was rushed through committee.

I think I have said enough today to indicate that this measure should not be enacted on the Consent Calendar, but should have the fullest debate. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Indian Affairs for 2 years, I had an opportunity to study many of the Indian tribes at first hand and to note their rate of progress. As a result of my studies, I have come to the conclusion that what is needed now is action on recommendations that have already been made, and not new investigations. Therefore I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STENNIS in the chair). Objection has been made to the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 490.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I should like to state that I shall have no objection to the joint resolution coming up under unlimited discussion, at the proper time, but I consider it to be a very important piece of legislation, and I am sorry that I have to disagree with the distinguished Senator from Utah. I think that we must require the Indian Bureau to make these reports and recommendations, in order that we may receive them promptly and regularly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection having been made, the bill goes over. The clerk will report the next measure on the calendar.

PEANUT MARKETING QUOTAS—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 3135) to amend the peanut marketing quota provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HILL. I object.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection temporarily?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama temporarily withhold his objection?

Mr. HILL. I withhold it temporarily.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I have prepared a statement, which embodies a number of tables, which it would require some time to discuss properly, and which I shall merely ask permission to have them inserted in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the statement and tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR ANDERSON

From the previous discussion which took place with reference to peanuts on Wednesday on the floor of the Senate, I am persuaded that before we get too far along on any sort of legislation to remedy our present difficulties there will be much discussion as to what has taken place in the past and what is likely to be the experience in the future. For this reason I desire to submit a number of things for the record and ask that they be printed in order that the factual material may be in the RECORD and available to Senators before there is any vote on this question.

For instance, on Wednesday I made a statement that the peanut program on the 1949 crop was going to cost the Government about $49,000,000, that since slightly more than 2,000,000 acres of peanuts had been planted we could figure out that the cost was something in the neighborhood of $20 an acre. In support of that statement, I desire to submit for the record and have printed three items. The first is a letter dated November 30 from Frank Woolley, Deputy Administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration, addressed to me which was designed to supplement several telephone conversations which we had had. This letter indicates that the direct loss was $39,605,053.85, and that, in addition, section 32 subsidized the export of peanuts in the amount of $4,559,192.19, and that ECA, in addition, put up $5,040,177.91. Mr. Woolley points out that the total cost was $49,204,423.95. Of course, there were some additional sums spent for peanut butter out of the school lunch program but we can leave that out of the discussion. I, therefore, ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point Mr. Woolley's letter of November 30, a table showing CCC operations through October 31, 1950, in price support of the 1949 crop of peanuts, and an analysis of sales of the 1949 crop of peanuts.

NOVEMBER 30, 1950.

HON. CLINTON P. ANDERSON,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR ANDERSON: This is an informal note with respect to Commodity

Credit Corporation losses and other Government expenditures in connection with peanuts from the 1949 crop.

Attached hereto is a statement for the 1949 crop similar to the one which we provided you on the 1948 crop. I think it would be fair to say that the total subsidy through ECA and otherwise for 1949 peanuts amounts to approximately $49,000,000. You will notice from the attachment that CCC sustained a direct loss of $39,605,053.85. In addition, section 32 subsidized the export of peanuts in the amount of $4,559,192.19 on sales to ECA. ECA put up $5,040,177.91, making the total cost to the United States Government $49,204,423.95. The $1,763,560 spent for peanut butter out of section 6 cannot be properly charged as any type of subsidy since this purchase was made strictly for the benefit of the school lunch program in the interest of centralized procurement rather than in the interest of price support.

In view of the current discussions that are taking place with respect to peanut legislation, I thought you would be anxious to have this data.

Sincerely,

FRANK K. WOOLLEY,
Deputy Administrator.

Commodity Credit Corporation—Operations through Oct. 31, 1950, in price support of 1949-crop peanuts

[Quantity, in pounds]

Particulars	Farmers stock	Shelled
Purchased by CCC	74,505,263	487,827,219
Dispositions:
Inventory adjustment (shrinkage, etc.)	3,374,397	22,269
Sales [1]	71,130,866	487,804,950
Total dispositions	74,505,263	487,827,219
Inventory Oct. 31, 1950	0	0

[1] See separate analysis of sales.

Commodity Credit Corporation—Analysis of sales—1949 crop peanuts

[Quantity in pounds]

A. SHELLED PEANUTS

1. Domestic sales for crushing	[1] 412,790,829
2. Export sales:
(a) Sales under sec. 112 (e), Foreign Assistance Act, ECA countries	[2] 62,032,959
(b) Sales to private exporters	[1] 12,981,162
(c) Total export sales		75,014,121
3. Total, shelled peanuts		487,804,950

B. FARMERS STOCK PEANUTS (ALL DOMESTIC SALES)

1. For seed and edible uses at no loss		32,428,550
2. Domestic sales for crushing	[1] 38,702,316
3. Total, farmers stock peanuts		71,130,866

[1] Net loss to CCC on 1949-crop peanuts to Oct. 31, 1950, was $39,605,053.85, all of which was on domestic sales for crushing with the exception of a minor loss on sales to private exporters.

[2] Payments from sec. 32 funds with respect to peanuts exported under sec. 112 (e) of the Foreign Assistance Act amounted to $4,559,192.19

NOTE.—Under the 1950 program of sec. 6, National School Lunch Act, 7,999,966 pounds of peanut butter were purchased at cost of $1,763,560.

In the course of the discussion I suggested that the cost per acre of the peanuts planted for oil might run as high as $27 an acre. That figure I admit will be hard to demonstrate, but supporting information is available. For example, the Association of Virginia Peanut and Hog Growers on Aug. 17, 1950, released the following statement on the responsibility for the cost of the 1949 peanut program:

"RESPONSIBILITY FOR COST OF 1949 PEANUT PROGRAM

"Total cost of the program, $39,000,000.

"Virginia-Carolina, 27 percent of production, 12 percent of cost, $10.40 per 1,000 pounds.

"Southeast, 50 percent of production, 67 percent of cost, $27 per 1,000 pounds.

"Southwest, 23 percent of production, 21 percent of cost, $18 per 1,000 pounds.

"One may well inquire as to why the Virginia type is costing even 12 percent of the total cost, when we are in acute short supply. Simply because CCC subsidizes No. 2 shelled peanuts (the least desirable shelled grade), by purchasing them from the sheller at 16.4 cents per pound, and selling them to the oil mills at approximately 6 cents per pound. This is justified as long as acreages far in excess of edible trade demands are permitted in the Southeast, for CCC realizes there will be a quantity of excess peanuts to be purchased and crushed for oil at a loss. CCC can purchase such excess more economically and efficiently in the form of No. 2 shelled peanuts, then as farmers stock (unshelled), which would also call for the crushing of the more desirable kernels along with the less desirable kernels. This No. 2 program accounted for the entire portion of Virginia type cost. When acreages are allotted by types, based upon the estimated demands of the edible trade, there will be no anticipated surplus and no further justification for the No. 2 program, and no appreciable cost of the peanut program.

"We believe our efforts toward such a program to be sound, logical, and for the future security of a peanut program. We are simply asking that our product be allowed to stand upon its own merits, and if permitted to do so, we are confident we will have nothing to be ashamed of.

"WILLIAM V. RAWLINGS,
"Executive Secretary."

That statement estimated the total cost of the 1949 program at $39,000,000. Of that, it was estimated that 27 percent of the production and 12 percent of the cost or $10.40 per 1,000 pounds came from the Virginia-Carolina area; that 50 percent of the production and 67 percent of the cost or $27 per 1,000 pounds came from the Southeast; and that 23 percent of the production and 21 percent of the cost or $18 per 1,000 pounds came from the Southwest. I am sure that the Association of Virginia Peanut and Hog Growers would be able to produce evidence in support of their published statement which so far as I know has not be challenged.

The Senate of the United States had a hearing on H. R. 9109 which was conducted on August 9, 10, and 11, 1950. The hearings are printed and are available. They dealt with cotton and peanut acreage allotments. During the hearings we got into a question of peanut losses and the senior Senator from Minnesota inserted in the printed hearings at page 61 a letter from the Fisher Nut & Chocolate Co. at St. Paul, Minn., pointing out that there was within a surplus crop of peanuts a scarcity. The scarcity was of the Virginia-type peanuts. In the questioning I pointed out that since the Government was losing $100 a ton on peanuts the cost of the program would not be $38,000,000 for 1949 as had been estimated, but might move to fifty or sixty million dollars a year. You can understand my interest in a Government announcement that the total loss for 1949 is likely to be $49,204,000.

I have been trying to find out the per-acre cost where peanuts are planted for oil. Yesterday I got from the Department of Agriculture these figures. They were hastily assembled and I would not want anyone in the Department blamed if they were off a few dollars here and there, but the Department pointed to the loss of more than $49,000,000 and said that of the peanuts exported to Europe 40 percent came from the Southeast, 60 percent from the Southwest, and none from the Virginia-Carolina area. I, therefore, asked the Department to recalculate the figure carried by the Virginia Peanut and Hog Growers and the Department did supply me with figures yesterday. It said that $4,600,000 would represent the cost of disposing of all the No. 2's in the Virginia-Carolina area, making the average cost run $12 per acre as previously estimated, but that the cost in the Southeast area would rise to $30,400,000 or $24 per acre, whereas the average cost in the Southwest area, because of the large exports, would rise to roughly $14,000,000 or $18.75 per acre. This figure does not work out at $27 but at the time I used the $27 figure it was estimated that the large exports were coming from the Southeast areas and, therefore, that a proper proportion of the increase from 39,000,000 to 49,000,000 should be charged to that area, which worked out to a $27 figure. I am glad that the figure is only $24, and I desire to correct my previous estimate to that extent. I desire to incorporate the following letter from the Department of Agriculture at this point:

DECEMBER 15, 1950.

Hon. CLINTON P. ANDERSON,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR ANDERSON: This is in reply to your telephone request of December 13 for information regarding peanut program losses for the 1949 crop in each of the three producing areas.

Direct losses to the Commodity Credit Corporation for 1949-crop peanuts amounted to $39,605,054, as of October 31, 1950. The amount of losses incurred, the acreage picked and threshed, and the losses per acre, in each area are as follows:

TABLE I

Area	Amount of loss [1]	Acres picked and threshed	Loss per acre
Virginia-Carolina	$4,933,078	379,000	$13.02
Southeastern	26,364,524	1,252,000	21.06
Southwestern	8,307,452	701,000	11.85
Total	39,605,054	2,332,000	16.98

[1] Area losses partly estimated.

Apart from the above losses, $4,559,192 of section 32 funds were used to subsidize the export of No. 2 shelled peanuts for crushing. An additional $5,040,178 was put up by the Economic Cooperation Administration. This amounts to a total of $9,599,370 used for peanuts exported for crushing. We have no way of knowing whether the amount put up by ECA should be considered a loss to the United States Government because a division between ECA grants and loans is not made on a commodity basis. However, in answer to your specific request, the following table shows a breakdown of the total amount represented by CCC's losses, section 32 funds, and ECA expenditures for 1949-crop peanuts:

TABLE II

Area	Amount considered as loss [1]	Acres picked and threshed	Amount per acre
Virginia-Carolina	$4,933,078	379,000	$13.02
Southeastern	30,281,067	1,252,000	24.19
Southwestern	13,990,279	701,000	19.96
Total	49,204,424	2,332,000	21.10

[1] Area losses partly estimated.

Of the peanuts exported for crushing, 40.8 percent was acquired in the southeastern area and the remaining 59.2 percent was acquired in the southwestern area. None of these peanuts were obtained from the Virginia-Carolina area because the oil content of the 1949-crop peanuts acquired from that area was slightly less than the minimum 46 percent requested by ECA. In table II the amount of section 32 funds and ECA expenditures was prorated between the southeastern and southwestern areas in the same proportion that CCC sales for export to all destinations from each area were of the total quantity sold by CCC for export.

In order to present a clear picture of losses which might be attributed to the 1949-peanut program, consideration should be given to the fact that the peanuts exported for crushing could have been sold by CCC for domestic crushing and a part of their cost to CCC recovered. On the basis of prices received by CCC for other No. 2 shelled peanuts sold for domestic crushing from the 1949 crop, it is estimated that CCC could have recovered approximately $1,540,000 for peanuts acquired in the southeastern area and exported to ECA countries and approximately $1,700,000 for peanuts acquired in the southwestern area and exported through ECA.

In the following table III, showing a breakdown of losses by areas, the amount considered as loss in table II has been adjusted by deducting the estimated amounts that would have been received if the peanuts exported from the southeastern and southwestern areas had been sold by CCC for domestic crushing:

TABLE III

Area	Amount considered as loss [1]	Acres picked and threshed	Amount per acre
Virginia-Carolina	$4,933,078	379,000	$13.02
Southeastern	28,741,067	1,252,000	22.96
Southwestern	12,290,279	701,000	17.53
Total	45,964,424	2,332,000	19.71

[1] Area losses partly estimated.

If we can furnish you any further information, please let us know.

Sincerely yours,

LIONEL C. HOLM,
Acting Administrator.

May I point out that the reason that no peanuts were exported from Virginia and Carolina was that the exporters wanted a peanut running 46 percent or more in oil content and the Virginia-Carolina peanuts do not do that. Secondly, the reason why more came from the Southwest than from the Southeast was that the port facilities available from the Gulf Coast were easier to use.

Now, as to the 1950 losses, I think I should point out that because of the present world situation and the strong export demand for fats and oils, current losses to CCC on quota peanuts are relatively small, presently averaging about $35 per ton, farmers stock basis. The present world situation likely will continue and dollars will be available to other countries because of United States purchases abroad. Therefore, losses for peanuts diverted to crushing from the 1951 crop will continue at low levels. However, I do not feel that because of these relatively light losses on the current situation we should pass the peanut provisions of H. R. 9109 which would increase the acreage principally in Georgia, Alabama, and Texas by 76,888 acres and only increase the acreage in the Virginia-Carolina areas where we really need more peanuts by 64,149. I am inserting in the RECORD at this point an analysis of the peanut provisions of H. R. 9109 with table I showing the effect of such an increase in the State acreage allotments under H. R. 9109 and also with a second table labeled table II which shows the effect of legislation now recommended by the Department of Agriculture on 1951 State acreage allotments. I desire to insert these two tables at the same time because it will be easier to follow them if they are printed together.

"ANALYSIS—PEANUT PROVISIONS OF H. R. 9109

"Table I illustrates the change which would be made in the national and State acreage allotments for 1951 pursuant to section 8 of H. R. 9109. Column 4 of the table is the same as the allotments which have already been announced for 1951. Column 5 shows the State acreage allotments computed pursuant to the first proviso of section 8 and column 6 shows the increases in allotments resulting from the application of this proviso. These increases total 76,888 acres.

"Column 7 of the table shows the indicated permissive increases which might be made for Virginia and Valencia type peanuts in the major producing States as provided for in the second proviso of section 8. Some minor adjustments may be required in the increases for States other than North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. In view of the present demand for these types of peanuts, the Secretary will no doubt increase the State acreage allotments to the 1950 allotments.

"Section 8 of H. R. 9109 also contains a provision which would permit the release and reapportionment of peanut acreage allotments voluntarily surrendered to any county committee.

"Under present legislation, CCC is authorized to distribute to farmers proceeds realized from selling excess oil peanuts for edible purposes only for the 1950 crop. Section 8 amends the act so that such proceeds might be distributed in any year."

TABLE I.—Peanuts: Indicated 1951 State acreage allotments under H. R. 9109, assuming an initial national allotment of 1,771,117 acres

State and area	1945-49 straight average acreage [1]	1950 acreage allotment prior to Public Law 471	1,771,117 acres apportioned		First indicated 1951 acreage allotment [2]	Initial increase through proposed legislation (column 5—column 4)	Possible additional major increases for types through proposed legislation [3]	Second indicated 1951 acreage allotment
			Basis, column 1	Basis, column 2
	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)	(7)	(8)
	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres
Virginia	154,600	141,108	88,399	117,819	117,819		23,289	141,108
North Carolina	287,600	225,702	164,448	188,451	188,451		37,251	225,702
Tennessee	5,400	4,766	3,088	3,979	3,979		787	4,766
Total Virginia-Carolina area	447,600	371,576	255,935	310,249	310,249		61,327	371,576
South Carolina	27,200	18,375	15,553	15,342	15,553	211	2,822	18,375
Georgia	1,046,600	701,400	598,439	585,638	598,439	12,801		598,439
Florida	96,400	73,236	55,121	61,149	61,149			61,149
Alabama	444,200	274,907	253,991	229,535	253,991	24,456		253,991
Mississippi	15,400	9,272	8,806	7,742	8,806	1,064		8,806
Total Southeast area	1,629,800	1,077,190	931,910	899,406	937,938	38,532	2,822	940,760
Arkansas	8,600	5,473	4,917	4,570	4,917	347		4,917
Louisiana	4,000	2,506	2,287	2,092	2,287	195		2,287
Oklahoma	241,400	183,600	138,031	153,298	153,298			153,298
Texas	723,600	451,200	413,750	376,732	413,750	37,018		413,750
New Mexico	10,000	5,959	5,718	4,975	5,718	743		5,718
Total Southwest area	987,600	648,738	564,703	541,667	579,970	38,303		579,970
Arizona	500	960	286	801	801			801
California	500	1,257	286	1,050	1,050			1,050
Missouri	500	279	286	233	286	53		286
Total others	1,500	2,496	858	2,084	2,137	53		2,137
Acreage reserved for new farms			17,711	17,711	17,711			17,711
Total United States	3,066,500	2,100,000	1,771,117	1,771,117	1,848,005	76,888	64,149	1,912,154

[1] Basis revised acreage data contained in Crop Report released July 11, 1950.
[2] Larger of entries in column 3 or column 4, excluding possible increases for Virginia-type producing areas.
[3] Difference between column 5 and 1950 allotment for major Virginia-type producing States.
Source: Fats and Oils Branch, PMA, Program Analysis Division.

TABLE II.—Peanuts: Indicated 1951 State acreage allotments under legislation recommended by the Department of Agriculture assuming an initial national allotment of 1,771,117 acres

State and area	1945–49 straight average acreage [1] (1)	1950 acreage allotment prior to Public Law 471 (2)	2,100,000 acres apportioned on basis of 1945–49 average acreage (3)	Larger of columns (2) or (3) (4)	First indicated 1951 acreage allotment [2] (5)	1951 acreage allotment announced Oct. 26, 1950 (6)	Second indicated 1951 allotment [3] (7)	1941 acreage allotment (8)	Possible additional increases for types through proposed legislation [4] (9)	Third indicated 1951 acreage allotment (10)
	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres
Virginia	154,600	141,108	105,873	141,108	112,869	117,819	117,819	141,108	23,289	141,108
North Carolina	287,600	225,702	196,955	225,702	180,535	188,451	188,451	225,702	37,251	225,702
Tennessee	5,400	4,766	3,698	4,766	3,812	3,979	3,979	4,766	787	4,766
Total, Virginia-Carolina area	447,600	371,576	306,526	371,576	297,216	310,249	310,249	371,576	61,327	371,576
South Carolina	27,200	18,375	18,627	18,627	14,899	15,342	15,342	18,375	1,516	16,858
Georgia	1,046,600	701,400	716,733	716,733	573,301	585,638	585,638	550,694	----------	585,638
Florida	96,400	73,236	66,017	73,236	58,580	61,149	61,149	73,236	----------	61,149
Alabama	444,200	274,907	304,197	304,197	243,321	229,535	243,321	274,907	----------	243,321
Mississippi	15,400	9,272	10,546	10,546	8,436	7,742	8,436	2,476	----------	8,436
Total southeast area	1,629,800	1,077,190	1,116,120	1,123,339	898,537	899,406	913,886	919,688	1,516	915,402
Arkansas	8,600	5,473	5,889	5,889	4,710	4,570	4,710	5,473	----------	4,710
Louisiana	4,000	2,506	2,739	2,739	2,191	2,092	2,191	353	----------	2,191
Oklahoma	241,400	183,600	165,316	183,600	146,858	153,298	153,298	61,607	----------	153,298
Texas	723,600	451,200	495,536	495,536	396,369	376,732	396,369	246,373	----------	396,369
New Mexico	10,000	5,959	6,848	6,848	5,478	4,975	5,478	3,673	----------	5,478
Total southwest area	987,600	648,738	676,328	694,612	555,606	541,667	562,046	317,479	----------	562,046
Arizona	500	960	342	960	768	801	801	----------	----------	801
California	500	1,257	342	1,257	1,005	1,050	1,050	1,257	----------	1,050
Missouri	500	279	342	342	274	233	274	----------	----------	274
Total others	1,500	2,496	1,026	2,559	2,047	2,084	2,125	1,257	----------	2,125
Acreage reserved for new farms	----------	----------	----------	----------	17,711	17,711	17,711	----------	----------	17,711
Total United States	3,066,500	2,100,000	2,100,000	2,192,086	1,771,117	1,771,117	1,806,017	1,610,000	62,843	1,868,860

[1] Basis revised acreage data contained in Crop Report released July 11, 1950.
[2] Column 4 reduced proportionately to a United States total of 1,771,117 acres, with acreage reserved for new farms of 17,711 acres.
[3] Larger of column 5 or column 6.
[4] Preliminary.
Source: Fats and Oils Branch, PMA, Program Analysis Division.

I know that many questions may be raised about these tables on acreage figures and in order that it all may be closer together, I think it ought to be pointed out that under provisions of Public Law 272 passed by the Eighty-first Congress a base quota of 2,100,000 acres was reached for the various States. Subsequently, there was a House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 398) passed by the second session of the Eighty-first Congress which increased that figure by nearly 100,000 acres and nearly all of it went to Alabama and Texas. The attached tables marked "A" and "B" contain the detailed figures showing that both Alabama and Texas were treated substantially the same as other areas prior to the relief they received under House Joint Resolution 398. Column 11 of table A shows that prior to House Joint Resolution 398, Alabama's 1950 allotment was 61.2 percent of its 1948 allotment. You will notice that all States, including Virginia and North Carolina, only received 63.4 percent of their 1949 acreage and that Georgia had only obtained 60 percent of its 1948 acreage. The effect of House Joint Resolution 398 was to give Alabama a 1950 allotment of 63.8 percent of its 1948 allotment whereas Georgia was left at 60 percent in 1948. Texas obtained 66.4 percent as a result of the increase. I include the two tables to be printed in the RECORD at this point:

Peanuts: Comparison of State and National peanut-acreage allotments before and after enactment of Public Law 272, 81st Cong., and related comparisons

State	1949 allotment (1)	1950 allotment under legislation prior to Public Law 272 [1] (2)	1950 allotment under legislation as amended by Public Law 272 (3)	Acreage increase or decrease through Public Law 272 (4)	Percentage increase or decrease through Public Law 272 (5)	1943–47 average acreage picked and threshed (6)	1948 acreage picked and threshed (7)	Percent 1949 allotment was of 1943–47 average acreage (column 1÷column 6) (8)	Percent 1949 allotment was of 1948 acreage (column 1÷column 7) (9)	Percent 1950 allotment is of 1943–47 average acreage (column 3÷column 6) (10)	Percent 1950 allotment is of 1948 acreage (column 3÷column 7) (11)
Alabama	399,821	302,453	274,907	−27,546	−9.1	503,200	499,000	79.5	89.0	54.6	61.2
Arizona	401	303	960	+657	+216.8	[3] 500	1,600	80.2	25.1	192.0	60.0
Arkansas	8,418	6,368	5,473	−895	−14.1	16,200	8,000	52.0	105.2	33.8	68.4
California	1,257	[2] 1,257	1,257	----------	----------	[3] 500	0	251.4	----------	251.4	----------
Florida	83,882	[2] 73,236	73,236	----------	----------	103,000	110,000	81.4	76.3	71.1	66.6
Georgia	878,024	664,199	701,400	+37,201	+5.6	1,088,200	1,169,000	80.7	75.1	64.5	60.0
Louisiana	4,041	3,057	2,506	−551	−18.0	7,800	3,000	51.8	134.7	32.1	83.5
Mississippi	14,129	10,688	9,272	−1,416	−13.2	19,800	15,000	71.4	94.2	46.8	61.8
Missouri	401	303	279	−24	−7.9	[3] 500	[4] 200	80.2	200.5	55.8	139.5
New Mexico	8,641	6,537	5,959	−578	−8.8	10,000	9,000	86.4	96.0	59.6	66.2
North Carolina	243,035	[2] 225,702	225,702	----------	----------	300,400	295,000	80.9	82.4	75.1	76.5
Oklahoma	188,336	142,471	183,600	+41,129	+28.9	229,000	306,000	82.2	61.5	80.2	60.0
South Carolina	25,613	19,375	18,375	−1,000	−5.2	37,200	26,000	68.9	98.5	49.4	70.7
Tennessee	5,739	[2] 4,766	4,766	----------	----------	9,200	5,000	62.4	114.8	51.8	95.3
Texas	625,788	473,390	451,200	−22,190	−4.8	776,600	752,000	80.6	83.2	58.1	60.0
Virginia	141,444	[2] 141,108	141,108	----------	----------	155,000	164,000	91.3	86.2	91.0	86.0
Total	2,628,970	2,075,213	2,100,000	+24,787	+1.2	3,257,100	3,312,800	80.7	79.4	64.5	63.4

[1] Column 1 reduced by 24.3529412 percent (the percentage which the 1950 national marketing quota was reduced below the 1949 national marketing quota of 850,000 tons) except that no State is reduced below the 1941 acreage allotment determined for the State.
[2] Computed allotment increased to equal the 1941 State allotment. This total increase in the national allotment by this adjustment would have amounted to 86,476 acres.
[3] Estimated BAE data not available.
[4] Measured acreage.

Peanuts: Comparison of State and National acreage allotments for 1950 under existing legislation and H. J. Res. 398, 81st Cong., 2d sess.

State	1949 acreage allotment	1950 acreage allotment		Acreage increase required in 1950 allotments by H. J. Res. 398 (column 3 — column 2)
		Under existing legislation [1]	Under H. J. Res. 398 [2]
	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)
	Acres	Acres	Acres	Acres
Alabama	399,821	274,907	319,373	44,466
Arizona	401	960	960
Arkansas	8,418	5,473	6,724	1,251
California	1,257	1,257	1,257
Florida	83,882	73,236	73,236
Georgia	878,024	701,400	701,400
Louisiana	4,041	2,506	3,228	722
Mississippi	14,129	9,272	11,286	2,014
Missouri	401	279	320	41
New Mexico	8,641	5,959	6,902	943
North Carolina	243,035	225,702	225,702
Oklahoma	188,336	183,600	183,600
South Carolina	25,613	18,375	20,459	2,084
Tennessee	5,739	4,766	4,766
Texas	625,788	451,200	499,873	48,673
Virginia	141,444	141,108	141,108
Total	2,628,970	2,100,000	2,200,194	100,194

[1] Not less than the larger of (a) 1941 allotment, or (b) 60 percent of 1948 acreage picked and threshed.

[2] Column 2 increased where necessary to not less than 79.879 percent of 1949 acreage allotment shown in column 1. (79.879 represents percentage which 1950 national allotment, 2,100,000 acres, is of the 1949 national allotment of 2,628,970 acres.)

There is another interesting factor in the peanut situation and that is the agreement which I understand has been reached between the Department of Agriculture and the southeastern peanut shellers under which the Department agrees to take 1,100 pounds of the No. 2 runner type of peanuts out of every ton of farmers' stock peanuts at a price of 15 cents per pound or 5 cents more than the current market price. A letter to me from the junior Senator from Virginia, Senator ROBERTSON, sets forth this understanding and says of it:

"A ton of farmers' stock shells out approximately 1,400 pounds which means that the producer of the runner type will sell 300 pounds in normal trade channels and the Government will buy the rest at a premium price of 5 cents per pound.

"I am likewise informed that the Government under this agreement will have to purchase approximately 2,000,000 tons of runner oil peanuts out of an estimated crop of 385,000 tons."

I cite this section from the letter by the junior Senator from Virginia to explain why his people are very anxious to see good peanut legislation pass. They are afraid that if too much money is squandered on a program of this nature it will jeopardize the whole agricultural program.

This same situation was called to my attention in a letter from W. W. Rawlings, Executive Secretary of the Association of Virginia Peanut & Hog Growers, Inc., dated December 16, 1950. I am inserting at this point in the RECORD two paragraph from that letter:

"A recent estimate, indicates a total production of 385,000 tons of runner type peanuts this year; and, it is further estimated CCC will have to purchase aprpoximately 200,000 tons of this total, for crushing.

"CCC initially agreed to purchase 500 pounds of shelled (runner) peanuts for each ton of farmers stock (yielding approximately 1,400 pounds of shelled goods) purchased by a sheller under CCC contract, these peanuts being purchased at approximately 15 cents per pound and sold at the prevailing oil price, approximately 10 cents per pound. Because of the huge surplus, the S. E. shellers have this week prevailed upon CCC to increase this by an additional 600 pounds, or a total of 1,100 pounds for each 1,400 pounds of shelled goods."

It is not my purpose to discuss at any length what might follow the failure of the Congress to amend the present peanut quota law in such a fashion as to permit the planting of necessary acres of the Virginia-Carolina type of peanuts. I believe there is a suit pending, in which a broker is suing the Secretary of Agriculture and the Administrator of PMA over the denial of import licenses for the Virginia-Carolina type of peanuts. With an actual scarcity of that type of peanuts in the country such a suit would appear difficult to defend and if the plaintiff in the suit should prevail, this country would be faced with the importation of Chinese, Mexican, and Indian peanuts because the growers of the ball-park type peanuts in the United States have been refused the right to grow enough for the American market.

If agricultural programs are to succeed and to be accepted by the producers as well as the consumers, they surely should not require the development of a scarcity in a particular commodity. We have quotas on tobacco and those quotas are so set that each particular type of tobacco has enough acreage to supply the domestic market and take care of exports in the ordinary years. These programs supply some slight excess to make certain that the market is adequately supplied.

We have different types of peanuts produced in this country and it would seem that the quotas should not result in an overproduction of one type and an underproduction of another year after year. Occasional years may produce variations but over the long run the users of peanuts in this country ought to be able to obtain all they want of every type.

When the Congress comes closer to a final decision on this matter, the House and the Senate may be attracted to the provisions of the bill recommended by the Department of Agriculture. Surely such a bill should be considered early in the next session.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senator from Alabama to the fact that peanut quotas were voted on yesterday, and that in the State of Virginia, only 47 percent of all the growers voted in favor of them; that the quotas carried by a vote of 70 percent, when 65 percent is required, and that we are on our way to destroy the peanut program because of the refusal of Senators to let their States of Virginia and the Carolinas grow peanuts which the American market demands and which the American market requires, and which American producers of candy and other goods are going to have to import from China while American farmers are denied their rights. The reason they are denied their rights is because they cannot have them, unless they will give something to other States to which they are not entitled. I only want to remind our friends that I think they are destroying what has been a good program, and what could remain a good program, by an insistence that somebody else be given something, in order to give plain justice to Virginia and the Carolinas. I regret that the growers of my State will be handicapped perhaps if the bills which I am supporting are passed, but in the long run they will be better off if the peanut program is sound and solvent, than if it remains in the present situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection has been heard, and the bill will be passed over.

CONSERVATION OF ASSETS OF INCAPACITATED PERSONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1113) to provide for the appointment of committees to conserve the assets of persons of advanced age, mental weakness, or physical incapacity, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That if a person residing in or having property in the District of Columbia is unable, by reason of advanced age, mental weakness (not amounting to unsoundness of mind), or physical incapacity properly to care for his property, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia may, upon his petition or the sworn petition of one or more of his relatives or friends, appoint some fit person to be conservator of his property.

SEC. 2. Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall fix a time and place for a hearing thereon; and shall cause at least 14 days' notice thereof to be given to the person for whom a conservator is sought to be appointed if he is not the petitioner, and to such other persons as the court shall direct. The court in its discretion may appoint some disinterested person to act as guardian ad litem in any proceeding hereunder. Upon a finding that such person is incapable of caring for his property, the court shall appoint a conservator who shall have the charge and management of the property of such person subject to the direction of the court.

SEC. 3. Such conservator before entering upon the discharge of his duties shall execute an undertaking with surety to be approved by the court in such maximum amount as the court may order, conditioned on the faithful performance of his duties as such conservator; and he shall have control of the estate, real and personal, of the person for whom he has been appointed conservator, with power to collect all debts due such person, and upon authority of the court to adjust and settle all accounts owing by him, and to sue and be sued in his representative capacity. He shall apply such part of the annual income, and such part of the principal as the court may authorize, of the estate of such person to the support of such person, and the maintenance and education of his family and children; and shall in all other respects perform the same duties and have the same rights and powers with respect to the property of such person as have guardians of the estates of infants.

SEC. 4. When any person for whom a conservator has been appointed under the provisions of this act shall become competent to manage his property, he may apply to such court to have such conservator discharged and to be restored to the care and control of his property. If the court finds him to be competent, an order shall be entered restoring the care and control of his property to such person. The court shall have the same powers with respect to the property of any person for whom a conservator has been appointed as it has with respect to the property of infants under guardianships.

SEC. 5. Upon filing of a petition as provided by this act the court may, with or without notice or hearing, appoint a temporary conservator of the estate of any person hereunder, if it deems such action necessary for the protection of such estate, subject to the provisions for an undertaking contained in section 3 hereof. Such temporary conservator shall serve only until such time as a permanent conservator can be appointed or until sooner discharged.

SEC. 6. Where a conservator is appointed pursuant to the provisions of this act, all contracts and business transactions, subsequent to the filing of the petition, of a person for whom a conservator has been appointed hereunder, shall be presumed to be a fraud upon him and against his rights and interests

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the appointment of conservators to conserve the assets of persons of advanced age, mental weakness not amounting to unsoundness of mind, or physical incapacity."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 7524) to authorize the establishment of a wildlife-management area in the Florida Keys, Fla., and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard, and the bill will be passed over.

EXTENSION OF TIME OF PERMITS ON AGUA CALIENTE INDIAN RESERVATION LANDS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9272) to amend the act of October 5, 1949 (Public Law 322, Eighty-first Congress), so as to extend the time of permits covering lands located on the Agua Caliente Indian Reservation, which had been reported from the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, after the numerals "1951," to insert a colon and "Provided, That this amendment shall not extend the duration of any permit which would, according to its own terms, expire on or before December 31, 1951."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

RIGHT-OF-WAY FOR ELECTRIC TRANSMISSION LINE, SANTA FE FLOOD CONTROL BASIN, AND SAN GABRIEL RIVER IMPROVEMENT, CALIFORNIA

The bill (S. 4138) to authorize the Secretary of the Army to grant to the Southern California Edison Co. an easement and right-of-way for electric transmission-line purposes in the Santa Fe Flood Control Basin and the San Gabriel River improvement, California, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I call attention to the fact that this bill, with one minor exception, is the same as Calendar No. 2579, House bill 7735, and I ask that the House bill be considered. The only difference between the two bills—and the Senate bill was unanimously reported by the Armed Services Committee—is that the House bill is further limiting, inasmuch as it contains a provision that the easement may be given for a period not to exceed 50 years. Ample safeguards are contained in both bills that the easement may only be given on such conditions as may be prescribed by the Federal authorities, and at a fair value. That language is in both bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California requests unanimous consent that Calendar No. 2579, the bill H. R. 7735, be substituted for Calendar No. 2756, the bill S. 4139 and that the House bill be now considered. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7735) to authorize the Secretary of the Army to grant to the Southern California Edison Co. an easement and right-of-way for electric transmission line purposes in the Santa Fe flood control basin and the San Gabriel River improvement, California, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 4138 is indefinitely postponed.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 202) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of the National Portrait Gallery, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I ask that this joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will go over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 9313) to amend the Agricultural Act of 1949 was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, this is certainly not a bill which should be considered on a mere calendar call. I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PURCHASE OF VESSELS "MARIPOSA" AND "MONTEREY"—BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 9626) authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to purchase the vessels Mariposa and Monterey was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill. I insist that this bill should be carefully and thoroughly explained.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, as a matter of courtesy, I do not wish to supersede the Senator from Washington. I have an explanation of the bill which I should like to present, but I should be very glad to follow the author of the bill, if he has anything to offer.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I desire to submit certain amendments to the bill. I must confess that they were sent to me in the nature of a letter, and they will have to be read. The letter just came. I apologize for not having them in proper form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let us first determine whether there is objection to the present consideration of the bill, before any amendments are in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I have no objection to either the Senator from Washington or the Senator from Oregon making a statement in regard to the bill, although I have been requested by the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] to oject to the passage of the bill at this time; which I do, in his absence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. Will the Senator withhold the objection temporarily?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I withhold the objection, if Senators desire to make an explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator withholds his objection.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I merely want to make a brief statement. This bill was before the Senate recently, shortly before adjournment. It merely gives the Secretary of Commerce authority to negotiate, to charter, or to make such arrangements as he may deem to be in the interest of the Government for the purchase or charter of two passenger ships which are now in the San Francisco Bay area, the vessels Mariposa and Monterey.

Those two ships were taken by the Government during the war and were used as troopships. They were later turned back to the company, and, under the provisions of the contract, the United States Government was to reimburse the company for the amount of reconversion necessary to put those ships back in shape to be used on regular passenger runs. There was some disagreement as to what the amount should be, and some criticism of the Maritime Commission and others involved as to the amount, and a fight ensued between the General Accounting Office and the Matson Steamship Line as to what amount should be allowed for reconversion so as to put the two ships back into passenger use.

That is another story, Mr. President. But since that time those two ships have been standing idle. They are the only two available passenger-transport ships in the entire United States that have not been converted and used. The Maritime Commission, the Secretary of Defense, and everyone in the executive departments having to do with the defense of the country say they need these ships.

All the bill does, Mr. President, is to allow the Secretary of Commerce to negotiate for them. They can be converted into troop transports within 90 days. There has been constant objection to the bill on the ground of the fracas between the Matson Line and the General Accounting Office as to the cost of reconversion as of now as compared with the cost in the last world war.

This bill has nothing to do with that. The last time I asked for the passage of the bill it was objected to by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS], who talked about the fracas with the General Accounting Office. During my campaign the Republican nominee for the United States Senate made a speech in which he said I was trying to sell the United States Government two pigs in a poke—two 20-year-old ships——

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I should like first to finish my statement.

The Department of Defense says that troop transports are needed. These ships are available. If Senators want to object, that is another matter entirely. I do not know what the ships are worth, but we need them. They can be converted within 90 days. If we had passed this bill 3 months ago, the ships would be in Korea today helping to evacuate some of our troops.

I am through with it. If Senators want to continue to object, it is all right with me.

Mr. MAGNUSON subsequently said: Mr. President, I have referred to a letter, which is addressed to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. JOHNSON] by the Acting Secretary of Commerce. I ask that this letter be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE,
Washington, December 15, 1950.

Hon. EDWIN C. JOHNSON,
Chairman, Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This letter is in further reply to your request of September 28, 1950, for our comments concerning H. R. 9626, a bill authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to purchase the vessels Mariposa and Monterey.

The bill would authorize the Secretary of Commerce, upon request of the Secretary of Defense, to purchase the vessels Mariposa and Monterey for use during war or national emergency or at any time in support of military operations. If requested to do so by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Commerce would also be authorized to convert the vessels to the requirements of the Secretary of Defense, and to transfer such vessels to the Department of Defense, without reimbursement upon the completion of such conversion.

In a letter of August 17, 1950, addressed to the Maritime Administration the Acting Secretary of the Navy stated:

"In view of the present situation, the Department of the Navy recommends that the Maritime Administration purchase both the steamship Mariposa and the steamship Monterey from the Oceanic Steamship Co., and take the necessary steps to complete them as troop transports."

In view of this recommendation, the Department of Commerce urges early and favorable consideration of this bill as an emergency measure. We recommend, however, that the following technical amendments be included in the bill:

I. The words ", without reimbursement," lines 9 and 10, page 2, be deleted. At the present time the cost of conversion by the Department of Commerce is being paid out of defense funds. As a matter of policy, it may be decided that in this case also, financing of these conversion costs should be a defense expenditure. Therefore, the bill should not preclude use of appropriations of either the Department of Defense or the Department of Commerce.

II. In the interest of clarity, and to implement the above amendment, we recommend that an authorization of appropriations in the usual form be included:

"SEC. 3. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be required to carry out the purposes of this act."

We are advised by the Bureau of the Budget that, while there would be no objection to the submission of this report, it was their opinion that the amendments herein proposed should be incorporated in the bill.

If we can be of further assistance in this matter, please call upon us.

Sincerely yours,

PHILIP B. FLEMING,
Acting Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington has made a very clear statement of the distinction between the bill now pending before the Senate and the old claims dispute.

I want to speak as a member of the Committee on Armed Services, because I see several of my colleagues from that committee now on the floor of the Senate.

I give the Senate my word that the passage of this bill is vital to the security of America, and I deeply regret that the junior Senator from Illinois has filed an objection and is not here to hear the discussion in regard to the importance to the security of the Nation of the passage of this bill, because, knowing the junior Senator from Illinois as I do, I am perfectly satisfied that if he were present he would withdraw his objection on the basis of the information which I now wish to put into the RECORD in regard to these ships, because these two ships need to be converted as rapidly as is possible in order to be turned into transport ships for American troops.

We cannot justify standing on the floor of the United States Senate today to postpone action on a bill which is so vital to the security of this country as I believe this bill to be. We cannot be wasting any more precious hours in making America strong. Here are potential transport ships available, and apparently the bill is going to be passed over, simply because an objection has been filed by a Senator who is not here to hear the explanation as to the importance of the bill.

I wish to read now, Mr. President, into the RECORD, an explanation with reference to the acquisition of these ships which will be endorsed by the Defense Department.

The purpose of this bill is to authorize the Secretary of Commerce upon request of the Secretary of Defense, to purchase the vessels Mariposa and Monterey and such necessary materials as may be needed for their conversion to troop transports. The Secretary of Commerce is also authorized, upon request of the Secretary of Defense, to convert these vessels to meet military requirements.

In the hearings on this bill before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and the subcommittee of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, strong endorsement of the need for these vessels by the Government was presented by officials of the Defense Department, the Commerce Department, and the Maritime Administration. When unanimous consent to consider this bill was requested on September 23, 1950, the closing day of the last session, objection was voiced.

Three months have elapsed. Had this legislation been enacted, conversion of these two vessels would already be on the way to relieve the known and serious shortage of fast, large troop carriers required by this country in time of need.

The evidence submitted to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in its study and investigation of the merchant marine attests to the woeful lack of vessels of this type.

Table V-D of Senate Report No. 2494, Merchant Marine Study and Investigation, tabulates the merchant vessels of the United States as of June 30, 1949, by size and speed. This tabulation includes active privately owned tonnage and all tonnage active or laid-up, owned or controlled by the Maritime Administration.

There are only three vessels listed with a speed of 21 knots or better. These vessels are the America, owned by the United States Lines, the Washington, owned by the Government and presently chartered to the United States Lines, and the Lurline, owned by Matson. The Mariposa and Monterey are sister ships of the Lurline.

There are three passenger vessels under construction, two for American Export Lines, and one for United States Lines, which will have a speed in excess of 21 knots.

The only other vessel in this speed range is the U. S. S. Wakefield, formerly the steamship Manhattan, which was acquired by the Navy during World War II, and converted to a transport.

This country is now embarked on a vast program to build up military strength with the utmost speed. This will include a substantial increase in the number of our Armed Forces. Similar preparation must be made to provide adequate transports for possible large-scale movement of troops.

Responsible officials of the Government have confirmed to me the need of the immediate acquisition of the vessels Mariposa and Monterey for conversion to troop transports.

It is true that section 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, gives to the Secretary of Commerce the power to acquire these ships—the same power requested by H. R. 9626. The principal difference is that section 902 is not operative in the absence of a specific proclamation of national emergency by the President. The issuance of such a proclamation is a matter of broad national policy, which goes far beyond the acquisition of two potential transports.

It should be noted that the standard of compensation provided by H. R. 9626 is exactly the same as the standard provided in section 902.

This is an emergency measure necessary for the defense of the country. I think it should be enacted now.

Mr. President, in view of the objection which apparently is going to be filed, I desire now to serve notice that I shall make a plea to the majority leader to permit this bill to come up by motion at the earliest possible hour, because I think we should demonstrate to the Nation that when ships are needed by the Defense Department and it makes a request for this kind of aid, the Senate of the United States will back it up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I do not object to the present consideration of the bill, although I shall object to its passage for the time being. But I understand that certain statements were made about the fact that I was not performing my duty by being on the floor of the Senate. It is a well-known and established practice of asking colleagues to object to bills if a Senator is called away from the floor and he is opposed to them. That has been done at least 20 times this afternoon. I do not wish to hold this bill up merely on the basis of an objection of an individual Senator, but I desire to point out that there is a long history of negotiations surrounding these two ships; that in the past excessive sums have been involved. The matter has been gone into by the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN] when he was chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, and again on the floor of the Senate in 1949. There is very grave reason to believe that in the past there has been collusion between the Maritime Commission and the Matson Co. We may possibly be involved in a case of fraud and scandal, and, although I am sure none of it would involve any Senators, I think it is about time we watched what we are doing in these matters. It is my belief that the Government already has the power to requisition these ships by the Defense Production Act.

Furthermore, there is a great possibility that the President may declare a national emergency tonight in which case legislation most certainly will not be necessary. On the other hand, if we pass the legislation anyway, it will constitute a virtual mandate that these ships be purchased. If any Senator doubts this, he should read the report of the committee on this bill. Certainly the bill deserves debate and should not be passed on a Unanimous-Consent Calendar.

I would also like to say that if we need legislation to requisition ships it should be general legislation. It should not be directed solely to two ships, and especially not to two ships with such a history of shady negotiations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object——

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois and other Senators withhold their objections long enough for me to read in the RECORD a statement on the subject? The statement comes in the form of a letter from the Department of the Navy.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, if the bill is of such serious consequence as the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] indicates, it seems to me it should not be considered on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar. I would be willing to listen to a motion to consider it later. If it is of such consequence it should not be considered on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD at this point a letter from the Navy Department relating to the Mariposa and the Monterey. I received the letter this morning from the Navy Department. It is signed by the Vice Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral L. D. McCormick. I present this letter after long discussions yesterday in the Committee on Appropriations. The letter states that the Navy at the present time needs these two ships, the Mariposa and the Monterey, and wants the bill to be passed in order to make the purchase of the ships possible. This is a completely different subject matter, as the Senator from Oregon and the Senator from Washington pointed out, than the previous controversy over the rehabilitation of the ships for civilian purposes. I agree with the Senators that the bill be passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS,
Washington, D. C., December 14, 1950.

HON. LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR SALTONSTALL: This is in response to your questions during hearings of the Senate Appropriations Committee today regarding the acquisition by the United States of certain vessels to be fitted and used as transports.

As you know, there are three President Line ships in building which are being acquired by the Government for use as transports. Such use of these ships is highly desirable because they are new and their construction has not progressed beyond a point so that their conversion for troop carrying will be unduly expensive.

There is also a proposal with which you are familiar to acquire the steamships Mariposa and Monterey, and to take steps necessary to convert them as troop transports.

The Navy Department has recommended that all five of these ships be acquired and fitted as transports. This recommendation was made in view of the existing international situation which makes it necessary that all reasonable steps be taken now to provide for large troop lifts. All five ships can be advantageously used in the light of contingencies which may now reasonably be foreseen.

I am informed that there are no prospective purchasers of a single ship of the President Line class and that the prospects for commercial operation of steamships Mariposa and Monterey are poor.

In connection with our conversation comparing the President Line ships and the three ships designed to compete in the luxury trade, I am glad to furnish the following characteristics:

	Length	Tonnage	Speed	Passengers
United States	940	60,000	31	2,000
Independence	682	20,500	25	972
Constitution	682	20,500	25	972
President Line ships	537	12,660	19.5	228

I trust that the foregoing is an adequate answer to your queries.

Cordially yours,
L. D. MCCORMICK,
Vice Chief of Naval Operations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentary situation is that objection is heard, and the bill will go over.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to address the Senate for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington requests unanimous consent to address the Senate for 2 minutes. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] made the statement that some kind of fraud, collusion, or scandal was involved in this situation. I agree that there was considerable argument with respect to these ships in the past in connection with the old Maritime Commission. The present bill has nothing to do with that matter. The bill would merely authorize the Secretary of Commerce to negotiate for the purchase of the two ships which the Department of Defense says it needs. What the Government would pay for the two ships I do not know. How the Government would negotiate for their purchase I do not know. I have sufficient faith in Mr. Sawyer to know that he would probably get the best price he could. The argument over these two ships—and I am not familiar with the argument—was with the old Maritime Commission. That Commission has been abolished. It was abolished practically at my request. The bill has nothing to do with that argument. I do not think anyone should say that there is an atmosphere of fraud, collusion, or scandal involved here. The other matter has been investigated pro and con by the Senator from Vermont and the General Accounting Office and involves a past transaction. I do not think the controversy has been settled; has it?

Mr. AIKEN. It will probably take another 30 years.

Mr. MAGNUSON. It will probably take another 30 years to settle it. No price is set in the bill. The Government wants the ships for troop ships. I am becoming a little tired of being accused of something that happened 10 years ago. That question is not involved here at all, and I am not trying to talk about that. I am talking about a bill which would allow the Secretary of Commerce to negotiate for the purchase of two ships which the Government needs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. SALTONSTALL and Mr. DOUGLAS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will try to see to it that every Senator is protected in his rights. However, the Chair has an obligation to the Senate as a whole. The Chair will ask the clerk to call the next order on the calendar and then recognize any Senator who wishes to be recognized.

The bill (H. R. 2093) authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to execute a quitclaim deed to property owned by Jacob F. Reidel was announced as next in order.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed at this point in the RECORD a letter from Mr. Raymond S. McKeough, under date of May 23, 1950, along with some other material. At the time the letter was written Mr. McKeough was Commissioner of the United States Maritime Commission. The letter is addressed to the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] as chairman of the Subcommittee on Independent Offices Appropriations of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate. It should throw some light on the history of the negotiations surrounding the Mariposa and the Monterey, which will give a further indication of why I feel the bill should be debated and not passed on the Consent Calendar.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION,
Washington, May 23, 1950.

The Honorable JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Independent Offices Appropriations of the Appropriations Committee, United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR O'MAHONEY: I am writing you in the matter of the steamship Mariposa and the steamship Monterey, owned by the Oceanic Steamship Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Matson Navigation Co., about which Chairman Fleming, of the Maritime Commission wrote to you on May 16. As he stated in his letter, I do not concur with the decision of the Commission majority in this matter, and I desire to acquaint your committee with the reasons for my dissent. Circumstances make it impossible for me to submit to you a comprehensive brief dealing with all aspects of the matter. In the belief that you are generally familiar with the background and the 4 years of negotiations between the Government and the Oceanic Steamship Co., owner of the vessels, I shall only touch upon some of the major considerations which convince me that the latest decision of the Commission majority, submitted to you for approval by your committee, is unwise, not in the interest of the merchant marine, and not in the public interest, and, therefore, that it should not be approved.

I desire, however, to sketch the more recent developments in this matter with some of which your committee may not be fully familiar, and which are not touched upon in the report of the Commission majority.

In brief, the Commission majority proposes to pay to Oceanic the sum of $5,653,555.99, for which Oceanic would obligate itself in the main to complete the restoration of the Mariposa. This would require reopening and amendment of the so-called redelivery lumpsum settlement agreement covering both the Mariposa and Monterey, made in 1946 between the War Shipping Administration and Oceanic, under which the Government stands ready to pay to Oceanic approximately $1,900,000, if, as, and when Oceanic completes the reconversion of the Mariposa. However, under the existing contract, Oceanic need not complete the reconversion, in which case the Government owes Oceanic nothing. It is now proposed that the Government pay Oceanic approximately $3,800,000, over and above the $1,900,000 conditionally due, to persuade Oceanic actually to complete the reconversion of the Mariposa.

In addition, the Commission majority proposes to have the Government buy from Oceanic the SS Monterey, presently in a very much unfinished state, with reconversion only one-third completed, plus materials purchased or ordered by Oceanic but not yet installed in the Monterey. Under the majority decision, the price to be paid for the Monterey and the selection of the materials, as well as the price to be paid for them, would be left to the discretion of the Commission, with the sole proviso that the price be "deemed fair and reasonable by the Commission" and that the materials to be purchased be selected as deemed "advisable by the Commission in the public interest."

Apparently, the majority's proposal also includes a commitment to subsidize operation of the Mariposa on the Australia service. This feature, although important and controversial, is not covered in any detail in Chairman Fleming's letter to you of May 16, or the report transmitted with it.

In its three major features, this majority proposal is identical with one submitted to the Commission by Commissioner Carson in his memorandum of July 6, 1949, except that Commissioner Carson specified a purchase price for the Monterey and materials and spelled out details of the proposed subsidized operation of the Mariposa. In my memorandum of July 18, 1949, I explained in detail why I considered the proposal, in plain language, a "bail out" of Oceanic/Matson for its own managerial mistakes. Since, as stated, the proposal now submitted to you in substance is identical with Commissioner Carson's of July 6, 1949, I attach hereto a copy of my comments of July 18, 1949. This will make it unnecessary to repeat in detail the objections then raised by me which, in my opinion, are equally valid today.

With Commissioner Carson's proposal and my critical comments before it, the Commission last July decided to postpone action until after passage of the 1950 Independent Offices Appropriations Bill (H. R. 4177) which, as passed by the House of Representatives, authorized the Commission to acquire and complete the Mariposa or the Monterey, or both. House Report 425 (p. 32) accompanying the bill said that when buying either ship, or both, the Commission, "* * * in their sale to another United States-flag operator * * * may resell such ships on mortgage terms or may contribute a construction differential subsidy to the cost of improvements to the vessels or both." The Senate Committee on Appropriations (Report 639) added the following comment to that of the House Committee: "This Committee wishes to stress that the Maritime Commission, with its discretionary power, should protect the interests of the United States in all such negotiations."

You will note that the present proposal of the Commission's majority differs greatly from the arrangement the House and Senate Appropriations Committees had in mind. Instead of buying one or both ships for resale to another operator, Oceanic is to be given, in addition to the amount due under existing contract, a special subsidy of approximately $3,800,000 to complete the Mariposa for its own account, plus assurance of a special subsidy contract, with a provision for special accommodation of the seasonal needs of the Matson Navigation Co. which owns Oceanic. In addition, the Monterey is to be bought by the Government, not for resale to another operator, but to be laid up for use in a possible future emergency.

On August 1, 1949 (see CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 95, part 6, pp. 10456–10466), the Senate discussed in detail the aforementioned authority proviso in the appropriation bill, as well as Commissioner Carson's proposal and the objections raised by me, with the result that the Senate decided to strike out the authority to buy one or both of the vessels for resale to another operator, which, as indicated, was a far more conservative approach than the one recommended by Commissioner Carson and now adopted by the Commission majority. The decision to strike out the authority was adopted in conference and the Commission was directed (conference rept. 1262 of August 12, 1949, pp. 9 and 10) to submit instead its recommendation on the matter to the appropriate legislative committees. Although the conferees took this action because, as they said, they were "unable to secure any estimate from the Maritime Commission as to what a proper and equitable contract would cost the Government," Chairman Fleming's letter of May 16 and the majority report omit an estimate as to what the proposed three-way action (Mariposa, Monterey, operating subsidy) would cost the Government. Instead, as pointed out, the purchase price of the Monterey and the materials is to be left to the Commission's discretion.

Following the action of the Congress in striking out previously granted appropriation authority for Commission acquisition of one or both of the vessels, the Commission, on October 14, 1949, on motion of Chairman Fleming, over my dissent, approved two-thirds of Commissioner Carson's July 6 proposal, i. e., decided to pay over $5,600,000 to Oceanic for Oceanic's completion of the Mariposa reconversion for its own account, and to offer Oceanic a modified special subsidy contract for the Mariposa, subject to the required statutory findings, the most important of which is Oceanic's financial ability to operate the subsidized service successfully. Since the majority action of October 14, 1949, did not provide for acquisition of either ship, the majority, while notifying the legislative committees of the action, decided that it need not await "consideration by the appropriate legislative committees of the Congress." The Commission, having left the fate of the Monterey entirely open, Oceanic promptly came back with a counterproposal that it either be permitted to sell the Monterey for foreign-flag operation or that the Government acquire the Monterey.

Following the October 14, 1949 majority action, the Government Operations Subcommittee of the House Committee on Expnditures in the Executive Departments held an informal hearing on October 18, 1949, with the chairman and other members of the committee, as I recall, expressing considerable doubt as to the wisdom and equity of the majority decision. Growing out of this hearing the Comptroller General ruled by memorandum of November 8, 1949, to Congressman PORTER HARDY, Jr., with copy to the Commission, that the proposed payment of over $5,600,000 to Oceanic, under the revised terms approved by the Commission majority, would not seem to be "in satisfaction of an obligation properly incurred against funds of the War Shipping Administration prior to January 1, 1947," failing which the funds would not be available for the proposed payment, with a new appropriation in consequence required for such payment.

Hoping that the objections of the Comptroller General might be overcome, the Commission proceeded with the implementation of the majority's October 14 action. The necessary findings as to Oceanic's financial adequacy caused considerable difficulties, the Commission's staff finally finding Oceanic financial resources inadequate. Oceanic's president and vice president opposed this finding in a meeting with the Commission and further negotiation at the direction of the Commission ensued which, however, failed to convince the Commission's staff of the adequacy of Oceanic's finances. In a new report to the Commission, dated March 6, 1950, the Chief, Bureau of Government Aids, had this to say in conclusion:

"Certainly, the unwillingness of Matson Navigation Co. to lend financial support to its subsidiary indicates a lack of confidence on the part of the stockholders in the success of the undertaking, and, if the stockholders have no confidence, there is no reason why the Commission should be any more confident on this subject."

In resubmitting the entire matter to the Commission, the staff, confronted with a legal ruling (memorandum of March 7, 1950 from the General Counsel) that the Commission had no authority to acquire the Monterey unless it first "affirmatively determines the subject vessel is necessary for use upon another essential service," recommended that the Commission permit the sale and transfer foreign of the Monterey, as not needed for our merchant marine or for emergency use. Oceanic's existing contractual obligation to keep the Monterey under United States flag until April 28, 1952 (the Mariposa until December 17, 1951), was to be waived (the specific penalty provided for in the original nominal-interest loan agreements being totally ignored) in consideration of Oceanic's obligating itself to restore the Mariposa, although under the same original construction loan contracts Oceanic was not only required to keep the Mariposa (as also the Monterey) in the highest classification of the American Bureau of Shipping (i. e., in good repair), but, under the Commission's majority action of October 14, 1949, the Government was to pay Oceanic an extra $3,800,000 (approximately) in consideraiton of Oceanic obligating itself to restore the Mariposa.

On April 25, 1950, the Commission, after listening to further protests by Oceanic's vice president against the financial recommendations of the Commission's staff, decided unanimously not to permit the sale foreign of the Monterey. No action was taken on any of the remaining staff recommendations but instead, upon motion of Commissioner Coddaire, over my dissent, the Commission made three determinations and recommendations requesting the Chairman to transmit them with all pertinent facts to the Congress. These determinations appear in full on page 9 of the report attached to Chairman Fleming's letter to you of May 16, 1950, and have been rephrased, with substantial modifications in detail, into the two questions appearing on page 1 of the letter of May 16 proper.

This brings the situation up to date, although many important details have necessarily been omitted from this abbreviated chronological sketch.

In the following, I shall comment on the proposal of the Commission, attempting to supplement rather than repeat the comments contained in my memorandum of July 18, 1949 (attached) to which I have already referred.

The first proposal is for payment of $5,653,555.99 by the Government to bring about the restoration and modernization of the steamship Mariposa. Under existing contract, the Commission would have to pay Oceanic approximately $1,900,000 upon completion of the restoration, now about 60 percent complete, of the Mariposa. I would see little objection to assist Oceanic by paying this sum in advance, if completion within a reasonable time were assured by means of a bond. However, Oceanic is to be paid not only this sum, but an additional $3,800,000 (approximately), or twice again as much, provided Oceanic agrees to complete the restoration. It is true that under the existing settlement contract the Government cannot compel Oceanic to finish the work. However, if it is not finished, the Government saves approximately $1,900,000. Moreover, no attempt has been made to enforce the original loan agreement (at nominal interest rate) under which the Mariposa was built and which still requires Oceanic to keep the Mariposa in the highest class of the American Bureau of Shipping. Instead, Oceanic is to be paid three times the remaining sum conditionally due it under the settlement contract, solely to persuade and assist the company to finish the reconversion of its own ship, for its own account and future use.

This is a novel kind of subsidy for which the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, makes no provision. To the contrary, the 1936 Act, in order to keep our merchant marine really modern and competitive, limits the economic life of a vessel to 20 years and prohibits the subsidization of a vessel older than that except under very special circumstances, and even in those exceptional cases, it is evident that older vessels should be subsidized only until modern replacement vessels can be completed. The Merchant Marine Subcommittee of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee recently completed hearings at which special emphasis was laid by all, members and witnesses alike, on the urgent need for new vessel construction as the only means of survival of even a nucleus of the American shipbuilding industry, so urgently needed in case of war. In my own testimony before the subcommittee I pointed out that for the bulk of our fully built-up dry cargo and tanker fleet, earnings rather than added vessels are the need of the hour, and that work for our shipyards would have to come from the building of new passenger ships for which construction differential subsidy is available under title V of the 1936 act.

I consider it therefore detrimental to the American merchant marine and the American shipbuilding industry, if vessels which have practically reached the end of their economically useful life are rehabilitated, instead of new vessels being constructed. The Mariposa will be 20 years old in December 1951, 1½ years from now, i. e., before a modern replacement vessel can probably be completed. The Commission has just unanimously opposed legislation calling for the rehabilitation of old vessels for Great Lakes operation, on the grounds that such rehabilitation does not promote a modern, competitive merchant marine and instead would further reduce the prospects of new construction work, so urgently needed by our shipyards.

The Commission cannot, of course, object to Oceanic completing the restoration of the Mariposa, and stands ready in that case to pay the balance due on the Mariposa under the existing settlement contract. The restoration was contemplated to be completed 3 years ago, and would have resulted in nearly 5 years of operation before the vessel became 20 years old. My objection, on the other hand, is directed against the payment of a special incentive and bonus, in fact, a special subsidy, of nearly $3,800,000 for the rehabilitation of a vessel practically over-age when completed, even though the intended modernization is alleged to give the Mariposa an added useful life of 15 years. That modernization, to the best of my knowledge, is limited almost wholly to the passenger accommodations. In hull design and engines, the Mariposa, when completed, will hardly be comparable to modern vessels and surely not those built 5 or 10 years from now.

To pay a special subsidy of nearly $3,800,000 as an incentive for the rehabilitation of an old vessel appears especially incongruous in the light of the strong representations to Congress by the shipping industry that the age at which vessels may be traded in to the Government for an allowance against the price of a new vessel should be reduced from 17 years to 12 years, in order to stimulate modernization of our fleet. The Commission objected to this proposed legislation only on the grounds that the 1936 act already permits the trading in of 10-year-old vessels so that there was no need for the proposed amendment.

In the foregoing, I have referred to the payment of approximately $3,800,000 proposed by the Commission's majority over and above the approximately $1,900,000 conditionally due Oceanic for completion of the Mariposa, as a special subsidy. I fail to see how it can be interpreted otherwise. The fact that the added sum proposed to be paid for the Mariposa is the amount which Oceanic would receive under existing contract if it completed the reconversion of the Monterey, makes it no less a subsidy if the payment is to be made without Oceanic completing the Monterey.

The so-called "lump-sum settlement agreement" between the War Shipping Administration and Oceanic is a lawful, valid contract. It was freely entered into, as the report of the majority (p. 3) attests. To rewrite it now so as to pay Oceanic for finishing one ship what the Government agreed to pay upon completion of two ships, would be as I have previously stated, a bail-out at taxpayers' expense. This becomes overwhelmingly clear when we review the events which caused Oceanic's present plight and the 3 years of persistent attempts to rewrite the contract in favor of Oceanic.

Under the agreement under which the Mariposa and Monterey were chartered and subsequently requisitioned by the Government, through the War Shipping Administration, that agency was obligated to restore them to their former condition, ordinary wear and tear excepted, or to make such other arrangement as was mutually acceptable to it and Oceanic. This contract clause, freely agreed to, rather than the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, governed the obligation of the War Shipping Administration.

Under this clause, the lump-sum settlement agreement was entered into in August 1946. It provided that the vessels were to be returned to Oceanic, and Oceanic was to be paid approximately $5,650,000 each in settlement of all redelivery obligations of the Government, as follows: one-third when the reconversion work was commenced by Oceanic, one-third when half completed, and the last third when fully completed. It was further agreed between Oceanic and War Shipping Administration that competitive sealed bids would be invited on Commission-approved reconversion specifications, plus certain improvements desired by Oceanic for its own account, and that another wholly owned subsidiary of the Matson Co., United Engineering Co., a repair yard of San Francisco, was to be awarded the contract by Oceanic if United Engineering was low bidder. United Engineering, Oceanic, and the War Shipping Administration agreed that United Engineering would submit a bid not exceeding the amount of the estimate of the Technical Division of the cost of the Government's redelivery obligation, plus the cost of Oceanic's own improvements. No such opportunity was apparently offered any other bidder.

The invitation provided for fixed price bids and the terms and conditions of War Shipping Administration Warship-Lumpsumrep (April 10, 1945) contract. Three bids were received; the "low" bid, $6,881,500 by United Engineering; the second low bid, $8,250,000 by Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.; and the third bid, $8,900,000 by the Bethlehem Steel Co., New York. All of these bids covered not only the reconversion, but added work for Oceanic's account as well. As agreed between WSA and Oceanic, Oceanic awarded the contracts to United Engineering, but a copy of the contract, which has just become available shows that instead of awarding the work on the basis of the fixed price bid of $6,881,500, submitted by United Engineering, the contract provided for Oceanic to pay whatever the cost turned out to be. (There was to be no profit.)

It may well be held that the "second low" bidder, Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., the country's largest shipbuilder, was deprived of the contracts through a competitive "low bid" by Oceanic's affiliate which was neither fair nor competitive, in view of the subsequent contract award which bore no resemblance to the bid.

I do not know whether the lawfulness and propriety of these proceedings have ever been investigated. I do know, however, that they were the direct cause of Oceanic's financial distress and its appeal to the Government for help. As it turned out, Newport News was not the only loser. Whether due to United Engineering's lack of experience, excessive overhead, or other reasons, the cost of the work on the two vessels exceeded estimates so greatly that Oceanic called a halt in 1947. All work stopped, and it has not been resumed since. Shipyard workers had to be laid off.

With the Mariposa work about 60 percent and the Monterey work about 30 percent completed, Oceanic, which paid the bill under its ceilingless contract, claims that it has already paid, for the work so far on the two ships, approximately $17,500,000 (including $3,255,000 so-called committed expense items), compared to Newport News' fixed price bid of $8,250,000 per vessel, or $16,500,000 for both, for the complete job, including reconversion and modernization. Newport News, it must be presumed, would have completed the work at the bid price irrespective of any possible cost increases. Thus, if the real low bidder had received the contract, the vessels would have been completed long ago, and the Government would not be asked, as it has been asked persistently over the past 3 years, to foot the bill for Oceanic's mistakes. Actually these mistakes were Matson's, whose management was the same as that of Oceanic and United Engineering (part of which Matson recently sold). It is regrettable that Matson, a strong, financially very potent company, has so far been unwilling to repair the damage it caused, sending instead its subsidiary Oceanic to the Government to ask for relief.

In connection with Oceanic/Matson's decision to halt all work on the Mariposa and Monterey, two facts should be noted:

The first fact is that the steamship Lurline, the third of the Mariposa and Monterey group of vessels, owned directly by Matson, and redelivered by War Shipping Administration from war service under what appears to have been the same type of lump-sum settlement agreement providing for three progress payments, was reconverted and has since been operating successfully in Matson's Hawaii service.

The second fact worth noting in connection with the stoppage of all work on the Mariposa and Monterey is that Oceanic advised the Commission at first that it saw no prospects whatever for a profitable resumption, even with operating subsidy, of the service to Australia in which the two vessels operated before the war. More recently a place for part-time operation of one vessel, with operating subsidy, is seen by Oceanic with the same vessel serving in Matson's domestic luxury passenger service between the west coast and Hawaii during part of the year. The Commission's Trade Routes Committee, which vigorously opposed as inadequate and impractical one-ship services on relatively short routes, such as the North Atlantic, and between New York and Cuba, in spite of the far more frequent sailings even a single ship can make over the relatively short routes involved, recommended, although reluctantly, that Oceanic's proposed one-vessel part-time service to Australia, a far longer route, be approved on the theory that one vessel is better than none. I question the soundness of this theory under which presumably even one sailing is better than none. As indicated, in other instances in which subsidized one-ship operation was considered, the same committee found such operation uneconomical and noncompetitive.

Thus, we find that Oceanic is to be given a subsidy of nearly $3,800,000 by special legislation or committee action, in abrogation of a valid contract, to complete the reconversion of the nearly 19-year-old Mariposa, in order to have that vessel operate under a subsidy contract providing for a probably inadequate service accommodatingly revised to suit Matson's program, without any provision for construction of a replacement vessel, and in the face of repeated staff findings that Oceanic is not at the present time financially qualified, under the 1936 act, to receive an operating subsidy contract. There is no doubt in my mind that this proposal of the Commission's majority in every respect violates the various admonitions and exhortations of the several congressional committees to which I have referred earlier.

Before leaving the proposal concerning the Mariposa, I would like to refer briefly to the objections raised by Commission counsel against the Comptroller General's ruling as to the nonavailability of the existing appropriation for WSA obligations incurred before January 1, 1947; I would also like to review certain added considerations offered by Oceanic, which the Commission majority holds would justify reopening and amending the 1946 settlement contracts.

Commission counsel argues that the added payment to Oceanic would be in satisfaction of an obligation incurred before January 1, 1947, and, therefore, properly paid for from funds appropriated for such obligations of the War Shipping Administration. Yet at the very same time, counsel argues, and the Commission majority concurs, that the legal consideration for amendment of the WSA contract and payment of money conditionally due for the Monterey, for the Mariposa instead, is the new added positive obligation on the part of Oceanic definitely to complete the Mariposa. I fail to see how the proposed tripled payment by the Government can be held to be justified by a new counterperformance on the part of Oceanic, so as to overcome the Comptroller General's doubts as to the presence of a valid legal consideration permitting rescission of the contract, while at the very same time your committee is told that the tripled payment for the Mariposa is really an old obligation, incurred long, long ago, which argument is intended to overcome the Comptroller General's finding that WSA funds set aside for old obligations may not be used.

I believe in fair play. I do not believe in heads I win, tails you lose.

Now as to some of the further added, new considerations, which, according to the majority report, distinguish the proposed settlement from Oceanic's obligation under the original loan agreement to keep the Mariposa in the highest state of condition and repair: You are told, for instance, that under the proposed addendum the Government would be protected by insurance; its redelivery obligations would be released and it would be protected against paying a second time for the money allowed for reconversion, in case of future requisitioning.

As to the insurance protection, it applies only during the reconversion. There is no provision for insurance protection of the Government's added contribution after the work is completed; so that in case of total loss of the Mariposa after its restoration, the Government would recover nothing towards its added investment, nor would Oceanic be required to use insurance proceeds towards construction of a replacement, although the availability of the Mariposa as a passenger vessel and potential troop transport is one of the main arguments offered in outward justification of the proposed action. This availability, I submit, is in no way assured, since apart from the lack of a replacement requirement in case of loss or after a given number of years, there is also no provision for the Mariposa's operation, or even documentation under the American flag, for the period of the allegedly added 15 years of life. Oceanic would be free to apply for transfer to foreign flag, and should the political situation quiet down, there is little doubt, judging from the actions of the Commission majority on transfer applications during the post war period, that Oceanic's application for permission to sell and transfer the Mariposa to a foreign flag would be approved, particularly if the Australian service conforms to Oceanic's earlier pessimism, and in view of the Mariposa's advanced age and doubtful ability to compete with vessels built now, or 5 years from today.

As to the release of the Government's redelivery obligations, claimed in the majority report as a new, added consideration justifying the proposed tripled payment for the Mariposa, this is a mystifying claim. Obviously, the existing settlement contract already provides for a full release of the Government's obligation growing out of the Government's wartime use of these vessels.

Finally, you are told (p. 6 of majority report) that Oceanic offers an agreement "which protects the Government in possible future payments of just compensation for Mariposa or Mariposa's use by eliminating $8,519,453 (the sum of Government's funds utilized in Mariposa's restoration) [if the majority's present decision is carried out] from Mariposa's value for just compensation purposes."

I cannot concede that the prospect of possible return of a given sum in the event of a future emergency, an occurrence which the Government does not control, would justify the Government to pay today a huge sum not otherwise due. Today's payment is definite; tomorrow's return speculative, a relationship of events which ordinarily is considered gambling. It would be a bad gamble, moreover, since the proposed addendum, attached to Chairman Fleming's letter of May 16, 1950, does not in fact furnish the claimed protection. This becomes apparent from a comparison of "4." of the addendum with section 802 of the 1936 act, which realistically protects the requisition value payable by the Government, not only by limiting the value, whereas the proposed addendum would only provide for a definite deduction from a wholly indefinite value, but most importantly, by providing that the value limitation, in the case of section 802, "shall run with the title to such vessel or vessels and be binding on all owners thereof."

The addendum proposed by the Commission majority is significantly devoid of such provision, which could easily have been added. Instead, Oceanic would agree to notify potential future buyers of the Mariposa of this provision of the addendum, for a rather elusive purpose, since under the addendum, if the Commission must pay such future owner just compensation without an appropriate deduction, Oceanic, not the future owner, would be obligated to keep the Government harmless.

Your committee will wish to weigh the value of this complicated, and legally highly dubious provision, were Oceanic to sell the Mariposa, for instance, to Matson and thereupon liquidate, surely a reasonable possibility in view of Oceanic's difficult financial condition and the doubtful prospects of the Australia service.

In addition to the above described defects of the proposed addendum, it lacks any protection against an overpayment in case of purchase of the Mariposa by the Government. By contrast, section 802 of the 1936 act provides such protection in the case of requisition or purchase.

One final aspect of the proposed payment of $5,653,555.99 for completion of the restoration of the Mariposa: This amount, as you know, includes approximately $3,750,000 remaining from the total of $5,653,316 agreed as total sum payable on the Monterey. Included in the settlement sum for each vessel is approximately $1,300,000 as the Government's share in the cost of fireproofing the vessels upon restoration, plus installation of large evaporators selected by Oceanic as a means of providing the necessary counterweight to offset the topside weight of the fireproofing. The Government's obligation to pay for any part of the fireproofing and consequential ballasting was by no means clearly established, but the Comptroller General ruled that "the cost of compliance with Coast Guard requirements for fireproofing may be regarded as an obligation of the WSA.

Since under the proposal submitted to you by the Commission majority, the Monterey, now only 30 percent reconverted, would not be completed by Oceanic, it seems that Oceanic would not comply with the Coast Guard's requirement. Under these circumstances, payment to Oceanic of the cost of fireproofing which Oceanic will not perform, appears wholly unconscionable. The corresponding amount, i. e., approximately $1,300,000, should in any event be deducted from the proposed payment to Oceanic.

Having dealt at unfortunately all too great length with the Mariposa, without in any way covering all aspects of the proposal in full, it remains for me to explain my objection to the further proposal that the Government acquire the unfinished Monterey. While question 2, propounded in Chairman Fleming's letter to you of May 16 describes the Monterey as "a vessel capable of restoration and modernization for operations on essential United States trade routes (and) as a potential naval auxiliary" the report submitted at the same time (p. 8) states:

"Neither the Government nor Oceanic contemplate further restoration of the Monterey at this time nor does the Commission deem it necessary now to utilize the Monterey in service upon an essential United States trade route."

The fact is that the Commission has neither a purchaser, nor a long-term charterer, nor a trade route in prospect for the Monterey. In my memorandum of July 18, 1949 (attached), I pointed out that the Government already owns a good number of passenger vessels of similar size, some of them faster, others far more modern, which it has been unable to sell or to employ at worthwhile charter rates. I pointed to the record of repeated pronouncements on the part of the administration in opposition to construction by the Government of vessels for which no buyer is assured in advance. Acquisition through purchase should surely fall under the same injunction. I also pointed to the unavailability of funds to modernize passenger ships already Government owned, for commercial operation, on the one hand, or to repair Government-owned vessels for greater readiness in case of war, on the other hand, making it appear very dubious, to say the least, that tax funds should be used to buy still another old passenger ship, this one in a state of incompletion, plus materials intended for restoration to a luxury passenger ship, when the Government admittedly has no intention to restore the vessel to operation.

To my comments of last year, equally valid today, I would like to add, however, that the Commission even now has full authority to purchase the Monterey under the 1936 act. I am referring to section 510 under which the Government stands ready to take vessels 17 years and older in trade-in on new construction. Special authority to circumvent the letter and spirit of the 1936 act, to the detriment, as I have explained, both of the American merchant marine and our distressed shipbuilding industry, is now sought by the Commission's majority to permit purchase of the Monterey for cash, without new construction.

I do not think that the 1936 act should be rewritten in special accommodation of Oceanic, which, according to the majority report (p. 8) has requested the Commission either to acquire the Monterey plus materials, or to approve transfer foreign because, according to Chairman Fleming's letter of May 16, "* * * it may be unable to close the Mariposa transactions except concurrently with the acquisition by the Commission of the Monterey and certain materials for her restoration."

Here we have a case where even the tripling of the payment conditionally due on the Mariposa, and the promise of an operating subsidy contract, modified to suit every desire of Oceanic/Matson, will not persuade Oceanic/Matson to finish the Mariposa, but where the Government, in addition, is asked to take the Monterey off Oceanic's hands, plus materials, for neither of which the Government has any certain use, against full payment by the Government, apparently including payment for materials purchased with the Government's first installment under the settlement contract, for which materials the Government thus is asked to pay a second time.

These terms I consider outrageous. I urge your committee to disapprove them.

The Commission majority, regardless of Oceanic's request and statement of inability to go through with the Mariposa proposal without the Government's purchase of the Monterey, states that it advances the proposal to acquire the Monterey upon its own merit. The majority explains this fortuitous coincidence by its following formal determination (see p. 9 of report):

"2. The Commission believes the Monterey is suitable for use of the United States in time of war or national emergency."

This determination was made immediately following disapproval, unanimous, of a staff recommendation by the Commission's Chief, Bureau of Government Aids, and the general manager, that the sale and transfer foreign of the Monterey be permitted in view of the lack of need of the vessel for the national defense.

The aforementioned determination as to the Monterey's suitability for war use, together with the decision to request enabling legislation permitting the Commission to acquire the Monterey, presumably for potential war use, since no commercial operation is in prospect, was made by majority action of the Commission on April 25, 1950. Nine days later, on May 4, 1950, Chairman Fleming inquired of the Secretary of the Navy (letter attached to Chairman Fleming's letter to you dated May 16), "* * * if you consider the steamship Monterey a vessel suitable for economical and speedy conversion into a naval or military auxiliary, or otherwise suitable for the use of the United States in time of war or national emergency."

By letter of May 12 (likewise in your hands), the Secretary of the Navy declared the Monterey suitable for economical and speedy conversion into a naval or military auxiliary or otherwise suitable for war use, adding that the Navy would under present circumstances object to transfer of the Monterey to foreign flag, and closing with a request to be informed as to the condition and material readiness of the steamship Monterey when this status is determined by survey. Apparently, no information as to the condition and material readiness of the Monterey was available to the Department of the Navy when the declaration was made as to the suitability of the Monterey for economical and speedy conversion.

The United States Government does not to my knowledge, except during a formal state of emergency or war, acquire privately owned vessels for the purpose of lay-up for use in a potential future emergency. Obviously, once the authority is granted and the precedent is established, other owners, including highly efficient operators of vessels suitable for war use (all ships are) for which no profitable employment is available, will look to the Government to take such surplus vessels off their hands.

I see neither a case in equity nor in factual need on the part of the Government, for the purchase of the Monterey from Oceanic, except through the mechanism of section 510 of the 1936 act. The fact that I do not believe the Government should buy the Monterey for possible future war use, does not, however, indicate that the Monterey fails to have such potential usefulness. Were the Government to sanction the "either/or" approach of Government purchase or permission to sell foreign, as the only, and perfectly proper alternative, the end of the privately owned American-flag merchant marine would be at hand. Whatever is found right for Oceanic/Matson in spite of the record of the Mariposa-Monterey case, should surely be right for every other American shipowner.

In conclusion, it is my earnest recommendation that your committee reject and disapprove in all parts the proposal of the Oceanic Steamship Co. as advanced to you by the majority of the Commission. This does not mean that I see no solution that might restore one or both of the vessels to operation. I offered such a solution in my earlier memorandum to the Commission of November 30, 1948, of which I attach a copy hereto, for your information. The proposal, which unfortunately was given short shrift by Oceanic/Matson, remains valid today. In addition, I again call attention to section 510 of the 1936 act. In either case I am ready to assist any equitable proposal of Oceanic/Matson within the framework of the 1936 act. I am opposed, however, to having the United States Government "bail out," whether by interpretation or special legislation, a private corporation which brought upon itself whatever its difficulties are, and the owners of which, moreover, seem to be entirely able to overcome those self-made difficulties without special assistance from the public Treasury, over and above that available under existing laws and contracts.

Sincerely yours,

RAYMOND S. MCKEOUGH,
Commissioner.

JULY 18, 1949.

UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION—COMMISSIONER RAYMOND S. MCKEOUGH—THE CASE OF THE STEAMSHIP "MARIPOSA" AND THE STEAMSHIP "MONTEREY"

Reference is made to Commissioner Carson's memorandum of July 6, 1949, in substance recommending acceptance of the Oceanic Steamship Co.'s proposal of September 15, 1948. I recommend disapproval for the following reasons:

1. Oceanic, claiming that the cost of reconverting the Mariposa and Monterey and of the improvements Oceanic decided to make, has expanded beyond its financial ability, and that operation of two passenger ships in the Australian trade is unwarranted, asks the Commission, and Commissioner Carson so recommends, for four concessions:

First, the Commission is to reopen and revise the redelivery settlement contract between the War Shipping Administration and Oceanic so as to pay Oceanic for the completion of the Mariposa not only what is still due under the contract for the Mariposa, approximately $1,900,000, but also the remaining two-thirds, approximately $3,800,000, of what War Shipping Administration agreed to pay for the reconversion of the Monterey, while at the same time waiving the completion of the Monterey.

Second, the Commission is to take over from Oceanic the one-third completed Monterey for which Oceanic says it has no use, plus all materials delivered or ordered, for approximately $4,600,000, the book value of the vessel and the full cost of the material.

Third, the Commission is to grant Oceanic a 10-year extension of its operating subsidy contract modified to require operation of the Mariposa only, under special waiver in view of her advanced age.

Fourth, the Commission is to permit diversion of the Mariposa from Oceanic's Australia service to the Hawaii service of the Matson Steam Navigation Co., Oceanic's parent, for four or more round trips each year.

It is easy to see how the question of "bail-out" arose, although Commissioner Carson says on page 10 of his memorandum of July 6 that whether "* * * mitigation of the terms of the agreement must perforce be deemed a release from its own (Oceanic's) improvidence * * * is not the question before us." The existing contracts, Oceanic's difficulties, and its proposal for Commission action to extricate it out of this situation, in my judgment, put this question very much before us. Whether or not the motive of those favoring Oceanic's proposal is the desire to release it "from its own improvidence," the effect would be just that.

2. Oceanic voluntarily and freely entered the contracts under which the Government would pay it approximately $11,300,000 if Oceanic reconverted the two ships. There is no claim or even hint of duress. I am told by Captain Conway, War Shipping Administrator when the contracts were entered into, that it is his recollection that Oceanic avidly sought the contracts and did not at all object to their terms.

Oceanic began the reconversion. Whatever the reasons—the award of the contracts to a repair yard, likewise a subsidiary of Matson, with rejection of the fixed price bid of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. no doubt was a major factor—Oceanic/Matson found that the cost would exceed estimates. Moreover, the prospects of the Australian passenger service appeared more doubtful. Aware of the Government's anxiety about the state of the United States flag passenger ship fleet, and of west coast shipyard labor's desperate need for work, Oceanic halted the reconversion work and told the Nation and the Commission that work would not be resumed under the agreed terms, but only if the Government would double and triple its cash contribution by paying Oceanic for one ship what Oceanic had freely accepted as the proper payment for two ships and by taking the second ship and all materials off Oceanic's hands without loss to Oceanic, thereafter, if the Government desired, completing the second ship at is own (Government's) expense at an additional cost of $10,000,000 or more, throwing in for a bargain a request for a 10-year operating subsidy contract for greatly reduced service but with special accommodation for Matson, the parent.

All this with the implication that, if the proposal were not adopted, the Commission, not Oceanic, would have to bear the responsibility for nonrestoration of Oceanic's two ships and the resultant loss to shipyard employment, the American merchant marine, and the national defense. I protest both the approach and the terms offered by Oceanic which I consider unwarranted from the viewpoint of the interests of the United States Government.

3. The proposal under discussion is Oceanic's second. When it was first discussed last September, I pointed out that it was even more unfavorable than the first proposal which the Commission unanimously rejected on July 1, 1948. This still applies. Under the first proposal, as shown by the staff committee memorandum of May 17, 1948, to the Commission, the latter would have acquired both vessels for $10,827,000 whereas under the present proposal, the Commission would acquire only one vessel with a cash outlay of approximately $10,-200,000.

4. The Commission is now being told in essence that it may reopen the contracts, indeed any contracts, and change their terms at its discretion, provided such action in its opinion would substantially benefit the Government. The Commission is also told in the legal memorandum attached to Commissioner Carson's memorandum of July 6, 1949, that its "* * * discretionary power is not dependent upon its being wisely exercised."

There is much I would like to say about this amazing thesis, but in the interest of brevity I merely call attention to the fact that the Appropriations Committee of the Senate of the United States vetoed this concept in the case of the Mariposa and Monterey. In recommending continued authority for the Commission to acquire and complete Oceanic's ships, the Senate committee not only pointedly admonished the Commission to "protect the interests of the United States in all such negotiations" (p. 10 of Rept. 639, July 8, 1949) but inserted in the bill proper the very word "wise" before the word "discretion."

We may be told that this has little legal weight, but I for one cannot conceive that this and the rather unusual congressional admonitions and qualifications in both the House and the Senate reports are anything except warning signals which the Commission cannot brush aside with impunity. I may add that both the House and the Senate committee made it quite clear that the appropriation authority granted the Commission is no directive to acquire the Mariposa or Monterey, or both. It is an administrative matter for which the Commission remains responsible; the Congress merely made it possible for the Commission to deal with the matter on its merits.

5. Commissioner Carson recommends that the Commission reopen a settlement and reverse a decision made by its predecessor in office, the War Shipping Administration. In his decision of July 21, 1936, 16 Comptroller General 51 (A–66863), the Comptroller General, based on a long line of court decisions, said:

"It is a principle of long standing that an officer of the Government may not reopen a settlement or reverse a decision made by his predecessor in office except upon production of new and material evidence, or to correct manifest mistakes of fact such as errors in calculation, or for fraud or collusion."

None of the conditions listed in the Comptroller General's decision are present in our case. Commissioner Carson does not refer to this decision but on page 9 of his memorandum of July 6 concludes that approval of Oceanic's proposal by the Commission would be "* * * not subject to review as to the exercise of its authority by the courts or an accounting officer of the Government."

The opposite is true. Any further payments under the War Shipping Administration contracts involved, whether or not they are rewritten, would have to come from the special fund set up in the Treasury Department for the payment of obligations incurred by the War Shipping Administration prior to January 1, 1947, which includes redelivery obligations with respect to privately owned vessels used by the Government during the war.

As to such payments, the Congress has superimposed the authority of the Comptroller General over that of the Commission by requiring the Comptroller General's certification of the propriety of vouchers presented by the Commission to the Treasury Department. In the case of the Mariposa and Monterey, there is good reason to assume that the Comptroller General, regardless of what he may do in other cases, will very carefully review the propriety of Commission revision of the WSA contracts to the substantial financial advantage of the other party: In his letter of July 31, 1947, the Comptroller General questioned the propriety of even the existing WSA settlements of the Mariposa and Monterey redeliveries.

Thus already on record, the Comptroller General holds full veto power over the action recommended by Commissioner Carson.

6. The Commission is told that Oceanic's proposal is "substantially advantageous to the Government." I do not believe it is.

First, we are told, the proposal is advantageous because it would assure the completion of reconversion of the two ships which the existing contracts did not assure. I do not quite see how agreement to complete the Mariposa could serve as a consideration, under the proposal, of payment by us of approximately $5,600,000, inasmuch as completion of the Mariposa, under the existing Mariposa contract, would already be the consideration of our paying Oceanic approximately $1,800,000.

Commissioner Carson's recommendation, moreover, would assure completion of the Mariposa only. There are no recommendations as to the completion and disposal of the Monterey. Under the present contracts, the cost to the Commission, from here on, for the completion of the Mariposa would be approximately $1,800,000. If the ship is not completed, there will be no further cost to the Government. Under Commissioner Carson's recommendation, the total cost to the Commission would be approximately $10,-200,000, or nearly six times as much. I do not believe that a prudent businessman would pay $8,400,000 for assurance of completion.

Such a contribution to private enterprise for the purpose of persuading it to restore its own property would be a new type of subsidy of which the 1936 act says nothing. Were it not for the assumption that the Government is anxious to have Oceanic complete the Mariposa, the proposal, not only to raise the ante, but to sextuple it, I believe, would never have been made in serious vein.

7. True, the Commission, by the increased total payment to Oceanic, in addition to assuring completion of the Mariposa, would also acquire the unfinished hulk of the Monterey. However, the Commission is not in the business of buying up old passenger ships, and particularly incomplete ones, in order to take them off their owners' hands, except under title V of the 1936 act, in trade-in on new construction which Oceanic does not propose.

The Commission already owns several old passenger ships such as the Washington and the three "good neighbor ships," as well as some new ones, including the President Wilson, President Cleveland, and LaGuardia, none of which, unfortunately, it has been able to sell. To add to that unwanted Government-owned fleet still another old ship, particularly what is in reality only one-third of a ship, is advantageous neither to the Government nor to the merchant fleet.

On the other hand, were the Commission to complete the Monterey, the Government's investment in that ship would exceed $18,-400,000 made up of approximately $3,800,-000 to be paid under the proposal to Oceanic as balance of the Monterey contract, about $4,600,000 purchase price, and $10,000,000 plus for completion. With the cost of building a fully up-to-date new passenger ship of similar size estimated at between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, investment of over $18,400,000 in a ship which is already almost overage surely would be neither "wise discretion" nor "substantially advantageous to the Government."

Nor does the proposed payment of $4,600,-000 for the hull of the Monterey and materials appear to have been properly computed. There is no provision for deduction of the depreciated construction subsidy paid—by the Maritime Commission's own testimony—through the mail contracts under which the Mariposa and Monterey were built (see hearings on H. R. 5130, Merchant Marine bill, 1939, pp. 204 to 207 and 225, Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, March, April, May 1939).

There is likewise no provision for the proper deduction, from the cost of the materials of $3,021,000, which is to be subject only to verification of quantity and cost, of at least part of the Commission's initial payment of approximately $1,900,000 under the Monterey contract. To pay in effect twice for some of the same materials would hardly be advantageous to the Government.

8. Most important, however, is the fact that the Commission has no buyer for the Monterey. The American President Lines, Ltd., at one time considered purchase but now proposes only to charter the Monterey for the short span of 3 years at the end of which she will be 21 years old. In the face of contractual obligations to buy or build new passenger ships, American President Lines did not so far agree to purchase the modern President Cleveland or President Wilson in spite of their extremely low statutory sales price.

The Government is not in the business of acquiring old, incomplete passenger ships and reconstructing them at high cost for the purpose of short-term chartering. The seven passenger ships which the Commission already owns and to which I have previously referred, not only remain unsold so far but could only be chartered at rates under which the Government's investment in these ships is not being recovered.

When the acquisition of the Mariposa and Monterey was first authorized the then Chairman of the Commission assured the House Appropriations Committee that no funds would be spent for the ships unless recovery of such funds were assured. In reporting our 1950 appropriation, the House committee, as quoted on page 5 of Commissioner Carson's memorandum of July 6, 1949, went to great lengths to limit our discretion with respect to the Government's contribution in the resale of the vessels.

The President himself in 1948 ruled out construction of vessels except under firm sales contract. (See letter from the President dated April 15, 1948, to the Chairman of the Commission.) He just extended this injunction to the 1951 budget (letter of July 1, 1949, from the Director, Bureau of the Budget). I cannot conceive that he would be more favorable to the purchase of unfinished hulls by the Commission and their reconstruction, except under firm resale contract.

With this history, plus the Senate's extraordinary admonitions already mentioned by me, I do not see how the Commission can justify acquiring the Monterey without securing first a binding contract for her resale to another American operator.

9. A prudent businessman, who owns unimproved properties would improve them instead of acquiring, at high cost, additional unimproved property, especially if no buyer is in sight for either.

For the Government to invest over $18,500,000 in acquiring and completing the Monterey would not be advantageous. The same sum invested in either the Washington or any of the three "good neighbor ships," vessels of similar size and age as the Monterey, all of which the Government already owns, and all of which require reconstruction for long-term operation, would obviously reach much farther and produce greater value both for the Government and the merchant marine.

It is by no means certain, however, that the long-range interest of the American merchant marine would benefit from the restoration and modernization at substantial cost to the Government of passenger ships approaching 20 years of age. The merchant marine needs new ships.

10. It has been suggested that even if the Monterey cannot be resold, her acquisition would serve our national defense. Apart from Presidential and congressional injunctions against investment in vessels except for resale, the Commission is not in the business, and has no mandate under the law, to buy old passenger ship hulls for their possible defense value.

The Bureau of the Budget recently declined to approve added funds for the repair even of real naval auxiliaries already Government property. The Comptroller General, in his report on construction subsidies, severely criticized this Commission's spending for national defense and recommended amendment of the 1936 act so as to let the Defense Department pay for defense features. I do not believe that the national defense could serve to justify acceptance of Oceanic's proposal.

11. As another major additional contribution by the Government, one of Commissioner Carson's recommendations provides that the Commission grant Oceanic what amounts to a new, vastly modified 10-year operating subsidy contract.

This recommendation disregards the Commission's established procedure for the handling of operating subsidy matters. There is no staff report, review, or concurrence. There are no findings as required under title VI of the 1946 act. There are no facts presented to warrant such findings. Although Oceanic's financial plight is the basic premise of the entire proposal, no question is asked, no answer provided as to its financial qualifications for an operating subsidy. The proposed revised service, six sailings a year, is less than one-half the sailings declared necessary in the Commission's Trade Route Report of 1946. No replacement program is provided for in spite of the age of the Mariposa. The entire matter of an operating subsidy is disposed of with a few cursory recommendations.

This, I submit, is not the proper way of dealing with one of the major responsibilities of the Commission.

12. In my opinion, it is doubtful, to say the least, that the proposed six sailings per year constitute a regular service eligible for operating subsidy. To my knowledge, there is no subsidized service with so few sailings. In 1946 the Commission announced that 13 annual sailings are required for this service. This figure has not yet been revised. Oceanic's prewar contract provided for 13 sailings.

No facts are presented to show that the proposed reduction to less than half is substantially advantageous to the Government. If Oceanic is unable or unwilling to provide adequate service, maybe some other operator will.

13. Moreover, six round trips are not the maximum service which the Mariposa, even as a single ship, would be able to make in the Australia service: For part of the year, the Mariposa, Commissioner Carson recommends, is to work for her real owner, the Matson Co., sole owner of Oceanic.

Under the old contract, the Mariposa and Monterey had the privilege of calling at Hawaii en route to and from Australia, thus providing a major convenience for Matson. The Commission is now to permit Matson, however, to use the Mariposa outright for a minimum of four (i. e., possibly more) round voyages solely between California and Honolulu. I pointed out in my memorandum to the Commission of November 30, 1948 (S. S. Mariposa and S. S. Monterey of the Oceanic Steamship Co.), approved by the Commission on December 14, 1948, that Matson "* * * needs additional tonnage for the Hawaiian passenger trade where its present passenger service is handicapped in its competition with the airplane by the infrequency of the ocean service permitted by the single steamship Lurline." This suggestion was brushed aside, but it is a fact that frequency of service is a major requirement, particularly on those routes on which airline competition is especially keen. Significantly, Matson was reported during May to have newly initiated a passenger service to Hawaii, necessarily limited, on 15 of its freighters. Matson's need for additional passenger tonnage, of course, is attested to also by the proposal for the periodic use of the Mariposa in its Hawaiian service.

Thus, Oceanic's proposal, if adopted, would not only be a bail-out, but also a device to give Matson the benefit of a spare ship for the Hawaii tourist season—maintained with Government subsidy in the Australia trade during the Hawaii off season. This may be very advantageous to the Matson Co. and may permit it to give better service to Hawaii with minimum risk and minimum cost and at the expense of the subsidized Australia service, but it is certainly not substantially advantageous to the Government. In my opinion, it would misuse the subsidy system for the private gain of a nonsubsidized carrier.

CONCLUSION

The proposal of the Oceanic Steamship Co. is as unacceptable today as it was when first broached in September 1948. We must believe in the sanctity of contracts freely entered into. Here we have Oceanic tell the Government of the United States that it will let its two ships remain unfinished unless the Government signs on the dotted line. If it is desirable to put these two ships into operation with additional help, the question must be asked: At what price? The price which Oceanic asks, in my opinion, is extortionate. The prudent businessman would not pay it, and the Commission will not pay it if it uses wise discretion.

It does not do for Matson to remember that it owns Oceanic when Matson wants something of Oceanic, such as the use of the Mariposa as a spare ship for the Hawaii season, but to look the other way when Oceanic needs help.

Matson must be willing to help and Oceanic must be willing to help. Any additional assistance from the Government must be through and within the 1936 act. In my aforementioned memorandum of November 30, 1948, I have pointed the way to possible solutions of Oceanic-Matson's dilemma.

Such solutions must be quite equitable. So far, Oceanic's proposals have not been equitable. The Commission, therefore, should deny the proposal submitted in Commissioner Carson's recommendations identified as item No. 1 on the Commission's agenda of July 19, 1949.

RAYMOND S. MCKEOUGH,
Commissioner.

UNITED STATES MARITIME COMMISSION—COMMISSIONER MCKEOUGH—STEAMSHIP "MARIPOSA" AND STEAMSHIP "MONTEREY" OF THE OCEANIC STEAMSHIP CO.

NOVEMBER 30, 1948.

While I am sympathetic to the desire of the Oceanic Steamship Co. to assist in finding a solution of its present difficulties involving the steamship Mariposa and steamship Monterey, I am unable to accept the proposals heretofore submitted to the Commission by that company with respect to the ultimate disposition of the Mariposa and the Monterey. In my judgment the two proposals submitted by the Oceanic Steamship Co. are beyond justifiable defense or prudent judgment on the part of the Commission.

Accordingly, I am submitting herewith a possible arrangement which appears to me practical from both a financial and an operating point of view, as far as the Oceanic Steamship Co. is concerned, and at the same time fair and reasonable, as far as the United States Government is concerned.

While our Technical Bureau estimated that it would cost about $20,000,000 each to reproduce the two vessels, Oceanic contended before the Commission that it would cost $25,000,000, a figure likewise mentioned by the chairman in his testimony before the House Appropriations Committee. The actual cost may be in between these two figures, and, for the purpose of this discussion, let us assume that it would cost $22,500,000 to reproduce each vessel. Oceanic also contends that the Mariposa and Monterey would have a remaining economic life of 15 years upon completion of restoration now interrupted. On this basis, the reconstructed vessels would have a value of $16,875,000 each, i. e., three-fourths (15 instead of 20 years life) of the estimated reproduction cost mentioned herein.

There can be little doubt that Oceanic's parent company, the Matson Steamship Navigation Co., needs additional tonnage for the Hawaiian trade where its present passenger service is handicapped in its competition with the airplane by the infrequency of the ocean service permitted by the single S. S. Lurline. Oceanic's second proposal confirmed Matson's need for additional passenger tonnage in its Hawaii service in which Matson had two passenger vessels prior to the war. Therefore, it should be considered as a perfectly reasonable proposition for Matson to purchase one of the two vessels after completion as a companion vessel to the Lurline, for say $15,000,000 after completion of reconstruction, with Oceanic retaining the other vessel for the Australian trade, where, according to Oceanic's last proposal, conditions have improved so as to make operation of one passenger vessel possible and provided, of course, the Commission should conclude that it would be desirable to extend Oceanic's subsidy contract modified so as to materially reduce the number of sailings thereunder. It must be understood at the same time that in case either one of these vessels is completed for operation in a subsidized service, the 1936 act would have to be amended so as to permit depreciation to be computed on the basis of a longer life than 20 years.

In this case, of course, the Commission would pay the balance due under the WSA redelivery settlement contracts, since reconstruction of both vessels would be completed.

Financially, Oceanic's position would be as follows (based on Oceanic's letter of September 15, 1948):

Total amount expended by Oceanic to date, less amounts received under WSA settlement agreement	$12,466,405
Estimated cost to complete both vessels	17,816,000
Total cost of reconstruction of both vessels	30,282,405
Receipts:
Proposed sale to Matson	15,000,000
Due under WSA agreement	5,600,000
Total	20,600,000
Net cost to Oceanic	9,682,405
Book value both vessels	3,427,000
Total investment by Oceanic in vessel to be retained by it	13,109,405

Under the above arrangement Matson and Oceanic would have one ship each fully reconstructed and modernized to suit the particular trade, good for 15 years each, at a cost of approximately $15,000,000 and $13,000,000, respectively. This would substantially improve Oceanic's financial position, as the $20,600,000 to be collected from Matson and the Commission would exceed by almost $3,000,000 the net balance in cash outlay estimated by Oceanic as required to complete both vessels. Matson, on the other hand, would acquire needed passenger tonnage at a reasonable cost, based on their own estimates, which cost, I am convinced, it can well afford to pay, while at the same time complying with its obligation to assist its distressed subsidiary.

Should Oceanic conclude that it would be economically unsound to continue the Australian passenger trade and, as a consequence, not complete the second vessel for its own operation, then it should explore the possibility of selling one of the vessels after completion to some other United States flag company at a price satisfactory to both. Of course, Oceanic, under such conditions, should, if necessary, be willing to take some loss as a result of its own errors by selling the second ship for less than its revised investment therein.

The Commission in turn could assist in such a transaction by purchasing the vessel. After completion, from Oceanic under section 215 of the 1936 act for the price agreed to between Oceanic and the intended buyer, and simultaneously selling it to the buyer for the same price with a 25-percent down payment and a mortgage for the balance, provided appropriation authority in the 1949 Appropriation Act has not been utilized for other purposes in the meantime or, in such event, provided funds for such purpose are included in the Commission's 1950 budget.

In this manner the Commission would be lending its credit to help Oceanic extract itself out of a most unusual situation, but without actually donating millions of dollars to bail it out with respect to a financial dilemma arising wholly from the operator's own mistakes.

Oceanic's last proposal embodied in its letter of September 15, 1948, after several days of consideration, was referred by the Commission to Mr. Morse in order that he might further explore the situation.

RECOMMENDATION

Accordingly, I recommend that the Commission direct Mr. Morse to discuss the aforedescribed arrangements with the Oceanic Steamship Co. and report to the Commission on the results of such discussions as soon as possible.

RAYMOND S. MCKEOUGH,
Commissioner.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, for further evidence of the questionable character of the negotiations surrounding the Mariposa and the Monterey I would like to refer the Senate to House Document No. 465, dated February 6, 1950, which is the report on the audit of the United States Maritime Commission by the Comptroller General for the fiscal years ended June 30, 1948 and 1949, pages 81 to 84.

It would seem to me that the passage of the present bill, even though the price were not fixed, would naturally be regarded by the Department of Commerce not only as an authorization to go ahead but also as an injunction to go ahead. Although the Maritime Commission itself has been formally disbanded, the personnel has merely moved over into the Department of Commerce, and the previous policies largely continue.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, the situation at the present time, as I understand, is that the old argument about the Mariposa and Monterey and their rehabilitation for civilian purposes is not involved in the discussion. As I understand, no work has been done on one of the ships. On the other ship approximately $5,000,000 worth of work has been done.

In the present Navy Department budget is an appropriation request for taking over three so-called President liners, which are now being built. These three President liners are badly needed. They are partially built. The Navy Department wants them for transport purposes. Instead of having them put into the luxury-liner business, the Navy Department wants them used for transport purposes. As I said, the question came up on two different occasions recently in the Committee on Appropriations. On those two occasions Admiral Sherman was asked by me whether the two ships involved were needed by the Navy. Admiral McCormick was asked by me whether the two ships were needed by the Navy. Admiral Sherman has testified before the Committee on Appropriations that the Navy is sadly lacking in transport facilities at the present time. They want the three President Line ships. I asked Admiral McCormick, if we passed the pending bill with reference to the Mariposa and Monterey, whether they would still want the three President Line ships, because if we could keep one of them for civilian purposes, we could compete that much more for the civilian maritime traffic on the Atlantic Ocean.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I should like to complete my statement first, otherwise, I am afraid I may lose the trend of my thought.

Admiral McCormick came back this morning with a letter to the effect that in the considered opinion of the Navy Department they need the three President liners, which have a length of 537 feet, a tonnage of 12,660, and a speed of 19.5 knots. They also need the Monterey and Mariposa. The Mariposa and the Monterey are in a peculiarly good position to be fitted out as transports because they have never been returned to civilian use. I agree with the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Vermont. However, I have been familiar with this subject for 3 years and have studied it with the Senator from Wyoming and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CORDON]. It is a very complicated question. The question was whether the Government would be cheated. However, the pending bill involves an entirely different question. It is whether or not we should put the two ships back into the troop-transport service. Of course if there are too many troop transports after the war, the President Line ships, which are slower ships, can be more readily refitted and adapted to civilian use, and perhaps the two Matson Line ships can be scrapped because they are more than 20 years old.

Under present conditions I hope the bill will be passed. If it is passed, the Department of Commerce will be authorized to buy the ships only if the Department of Defense certifies that they are necessary for troop-transport purposes. Two leading officers of the Navy have testified that the ships are desperately needed. I hope the bill will be passed.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the letter from Commissioner McKeough was addressed to me as chairman of the subcommittee on independent offices appropriations of the Committee on Appropriations, I desire to make a brief statement in order to correct the RECORD.

So far as the Mariposa and the Monterey are concerned, those two vessels were the property of the Matson Line, and were taken over by the Government during World War II under a contract which made it the obligation of the Government not only to return the vessels to the owners, but to restore them to a form which would make them suitable for use in civilian and commercial transportation.

The whole controversy with respect to the Mariposa and Monterey raged over what type of compensation should be paid to the line for the rehabilitation of those vessels to enable them to be used in commercial traffic. The Committee on Appropriations was most careful to make certain that the Government of the United States was not victimized in any such deal. When the bill came from the House 2 years ago providing authority for the payment of additional sums by the Government to the owners for the rehabilitation of these vessels, the Senate subcommittee, of which I happened to be the chairman, modified that bill and placed provisions in the Appropriation Act which prevented, as we thought, any exploitation of the Government.

As I see it, that question is not involved here. One of these vessels has never been rehabilitated in any form for commercial traffic. The other was partially rehabilitated, but the work was stopped because the cost was apparently in excess of the bid which the Matson Line subsidiary made, and it was over that question that the whole controversy raged.

The provision before us has nothing to do with any payment by the Government for the rehabilitation of these vessels. The provision in this bill is merely authority to the Secretary of Commerce to take these vessels over again. The problem would arise, of course, as to what payment should be made.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I want the record to be perfectly clear that there are two questions involved.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course.

Mr. AIKEN. May I ask what the need is for specific legislation in the case of the Monterey and the Mariposa, when, if a national emergency is declared, as I understand, these ships or any other ships could be requisitioned by the Navy if they were needed? It seems to me that the passage of this legislation would in effect be an instruction to the Commerce Department to purchase these two ships which, as has been stated, are already over age and are not in condition to be operated at the present time, whereas I believe we have large numbers of much better ships tied up in a moth-ball fleet.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I have nothing in the world to do with that question.

Mr. AIKEN. Why specify these two ships to be purchased?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. This bill was reported from a committee of the United States Senate. I took the floor merely for the purpose of pointing out the difference between the controversy which previously existed and the present situation. Whether these vessels are such vessels as should be purchased, I do not know. However, statements have been made to me by competent persons to the effect that the vessels are such that they could be effectively used.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. AIKEN. The thing I could not understand was why special legislation was necessary.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I should like to make a further brief statement. First, I should like to direct my attention to my friend, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS]. I do not know who gave him the information, off the floor, as to the supposed import of my remarks. I understood him to say that he was under the impression that I had passed some criticism of his supposed dereliction of duty because he was not in the Chamber. I will let my remarks in the RECORD speak for themselves. However, I assure the Senator from Illinois that when he reads them he will find that he has been misinformed, because I specifically stated that I was satisfied that if the Senator from Illinois were in the Chamber and could hear the explanation which I was seeking to give, his opinion would be different with regard to his objection. I am still convinced that when the Senator from Illinois gets the facts he will see that this case is entirely different from the case about which he has been talking, which goes back to the old claim. If he reads into my remarks any criticism of him, I assure him that such was not my intention. I simply protested the fact that apparently we were not going to be able to get the bill through today because objection had been filed, and the objector was not present to hear the explanation.

Mr. President, I wish to repeat very quickly that we are not dealing here with the old claim case at all. We are dealing here with a request which comes from the Department of Defense for legislative clearance of these ships, so that there may be early conversion for transport purposes. I disagree with the assumptions contained in the remarks of my good friend from Vermont [Mr. AIKEN], about these being a couple of old hulks, seeming to imply that they would not be of vital service to our Government if we speeded their conversion. The time factor is important. We need transports at the earliest possible hour. All I can do as a member of the Armed Services Committee is to rely, as I think I have the right to rely, upon the expert opinion which comes to us from the military officials who have the direct responsibility of prosecuting our interest in connection with their emergency. Those military officials tell us that a great amount of time would be saved by converting these ships quickly into transports. I intend to rely upon their judgment rather than the judgment of the Senator from Vermont in this matter.

The Senator from Vermont makes reference to ships in mothballs. All I can tell the Senator from Vermont is that our military officials tell us that there is not a single ship in mothballs comparable to these ships for transport use if we will proceed immediately to convert them.

That is the only plea I am making here today. I think we have a request from the Defense Department which ought to be met by the Senate, leaving for other hearings the question of the old claims case, which is in no way involved in the passage of this bill. The bill would simply authorize the Secretary of Commerce, upon certification from the Secretary of Defense, to proceed to buy these ships. I think we know enough about Government transactions to realize that they are going to be bought on a fair-price basis. If either the Government or the companies have any subsequent claim in regard to the old transaction, such claim can continue to pend—I think the Senator from Vermont is correct on that point—probably for years to come. But we need these ships now, and I think the bill ought to be brought up by motion and passed.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MORSE. I yield.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I should like to say that I think the Senator from Oregon has placed his finger on the vital factor in this case, which is the time element.

Because this subject has been in controversy for some time, I personally went to inspect one of these two vessels, which happened to be tied up in San Francisco Bay. I do not claim to be a ship expert in any sense of the word. However, I am informed—and the evidence which has been submitted indicates—that these vessels, although 20 years old, are not old hulks. Today they could probably outspeed most of the vessels which are available on the high seas, and which could be used for transport purposes.

My impression is that these vessels could be converted in a period of less than 6 months. If enough shifts were put on the work, probably the conversion could be done in considerably less time than that. One of them is just in the process of being put into service as a commercial vessel. As to the other one, which I did not see, I understand, no work has been done to reconvert it for commercial uses. But if we are faced with an emergency in which we will need fast vessels in order to transport troops to wherever they are needed, I think this request by the Navy Department—having nothing to do, as the Senator has pointed out with the old controversy—should stand on its own feet, and that we should not take any action which would jeopardize the defense of the Nation and the adequacy of troop transportation.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, it is the common impression that the President of the United States will tonight declare a national emergency. If such a national emergency shall be declared, I take it no legislation of this type will be needed, because it will then be possible for the Defense Department to requisition these ships and pay an adequate price for them. If a national emergency shall not be declared, then I think such a matter would very properly be before the Senate. I would suggest that the bill go over until Monday, until we find out whether the added powers are needed. In the meantime the situation can be canvassed, the documents can be studied, and no damage will be done.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I shall be glad to confer respecting this situation, because it is a matter which apparently cannot be handled on the call of the Unanimous Consent Calendar. If the President tonight declares only a limited emergency, which might require the legislation, I am sure the majority leader will be glad to let us discuss this matter the first of the week.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, the entire world around the United States of America is smoldering. Everyone knows that the Nation is in one of the most critical periods of its history. Yet here in the Senate of the United States we quibble over whether or not we will pass a bill giving the Department of Commerce the power to negotiate for these ships. When Admiral McCormick, and Admiral Sherman, the head of the Navy, come before the Appropriations Committee and tell that committee the importance of obtaining these ships at this particular time, it is rather difficult for me to understand how Senators can stand on the floor and make objections to a measure of this character.

I do not know what the President of the United States is going to say tonight. I know he is going to make a speech. Whether he will declare a national emergency tonight or next week, or declare one at all, remains to be seen. But we have no time to lose, Mr. President. I regret to say this, but the sooner the Senate of the United States moves with all expedition possible toward every conceivable kind of a defense we can provide for the Army and the Navy and the Air Corps, the better off the country is going to be so far as our future safety and security are concerned. Certainly, so far as I am concerned, I am willing when we conclude the call of the calendar, to move the consideration of the bill, so we may find whether we can pass it at that time. We should not take any chances.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I am sorry to hear the inconsistency of the majority leader. I do not know whether the Matson Line will lose $10,000,000 if the bill is not passed this afternoon. But it is a fact, I understand, that if the Navy needs these ships it can buy them tomorrow. If the Navy does not need them, why should we pass a law virtually instructing the Government to buy old ships it does not need, in order to bail out a steamship company to the extent of $10,000,000?

Mr. LUCAS. I do not know why the authors of the proposed legislation are proceeding with the debate with such insistence, urging the Senate to pass this measure, if the United States Governcent can buy the ships without any legislation.

Mr. AIKEN. The bill would authorize the Department of Commerce to buy them. If the Navy needs them it car buy them today.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. I am altogether in favor, Mr. President, of passing this bill, but I want to keep the record straight by saying that under the 1950 Defense Production Act, which Congress passed more than 3 months ago, the President of the United States can requisition and purchase any equipment in the United States the Government wishes to buy, at its own price. If the Government needs these two ships, it can buy them under the 1950 Defense Production Act. However, I am perfectly willing to permit the bill to be passed, if we can have a vote on it.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, there must be some disagreement respecting the position taken by the Senator from Indiana. Certainly those who are more or less in control of the proposed legislation requested the Chief of the Navy, Admiral Sherman, to come before the committee and testify so they could obtain his opinion about the matter. Certainly he would know whether the President of the United States, under the authority he has, could take over the ships. I disagree with the Senator from Indiana with respect to the authority that was given to the President of the United States under the Defense Production Act. If all the authority necessary is contained in the Defense Production Act, as some claim, then it is unnecessary to have a national emergency proclaimed. But those who are advising the President of the United States at the present time, through the Attorney General's Office, tell him that he does not have all the power that is necessary at the present time under the National Defense Production Act and other measures that have been carry-overs from World War I.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. There is not any question that the President has the right under the 1950 Defense Production Act to acquire by requisition any facility in the United States. There can be no question about that.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not see why we are having all this debate, if the Senator from Indiana is correct.

Mr. CAPEHART. I do not, either.

Mr. LUCAS. Certainly those in charge of the bill should have understood that. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MORSE] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] say that is not correct. So undoubtedly someone is wrong. If there is any doubt about the matter, let us not take any chance; let us pass the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. I am perfectly willing to pass the bill to permit the Government to purchase these two ships, because under the 1950 Defense Production Act, if the Government wants them it can acquire them within the next hour.

I should like to have the Senator from Washington tell us why he thinks that under the 1950 Defense Production Act the Government cannot acquire these two vessels.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I will say first that the bill has been before us since last September. Under the Defense Production Act the President has the right to requisition and acquire, but he must first declare a state of emergency.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, that is not correct.

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is my impression.

Mr. CAPEHART. That is not accurate. I am certain every member of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency who is present on the floor will vouch that what I am saying is correct. Under the 1950 Defense Production Act the President has the right to requisition any facility or material he wishes to requisition, and he can take it over on the basis of paying any price he fixes, paying 50 percent of that price, and then the owners, if they think they are entitled to more, have the right to go to court and sue the Federal Government for a larger amount.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The Senator and I disagree on that provision. The Defense Production Act was passed after the bill we are speaking of reached the calendar.

Mr. CAPEHART. I appreciate that.

Mr. MAGNUSON. The bill has been before the Senate since September.

Mr. CAPEHART. I see no reason why the Senate should not pass the bill, because I know that the President has the right to take over the ships, if he desires to do so, under the 1950 Defense Production Act.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I was the Senator who requested that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has already gone over.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Very well. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I simply want to say, in reply to the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was not here when the Senator from Oregon spoke previously. Is the Senator now speaking the second time?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McCARRAN. How many times can one Senator speak during the 5-minute period on the Consent Calendar?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Only once.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is what I understood.

JACOB F. REIDEL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. During the course of the debate which has just taken place, House bill 2093 was announced as next in order. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 2093, Calendar No. 2585?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 2093) authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to execute a quitclaim deed to property owned by Jacob F. Reidel, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next bill on the calendar will be stated.

RESTRICTION ON IMPORTATION OF CERTAIN GIANT SNAILS

The bill (H. R. 6242) to prevent the entry of certain giant snails into the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, using 5 minutes on this bill, I wish to say to my good friend from Nevada I simply want to close my record on the Mariposa-Monterey bill by saying that those of us who were urged today by the representatives of the Departments of Defense and Commerce to try to do our best to secure the passage of the bill were advised that this was the quickest way to expedite the purchase of these ships, so sorely needed by the Defense Establishment. We were further advised that it was the advice of the Office of the Comptroller General that this bill should be passed.

In carrying out what we considered to be our duty—or, at least, what the junior Senator from Oregon particularly considered it to be his duty as a member of the Armed Services Committee—I have made on the floor of the Senate the case that I have made today. I think those departments know whereof they speak as to the advisability of having this bill passed, and before the afternoon is over I hope the bill will be passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 6242, Calendar No. 2586.

Mr. MAYBANK. I have an amendment to this bill. I submit the amendment. It is at the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6242) to prevent the entry of certain giant snails into the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from South Carolina will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of the bill it is proposed to add the following new section:

SEC. 2. Section 358 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by adding a new subsection (e), as follows:

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the allotment determined or which would have been determined for any land which is removed from agricultural production for any purpose because of acquisition by any Federal, State, or other agency having a right of eminent domain shall be placed in a pool and shall be available for use in providing equitable allotments for farms owned or acquired by owners displaced because of acquisition of their farms by such agencies. Upon application to the county committee, within 5 years from the date of such acquisition of the farm, any owner so displaced shall be entitled to have an allotment for any other farm owned or acquired by him equal to an allotment which would have been determined for such other farm plus the allotment which would have been determined for the farm so acquired: Provided, That such allotment shall not exceed 50 percent of the acreage of cropland on the farm. The provisions of this subsection shall not be applicable if (1) there is any marketing quota penalty due with respect to the marketing of peanuts from the farm or by the owner of the farm at the time of its acquisition by the Federal, State, or other agency; (2) any peanuts produced on such farm have not been accounted for as required by the Secretary; or (3) the allotment next to be established for the farm acquired by the Federal, State, or other agency would have been reduced because of false or improper identification of peanuts produced on or marketed from such farm."

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, the effect of the amendment will be as follows: In South Carolina, more than 250,000 acres of land in the peanut-growing area are being taken by the Federal Government. The persons who now live on that land have been trained to grow peanuts. If they are required to move to other places, this measure will give them the right to transfer whatever allotment they had in that area to another area where they can obtain land on which to grow peanuts.

The bill will not increase by one iota the amount of acreage for South Carolina or elsewhere in the United States, but it will give the persons who are being forced to move from that area the right to plant peanuts if they can obtain land somewhere else.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Let me ask the Senator what costs are involved by the amendment.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. No costs are involved by the amendment, other than the costs which would have been involved at the present time under the Agricultural Act pertaining to peanuts. The same quantity of peanuts will be grown, if the farmers can obtain the land. However, a great many of them cannot secure land elsewhere. So, naturally there will be a smaller peanut acreage in South Carolina.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. AIKEN. I understand that the amendment simply permits the persons who are displaced from their present locations, which are the site of the hydrogen bomb plant, to take their peanut acreage quotas with them, wherever they may go, whether elsewhere in South Carolina or to Georgia, for instance.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Yes. This measure would do the same thing that is allowed at the present time in the case of the cotton growers, wheat growers, and tobacco growers.

Mr. AIKEN. If the explanation the Senator from South Carolina has given is correct—and I assume it is—I can see no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, and to prevent the entry of giant snails into the United States, and for other purposes."

SUSPENSION OF DEPORTATION OF CERTAIN ALIENS

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 108) favoring suspension of the deportation of certain aliens, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Congress favors the suspension of deportation in the case of each alien hereinafter named, in which case the Attorney General has suspended deportation for more than 6 months:

[redacted], Abraham, Veronika, or Veronica Abraham.
[redacted], Abreu y Alvarez, Ricardo, or Richard Abreu.
[redacted], Abstender, Liza (nee Liza Markowicz).
[redacted], Ali, Asod, or Alli Asod Ullah or Asodeoolla Ashruffoolla.
[redacted], Alinosi, Lottie Bernice (nee Dean).
[redacted], Alma, Helen (nee Stedman Kinter or Alma S. Kinter or Alma Stedman Kinter).
[redacted], Altamura, Pasquale.
[redacted], Alter, Salomon Sloima.
[redacted], Alvarez, Justina Martin.
[redacted], Amat, Kasmoin, or Kasmoin Bin Amat.
[redacted], Arce, Socorro Labrado Ylanan, or Socorro Labrado Rodrigues (maiden name), formerly Socorro Labrado Ylanan alias Mrs. Joe Manila.
[redacted], Arcellana, Juan Aquino.
[redacted], Arnold, Gustavus or Gus Arnold.
[redacted], Arron, Barbara, or Sydney Barbara Arron or Barbara Lewis.
[redacted], Ashton, Sarah Ellen, or Sarah Ellen Lewis (nee Muskett).
[redacted], Asrilant, Willy, or Wolka Asrilant or Zev Wolf.
[redacted], Auriammo, Elsie.
[redacted], Avvantaggio, Frank, or Frank Conti.
[redacted], Bagues, Salvador, or Ruben Marrufo or Salvador Bagues-Villanueva.
[redacted], Bahler, Karl F., or Karl Friedrich Bahler or Karl Bahler.
[redacted], Basalo-Sosa, Carmen Teresa.
[redacted], Bautista, Adalia Marquez de.
[redacted], Benintende, Franscesco, or Frank Benintende.
[redacted], Berken, Regina Jean Matyas.
[redacted], Bijjani, George Yousuf.
[redacted], Birznier, Lina Margareta.
[redacted], Blount, Richard Keith.
[redacted], Blumberg, Barney Masel, or Boroch Blumberg.
[redacted], Boeschling, Henry Frederick Wilhelm.
[redacted], Bohn, Odette (nee De Rich or Rich).
[redacted], Bonacasa, Liborio, or Benny Bonacasa or Bonacasa Liborio.
[redacted], Bongini, Christino, or Christino Bongini.
[redacted], Boutilier, Verner Trinimon, or Fred Gavin.
[redacted], Bovoletis, Peter Considine.
[redacted], Brega, Ernesto.
[redacted], Brown, Basilette Argendeli (nee Argendeli).
[redacted], Brown, Percy Flint.
[redacted], Brown, Vernal Albert.
[redacted], Bruck, Lila, or Hedwig Drdlik or Hedwig Bruck.
[redacted], Bulleri, Dora Luigiana.
[redacted], Burack, Sam.
[redacted], Cardoza, Joao Ferreira, or John F. Cardoza.

[redacted], Carlson, Berna Birgit Allrum.
[redacted], Carroll, Louis Lawrence, or Louis Carroll.
[redacted], Carty, Peter Silven.
[redacted], Casals, Domingo, or Domingo Cassis y Costa.
[redacted] Chaltas, Aristea Constantinou Katraouzou, or Aristea Constantinou Katraouzou.
[redacted] Chan, William Hee, or Gik Hee Chan.
[redacted], Chan, Linda Siou King, or Chum Shao King.
[redacted], Charleston, Frank Langelier.
[redacted], Chiang, Chien Yin, or Chien Chick Yin.
[redacted], Yink, Chiang Chu Sheng (nee Chu Sheng Ying).
[redacted], Chikhmatoff, Olga Chirinsky, or Olga Shirinsky Shikhmatoff (nee Korff).
[redacted], Clewis, Raimer Herman, or Raimer Herman Clews (formerly Raimer Herman Saladin or Rainer Herman Saladin).
[redacted], Cohen, Albert Kibrit, or Alberto Cohen Kibrit or Albert Cohen.
[redacted], Constantios, Philipos Nikolas, or Philip Constantios.
[redacted], Costa, Amedio Giovanni, or Amedeo G. Costa.
[redacted], Damhus, Ejnar Jensen, or Edward or Eddy Damhus.
[redacted], Dapas, Pietro, or Peter Dapas.
[redacted], De Acosta, Petronila Machuca.
[redacted] De Barios, America Cabrera.
[redacted], Barrios Y Cabrera, Jesus.
[redacted], De Escobedo, Consuelo Gomez-Alonzo, or Rafaela Lopez.
[redacted], De Ferrari, Felicina Gallo (nee Felicina Serafina Gallo).
[redacted] De Grimwood, Laura Antonia Padilla.
[redacted], Delikat, Lottie Margaret.
[redacted], Dennis, Edward Victor, or Edward Victor Brown.
[redacted], Diamantis, Stavros Spyridon.
[redacted], Di Carlo, Calogero, or Calogero Lelio Di Carlo.
[redacted], Doorly, Joseph, or Joseph Dorley.
[redacted], Doring, Uwe Franz.
[redacted], Dumkolis, Trifo Alexander, or Trifo Alexander Dumkoloff or Trifo Alex Dumkeles.
[redacted], Eastman, Elsa Oria (formerly Elsa Oria Garchitorena, nee Elsa Erinko Oria).
[redacted] Elefant, Clara, or Elder, nee Lakatos.
[redacted], Enomoto, Mihacri or Jack.
[redacted], Entralgo, Luis Estella.
[redacted], Esop, Edward.
[redacted], Esposito, Lucien Nicolas.
[redacted], Essoglou, Panteleimon Elie.
[redacted], Estaque, Jeanne (nee Seitelsohn).
[redacted] Faustino, Iluminador Flores.
[redacted], Femino, Marina Domenica Grace (formerly Hislop).
[redacted] Fieldhouse, Roger Hyde.
[redacted], Figueiras, Jose Gullardo, or Jose Gallardo.
[redacted], Flanagan, Johanna Adriana.
[redacted], Fogel, Morris, or Moische Fogel.
[redacted], Forcke, Nadine Elwin.
[redacted] Forcke, Eddie Wallace.
[redacted], Fournaris, Constantinos Georgios, or Constantinos Fournaris or Gus Fournaris or Kostas Fournaris.
[redacted], Franklin, Gudrun, or Gudrun Bruinsma.
[redacted], Friedman, Fanny or Kalmar.
[redacted], Fu, Huang, or Wong Fook or Wong Fook Nygoon or Wong Fook Yuen or Wong Chun Go.
[redacted], Galati, Salvatore.
[redacted], Galati, Maria Antico.
[redacted], Gampe, Roland Pierre Lucien, or Roland P. Gampe.
[redacted], Garden, Janet Miller, or Jean Whatling.
[redacted] Gernaey, Marie Madeline (nee Kemmer, or Marie Madeline Jablonski).
[redacted], Godley, Percival Francis, or Francis Percival Godley.
[redacted], Godley, Doris (nee Eldred).
[redacted], Goldstein, Rubin, or Riven Goldstein.
[redacted], Goldstein, Sol.
[redacted], Grille, Paul Jacques.
[redacted], Gronek, Helena, or Helen Gronek.
[redacted], Grun, Elza, or Elise Weisz, or Elszi or Eliz or Elsa.
[redacted], Gubel, Josef.
[redacted], Guerrero, Bozena Tomankova (nee Bozena Tomankova).
[redacted], Gum, Mim, or Min Gum.
[redacted], Guthrie, James.
[redacted], Gutierrez, Dolores, or Dolores Arroyo.
[redacted], Gutierrez, Guadalupe (alias Guadalupe Arroyo).
[redacted], Hagymasi, Terez, or Terez Massey.
[redacted] Hallas, Dionisios or Georgadidgh.
[redacted], Hand, Monique Yvonne (nee Placide).
[redacted], Handeli, Vitali, and Victor Handeli.
[redacted] Hardy, Cornelia Agatha.
[redacted] Haritopoulos, Elias Theodore (alias Elias Charitopoulos alias Louis Haritopoulos).
[redacted], Hartmann, Barbara (nee Hess).
[redacted], Hastings, John.
[redacted], Hayes, James Victor.
[redacted], Heinz, Joseph Karl.
[redacted], Hendrickson, Agda Jakobina, formerly Ruutikainen (nee Meriruusu).
[redacted] Holen, Jenny Klara (nee Walderhaug).
[redacted], Hou, Ai Ying, or Mah Ah Ying or Wang Ai Ying.
[redacted], Howe, Maclean Kenneth Daniel (alias Hau Kam Tat or Daat).
[redacted], Hristostomidis, Hristostomis Yani, or Chris John Chrisostomidis.
[redacted], Hronis, Sophie.
[redacted], Hsiang, Ping, or Ping Hsian Hsiang or Catherine Hsiang or Bian Hsian Hsiang or Hsiang Bin Hsien.
[redacted], Huffan, Edwin Eric.
[redacted], Hum, Lee Shee, or Hum Lee Shee.
[redacted], Huvos, Laszlo, or Leslie Huvos.
[redacted] Iacovetta, Osvaldo, or Osvaldo Iocovetta or Osvaldo Iacouetta.
[redacted] Ibrahim Mehmet, or Ibrahim Mehmet or Mehmed Abrahim.
[redacted], Iversen, Bjorg Wennberg.
[redacted], Jacks, Edna Eulalia (nee Barkas, or Edna E. Jacks).
[redacted], James, Poulia or Poulia Cotsifa, maiden name, or Poulia Kotsifa.
[redacted], Jaresch, Emma Johanna.
[redacted], Jarosz, Ingelise Solveig (nee Jensen).
[redacted], Kakowoulis, Nicolis, or Nickolis Kakovoulis.
[redacted], Kastanos, Antonios Simos.
[redacted], Kew, Ko, or Kew Ko.
[redacted], Khouri, Mounira (nee Mounira Abouzeid or Mme. Vve Nagib).
[redacted], Kiang, Stuart, or Chao-Hai Kiang.
[redacted], Kilian, Jozef.
[redacted], Kim, June Jha.
[redacted], Kiu, Kong Yuet, or Cecile Kong or Tong Yuet Kiu.
[redacted], Kleszniсki, Wilhelm August, or Wilhelm Kleznicki or William August Kleszniсki or William August Lkeznicki.
[redacted], Knaus, Maximilian, or Max Knaus.
[redacted], Knudsen, Soren Anton, or Steve Knudsen.
[redacted], Kurth, Paul Gustav.
[redacted], Kyriakidks, Makrina, or Makrina S. Kyriakides or Makrina Socrates Kyriakides (nee Makrina Kouzoudjacojhlu).
[redacted], Lai, Leung.
[redacted], Larsen, Christian Peter, or Christian Peter Werdelbon.
[redacted], Larsen, Dagny Kirstine Johanna Sorensen.
[redacted], Larsen, Betty Dagny.
[redacted], Lawver, Maria Tome Da Silva.
[redacted], Lee, Hung Yuke.
[redacted], Lekich, John, or John Sam Lekich.
[redacted], Lemak, Oscar.
[redacted], Lemak, Zoltan.
[redacted], Leon, Francisco Ysmael Martinez, or Francisco Martinez.
[redacted], Lewis, Rosane Maria, or Rosana Maria Mannucci, Rosanna Mannucci.
[redacted], Lima, Jose Paiva, or Jose De Paiva Lima.
[redacted], Lincourt, Linda Margaret, or Linda Margaret Suitter.
[redacted], Linkous, Gladys Corless (nee Corless).
[redacted], Loeschnigg, Janet, or Misuet Loechnigg, or Misuet Loeschnigg.
[redacted], Loginoff, Natalie N.
[redacted] Lowe, Evelyn Joan (nee Sommerfeld or Summerfield, formerly Rutherford).
[redacted], Luckiewicz, Joseph Kazimierz.
[redacted], Luehmann, Alwin Albert Hermann.
[redacted], Luis Domingo.
[redacted], Macpherson, Donald Joseph.
[redacted], Madore, Rose Marie (nee Cote or Rose Marie Labrie).
[redacted], Mahlmann, Dirk Robert, or Dirk Robert Vogel or Dirk Robert Hogan.
[redacted], Majchrzak, Mary.
[redacted], Manalis, John Ioannis.
[redacted], Marchetti, Pietro Guido, or Pietro Marchetti or Pete Marchetti or Francisco Genetti.
[redacted], Mark, See Cheung.
[redacted] Markiori, Emilio, or Emilio Marchiori or Emilio Marki.
[redacted], Markoures, Irene Panageotou, or Irini Athanasios Panageotou.
[redacted], Marlmann, Rainer Wolfgang, or Rainer Wolfgang Hogan.
[redacted], Marmorstein, Alexander, or Alex M. Stone.
[redacted], Marwick, Nancy Joy.
[redacted], Masuko, Sadao.
[redacted], Matchkaloff, Alexander Serge, or Alexander S. Machavariani or Alexander Sedrakovitch Machkaloff or Alexander S. Machavarian or Alexander Angelo.
[redacted], Matthiesen, Heinrich, or Heinrich Walter Matthiesen.
[redacted], McCombs, Gordon Leslie.
[redacted], Mckay, Sariphas.
[redacted], Mehr, Lena Melissa, or Lena Melissa Bates (nee Goodwin).
[redacted], Menagatos, Soterios Demitriou (alias Sam Poulos).
[redacted] Mendoza, Jose Leofranco Perez.
[redacted], Metzger, Henryk.
[redacted], Meukow, Walter Trendel, or Walter Trendel.
[redacted], Millios, Argyro, or Argyro Millou (nee Argyro Gouliou).
[redacted] Mitchell, Irene (nee Tsingheraki).
[redacted], Mohamed, Niaz.
[redacted], Montesantos, Eleftherios, or Terry Montesantos.
[redacted], Moret, Giovanni Battista, or John Moret.
[redacted], Morrall, Edgar Michael, or William Henry Thomas.
[redacted], Moss, Joseph.
[redacted], Moss, Sarah.
[redacted], Mui, Kan Chi, or Lung Sheung Mui.
[redacted], Muniz-Gardea, Sotero, or Sotero G. Muniz or Sotero Soto.
[redacted], De Muniz, Catalina Gomez.
[redacted], Mustapa, Margit Hildegard, or Margit Hildegard Jarvinen.
[redacted], Nacinovich, Frank.
[redacted], Nevarez, Herriberto, or Heriberto Nevarez Valencia.
[redacted], Ngon, Jew Yee Sue.
[redacted], Nicholoff, Karl Christ, or Karl Nicholoff or Kyrilios Bozanis Nicholoff.

[redacted], Nicolas, Herman Henry or Nicholas.
[redacted], Nicoletopoulos, Leonidas Diomidis.
[redacted], Norby, Arnt.
[redacted], Ohnstein, Martin, or Charles Hagendorf.
[redacted], Olesen, Marius Imanuel.
[redacted], Orro, Ano Rosa, or Nina R. Lopez or Maria Teresa Cartaya.
[redacted], Orsini, Filippo.
[redacted], Ortiz, Jose, or Joseph Ortiz or Jose Ortiz Camus.
[redacted], Ortiz, Robert.
[redacted], Paliaga, Peter.
[redacted], Palmes, Stanley Gerald.
[redacted], Paolini, Giuseppini, formerly Giuseppina Milesi (nee Bargelliini).
[redacted], Papadopoulos, Yoannis, or Ioannis Papadopoulos.
[redacted], Paplitzky, Ingeborg Ingrid.
[redacted], Pascual, Marta Villarin.
[redacted], Pataki, Viola Klara (nee Lanyi).
[redacted], Paulsen, Greta Juul.
[redacted], Paulsen, Einar Juul.
[redacted], Penalva, Marcel Aime.
[redacted], Perugini, Pasquale Aniello, or Pasquale Perugini.
[redacted], Pfeiffer, Richard Ewald.
[redacted], Pilos, Thalia Kalkandis, or Thalia Kalkandis or Thalis Stavros Pilos or Thalia Stavros Kalkandis.
[redacted], Pina, Enrique (alias Henry Pina).
[redacted], Piscope, Domenico.
[redacted], Pla, Yolande, or Yolande Prato.
[redacted], Poharnck, Zoltan Imre.
[redacted], Polzin, Rudolf.
[redacted], Poppos, Demetrios, or Demilrios Poppos.
[redacted], Powell, Alwyn Leslie.
[redacted], Prol, Antonio Alvarez.
[redacted], Proskouriakoff, Irene Daniel.
[redacted], Purdy, Cassie May.
[redacted], Puzzolo, Giuseppe.
[redacted], Rabias, Constantinos Nicolaos.
[redacted], Radulich, Blasul, or Blasul Radulic.
[redacted], Redfern, Ruth Myrtle.
[redacted], Redfern, Allan Henry.
[redacted], Redwood, Margaret (nee Margaret Marshall).
[redacted], Rein, Monika.
[redacted], Reis, Rosa Oliveira (nee Rosa Candida Oliveira).
[redacted], Rigas, Eleftherios.
[redacted], Rim, Lilly Mary (Mrs. Herbert Rim) (nee Lilly Mary Ruppert or Lilly Mary Ruppert De Rin by a former marriage Mrs. Hans Neumann).
[redacted], Roberts, Grace Ruth Kearny.
[redacted], Roininen, Laina Maria, or Laina Maria Roine.
[redacted], Rosadio, Jose.
[redacted], Rosenblum, Lajb, or Leo Rosenblum.
[redacted], Rosenlund, Rolf.
[redacted], Roston, Albert Joseph, or Abraham Josef Rothstein.
[redacted], Roth, Elizabeth Evelyn Achica, or Elizabeth Evelyn Achica.
[redacted], Rubinstein, Israel.
[redacted], Rukojc, Jadwiga, or Jean Rukojc or Jadwiga Rukoic.
[redacted], Sa, Manuel Afonso.
[redacted], Sackville, Patricia Ann.
[redacted], Sackville, Roma Collard.
[redacted], Salczer, Herman, or Herman Salcer.
[redacted], Sam, Choy (Chinese name), or Johnny Sam Choy (American name).
[redacted], Sanchez, Domingo Valluluz.
[redacted], Sarno, Mamerto Torres, or Mamerto Torres.
[redacted], Sarno, Rosauro Torres, or Tosauro Torres.
[redacted], Sawaya, Louis Neemer.
[redacted], Sclavogiannis, Emmanuel.
[redacted], Schenk, Knut.
[redacted], Schertzer, Michael.
[redacted], Schliemann, Wilhelm Johannes.
[redacted], Scillama, Antonia (nee Restivo).
[redacted], Scocco, Giacomo.
[redacted], Scott, Louise (nee Harris).
[redacted], Seymour, Alex.
[redacted], Shee, Jew, or Jew Ngui Haai.
[redacted], Shong, Wong, or Shong Wong.
[redacted], Sima, Albin Franz.
[redacted], Sirigos, Antonios Nicolaos, or Antonios Sirigos or Anthony Sirigos.
[redacted], Skorpak, William.
[redacted], Slowes, Mendel.
[redacted], Smith, Constance Agnes (nee Brady).
[redacted], Smith, Vina (nee Mitchell).
[redacted], Smoke, Josef, or Josef Smuk.
[redacted], Soler, Maria Barber, or Mother Bienvenida De San Jose.
[redacted], Sonck, Edouard.
[redacted], Souze, Joao Azevedo, or John Azevedo Souza.
[redacted], Spigno, Enrico Giuseppe.
[redacted], Stapleton, Thomas Michael.
[redacted], Stefanovich, Mitre, or Mitro or Stefanoff alias Jim Stevens, Mitro Stefan Nadanovic, Mitre Stefan or Stefanou, Stoyanis Egos.
[redacted], Stein, Paul, or Pelta Sztejn.
[redacted], Sztejn, Rywka, or Rita Stein.
[redacted], Stern, Irving, or Isac, Isak and Isaac Stern.
[redacted], Stoor, John Hjalmar.
[redacted], Stout, Catharina Maria (nee Berendsen).
[redacted], Stow, Peggy Spencer, or Peggy Spencer (maiden name).
[redacted], Straus, Ernst Gabor.
[redacted], Suan-Chi, Lee, or Suan Chi Lee or Stephen Charles Lee.
[redacted], Suarez, Francisco Betanco, or Frank P. Suarez or Frank Petanco or (Petanko) or Frankly Bestanco or Manuel Martinis or Francisco Suarez Betanco or Francisco Betanocor Santana Suarez.
[redacted], Suchman, Andrew, or Arpad Suchman or Suchmann.
[redacted], Sultanis, Aphrodite.
[redacted], Szekely, Istvan Attila.
[redacted], Sziber, John, or Joan.
[redacted], Sztankay, Zoltan Ferencz.
[redacted], Sztankay, Ada Hackl (nee Adelheid Josephine Marie Hackl).
[redacted], Tasco, Vincenzo.
[redacted], Teitelbaum, Hana, Mr. or Mrs. Hana Teitelbaum (nee Halberstam).
[redacted], Theocharis, George Emanual.
[redacted], Thomas, Pnangiotos Sotiriou, or Pete Thomas.
[redacted], Thorne, Julia Veronica, formerly Julia Veronica Loft (nee Cohoon).
[redacted], Thornton, Patrick, or Patrick Joseph Thornton.
[redacted], Torres-Hernandez, Nicanor, or Nicanor Torres-Torres.
[redacted], Trepper, Moritz, or Morris Trepper or Noishe Trepper.
[redacted], Tselentis, Jerasimas (alias Jerry Lent).
[redacted], Tsistinas, Andreas Christos.
[redacted], Tzetzos, Evangelos, or Angelo Tzetzos.
[redacted], Uscatu, Everdichia.
[redacted], Utter, Alice Ruth (nee Simmons).
[redacted], Valensi, Cleopatra, or Cleopatra Manoussaki.
[redacted], Van De Velde, Martha Maria, or Martha Van De Velde (alias Martha Maria Van Haver).
[redacted], Van Der Veen, Olga, or Olga Van Der Neen Wisner.
[redacted], Van Tilburg, Cornelius Arnoldes, or John Beckos.
[redacted], Velge, William.
[redacted], Verticchio, Giuseppe.
[redacted], Von Bomsdorff, Felix.
[redacted], Vonderohe, William Lilie, or William Lillie.
[redacted], Wadeikis, Veronica Irene.
[redacted], Wan, Fong.
[redacted], Wang, Francis Chwen-Tao.
[redacted], Warr, Rosa (nee Rosa or Rose Mahfooz).
[redacted], Wassner, Danuta, or Danuta Ziff.
[redacted], Wawrzkiewicz, Rura Serrano (nee Pura Serrano).
[redacted], Weinberg, Morris (Moishe).
[redacted], Weinberg, Tillie (nee Steinschneider or Taube, Toba or Tobe Weinberg).
[redacted], Weiss, Lieselotte.
[redacted], Wells, Adelheid Anna, or Adelheid Anna Schuecke (Schucke) (nee Klinner (Kinner)).
[redacted], Wing, Fung Sik, or Fung Yee Wing.
[redacted], Woo, Ji-Hung.
[redacted], Woo, Yun-Chwang, or Woo Chung.
[redacted], Woo, Eching Shen, or Mrs. Y. C. Woo.
[redacted], Yankelewitz, Leib or Leon.
[redacted], Yau, Au (Owyou).
[redacted], Yeung, Fung Kim.
[redacted], Young, Kenneth Abram.
[redacted], Yum, Ma.
[redacted], Yung, Yip Kung (alias Benjamin Yip).
[redacted], Zacks, Milly, or Millie Sachs, formerly Milka Zuk.
[redacted], Santamarina y Alvarez, Fernando Garcia, or Fernando Garcia Santamarina.
[redacted], Fry, Madeleine Thurza (nee Logan).
[redacted], Mitani, Masatane.

LESLIE A. CONNELL

The bill (S. 735) for the relief of Leslie A. Connell, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Leslie A. Connell, of Tacoma, Washington, the sum of $2,622, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for reimbursement of (1) the sum of $2,500 paid by him in satisfaction of a judgment rendered against him as a result of his injuring a pedestrian while driving a Government-owned vehicle in the performance of his duties as a mail collector and (2) the sum of $122 paid by him for court costs, attorney fees, and filing fees in connection with such judgment: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this Act in excess of 10 per centum thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

GEORGE O. DRUCKER AND OTHERS

The bill (S. 2460) for the relief of George O. Drucker, Livia Drucker and their minor daughter, Gloria Elizabeth Drucker was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration laws, George O. Drucker, Livia Drucker, and their minor daughter, Gloria Elizabeth Drucker, who entered the United States on transit visas, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of May 14, 1949, the date on which they entered the United States, upon payment of the required head taxes and visa fees.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct three numbers from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Czechoslovakia.

DR. LUTFU LAHUT UZMAN

The bill (S. 3125) for the relief of Dr. Lutfu Lahut Uzman was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Dr. Lutfu Lahut Uzman, of Cambridge, Mass., who was admitted into the United States on a student visa, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon the payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Turkey.

ETHELYN ISOBEL CHENALLOY

The bill (S. 3259) for the relief of Ethelyn Isobel Chenalloy, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Ethelyn Isobel Chenalloy, of Los Angeles, Calif., who was admitted into the United States on a temporary visa, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of her last entry into the United States, upon the payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available Chinese immigration quota.

RICHARD H. BUSH

The bill (S. 3260) for the relief of Richard H. Bush was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any salary payments made by any disbursing officer of the United States Army to Richard H. Bush (Army serial number RA6955646) for the period from January 21, 1946, to May 16, 1947, for which the said Richard H. Bush was retroactively rated and paid as a technical sergeant, shall be held valid and lawful.

WILLARD SIDMER RUTTAN

The bill (S. 3261) for the relief of Willard Sidmer Ruttan was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, relating to the issuance of immigration visas for admission to the United States for permanent residence and relating to admissions at ports of entry of aliens as immigrants for permanent residence in the United States, that provision of section 3 of the Immigration Act of 1917 (39 Stat. 875), as amended (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 136 (e)), which excludes from admission to the United States persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony, or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude shall not hereafter be held to apply to Willard Sidmer Ruttan.

ARMANDO SANTINI

The bill (S. 3378) for the relief of Armando Santini was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Armando Santini shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of July 12, 1948, the date of his last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the first available immigration quota for nationals of Italy.

JOSE MANZANO SOMERA

The bill (S. 3554) for the relief of Jose Manzano Somera was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in the administration of the immigration laws, Jose Manzano Somera, temporarily residing in Chicago, Ill., shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of State is authorized and directed to instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the appropriate immigration quota for the first year such quota is available.

HOWARD LOVELL

The bill (S. 4110) for the relief of Howard Lovell was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Howard Lovell, of Florence, Colo., the sum of $5,000, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for compensation for injuries sustained by him while fighting a forest fire at Camp Carson, Colo., on January 17, 1950, as the result of an accident involving an Army truck, he having no remedy under the Federal Tort Claims Act, as amended: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

DR. FERNAND VAN DEN BRANDEN

The bill (S. 4133) for the relief of Dr. Fernand Van Den Branden was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Dr. Fernand Van Den Branden, of 10 Rue des Melezes, Brussels, Belgium, the sum of $13,269.82, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for property damage, personal injuries, and loss of earnings sustained, and medical and hospital expenses incurred as the result of an accident which occurred near Buchy (Moselle), France, on June 30, 1948, involving a United States Army truck: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

ATTENDANCE OF CERTAIN JUDGES AT JUDICIAL CONFERENCES

The bill (H. R. 4579) to amend section 333 of title 28 of the United States Code to provide for the attendance at judicial conferences of their respective circuits of the district judges of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Canal Zone, Hawaii, and Alaska was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DR. CHAO-JEN CHEN, DR. JANET WANG CHEN, AND ELEANOR CHEN

The bill (H. R. 6228) for the relief of Dr. Chao-Jen Chen, Dr. Janet Wang Chen, and Eleanor Chen was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

YAMAGUCHI MICHIKO

The bill (H. R. 8834) for the relief of Yamaguchi Michiko was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTABLISHMENT OF UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY

The bill (H. R. 9284) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. ENID LOUISE NOBLE ROMICK, JR.

The bill (H. R. 9475) for the relief of Mrs. Enid Louise Noble Romick, Jr., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES ETHEL BEDDINGTON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2888) for the relief of Frances Ethel Beddington, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, in line 8, after the word "United", to strike out "States." and insert "States, upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the Attorney General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of Frances Ethel Beddington, as of December 16, 1945, the date she was admitted temporarily to the United States, upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BERNIECE JOSEPHINE LAZAGA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3044) for the relief of Berniece Josephine Lazaga, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 8, after the word "residence", insert "upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Berniece Josephine Lazaga, Berkeley, Calif., who entered the United States on March 12, 1946, at San Francisco, Calif., as a nonquota immigrant student, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted, as of such date, to the United States for permanent residence upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the quota for the Philippine Islands for the first year such quota is available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE BRANDER PALOHEIMO AND EVA LEONORA PALOHEIMO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3241) for the relief of George Brander Paloheimo and Eva Leonora Paloheimo, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment in line 6, after the word "born", insert "alien", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purpose of the immigration and naturalization laws, George Brander Paloheimo and Eva Leonora Paloheimo, natives of Finland, shall be considered the natural born alien children of their adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Y. A. Paloheimo, citizens of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LINDA LEO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3699) for the relief of Linda Leo, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert the following:

That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Linda Leo, the minor child of Yee Leo, a citizen of the United States, shall be deemed to be eligible for admission into the United States under the provisions of sections 4 (a) and 9 of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended, if otherwise admissible under the immigration laws.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES McGILLIC AND BLOSSOM McGILLIC

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3725) for the relief of James McGillic and Blossom McGillic, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That, notwithstanding any statute of limitation or lapse of time or any provision of law to the contrary, suits may be instituted within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act by James McGillic, of Fargo, N. Dak., and Blossom McGillic, of Mandan, N. Dak., upon their claims against the United States for damages to their land and buildings, and to their crops, purporting to have resulted from the construction and maintenance of a dike by the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture around such Service's nursery, which adjoins the land of the said James McGillic and Blossom McGillic in Morton County, N. Dak. In any such suit brought pursuant to this act, proceedings shall be had and the liability, if any, of the United States shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of law and applicable in the case of tort claims against the United States: Provided, however, That nothing in this act does or shall constitute an admission of liability on the part of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REV. ANDREW CHAI KYUNG WHANG

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8759) for the relief of Rev. Andrew Chai Kyung Whang, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment on page 1, after line 10, to insert:

Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

ARCHIBALD WALTER CAMPBELL SEYMOUR

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8973) for the relief of Archibald Walter Campbell Seymour, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Archibald Walter Campbell Seymour, who was born in India of British parents, shall be held and considered to have been born in Great Britain.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

TOMOKO YAMAYA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9145) for the relief of Tomoko Yamaya, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That the provisions of the immigration laws relating to the exclusion of aliens inadmissible because of race shall not hereafter apply to Tomoko Yamaya, the Japanese fiancée of Paul H. Vine, a citizen of the United States and an honorably discharged veteran of World War II, and that the said Tomoko Yamaya may be eligible for a visa as a nonimmigrant temporary visitor for a period of 3 months: Provided, That the administrative authorities find that the said Tomoko Yamaya is coming to the United States with a bona fide intention of being married to Paul H. Vine, and that she is found otherwise admissible under the immigration laws. In the event the marriage between the above-named parties does not occur within 3 months after the entry of the said Tomoko Yamaya, she shall be required to depart from the United States and upon failure to do so shall be deported in accordance with the provisions of sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (8 U. S. C. 155, 156). In the event the marriage between the above-named parties shall occur within 3 months after the entry of the said Tomoko Yamaya, the Attorney General is authorized and directed to record the lawful admission for permanent residence of the said Tomoko Yamaya as of the date of her entry into the United States, upon payment of the required head tax and visa fee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

H. HALPERN & BRO., INC., OF BOSTON, MASS.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9236) for the relief of H. Halpern & Bro., Inc., of Boston, Mass., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "of", to strike out "$3,874.79" and insert "$661.86."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

E. C. BROWDER AND CHARLES KENYON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2830) for the relief of E. C. Browder and Charles Kenyon, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the name "Charles", to strike out "Kenyon" and insert "Keylon"; in line 6, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$8,397.40" and insert "$4,800", and on page 2, line 4, after the name "Charles", to strike out "Kenyon" and insert "Keylon", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to E. C. Browder and Charles Keylon, of Harriman, Tenn., the sum of $4,800, in full satisfaction of their claim against the United States for damages sustained by them when they were notified by the United States Government that condemnation proceedings previously instituted against the farm of E. C. Browder had been abandoned, and then notified at a later date that the Government intended to go forward with its condemnation proceedings, which actions by the Government caused the sale, purchase, and resale of farm equipment by E. C. Browder and his partner, Charles Keylon, and interfered substantially with farming operations: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of E. C. Browder and Charles Keylon."

STAVROS S. NIARCHOS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2921) authorizing the naturalization of Stavros S. Niarchos, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Stavros S. Niarchos shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his last entry into the United States upon payment of the required visa fee and head tax. Upon the enactment of this act, the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Stavros S. Niarchos."

JAMES SHELLENBERGER, JR.

The bill (S. 3513) for the relief of James Shellenberger, Jr., was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I should like to hear an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator in charge of the bill explain it?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is the case of a little boy who is virtually blind for life because of the negligence or carelessness of Army personnel in an Army hospital.

The actual beneficiary would be the boy, though the bill provides for payment to his legal guardian. The amount of the payment provided is $50,000.

This little boy is now 4 years old. He was born in an Army hospital in Italy, his father then being a captain in the United States Army, on official duty in that country.

At the time of this boy's birth, Army personnel in the hospital put drops in his eyes, which caused blindness in his left eye and reduced the effectiveness of his right eye to about 50 percent vision.

The Army admits that these injuries were caused by the mistake of Army personnel.

While there are no arbitrary standards for determining the amount of an award in such a case, the committee believes that $50,000 is not excessive for the injuries sustained by this baby.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3513) for the relief of James Shellenberger, Jr., which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, beginning at line 3, to strike out:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to James Shellenberger, Sr., of 3835 Lincolnway East, Mishawaka, Ind., on behalf of his infant son, James Shellenberger, Jr., the sum of $50,000, in full satisfaction of the claim of the said James Shellenberger, Jr., against the United States for compensation for permanent and complete loss of sight in one eye, partial loss of sight in the other eye, and facial disfigurement, caused by the use of an improper solution of silver nitrate in his eyes at the time of his birth in the United States Army 61 Station Hospital in Leghorn, Italy, in January 1947.

And insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the legal guardian of James M. Shellenberger, Jr., a minor, of Mishawaka, Ind., the sum of $50,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for the injury of said James M. Shellenberger, Jr., which resulted in the permanent loss of sight in his left eye, the partial loss of sight in his right eye, and facial disfigurement, caused by the use of an improper solution of silver nitrate in the eyes of said infant at the time of his birth in the Sixty-first Station Hospital, United States Army, at Leghorn, Italy, on January 8, 1947.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the legal guardian of James M. Shellenberger, Jr., a minor, of Mishawaka, Ind., the sum of $50,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for the injury of said James M. Shellenberger, Jr., which resulted in the permanent loss of sight in his left eye, the partial loss of sight in his right eye, and facial disfigurement, caused by the use of an improper solution of silver nitrate in the eyes of said infant at the time of his birth in the Sixty-first Station Hospital, United States Army, at Leghorn, Italy, on January 8, 1947: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of James M. Shellenberger, Jr., a minor."

REVIEW OF ORDERS OF FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

The bill (H. R. 5487) to provide for the review of orders of the Federal Communications Commission under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Reserving the right to object, may we have a brief explanation of the bill for the RECORD?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Nevada explain the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this legislation changes the method of review of certain orders of the Federal Communications Commission, the Maritime Administration, and the Department of Agriculture. At present these orders are reviewable in a trial de novo by a district court before three judges, at least one of whom must be a circuit judge, with a right of appeal to the Supreme Court. This bill would make those orders reviewable by appeal to the circuit court of appeals on the record made before the agency. Review by the Supreme Court would be by certiorari only.

The present mode of review has often disrupted the ordinary conduct of litigation by the district courts by requiring the attendance of three judges during the conduct of a trial when one would be sufficient. The right of appeal from the three-judge court directly to the Supreme Court has also forced the Supreme Court to consider cases where the questions involved were only of minor importance.

This change made by this bill is in accordance with the methods of review of orders of the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the National Labor Relations Board. It is designed to accomplish a saving in judicial time and energy while still preserving the rights of the parties.

The bill carries the approval of the agencies concerned, the Attorney General, the judiciary, and practitioners.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President, I should like to have the bill go over until I can study it a little further. It involves the Communications Act, if the Senator does not mind. Next week I shall probably join with the Senator in asking unanimous consent for its passage.

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not mind, except that we have had the bill before us for sometime, there has been considerable study, and I should like to dispose of it at this session.

Mr. McFARLAND. I desire to cooperate, but I believe we passed a bill in regard to the Communications Act. I regret that I have not had an opportunity to study the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator object to having the bill placed at the foot of the calendar?

Mr. McFARLAND. I do not think we have had sufficient time. I shall probably have an opportunity to consider it the first of next week.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. McFARLAND subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to calendar 2618, House bill 5487, to provide for the review of orders of the Federal Communications Commission under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended. I withdraw the objection I made with reference to that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5487) to provide for the review of orders of the Federal Communications Commission under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments on page 2, line 12, after the word "Board", to insert "or the Maritime Administration"; in line 14, after the word "Commission", to strike out "or Board" and insert "Board, or Administration"; on page 3, line 5, after the word "Board", to insert "or the Maritime Administration"; on page 6, after line 19, to strike out:

SCOPE OF REVIEW

(d) The findings of the agency as to the facts, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive. No objection to the order of the agency shall be considered by the court unless such objection shall have been urged before the agency or unless there were reasonable grounds for failure to do so.

And on page 11, line 8, after the word "Agriculture", to insert "or the United States Maritime Commission, the Federal Maritime Board, and the Maritime Administration."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for the review of orders of the Federal Communications Commission under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and of certain orders of the Secretary of Agriculture made under the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, and the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930, as amended, and of orders of the United States Maritime Commission or the Federal Maritime Board or the Maritime Administration under the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended, and the Intercoastal Shipping Act, 1933, as amended."

EDWIN A. KNOUS

The bill (S. 3897) for the relief of Edwin A. Knous was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Edwin A. Knous, of Ruth, Nev., the sum of $84.25, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for travel allowance and subsistence due for traveling on orders dated April 16, 1943, from San Francisco, Calif., to Miami, Fla., while a seaman, second class, in the United States Navy: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delievered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

EXTENSION OF BENEFITS TO CERTAIN PERSONS IN MILITARY, NAVAL, OR AIR SERVICE

The bill (S. 4229) to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 25, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16 Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Reserving the right to object, this is important legislation, and I think the RECORD should show exactly what the bill would do. I request an explanation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator in charge of the bill explain it?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this is not one of my bills.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I ask that the bill go to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be placed at the foot of the calendar.

Mr. HENDRICKSON subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 2621, Senate bill 4229, to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 25, 1950, the benefits of Public Law 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, an explanation of the bill was requested a few minutes ago, and then the bill was passed over temporarily.

The bill was sponsored by all the members of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, plus the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES]. It simply extends the benefits of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act to veterans serving in the Korean war to the same extent as they are applicable to veterans of World War II.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4229) to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 25, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-Eighth Congress, as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments on page 1, line 4, after the word "June", to strike out "25" and insert "27"; on page 2, line 11, after the word "June", to strike out "25" and insert "27", and on page 3, line 3, after the word "of", to strike out "the United States" and insert "a State, Territory, or possession of the United States or of the District of Columbia", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That service in the active military, naval, or air service of the United States on or after June 27, 1950, and prior to such date as shall thereafter be determined by Presidential proclamation or concurrent resolution of the Congress, shall afford basic entitlement to vocational rehabilitation under Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended, needed to overcome the handicap of a disability incurred in or aggravated by such service for which compensation is payable under the provisions of subparagraph I (c), part II, Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), as amended (or would be but for receipt of retirement pay), subject to the applicable provisions, conditions, and limitations of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended, except as follows:

(1) Vocational rehabilitation based on service as prescribed in this act may be afforded within 9 years after the aforesaid termination of the period beginning June 27, 1950.

(2) Notwithstanding the fact that vocational rehabilitation may have been previously afforded under Public Law No. 16, as amended, or that education or training may have been afforded under title II of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, additional vocational rehabilitation may be provided hereunder to the extent necessary by reason of a handicap due to disability incurred in or aggravated by service, as provided herein.

(3) Any person eligible for vocational rehabilitation under this act who, at the time of such service, was not a citizen of the United States, shall be afforded such benefit only while a resident of a State, Territory, or possession of the United States or of the District of Columbia.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to extend to certain persons who served in the military, naval, or air service on or after June 27, 1950, the benefits of Public Law No. 16, Seventy-eighth Congress, as amended."

ELIGIBILITY FOR MEMBERSHIP IN AMERICAN LEGION

The bill (S. 4240) to amend the act incorporating the American Legion so as to redefine eligibility for membership therein, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of the act approved September 16, 1919 (41 Stat.

285; U. S. C. of 1946, title 36, sec. 45), entitled "An act to incorporate the American Legion," as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That no person shall be a member of this corporation unless he served in the naval or military services of the United States at some time during any of the following periods: April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918; December 7, 1941, to September 2, 1945; June 25, 1950, to the date of cessation of hostilities, as determined by the United States Government; all dates inclusive, or, who being citizens of the United States at the time of entry therein, served in the military or naval services of any of the governments associated with the United States during said wars or hostilities: Provided, however, That such person shall have an honorable discharge or separation from such service or continues to serve honorably after any of the aforesaid terminal dates."

INCORPORATION OF AMERICAN LEGION

The bill (S. 4241) to amend the act incorporating the American Legion so as to redefine (a) the powers of said corporation, (b) the right to the use of the name "The American Legion" and "American Legion," was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 of the act approved September 16, 1919 (41 Stat. 285; U. S. C. of 1946, title 36, sec. 44), entitled "An act to incorporate The American Legion" is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That the corporation created by this act shall have the following powers: To have perpetual succession with power to sue and be sued in courts of law and equity; to receive, hold, own, use, and dispose of such real estate and personal property as shall be necessary for its corporate purposes; to adopt a corporate seal and alter the same at pleasure; to adopt a constitution, bylaws, and regulations to carry out its purposes, not inconsistent with the laws of the United States or of any State; to use in carrying out the purposes of the corporation such emblems and badges as it may adopt and to have the exclusive right to manufacture, and to control the right to manufacture, and to use, such emblems and badges as may be deemed necessary in the fulfillment of the purposes of the corporation; to establish and maintain offices for the conduct of its business; to establish State and Territorial organizations and local chapter or post organizations; to publish a magazine or other publications, and generally to do any and all such acts and things as may be necessary and proper in carrying into effect the purposes of the corporation."

SEC. 2. That section 8 of said act (41 Stat. 285; U. S. C. of 1946, title 36, sec. 48) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 8. That said corporation and its State and local subdivisions shall have the sole and exclusive right to have and to use, in carrying out its purposes, the name 'The American Legion,' or 'American Legion'."

CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO THE VERMONT AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

The bill (S. 4235) to authorize the transfer to the Vermont Agricultural College of certain lands in Addison County, Vt., for agricultural purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to transfer and convey to the Vermont Agricultural College, a State-owned corporation, upon acceptance by said agricultural college, without cost, the real property comprising nine hundred forty-two and forty-two one-hundredths acres, more or less, of the United States Morgan Horse Farm located in Addison County, town of Weybridge, Vt., and such of the personal property of this station as may be agreed upon, in writing, by the Secretary of Agriculture and the dean of the Vermont Agricultural College. Such real and personal property and research records shall be transferred upon the express condition that they shall be used by the Vermont Agricultural College for the benefit of agriculture for such period as may be agreed upon by the Secretary and the said college at the time of transfer. Deeds to the property conveyed pursuant to this act shall contain a reservation to the United States of all gas, oil, coal, and other minerals and all fissionable materials as may be found in such lands and the right to the use of the lands for extracting and removing same.

The authority herein contained shall expire on June 30, 1951, unless, prior to such expiration date, the dean of the Vermont Agricultural College shall have notified the Secretary of Agriculture of the acceptance of the lands and other property of the station under the terms of this act.

QUITCLAIM DEEDS TO LAND OF COAST GUARD LIGHT STATION, BROWN'S POINT, WASH.

The bill (H. R. 8851) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer by quitclaim deed to the Brown's Point Improvement Club a portion of a small strip of land at Coast Guard light station facility, Brown's Point, Pierce County, Wash., and to transfer by quitclaim deed the remaining portion of such strip to the County of Pierce, State of Washington, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WAIVER OF NAVIGATION AND VESSEL-INSPECTION LAWS

The bill (H. R. 9681) to authorize the waiver of the navigation and vessel-inspection laws, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEDUCTIONS FROM WAGES OF SEAMEN FOR PAYMENT INTO EMPLOYEE WELFARE FUNDS

The bill (H. R. 8349) to authorize deductions from the wages of seaman for payment into employee welfare funds was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I object.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator would reserve his objection.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I shall be pleased to withhold my objection.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection. This bill happens to be a very important one, and it involves——

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I shall be glad to withhold my objection, but I am objecting by request.

Mr. MAGNUSON. May I ask what Senator objects?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT].

Mr. MAGNUSON. I should like to explain the bill so that the RECORD may be clear.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Jersey withdraw his objection?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. No; I withhold it, Mr. President.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, under the California law, it is mandatory that 1 percent of the wages of seamen be deducted and placed in the welfare fund. With the assent of the seamen these welfare funds are usually worked out in labor-management relations between the employer and the employee. The Federal law prohibits deduction for the welfare fund, but the California law requires it, and all maritime contracts in California are based upon that mandatory provision of the California law. The purpose of this bill is to remove the conflict so that the employer and the employee can do what is required by law in California. I am afraid that without this bill there may be some labor trouble involving the maritime situation on the Pacific coast.

I am hoping that the Senator will withdraw his objection, and that the bill may be brought up on Monday.

I wonder if the Senator from New Jersey will permit me to perfect the bill by offering an amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill for that purpose?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8349) to authorize deductions from the wages of seamen for payment into employee welfare funds, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with an amendment on page 1, after line 8, to strike out:

(g) The provisions of this section shall not apply to, or render unlawful, deductions made by an employer from the wages of a seaman, pursuant to the written consent of the seaman, if (1) such deductions are paid into a trust fund established for the sole and exclusive benefit of seamen employed by such employer, and their families and dependents (or of such seamen, families, and dependents jointly with seamen employed by other employers and their families and dependents); and (2) such payments are held in trust for the purpose of providing, either from principal or income or both, for the benefit of such seamen, their families, and dependents, medical and/or hospital care, pensions on retirement or death of the seamen, life insurance, unemployment benefits, compensation for illness or injuries resulting from occupational activity, sickness, accident, and disability compensation, or any one or more of the foregoing benefits, or for the purpose of purchasing insurance to provide any one or more of such benefits.

And insert:

(g) The provisions of this section shall not apply to, or render unlawful deductions made by an employer from the wages of a seaman, (1) with respect to deductions to be paid into a trust fund established for the sole and exclusive benefit of seamen employed by such employer, their families and dependents or of such seamen, their families and dependents jointly with seamen employed by other employers and their families and dependents, and such payments are held in trust for the purpose of providing, either from principal or income or both, for the benefit of such seamen, their families and dependents, medical and/or hospital care, pensions on retirement or death of the seamen, life insurance, unemployment benefits, compensation for illness or injuries resulting from occupational activity, sickness, accident and disability compensation, or any one or more of the foregoing benefits, or for the purpose of purchasing insurance to provide any one or more of such benefits: Provided, That such trust fund is established or continued pursuant to any provision of law, regulation, or other enactment of any State or Territory of the United States of America permitting the establishment or continuation of such trust fund in lieu of and as a substitute for some or all of the contribution and/or benefits provided for in such law, regulation, or other enactments: And provided further, That such deduction is pursuant to the written consent of the seaman; or (2) with respect to money deducted in payment of membership dues in a labor organization: Provided, That the employer has received from each seaman, on whose account such deductions are made, a written assignment which shall not be irrevocable for a period of more than 1 year or beyond the termination date of the applicable collective bargaining agreement, whichever occurs sooner.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Washington will be received and lie on the table.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I should like to have it read so that the record will be clear.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 19, after the words "trust fund," it is proposed to insert "or to be applied in payment of premiums on a group insurance contract."

On page 3, line 1, after the third "and", to insert "in the case of payments into a trust fund."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I renew my objection.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I want to say, for the record, that the purpose of the amendment is to place some of these fees either in the labor-management joint account or in insurance companies. Some insurance companies handle these trust funds for the California seamen.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

RELIEF OF EDULJI DINSHAW AND SISTER, MRS. BACHOO DINSHA WORONZOW

The bill (S. 4069) for the relief of Edulji Dinshaw and his sister, Mrs. Bachoo Dinsha Woronzow, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, there are no agency reports in connection with this bill, and I wonder if the distinguised Senator from Nevada would be good enough to explain the situation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, this bill grants the status of permanent residence to a 34-year-old native of India and his 36-year-old sister, also a native of India. He first entered the United States in October 1939 and again entered in July 1941 and has remained here since that time. His sister entered the United States in October 1939, and except for short periods of absences has been continuously in the United States since that time. The beneficiaries of the bill have holdings in enterprises in various parts of the world and maintain contact with persons who possess information which is of significance to the interest of the United States. Both beneficiaries are of the highest moral character and would make worthy citizens of the United States.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I take it the Senator from Nevada would vouch for these two persons.

Mr. McCARRAN. I can vouch for them on the information which I have.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 4069) for the relief of Edulji Dinshaw and his sister, Mrs. Bachoo Dinsha Woronzow, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, Edulji Dinshaw and his sister, Mrs. Bachoo Dinsha Woronzow, shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of their last entries into the United States upon payment of the required visa fees and head taxes. Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the appropriate quota for the first year that such quota is available.

PAYMENTS TO STATES OF GRAZING FEES ON PUBLIC LANDS

The bill (H. R. 8821) authorizing payment to certain States of amounts withheld from grazing fees on public lands was announced as next in order.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, let me say that Calendar Nos. 2629 through 2632 are without complete reports. I do not want to be technical, but I should like to have a thorough explanation of each of the bills as they come up.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, with reference to Calendar 2629, House bill 8321, there is a committee report. Many years ago Congress provided by law that 25 percent of the grazing fees collected in the Federal forests should be paid in lieu of taxes. Last year when we passed the bill codifying the various laws governing the Forest Service it was discovered that the Forest Service had fallen into the practice of using a portion of these fees for the improvement of the forest before making a computation to determine the 25 percent. In the law which was enacted this year Congress corrected the defect. So the bill before us is merely a provision authorizing the appropriation to 15 States of funds to which they would have been entitled had it not been for the unauthorized deductions which were made in the past.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

The bill (H. R. 7932) to amend section 2883 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by Public Law 448, Eighty-first Congress, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, after line 9, it is proposed to insert the following new sections:

SEC. 3. Section 2806 (d) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(d) All distilled spirits found in any cask or package, and any bottled distilled spirits found in any case, without having upon such cask or package or case each mark and stamp required therefor by law or regulations, shall be forfeited to the United States."

SEC. 3. Section 4 of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act (U. S. C., title 27, sec. 204) is amended in the following respects:

(1) Subsection (d) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) A basic permit shall be conditioned upon (1) compliance with the requirements of section 5 of this act (relating to unfair competition and unlawful practices) and of section 6 of this act (relating to bulk sales and bottling), with the twenty-first amendment and laws relating to the enforcement thereof, and with all other Federal laws relating directly or indirectly to distilled spirits, wine, and malt beverages, including taxes with respect thereto, and (2) conduct of the operations under such permit in conformity with the laws of the State in which such operations are conducted."

(2) Clause 1 of subsection (e) is amended by striking out 'Provided, That for a first violation of the conditions thereof the permit shall be subject to suspension only.'

(3) Subsection (g) is amended to read as follows:

"(g) A basic permit may be issued for 1 year and shall expire on the 31st day of December next succeeding the issuance thereof unless suspended, revoked, or annulled as provided herein, or voluntarily surrendered: Provided, That the Secretary may without formal application extend any permit granted under this part after August 31, in any year to December 31 of the succeeding year. (1) If leased, sold or otherwise voluntarily transferred, the permit shall be automatically terminated thereupon, and (2) if transferred by operation of law or if actual or legal control of the permittee is acquired, directly or indirectly, whether by stock ownership or in any other manner, by any person, then such permit shall be automatically terminated at the expiration of 30 days thereafter: Provided, That if within such 30-day period application for a new basic permit is made by the transferee or permittee, respectively, then the outstanding basic permit shall continue in effect until such application is finally acted on by the Secretary of the Treasury."

(4) The second sentence of subsection (h) is amended to read as follows: "Such appeal shall be taken by filing, in the district court of the United States within any district wherein such person resides or has his principal place of business, or in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, within 60 days after the entry of such order, a written petition praying that the order of the Secretary be modified or set aside in whole or in part"; and the next to the last sentence thereof is repealed.

(5) Subsection (i) is amended to read as follows: "(1) No basic permit shall be suspended or revoked for a violation of any condition thereof relating to compliance with Federal law if the alleged violation of a Federal law has been compromised by any officer of the Government authorized to compromise such violation."

SEC. 4. All basic permits issued pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act, as amended (Public, No. 401, approved August 29, 1935; U. S. C., 1940 edition, title 27, ch. 8, sec. 201 and the following), prior to the approval of this act shall expire on the 31st day of December 1951: Provided, That before the expiration date of any such permit it may be terminated, or, upon notice and hearing, suspended, revoked, or annulled as provided in the said Federal Alcohol Administration Act.

Mr. McCARRAN. This amendment, Mr. President, would make five changes in the Internal Revenue Code and the Federal Alcohol Administration Act.

The purpose of these changes would be—

First. To authorize issuance by the Internal Revenue Bureau of regulations forbidding obliterations of serial numbers on cases of bound whisky.

Second. To authorize the Internal Revenue Bureau to revoke a basic permit, granted under the Federal Alcohol Act, for a first violation.

Third. To make basic permits under the Federal Alcohol Act annually renewable.

Fourth. To make the Federal district courts, rather than the circuit courts of appeal, the forum for review of administrative action by the Internal Revenue Bureau revoking or suspending basic permits under the Federal Alcohol Act.

Fifth. To authorize suspension or revocation of a basic permit issued under the Federal Alcohol Act, for violation of Federal laws, such as the Price Control Act, relating only indirectly to alcoholic beverages, or for failure to conduct operations under such permit in conformity with State law.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Was the amendment considered by the Committee on Finance?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not know. However, the amendment has been bethe Committee on Finance for some 6 years. I have repeatedly brought it to the attention of the Committee on Finance. Yesterday this amendment, in the form of a bill, was reported favorably by the House committee. The same bill which I have proposed for many years before the Committee on Finance is now before the House, having been reported favorably by the House committee. Undoubtedly it will be passed by the House and come to the Senate.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Does not the Senator believe it would be better legislative policy to wait until the House bill comes to the Senate, and then take up the subject?

Mr. McCARRAN. I advised the chairman of the Committee on Finance that I would offer the amendment which has been stated, because the same amendment, in the form of a bill, has been before the committee for many years. It has been approved by the departments, and the approval is on file before the committee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, as I listened to the reading of the amendment it seemed to me it was quite complicated and complex. It is hard to understand what changes are proposed, even with the explanation which the Senator is now giving. I do not believe the subject is properly before the Senate at this time. It should be considered by the Committee on Finance and reported to the Senate by the committee before we give consideration to it on the floor of the Senate. I shall have to object to the amendment on that ground.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator object to the amendment?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I object to the amendment.

Mr. McCARRAN. Then, I object to the bill.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Nevada will not object to this little bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. This little bill is no more important than the amendment I offered. The amendment I offered is germane to the bill, and is a part of the whole situation.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I appreciate that, and I am sorry that the Senator feels he should object to the bill simply because his amendment was objected to. I can understand the position of the Senator from New Jersey. I am a member of the Committee on Finance, and I do not recall that the committee has ever considered the amendment. The chairman of the Committee on Finance is not on the floor. He is working on the tax bill.

This bill, H. R. 7932, has been passed unanimously by the House of Representatives. I respectfully request the Senator from Nevada to let the measure go through. Then if the House passes the bill to which the Senator from Nevada referred, as he says it will, and the bill comes to the Senate, it seems to me that then would be the proper time for the amendment to be taken care of. I respectfully urge my good friend from Nevada to let this little measure go through, because while it is not too important and presumably could wait until next session, it was reported unanimously from the committee. There has been no objection to it.

Mr. President, I cannot make many more appeals like this to the Senator from Nevada. I am just about through.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have appealed many times to the Senator from Illinois. Sometimes my appeals did not take, and sometimes they did.

Mr. President, I thought my explanation would be ample to justify a fair consideration of the amendment. I was cut off by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON] when I was making my explanation.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I apologize to the distinguished Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. It is not necessary. I take it the Senator is going to object, and sought to save time.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. The Senator is exactly correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. That is all right. However, my amendment is strictly germane. My bill has been before the Finance Committee for years. I have a letter from the chairman of that committee stating that he would lay it before the committee. My amendment, in the form of a companion bill, has been reported favorably from the House committee. The measure will undoubtedly pass the House. It is approved by the departments. The departments consider the amendment highly essential.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Did I correctly understand the Senator to say that he has a letter from the chairman of the Finance Committee indicating that this subject has been studied by the Finance Committee?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have a letter, but it is not of recent date. On one occasion when I introduced the bill and it was referred to the Finance Committee, I received a letter from the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], saying that he would lay the bill before the committee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. If this subject has been before the Finance Committee and it has had an opportunity to study it, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not say that it has been considered. I do not wish to imply that, because I do not know enough about it. However, the subject has been pending there for years. It has been pending in the House, and finally it has been reported from the House committee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I still feel that it ought to have the consideration of the appropriate committee, since it is a finance matter.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if I may, I should like to conclude my explanation.

The provisions of this amendment, Mr. President, are the same as the provisions of the bill, S. 22, which I introduced at the beginning of this session. In two previous sessions of the Congress, I have also introduced bills containing similar provisions. Those bills were intended to implement the recommendations made by a special subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee more than 6 years ago, as a result of its investigation of the alcoholic beverage industry.

The Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department and the Alcohol Tax Unit have always reported favorably on this proposed legislation. Those who administer these laws believe these changes are needed to clean up a bad situation in a segment of the liquor industry.

The Department has filed several favorable reports on these bills of mine. Very recently, in connection with an inquiry conducted by the Senate Special Committee To Investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce, the so-called Kefauver committee, the officials who administer our laws for the control of alcoholic beverages reiterated their desire to see enactment of these proposals, and stated, in effect, that, if these recommendations should be accepted, the major problems which were worrying the Kefauver committee would be solved.

Only a day or so ago representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives to testify with respect to a bill pending there which is a companion bill to my own bill, S. 22. Following the testimony of these representatives of the Internal Revenue Bureau, the House Committee on Ways and Means voted to report that bill favorably to the other body.

Frankly, Mr. President, the situation is this: While it is not certain that the House will approve this legislation during the present session, it is most likely; but the chances are the Senate will not have an opportunity to vote on it except by voting on my amendment to the pending bill.

However, if the Senate accepts this amendment, it is perfectly clear that there will be no delay in the other body, since the provisions of the amendment have already been approved by the Ways and Means Committee of the other body.

These are strengthening provisions, Mr. President, designed to give the Internal Revenue Bureau authority which it urgently needs to cope with law violators and prospective law violators in the liquor industry.

I do not want to labor the matter, Mr. President, and will discuss only most briefly the specific provisions of my proposed amendment.

Much of the liquor which flows illegally in interstate commerce is traceable to liquor cases whose serial numbers have been removed; but under present regulations no serial number is required on cases of imported distilled spirits. Adoption of my amendment would plug up this loophole.

Many of those persons who operate in illegal or improper liquor transactions are known to field agents of the alcohol tax unit. However, they continue in business because under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act at the present time the alcohol tax unit is not allowed to deny permits to wholesalers and rectifiers unless ironclad proof can be secured that they have violated certain specific provisions of that act. Violation of provisions of other acts is not legally a basis for denial of a permit. Adoption of my amendment will plug that loophole also.

Under existing law, the only penalty for a first violation of the conditions of a basic permit issued under the act is suspension of the permit. No matter how serious the violation may be, the permit cannot be revoked for a first offense. My amendment would permit the administrative agency to have authority, in its discretion, to revoke a permit for a single violation if that violation is sufficiently serious. This cannot result in any inequities, since an order revoking a permit will always be subject to judicial review.

At the present time, basic permits issued under the Federal Alcohol Act are of indefinite duration. They continue in effect until suspended or revoked in accordance with the act. Such suspension and revocation, being subject to court review, often cannot be made effective for 1 or even 2 years, during which time the permit holder is enabled to continue in business, even though the administrative agency may have satisfied itself that he is not a fit person to be in business. Adoption of my proposed amendment would make basic permits annually renewable, which would be a very salutary thing.

In order to provide speedier determination of appeal from orders for suspension or revocation of basic permits, my amendment would also provide authority for filing such appeals in Federal district courts, rather than in circuit courts of appeals, as now provided. Making the district courts the forum for such litigation will not only aid the alcohol-tax unit in more speedily disposing of its work, but will also provide the permit holder against whom a suspension or revocation order is issued with an opportunity for a speedier determination of his rights than he can now obtain.

I have pointed out that under present law a basic permit issued under the Federal Alcohol Act can be suspended or revoked only for failure to comply with Federal laws relating to distilled spirits, wine or malt beverages. My amendment would permit suspension also for violation of other Federal laws which might relate only indirectly to alcoholic beverages.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, what is the pending question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. WHERRY. Oh, no, Mr. President. May I ask what calendar number we are now discussing?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Calendar No. 2630, House bill 7932.

Mr. WHERRY. I thought objection had already been made to the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes, objection has been made to the bill.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Yes, Mr. President, objection was made to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the Chair misunderstood the situation.

Mr. LUCAS. Yes; objection has been made to the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Objection was made to the amendment and to the bill.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. That is true; yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

The next bill on the calendar will be stated.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 9780) providing the privilege of becoming a naturalized citizen of the United States to all aliens having a legal right to permanent residence, was announced as next in order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

APPOINTMENT OF CARL McFARLAND TO BE PRESIDENT OF MONTANA STATE UNIVERSITY

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, the Great Falls Tribune of December 10, one of Montana's leading newspapers, contains an article announcing the appointment of Carl McFarland, of Washington, D. C., as president of the Montana State University.

The many friends and acquaintances of Carl McFarland will be interested in this announcement and, therefore, I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, Carl McFarland went from the high school of Great Falls, Mont., to the State university, where he developed into one of that institution's most distinguished students. He took the law course at the university and entered upon the successful practice of law in his State immediately upon his graduation. At one time he served as State code commissioner and prepared a revision of the State Codes of Law of Montana, which is recognized by the legal profession as an outstanding accomplishment.

In 1937, President Roosevelt named Mr. McFarland as Assistant United States Attorney General, and he served in that capacity for several years before entering into a law partnership with the Honorable Homer Cummings, former United States Attorney General.

Mr. President, he has been practicing law in the city of Washington since 1939 and is recognized as one of the most distinguished members of the Washington bar.

His appointment as president of the Montana State University was made by the State education board by unanimous vote.

His many friends in Montana and throughout the country are pleased that this great honor has been bestowed upon Mr. McFarland and are confident that he will meet with a high measure of success in the administration of this educational institution of Montana.

I have been a close personal friend of Carl McFarland ever since he commenced the practice of law in the State of Montana, and hold him in high respect. I am gratified to read of the action of my State in selecting him to head the Montana State University.

EXHIBIT 1

[From the Great Falls Tribune of December 10, 1950]

DR. McFARLAND ACCEPTS STATE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENCY

HELENA, December 9.—Dr. Carl McFarland has accepted the presidency of Montana State University at Missoula, Gov. John W. Bonner announced today. Bonner said the Washington, D. C., attorney telephoned acceptance of the State education board's offer to head the school that gave him his law degree in 1930 and an honorary doctor of laws degree last year.

McFarland will report by letter when he will take over the $10,000-a-year job resigned this summer by Dr. James A. McCann, now president of Kansas State College.

"HAPPY," SAYS BONNER

The Governor said: "I am happy that Dr. McFarland accepted. He will be the first State university alumnus to be made president of the university. It speaks well for Montana when distinguished persons like Dr. McFarland are beginning to head important Montana institutions. I hope this trend continues."

McFarland went from Great Falls High School to the State university. He was State code commissioner before his appointment by President Roosevelt as Assistant United States Attorney General in 1937. He has been in private law practice in Washington since 1939.

The university gave him an honorary degree this year when he gave the commencement address there.

The Governor announced Monday that the presidency was open to McFarland, with unanimous approval of the education board and university faculty.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in conjunction with the remarks of the Senator from Montana I wish to say that those of us who have had opportunity for contact with Mr. Carl McFarland in Washington will greatly regret his removal from our midst. The State of Montana is to be congratulated in having acquired the services of such an able man. He has been in Washington for a considerable time. He was one of the great aids we had in drafting the Administrative Procedure Act which is now law. I shall regret his absence from the city of Washington, but I congratulate the State of Montana in acquiring such a splendid man to be the president of the University of Montana.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, on behalf of the people of Montana I wish to thank the able Senator from Nevada for his very eloquent remarks.

Mr. ECTON. Mr. President, I desire to join my senior colleague in welcoming Carl McFarland to Montana as president of Montana State University. I also wish to congratulate the State Board of Education of our great State of Montana for being able to secure the services of an outstanding lawyer of the United States, a businessman of unexcelled qualifications, and a great educator. He is recognized as an educator, along with his business and legal qualifications.

Since he has been in Washington he has been in partnership with a legal firm in Helena. He is a graduate of Montana State University as well as holding degrees from some of the greater universities of the United States.

We are very happy that he has consented to come back to his home and to his alma mater, to act as its president in the coming years.

REDEFINITION OF ELIGIBILITY TO MEMBERSHIP IN AMVETS

The bill (S. 4254) to redefine eligibility for membership in AMVETS (American Veterans of World War II), was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of the act approved July 23, 1947, Public Law 216, Eightieth Congress (61 Stat. 407; 36 U. S. C. 67e), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. Any person who served in the Armed Forces of the United States of America or any American citizen who served in the Armed Forces of an allied nation of the United States on or after September 16, 1940, and before the legal termination of World War II, is eligible for regular membership in AMVETS, provided such service when terminated by discharge or release from active duty be by honorable discharge or separation. No person who is a member of, or who advocates the principles of, any organization believing in, or working for, the overthrow of the United States Government by force, and no person who refuses to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States, shall be privileged to become, or continue to be, a member of this organization."

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, on the call of the calendar a bill was passed over and went to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will say that three bills went to the foot of the calendar. The clerk will state the first bill that went to the foot of the calendar.

MRS. JUAN ANTONIO RIVERA AND OTHERS

The bill (S. 1976) for the relief of Mrs. Juan Antonio Rivera, Mrs. Raul Valle Antelo, Mrs. Jorge Diaz Romero, Mrs. Otto Resse, and Mrs. Hugo Soria, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. PEPPER. Would consideration now of the bills that went to the foot of the calendar during the call of the calendar, prejudice a Senator's right in respect to requesting that we return to a bill on the calendar which was passed over when it was reached?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator makes a unanimous consent request——

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I shall object to returning to any bills which when reached were not carried to the foot of the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That settles that point.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] was called out of the Chamber. He advised the junior Senator from Florida that it was his understanding that three bills had been placed by unanimous consent at the foot of the calendar and were to be considered as a part of the calendar immediately following the call of Senate bill 4254, Calendar No. 2632.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct. The first bill which went to the foot of the calendar is now before the Senate.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HOLLAND. Will the call of the calendar be completed when the call of those three bills which have been placed at the foot is completed?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be completed then, yes.

Mr. HOLLAND. I thank the President pro tempore.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CHAVEZ. What bill is now before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate bill 1976, Calendar No. 731. There is on the calendar an identical House bill, H. R. 5051, Calendar No. 1738.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, that is the bill the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON] asked about when Senate bill 1976 when to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of either of the two bills?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I wish to ask a question of the Senator from Nevada. Were the widows of these Bolivian fliers compensated at all by their own government?

Mr. McCARRAN. The answer, so far as I have any knowledge, is "No."

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Of course, it seems to me we should have some proof of that fact, because I do not believe it is proper for the United States Government to award these moneys to the widows if they already have been paid by their own Government.

I may say that the objection I made, which was entered by request, was based on the question I have just asked.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, although I cannot assure the Senator from New Jersey that the widows have not been recompensed by their own Government——

Mr. HENDRICKSON. The Senator is positive of that fact, is he?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am trying to make it clear.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Oh, I thought the Senator said he could assure us of that.

Mr. CHAVEZ. No; I could not.

Nevertheless, knowing generally the persons involved, knowing the type of people they are, and the citizens of that particular country, my opinion, in the best of faith, would be that these widows have not received a penny.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I appreciate what the Senator says, but certainly that is negative proof. In the light of no assurance that the widows have not been compensated by their own Government, I shall have to interpose my objection again—which, as I said before, is by request.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Of course, Mr. President, I do not blame the Senator from New Jersey for doing that; but I wish him please to believe this: As I have stated heretofore, if these persons were to walk in the Senate Chamber now, I would not know them. However, I have had persons from Bolivia, previously unknown to me, speak to me or write to me simply because they think I am kindly disposed toward them and toward people south of the United States border, and they have asked that I do the right thing. They have interceded, and have said, "Why can we not have a little justice?"

This measure has been recommended by our Air Corps, by the armed services, by our State Department, and by virtually everyone else.

Mr. President, I think the greatest characteristic of an American is, not our power to do things, but our spirit of fair play and decency.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The United States Government, the most powerful Government in the world, had asked the men who were killed to come to the United States on our ships. I venture to say, although I do not have the proof, that the widows and children of those men are now in need of something to eat.

It is unbelievable that our country, which can afford to give billions and billions of dollars to countries in Europe and elsewhere in the world, cannot give a few cents to these widows who live in South America.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, all in the world I ask is proof to the Senate that there will not be double compensation as a result of the enactment of this bill.

I know how sincerely the Senator from New Mexico feels about the loss these widows have suffered. However, I cannot understand why it is at all unreasonable to ask for proof positive that previous compensation has not been made by the Bolivian Government.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I think the inquiry of the Senator from New Jersey is proper, and I do not object to it in the least. I think it is a wise inquiry.

Let me say that we made the same inquiry of the Department, and the Department advised us, as I now recall, that these women had received nothing, except what would be given generally to those who had lost their support. I do not know what that is.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, is it not possible to bring before the Senate a statement in regard to this matter, so that we can be assured on that point? If the majority leader would approve that action, I would be perfectly willing to have the bill considered at a later date, when we have the proof for which I have asked.

Mr. McCARRAN. Would the Senator from New Jersey and other Senators be satisfied to have the bill passed now, with the agreement that before the bill becomes law we must first establish that the widows have not received specific compensation?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I would be quite satisfied with that arrangement, and I know that the Senator for whom I have objected to the consideration of the bill would be satisfied with that arrangement.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I think the way to accomplish that purpose would be to have us waive the rule in regard to the filing of a motion to reconsider, with the idea that the bill will be passed at this time. Then, if such evidence is not forthcoming, the Senator from New Jersey could move to reconsider the action of the Senate on the bill.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed now, and that we waive the rule in regard to filing a motion to reconsider, so that a motion to reconsider may be made and acted upon in the event the proof which has been requested is not forthcoming.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is satisfactory.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5051) for the relief of Mrs. Juan Antonio Rivera, Mrs. Raul Valle Antelo, Mrs. Jorge Diaz Romero, Mrs. Otto Resse, and Mrs. Hugo Soria, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 1, line 7, after the word "of"; to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500"; in line 9, after the word "of", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500"; on page 2, line 1, after the word "of", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500", in line 3, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500", and in line 4, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent, a motion to reconsider is entered.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me inquire whether the bill on which the Senate has just acted is House bill 5051.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, in order to have the RECORD perfectly clear in this connection, let me say that Calendar No. 1738, House bill 5051, is an identical bill which has been passed by the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes; and that is the bill which has just been passed by the Senate.

There is a corresponding Senate bill, namely, Senate bill 1976, Calendar No. 731. Without objection, the Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed.

ANNUITIES OF MEMBERS AND ELECTED OFFICERS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next bill heretofore placed at the foot at the calendar will be stated.

The bill (S. 3682) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, with respect to the time of taking effect of annuities of Members and elected officers of the Senate and House of Representatives was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I offer the amendments which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 2. Section 3A of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph as follows:

"(11) Hereafter, no person who has had at least 6 years' service as a Member of Congress shall receive any credit for such service for the purposes of an annuity under section 4 of this act, but any such person who (A) has not served as a Member of Congress subsequent to August 2, 1946, or (B) failed to give notice as provided by paragraph (1) of this section of his desire to come within the purview of this act, may, upon application therefor, be paid an annuity computed in accordance with this section, beginning at age 62 or as of the date of such application if subsequent to age 62: Provided, That in the computation of such annuity, no credit shall be allowed for any service for which deposit has not been made in accordance with section 9 of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment submitted by the Senator from South Carolina will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the bill, after the amendment just agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 3. (a) Section 85 of chapter 23 of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended (48 Stat. 1018; 39 U. S. C. 326), is amended by inserting after the words "until the 30th day of June following the expiration of their respective terms of office" a comma and the words "or until the expiration of six months following such expiration, whichever is the later."

(b) Section 7 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and five, and for other purposes", approved April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. 441; 39 U. S. C. 327), is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "until the first day of December following the expiration of their respective terms of office, or until the expiration of six months following such expiration whichever is the later."

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 3682) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the third paragraph of section 13 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That, in the case of an elected officer of the Senate or House of Representatives, such annuity shall commence on the day following the date on which salary shall cease provided such employee meets the age and service requirements for retirement at that time. An annuity granted under the provisions of section 3A shall commence on the day following the date on which salary shall cease or on the day on which the person entitled to such annuity attains age 62, whichever is later."

SEC. 2. Section 3A of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph as follows:

"(11) Hereafter, no person who has had at least 6 years' service as a Member of Congress shall receive any credit for such service for the purpose of an annuity under section 4 of this act, but any such person who (A) has not served as a Member of Congress subsequent to August 2, 1946, or (B) failed to give notice as provided by paragraph (1) of this section of his desire to come within the purview of this act, may, upon application therefor, be paid an annuity computed in accordance with this section, beginning at age 62 or as of the date of such application if subsequent to age 62: Provided, That in the computation of such annuity, no credit shall be allowed for any service for which deposit has not been made in accordance with section 9 of this act."

SEC. 3. (a) Section 85 of chapter 23 of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895, as amended (48 Stat. 1018; 39 U. S. C. 326), is amended by inserting after the words "until the 30th day of June following the expiration of their respective terms of office" a comma and the words "or until the expiration of 6 months following such expiration, whichever is the later."

(b) Section 7 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, and for other purposes", approved April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. 441; 39 U. S. C. 327), is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "until the first day of December following the expiration of their respective terms of office, or until the expiration of 6 months following such expiration whichever is the later."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, have we concluded the call of the calendar?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The call of the calendar has been completed.

AMENDMENT OF PUBLIC LAW 359—RECLASSIFICATION OF POSTMASTERS

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, in connection with Calendar No. 1500, the bill S. 3050, to amend Public Law 359, chapter 287, Seventy-eighth Congress, second session, I desire to say that I hope the Senate will take that up sometime in the near future, if possible before this session is over, in order that we may dispose of it.

Mr. President, in connection with Calendar No. 2249, the bill (S. 1978) to reclassify postmasters, assistant postmasters, and other positions in the postal field service, I want it understood that I did not object to that bill. I suppose the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS] objected to it. I was in favor of taking up the bill, but the Senator offered an amendment with which I did not agree.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. KEM] to take up Senate Resolution 371, under a previous order—for which the Chair was not at all responsible.

Mr. McCARTHY obtained the floor.

Mr. HOLLAND, Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, and other Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. McCARTHY. I shall be glad to yield. I see there are a number of Senators who desire me to yield. I shall do so on condition that I do not thereby lose the floor, of course.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Florida is simply acting as majority leader in the absence of the Senator from Illinois. He was advised by the majority leader, however, before he left that a unanimous-consent agreement of some kind had been entered into, effective as of the time of the completion of the call of the calendar. Is that correct?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. HOLLAND. And is that unanimous-consent agreement now being followed in the recognition of the Senator from Wisconsin?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is exactly what is being done.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I was going to ask the Senator to yield sufficient time so that I might move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a small bill which was objected to on the call of the calendar.

Mr. WHERRY. Mr. President, I make the point that that is out of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would require unanimous consent.

Mr. WHERRY. It would require unanimous consent.

Mr. McCARRAN. I beg the Senator's pardon. Why does it require unanimous consent?

Mr. WHERRY. Because there is a motion before the Senate, which is the unfinished business; and the only way the Senator could take up the bill would be by unanimous consent.

Mr. McCARRAN. When was the unanimous-consent agreement entered into?

Mr. WHERRY. I say, the unfinished business is a motion on the part of the Senator from Missouri to take up a resolution. A motion to take up a bill is now out of order. The only way it could be taken up would be by unanimous consent.

Mr. McCARTHY. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that he is so advised by the Parliamentarian.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me a moment for a brief statement?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, Senators will recall that for a period of, I think, a year, my colleague and I have endeavored to obtain action on a relief bill for a man named Piowaty. I imagine the name recalls the efforts we have made. I believe that it is a meritorious case, and so does my colleague, who, on behalf of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, submitted to the Senate a report which, I believe, was unanimous, in favor of the bill. The distinguished Senator from New Jersey felt it necessary to object today, at the request of a Senator who is absent—the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL]. I desire to give notice that I shall attempt, by motion or otherwise, to bring up this bill for consideration as early as possible. I feel it is only my duty to give the Senate an opportunity to do justice before the expiration of this session. I thank the Senator very much.

DREW PEARSON

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, the other night I told one of my fellow Senators that today I intended to discuss the background of one of the cleverest men who has ever prostituted one of the noblest professions—a man, who, in my opinion, has been and is doing an infinite amount of damage to America and all of the institutions of our form of Government. When I told the Senator this, he said: "McCARTHY, don't do it." He said it would be like having stood in the mouth of the Cloaca Maxima and having tried to stop the flow. He said: "You will be merely inundated by the slime and smear and he will still go on every day and every week polluting otherwise fine newspapers and poisoning the air waves."

I realize that the task of exposing this man, or perhaps I should say this person, will be an unpleasant, disagreeable task, which will leave me more than a bit bloodied up also, but as I told the Senator the other night—when I was a boy on the farm my mother used to raise chickens. From those chickens the groceries for a large family were supplied, as well as mother's Christmas money. The greatest enemy the chickens had were skunks. In order to protect mother's chickens my three brothers and I had to dig out and destroy those skunks. It was a dirty, foul, unpleasant, smelly job. We learned early in life that the jobs that most badly need doing and are so often left undone are often the most difficult and unpleasant jobs.

I do not agree with the Senator who advised me the other night—I do not agree that this is an impossible task. I think that while it cannot be done overnight, this man can be exposed to the American people for what he is, at which time he will no longer be dangerous.

Before discussing the important place which he holds in the Communist scheme of propaganda, I would like to describe him in the words of some expert witnesses, well known and highly respected by the Senate.

First, let me quote one of the outstanding Senators from the other side of the aisle—one of the great Senators, not only of today but great in the entire history of this Senate, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE]. On the floor of the United States Senate, on the 21st of February 1944, he said:

> [Pearson] began his whole tirade with a deliberate lie. * * * It is not often that an ordinary, congenital, deliberate, and malicious liar such as Drew Pearson refers to a printed record on which it is possible to pin him down. * * * What sort of a liar is he, Mr. President, when in the very face of the RECORD which he himself invites every word that he said is disproved? * * *
>
> Mr. President, I know some of the motive, some of the malice, back of this sudden attack by Drew Pearson on me. * * * Down deep is a fight against representative government. It is a smear campaign against the legislative branch of this Government. * * *
>
> Again I ask, what sort of a liar is Mr. "Skunk" Pearson? (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 2, pp. 1903–1904.)

Next, let me quote Morris A. Bealle, a highly respected writer:

> All the boys in the Washington press galleries, except the leftist stooges and Communist sympathizers and "New" Deal dog robbers, have an abiding contempt for this fellow who had brought prostitution of their great profession to its zenith. They say: "When bigger lies are told Pearson will tell them."

He goes on further to say:

"The truth is not in him; he is a pathological liar." (Washington Squirrel Cage, 1948 edition, p. 39.)

Pearson makes his living by blackening ch racters. He is a smear columnist, a professional character assassin, and the author of false and vile insinuations. (Washington Squirrel Cage, 1948 ed., p. 39.)

On the 17th of December 1941, Representative MARION T. BENNETT, of Missouri, described Pearson as follows:

Pearson and Allen * * * do not have the manhood or honor to admit their mistake. * * * These two columnists have prevaricated. * * * They are well known in informed circles because of their utter lack of regard for the truth and for being two of the most dishonest, unreliable, and vicious character assassins in America. They are a disgrace to the great newspaper profession. They apparently seldom take the trouble to ascertain the facts. * * * They make their living in the half light of minds diseased by the filth they alone can imagine. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 87, pt. 8, pp. 9943–9944.)

Mr. President, normally I should not take the time of the Senate in quoting witnesses, but I do think it is important that the record of this man be made clear for the benefit of the well-meaning and deluded newspaper publishers who still are buying his service.

I might say, Mr. President, in fairness to Mr. Allen, that apparently he could not stomach this association and broke it up himself. So it is barely possible that he may have been unfairly blamed for what Drew Pearson was saying; I do not know.

Again on the floor of the Senate on the 12th day of March 1945, a Democratic Senator described Pearson as follows:

It is not only generally known, but it is universally admitted, that Drew Pearson is the biggest and most notorious liar in America today. Not only is Pearson recognized as being the biggest liar, but he is also recognized as being the most perfect smear artist of the press and radio. He will go down in history as Drew Pearson, the sponge, because he gathers slime, mud, and slander from all parts of the earth and lets them ooze out through his radio broadcasts, and through his daily contributions to a few newspapers which have not yet found him out. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 2, pp. 2010–2011.)

On the 20th of May 1943, Representative FRANK BOYKIN, of Alabama, described Pearson as follows:

Drew Pearson is the damnedest liar that ever lived. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, p. 4723.)

On the 12th of June 1948, the Senator from Maine [Mr. BREWSTER] stated:

I have been a little puzzled by the apparent malevolence of Mr. Pearson. * * * * * * these attacks of various kinds have developed upon me, with all the cunning and skill he commands—and it is very considerable. I have a very wholesome respect for his tenacity and ingenuity in presenting half-truths in order to fortify whatever views he takes, sometimes walking a very tight rope between situations. * * * he is able so to present a situation as to leave implications which are utterly unwarranted by a full disclosure of the facts. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 94, pt. 6, p. 7957.)

On the 15th of December 1947 the Senator from Washington [Mr. CAIN] had the following to say:

The conversation described by Mr. Pearson never took place. * * * Mr. Pearson has unfairly, unreasonably, and senselessly abused Mr. REECE through an imaginary dialog which was spawned by an individual who has been malicious, irresponsible, and mischief making. * * * Pearson has lied * * * without reason or excuse. Through doing this he has insulted the intelligence of his readers and broken faith with his profession. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 93, pt. 9, pp. 11360–11361.)

On the 25th of April 1944 former Senator A. B. Chandler, of Kentucky, described Pearson as follows:

* * * There is a definition for that sort of liar. He is called a revolving liar. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 3, p. 3634.)

On the 21st of June 1943 EUGENE COX, of Georgia, described Pearson as follows:

This Washington Post happens to be the purveyor of the filth concocted by one Drew Pearson, whom I denounce as a filthy and cowardly villain, a venomous slanderer, and an insinuating rogue, who makes his living in the blackening of other men's reputations and the practice of blackmail blackguardism. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 5, p. 6185.)

He should not have said "The Washington Post"; he should have said "The Washington Edition of the New York Daily Worker." His statement appears in volume 89, part 5, page 6185, of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

On the 20th of May 1943 Stephen Early, White House secretary, is quoted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD in regard to one of Pearson's stories as follows:

There is no truth in any detail of this story. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, p. 4724.)

On the 19th of November 1940 former Representative Hamilton Fish made the following statement:

The Pearson-Allen statement is damnably false. * * * This is not a personal issue, but if permitted to continue it may undermine the confidence of the American people in the integrity of our public officials and destroy our free institutions and democratic Government, which is now under attack throughout the world. * * *

The only way I know of (dealing with these contemptible people) is through libel action or horsewhipping or the old gun method. It is too bad that that has gone out. That used to be resorted to in the old days of Benton and Clay. They would have taken a gun and gone after them. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 86, pt. 12, p. 13685.)

On the 26th of December 1940 the following is found in an extension of remarks in the House of Representatives:

A typical example of the lack of regard for truth in the Merry-Go-Round, published by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen. * * * These smear columnists are rendering a disservice to the public and to public officials by their irresponsible and false statements and deliberate misrepresentations. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 86, pt. 18, p. 6983.)

I hesitate, Mr. President, to take up the time of the Senate in citing these expert witnesses, but I think it is important to do so before going on to what I consider to be a much more important facet of Mr. Pearson's activities.

On the 20th of May 1943, the following statement was quoted by Representative MORRISON, of Louisiana:

Drew Pearson, in my opinion, is the most contemptible, dishonest, and dishonorable smear propagandist in America, and by inference the most colossal liar in the Nation. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, p. 4723.)

On the 10th of June 1947, Senator GILLETTE, of Iowa, in referring to one of Pearson's articles, stated:

The intimation * * * as stated in the article, is absolutely without foundation. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 81, pt. 5, p. 5511.)

On the 23d of November 1943, Congressman John W. Gwynne, of Iowa, made the following statement:

The statement of Drew Pearson did contain one truth, believe it or not. I think it must have been an accident. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 8, p. 10946.)

William "Bull" Halsey, fleet admiral, United States Navy, had this to say:

Pearson is a blackguard who, by insinuations and outright lies, tried to destroy public confidence in the Navy's air arm. The scoundrel didn't have the "guts" to take a plane ride with a man he said got his wings by fraud. (Washington Squirrel Cage, 1948 edition, p. 39.)

On the 28th of March 1935, the late Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, made the following statement:

This is so mendacious, it is willful, it is so misleading and untruthful, it is such a damnable lie * * * that I cannot pass it by unnoticed. * * *

* * * These audacious, misleading, incorrect statements carried in the Merry-Go-Round, written by Mr. Drew Pearson, are written because of a motive. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 79, pt. 4, p. 4618.)

I intend to discuss the motive.

On the 24th of May 1949, Congressman CLARE HOFFMAN, of Michigan, described Pearson as follows:

A man who gratuitously smears innocent, defenseless individuals in order to sell his wares, advance his own financial interests, no doubt derives pleasure from the squirming and the suffering of his victims. Drew Pearson, who seldom misses an occasion to throw out a falsehood and insinuation or by innuendo to injure some innocent victim, if he runs true to form, must be chagrined by the death of James V. Forrestal, whom he so vigorously and meanly attacked, because Forrestal is dead and no longer will be humiliated or suffer because of Pearson's slanderous, libelous statements. (Appendix to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 95, pt. 14, p. A3182.)

Again, in April of 1939, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in referring to a Pearson article, dated April 14, 1939, had this to say:

Those parts of it of which I have knowledge are so thoroughly inaccurate and misleading that they could not in my judgment be substantiated by anyone. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 84, pt. 5, p. 5416.)

Again on the 21st of December 1940, in a press conference Cordell Hull stated:

[The Merry-Go-Round article bore earmarks that] would indicate it to be a deliberate misrepresentation. It is very disagreeable when we are so hopelessly overwhelmed with emergency matters to have an article of whole cloth thrown into our faces and sent over the Nation with the representation that it is based on actual knowledge. (New York Times, December 22, 1940, p. 18, cols. 1–5.)

Again on the 30th of August 1943, in referring to a Pearson article, Hull stated:

I desire to brand these statements as monstrous and diabolical falsehoods. (New York Times, August 31, 1943, p. 1, col. 7.)

As quoted by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] on February 21, 1944, Hull again referred to Pearson as an "unmitigated and congenital" liar—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 90, part 2, page 1904.

Jesse Jones, as quoted by Representative O'Connor, of Montana, on the 2d of April 1942, had this to say:

There is no truth in the Merry-Go-Round story of April 1 about me * * *. Practically all references to me and my work by those columnists over the year has been made for the purpose of injuring me, and where there has been any basis for reference to me, the facts are maliciously distorted through innuendo. This article is typical of their column. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 88, pt. 3, p. 3289.)

The Senate will recall that in 1947 Congressman Robert Jones, of Ohio, was nominated for membership on the Federal Communications Commission. Pearson attacked the nomination of Jones, claiming he had reliable and reputable witnesses who would testify that Jones was a member of the Black Legion. Senators will recall it. The following is found in the answer in the court record in the case of Pearson against King Features and Westbrook Pegler, page 20 of the answer:

One Congressman Jones, of Ohio, was nominated for membership on the Federal Communications Commission. The said plaintiff opposed said nomination and contended that said Jones was a member of the Black Legion.

At a hearing conducted on the confirmation of the aforesaid Mr. Jones, the said plaintiff—stated falsely that he had affidavits substantiating the membership of said Jones in such Black Legion. The said plaintiff produced as witnesses a person who had been an inmate of the insane asylum, and had a criminal record; a person so senile as not to know in what manner he had reached Washington or the hearing room; and a third witness, likewise with a criminal record, of no credibility whatever. The charges trumped up by said plaintiff were fakes and lies, as he then and there well knew. The witnesses he produced were for the most part perjurers, as plaintiff then and there well knew; the nomination of the aforesaid Jones was confirmed by the United States Senate by a unanimous vote, thus in effect finding that said plaintiff was a faker, liar, and suborner of perjury by a vote of 96 to 0.

Pearson—

In connection with the above the following statement was made by Congressman Jones to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the United States Senate on July 1, 1947:

I believe that any competent lawyer, reading Pearson's testimony, would dismiss it instanter as the flimsiest hearsay and of no probative value. * * * Pearson's first charge is wholly false and entirely unsubstantiated. * * * The second charge is false. * * *

I am sure that the members of the committee have every right to take judicial notice of the fact that Pearson's credibility has been attacked upon scores of occasions. It is sufficient, I believe, to cite as witnesses in my behalf as to Pearson's reputation for truth and veracity * * * members of the Washington press corps who in a poll voted him the most unreliable commentator. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 93, pt. 6, p. 8092.)

The late Congressman Lesinski, of Michigan, had the following to say on the floor of the House of Representatives:

This is one of those damnable lies that has always been produced by Drew Pearson. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 94, pt. 6, p. 7601.)

On the 25th of April 1944 the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] described Pearson colorfully and in detail. I shall quote only a few of the passages:

I do not know Pearson; but really he is an ignorant ass, is he not? * * * This ignorant, blundering, lying ass, who makes his living by lying on Senators and other public men. * * *

* * * If ever there was an opportunity for my temper to be aroused by plain lying, it would be aroused by the plain lying of this so-called Washington columnist. * * * He is just an ignorant liar, a pusillanimous liar, a peewee liar, and he is a paid liar. * * *

Pearson makes his living by making sensational lying statements about men in high office. * * * He actually makes his living that filthy way. He ought to have the contempt of every honest man.

* * * When a man is a natural-born liar, a liar during his manhood and all the time, a congenital liar, a liar by profession, a liar for a living, a liar in the attempt to amuse, or to be as he thinks smart, a liar in the daytime, and a liar in the nighttime. It is remarkable how he can lie.

* * * This revolving, constitutional, unmitigated, infamous liar, this low-lived, double-crossing, dishonest, corrupt scoundrel, who claims to be a columnist. He is not a columnist. He is a monumentalist. That is, a monumental liar. * * * This knave—and I am using very mild language. * * *

Gentlemen, I am not angry, I am just sorry that this great Nation of ours, this Nation of honest men, this Nation of Americans, has within its borders any person so low and despicable, so corrupt, so dishonorable, so groveling, so desirous of injurying the character and the accomplishments of his fellowmen, as this low-born, low-lived, corrupt, and dishonest Drew Pearson. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 3, pp. 3683–3687).

On Sunday this miserable, lying, corrupt, dishonest scoundrel, Drew Pearson, with a dishonest and disordered mentality and a putrid and corrupt morality, wrote and published another lying article about me. * * *

This is a lie out of the whole cloth, known to be a lie when Pearson wrote it, known to be a lie when Silliman Evans bought and paid for it, and no person with character sufficient to sleep with a hog or to associate with dogs or polecats would write such an article or would print such an article. Indeed, Pearson, in his mental make-up is a cross between a ranting maniac and a drunken Silliman Evans. * * *

The article had no resemblance to truth, but is simply the result of a disordered and corrupt mind working only for money paid for it by Silliman Evans. * * * (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 92, pt. 7, pp. 9090–9091.)

On the 17th of October 1945, Congressman Joseph J. Mansfield, of Texas, made the following statement:

I consider this paragraph so grossly erroneous in point of fact that it should not be permitted to go unchallenged. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 13, p. A4359.)

On the 18th of December 1943, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. MAYBANK] made the following statement:

Mr. Pearson's statement is false and unfounded. * * * an absolute falsehood has been printed in the Pearson article. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 8, p. 10867.)

On the 4th of May 1945, Congressman AUCHINCLOSS, of New Jersey, made the following statement:

The column of Drew Pearson * * * contains references * * * that are cruel, wholly false, and libelous. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 11, p. A2073.)

On the 20th of May 1943, Congressman JAMES H. MORRISON, of Louisiana, made the following statement:

* * * Drew Pearson lied on the radio and I know he lied on the witness stand which, down where I come from, is perjury. * * * I have had occasion to check into the record of Drew Pearson to see what kind of reputation he has for telling the truth. I find that United States Senators, Members of Congress, Cabinet members, generals and even the secretary to the President in no uncertain terms labeled him as a downright liar and garbage can collector of filthy, manufactured synthetic lies.

But Drew Pearson has not spent all of his time blackmailing, intimidating, and lying about public officials and Congressmen. His vocations describe a thwarted and frustrated man with a warped, twisted, and diseased idea of mankind and life. * * * I want the Members of this House to know that Pearson, who poses as a great liberal, is at heart a money miser and one of the greediest men for cash I have ever met anywhere any time. If he cannot get it honestly, look out for the blackmail. * * *

His contribution to the war effort is based on a low-down degrading, cowardly, yellow, stinking pen to defame, to vilify, to humiliate, and to attempt to destroy America's No. 1 hero, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. * * *

* * * Seldom do I have the unpleasant task of skinning a skunk. I hope I have done the job well. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, pp. 4722–4724.)

On the 20th of May 1943, Congressman Mott, of Oregon, described Pearson as follows:

Drew Pearson and Robert Allen are a pair of journalistic polecats. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, p. 4724.)

Former Senator Nye, of North Dakota, made the following statement:

Pearson is a master of the half truth. When a direct lie does not suit his purpose because it might be too dangerous, he can lie by inference by merely leaving out qualifying remarks and explanation. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 89, pt. 4, p. 4723.)

On the 2d of April 1942, Congressman O'Connor, of Montana, labeled Pearson as a deliberate liar—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 88, part 3, page 3290.

The mother of Pearson's former wife had this to say about Pearson:

Drew, rose-sniffing, * * * child cheater, sentimental Drew. Vicious and perverted Drew. * * *

Incidentally, you GI Joes, when you happen to listen to the phony Quaker Pearson of a Sunday night—Bleeding Heart Drew—never forget that although he was 20 and in perfect health in 1917, he managed to "thee and thou" himself out of service in World War I. Then, as now, Drew was a yellow-bellied slacker. * * *

* * * Too many of these zanies are crazy all right, but they're crazy like foxes. * * *

But, to go back again, how can any normal-minded human being choose this filthy work of plotting, planning, sneaking, lying, spying, cheating, stealing, smearing, in the mere hope of one day overthrowing our American form of Government, for that's all it amounts to. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 13, p. A4548.)

Columnist Westbrook Pegler had the following to say about Pearson:

James V. Forrestal * * * was * * * a victim of the wanton blackguardism and mendacity of the radio which has been a professional specialty of Drew Pearson. Pearson has become a man of great power and special privilege because other decent men like Forrestal go in fear of fantastic lies to be spread over the Nation by radio, all to stimulate the sale of a brand of hats or laxative. (Appendix to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 95, pt. 14, p. A3183.)

On February 2, 1944, Congressman RANKIN, of Mississippi, described Pearson as follows:

Drew Pearson, one of the well-known slimemongers of the radio * * * revealed himself of one of the most vicious propagandists in America. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 1, p. 1081.)

On the floor of the United States House of Representatives, February 8, 1944:

* * * those of us who listened in on Sunday night heard Drew Pearson, one of the radio scavengers of America, in a most contemptible manner, falsely attack one of the most elegant ladies in Washington. * * * Every person who is familiar with the incident tells us that Drew Pearson was lying about her in his statement. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol, 90, pt. 1, p. 1419.)

On the floor of the United States House of Representatives, June 11, 1945:

Drew Pearson * * * went to bat for those saboteurs in the State Department who were exposed by the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities. * * * A high-ranking general in the United States Army told me more than a year ago that if he were to give out the Government secrets that were being broadcast by Drew Pearson * * * he would be court-martialed immediately, and ought to be. * * * Somebody in the State Department, in the War Department, and even around the White House, has been giving out secret information to Drew Pearson * * * to broadcast to the world regardless of its cost in the lives of American boys on the various fighting fronts. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 12, p. A2770.)

Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, described Pearson as follows:

Pearson is not only a chronic liar but a fool. (Washington Squirrel Cage, 1948 edition, p. 39.)

He is right about his being a chronic liar; but make no mistake, Pearson is no fool. He is the most cleverly dangerous man in the country. If he were a fool he would not be dangerous.

On the 11th of May 1939 Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, had this to say:

Unfortunately, the only way a public official can avoid vilification by these two men, the authors of the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is to bow to their will and the will of those whom they serve. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 84, pt. 5, pp. 5413–5433.)

On September 1, 1943, the New York Times reported the late President Roosevelt's press conference, as follows:

Mr. Roosevelt called Mr. Pearson a liar. * * * The President continued, he had no hesitation in saying that the whole statement, from beginning to end, was a lie.

But there is nothing in that, he went on, since the man is a chronic liar in his columns. * * *

It is the kind of journalism that hurts the press, the President declared, besides hurting the country. (New York Times, September 1, 1943, p. 4, column 2.)

On the 25th of April 1944, Senator Tom Stewart, of Tennessee, made the following statement:

* * * I do not think this man Pearson has the ability to slander anyone. One must be honest before one can slander another, and one must be able to tell something which at least approaches the truth. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 90, pt. 3, p. 3687.)

On the 11th of March 1948, President Truman in a press conference made the following statement:

First I want to pay attention to a vicious statement that was made by a columnist. * * * I had thought I wouldn't have to add another liar's star to that fellow's crown, but I will have to do it. This is just a lie out of the whole cloth. (New York Times, March 12, 1948, p. 17, columns 2–3.)

On the 7th of July 1941, Senator MILLARD TYDINGS, of Maryland, made the following statement:

The spreading of rumors in a whispering campaign is not a crime against an individual; it is a crime against society. * * * And that is the kind of campaign which Drew Pearson has tried, in his nefarious manner, to conduct. * * *

"But he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed." This is what Pearson and Allen tried to steal. Where are they now? I have brought all the facts out into the light of day. Where are the skunks now? Down in their hole where they ought to be and where the company suits them. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 87, pt. 6, pp. 5831–5834.)

On the 18th of June 1945, Senator TYDINGS said further:

Washington Merry-Go-Round * * * is written by an individual who names himself Drew Pearson, but most persons who are familiar with his utterances on a variety of subjects generally call him "Pew Smearson." * * * Normally, I would pay no attention to such garbage but * * * I am unwilling by silence to see this deliberate lie passed on to the American people. * * *

I fail to find within the limits of parliamentary language words to describe this worm masquerading in the physique and the clothing of a supposed man. In the last war this scoundrel, although away above the draft age, found asylum in an SATC, and the only powder he ever smelled was in the presence of ladies who might have adorned the windward side of the parade ground; and today, sitting in a comfortable chair, far removed from any danger, without any scintilla of fact or truth to support the statement, this supposed purveyer of information besmirches the character of one of the most gallant soldiers.

He was referring to Pearson's attacks upon Gen. Douglas MacArthur at that time.

* * * I would call him a perpetual, chronic, revolving liar, and a few other things that I cannot add in the presence of this distinguished and rather ethical company. This man has engaged, to my personal knowledge, in the gentle art of blackmail, without any success. He has been guilty of attempting to buy public influence. I have the affidavits and the checks in my possession to substantiate what I am saying. He has been affiliated with one of the great gambling rackets of America, according to one who worked with him. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 5, pp. 6213–6214.)

The United States Department of the Army in April 1948 had this to say about one of Pearson's articles:

The implications in Mr. Pearson's statement are not only unfair, but are absolutely without foundation, as proved beyond question in the course of the investigation into the entire situation. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 94, pt. 10, p. A2492.)

On the 15th of March 1945 Congressman EARL WILSON of Indiana described Pearson as follows:

This ruthless, double-barreled, diabolical, puerile liar, Drew Pearson. * * * He is a liar, preceded by many uncomplimentary adjectives and is really everything he has been called and more. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, vol. 91, pt. 2, p. 2276.)

On the 13th of July 1950 Representative ANDREW JACOBS, of Indiana, had this to say about a Pearson article:

The statement was made out of the whole cloth. Now I could call him a liar, but I always believe in being a little more original than that. * * *

If we are nothing else in Indiana, we are generally pretty good sports. But that would be something that Mr. Pearson could not comprehend, being the kind of man he is. * * *

Pearson was a dishonorable man for attempting to assassinate his friend. * * * He being a poor sport himself—he just figured that everybody else would be a poor sport. * * *

That, Mr. Speaker, about demonstrates how much confidence you can put in this fellow Pearson. * * * It is impossible to know whether he is stupid or false, or both. I will bet it is both. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, July 13, 1950, pp. 10112–10116.)

As the Senate knows, one of the prime targets of this man Pearson has always been the head of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Any man who attempts to dig out the unnamed Communists comes in for Pearson's smear. Representative WOOD, of Georgia, being chairman of that committee, comes in for the usual treatment.

On the 15th of June 1950, Representative JOHN S. WOOD, of Georgia, made the following statement:

Ignoring the unsupported conclusions spawned in the distorted mind of this scandalmonger, Drew Pearson, as set forth in his column, I desire to make specific reply to his direct statements and insinuations. * * * He uttered a malicious lie. * * * His unsupported statement * * * is a wicked and malicious lie * * * a wicked and gratuitous lie. * * * It ought not to be in the public interest that men in public office should be forced to suffer the slanders and falsehoods of one whose stock in trade consists of a wicked heart, a lying tongue, and a poisonous pen. And so * * * I have deemed it to be my duty to * * * condemn this dirty slander peddled by this arch liar and character assassin. * * *

This rogue * * * has built his name upon the wreckage of the reputations of others that he has wrought. * * * He has been slandering people, high and low, great and small, for years. This is his profession—and he has been condemned by millions of people upon whom he has unjustifiably inflicted injury. * * *

The chief legman and stooge of Drew Pearson today is one David Karr, a former member of the staff of the Daily Worker, of New York, the official publication of the Communist Party in America. * * *

Drew Pearson has consistently misrepresented, slandered, and abused every person—man or woman—who, because of love of country and constitutional liberty, have raised their voices against the spread of alien ideologies and against those who would overthrow our form of government. He has been the most effective weapon that the Stalinists have been able to use in America for the undermining of our whole constitutional system. To him there is nothing under the heavens that is sacred. He befouls and means to befoul everything he touches. He occupies the unique and unenviable position today of standing alone at the very pinnacle of all the slanderers and scandalmongers in all of America today. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, June 15, 1950, pp. 8653–8655.)

On September 23, 1950, Senator WILLIAM E. JENNER, of Indiana, had the following to say:

I have just had the honor and distinction of being attacked by America's No. 1 keyhole-peeping, muckraking, character-assassinating, propaganda-peddling prostitute of the Nation's press and radio—"P. U. Fearsome" * * *.

Mr. Drew Pearson is not an s. o. b. He is only his own filthy brain child, conceived in ruthlessness and dedicated to the proposition that Judas Iscariot was a piker. * * * There is money in this business in 1950 A. D. * * * for, as I intend to prove, this Drew Pearson is a self-appointed, self-made, cross t'd, dotted i'd, double-documented, super-superlative, revolving s. o. b. * * *

I cannot comprehend why such propaganda-peddling prostitutes as Drew Pearson, who make their living by feeding on the festering wounds of the characters they have stabbed in the back, continue to be supported by so many. * * * Never have I seen any person stoop to such depths of journalistic degradation and character assassination. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, September 23, 1950, p. 15673.)

On September 14, 1950, Congressman CHRISTIAN A. HERTER, of Massachusetts, made the following statement:

This entire article is a complete distortion of the facts. * * * Drew Pearson was fully aware of the true facts. (Appendix to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, pp. A6525–A6526.)

On May 19, 1950, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] made the following statement:

Mr. Pearson abuses the freedom of the press for political blackmail. * * * It would be impossible for any Senator to attempt to add to Mr. Pearson's stature as the prince of liars. * * * He has been charged * * * again and again of being the creature who long ago wrested away the laurels of Ananias and placed them proudly on his own brow. * * * The Prince of Peace * * * looked down through 2,000 years, and in the eighth chapter of John, the 44th verse, described Pearson when he said: "There is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it." (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 19, 1950, p. 7306.)

I could go on almost indefinitely citing Senators, Representatives, and other well-known, well-respected men, who have labeled Pearson as a deliberate liar. However, I believe the cross-section of Democrats and Republicans just quoted should give to the country a fairly good picture of the extent to which Pearson can be believed.

I call attention again to the statement by former Representative Jones, of Ohio, now Federal Communications Commissioner, to the effect that the Washington press had voted Pearson as the most unreliable commentator. That really is going a long way.

I would like to also quote briefly from the answer filed by King Features and Westbrook Pegler in the Supreme Court of the State of New York in the case of Pearson against King Features Syndicate, Inc., and Westbrook Pegler. This gives a rather good documentation of the deliberate lying of Pearson.

The said plaintiff (Pearson) formed the design of destroying the late Hon. James Forrestal, United States Secretary of Defense. The aforesaid James Forrestal was an honorable, industrious, high-minded servant of the public, of extraordinary ability, whose services were rendered in vast excess of full measure, without hope of personal regard or for any other motive than patriotism. The said plaintiff (Pearson) schemed the destruction and discrediting of the said James Forrestal by the continuous broadcast and publication of a stream of vicious, false, scurrilous lies, concocted from the venom and pathological virulence of plaintiff's (Pearson's) putrid imaginings or pretended imaginings.

* * * * *

On the 16th day of January 1949, said plaintiff (Pearson) broadcast in the same manner, as hereinabove alleged as follows:

"The White House: Well, President Truman was about to accept the resignation of Secretary Forrestal, when last Sunday he heard Walter Winchell's broadcast about Forrestal's income-tax finagling in the 1930's. Whereupon, Truman sent for a transcript of the Winchell broadcast and literally hit the ceiling. 'I'm not going to let that little so and so,' he stormed, 'tell me who I'm going to keep in my Cabinet.'"

And a day later, he told Forrestal he could stay on, at least for the time being.

"However, the most important aspect of this incident is not so much Forrestal's income tax, though as I reported last year, it is a matter of record that Forrestal did escape paying $95,000 income tax by a subterfuge company in Canada. But much more significant is the fact that Mr. Truman should let important decisions of state be made or reversed by a radio commentator, no matter who he is. It's probably going to make some of us think twice about criticizing inefficient public officials for fear Mr. Truman will then decide to continue them in office.

"For my part, I personally think Mr. Forrestal is a very nice and charming gentleman, but I agree with Walter Winchell that a man who avoids taxes by concealing his money in a foreign country cannot command the respect of boys who are drafted into the Army."

This is what I call attention to particularly. Here we have the typical Pearson type of attack.

"And I would go further and state that a man who runs out the back door of his house into the alley, leaving his wife to cope with a jewel robbery alone, would not appear to have the courage or chivalry to be the best Secretary of National Defense."

In truth and in fact the subject matter of the aforesaid broadcast did not originate from the White House as said plaintiff (Pearson) falsely sought to have his audience believe, but originated from the same diseased mentality as hereinabove alleged. The incidents related in said broadcast were wholly false to plaintiff's (Pearson's) knowledge. It was not a fact that the late Secretary Forrestal ever defrauded, or attempted to defraud, the United States of any income taxes owing by the said Forrestal as said plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew. The pretense of said plaintiff (Pearson), that he had been admonished for criticism, was likewise a complete fake, inasmuch as the criticism of plaintiff (Pearson) on this and all other occasions was not based on criticism but on deliberate contemptible lying. It is not a fact that Mr. Forrestal ran out the back door of his house into an alley leaving his wife to cope with a jewel robbery alone. The wife of the late Mr. Forrestal was robbed of jewelry on a public street of the city of New York. Mr. Forrestal was asleep on an upper floor of his home and was completely unaware of any such occurrence. Mrs. Forrestal, on that occasion, was accompanied by other persons. There was, and is, no alley adjacent to any back door of the house then occupied by the late Mr. Forrestal. The robbers in the above incident were duly arrested and convicted after a public trial. The facts thereof were fully known to said plaintiff (Pearson) and his statement about the robbery far from being a comment and criticism was a thoroughly vicious, unprincipled, contemptible act of lying and fakery, impossible of accomplishment by anyone but a blackguard.

With respect to the charges of cowardice leveled by said plaintiff (Pearson) against the late James Forrestal, defendants allege that Mr. Forrestal wore the uniform of his country in World War I and served in the United States Navy and performed all such duties as were assigned to him to the complete satisfaction of his fellow citizens. In World War II the said James Forrestal served as Secretary of the Navy and for the purpose of better discharging the functions of said office visited actual combat areas under fire, and subjected himself in excess of anything required by his duties to the same risk of enemy action as was required of noncommissioned soldiers, sailors, and marines. A deliberate lie of the same sort concocted by the said plaintiff (Pearson) was uttered by him a few days before the Presidential election of 1944. On that occasion the said plaintiff (Pearson) stated that Thomas E. Dewey, Governor of New York, had obtained an agricultural deferment from the draft with the implication that since Governor Dewey was well known not to be seriously engaged in farming the Governor of New York was probably a coward and a slacker. The aforesaid statement was a characteristic lie of said plaintiff (Pearson), uttered on the eve of an election in which Governor Dewey was a candidate, at such a time that Governor Dewey had no adequate opportunity to circulate an answer thereto. In connection therewith one or more of the newspaper clients of said plaintiff (Pearson) forced said plaintiff (Pearson) to admit, as was the fact, that his publication was a fake and a lie, and that he had not even sought to obtain information from Governor Dewey about his draft status. The said plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew that governors of States were wholly exempt from being drafted, whether engaged in farming or not, and the blackguard lie of said plaintiff (Pearson) was a part of a deliberate scheme to deprive Governor Dewey of votes in the Presidential election, which he otherwise might have received.

As contrasted with the war records and alleged cowardice as charged by said plaintiff (Pearson) of Messrs. Forrestal and Dewey, the war record of said plaintiff (Pearson) is as follows:

On October 29, 1918, the said plaintiff (Pearson) was a student at Swarthmore College, a Quaker institution of higher learning. At that time the said plaintiff (Pearson) lacked some 45 days of being 21 years of age. The said plaintiff (Pearson) had theretofore registered for the draft, in accordance with the provisions of law, and was in every way completely sound of body and fully qualified physically for induction into the combat or any other branch of the United States Army. On October 29, 1918, said plaintiff (Pearson) caused himself to be inducted into the Students Army Training Corps in which he served for 44 days and from which he was discharged on December 12, 1918, at a time when he was 21 years of age. The said plaintiff (Pearson) continued his college status during the aforesaid brief period and his services consisted of drilling 1 hour a day and his remuneration consisted of the usual pay of a private in the United States Army; board, room, tuition, clothing, and Government insurance. Subsequent to the aforesaid so-called military service the said plaintiff (Pearson) at no time pretended to have been a veteran of World War I until the elapse of approximately 20 years, at which time, and thereafter, he furnished to a reference work entitled "Who's Who in America" a claim that in 1918 he was in the United States Army. The mother-in-law of said plaintiff (Pearson), as stated by said defendants, publicly stated that said plaintiff (Pearson) had thee'd and thou'd his way out of World War I—to which defendants' publications related, although in one or more newspapers a misprint of World War II may have occurred—without objection or counterstatement by said plaintiff (Pearson). Likewise in the Congress of the United States the said plaintiff's alleged war record was ridiculed and derided by Senator MILLARD A. TYDINGS, of Maryland, without comment or rejoinder by said plaintiff (Pearson), and statements that said plaintiff (Pearson) was a yellow-bellied slacker were duly inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD without objection. As compared to Messrs. Forrestal and Dewey, whom he accused of cowardice and in the latter case slackerism as well, the war record of said plaintiff was as stated by defendants.

* * * * *

In connection with defendants' allegations that said plaintiff (Pearson) is a habitual, incorrigible, professional liar, as distinguished from an occasional or accidental liar, defendants allege that said plaintiff (Pearson) was publicly designated a chronic liar by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, as was the fact. With respect to the veracity of said plaintiff, Hon. Harry S. Truman, President of the United States, stated on the 11th day of March 1948, and stated truthfully:

"I had thought I wouldn't have to add another liar's star to that fellow's crown, but I will have to do it. That is just a lie out of the whole cloth. That is as emphatic as I can put it."

* * * * *

The said plaintiff published and broadcast, prior to the Presidential election of 1948, that one Walter Reuther would be a candidate for Vice President on the same ticket with Senator ROBERT A. TAFT. The aforesaid statement was a deliberate fake and lie, as said plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew, and brought forth the statement from said Reuther that said plaintiff (Pearson) was not only a chronic liar but a fool, and that statement of said Reuther was fair and just under the circumstances. The blackguardly purpose of said plaintiff (Pearson) was unjustly to cause the labor union followers of Reuther to believe that said Reuther had deserted their interests and had espoused the cause of Senator TAFT, which said followers for the most part regarded as inimical to organized labor.

* * * * *

The said plaintiff (Pearson) uttered and published a fake lying broadcast to the effect that General MacArthur, at some time before the recent war, had gotten rid of General Eisenhower, who at one time was one of his subordinates in the Philippines. The statement was a fake and a lie, as plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew, inasmuch as General MacArthur had sought and retained the services of General Eisenhower for a period additional to his original tour of duty, and always spoke of him in terms of the highest esteem.

Among the loftier flights of mendacity attained by said plaintiff (Pearson) was a broadcast by him to the effect that Senator MCKELLAR had drawn a knife against a fellow Senator on the floor of the United States Senate, and had been disarmed. No such incident ever occurred; plaintiff (Pearson) knew it had never occurred; his statement was a fake and a lie.

The said plaintiff broadcast during the recent war that if the One Hundred and Sixth Infantry Division had held out a few hours longer the Battle of the Bulge disaster would have been largely averted. The said statement was a fake and a lie, as plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well know. The One Hundred and Sixth Infantry Division held out not for hours but for days and sustained casualties of more than 50 percent. Its heroic efforts beyond the call of duty prevented a far more serious disaster than in fact occurred.

In connection with the medicine show broadcasts of said plaintiff (Pearson), to his knowledge and with his consent and assistance, there were broadcast statements that a patent medicine, peddled on said broadcast was a cure for constipation. The said claim was a fake and a lie, as plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew, and the broadcasters were ordered by the Federal Trade Commission to cease and desist from such false representations on or about January 23, 1945.

The said plaintiff (Pearson) broadcast during the recent war that Russian oil was being sent, or was about to be sent, to the United States for storage in worn-out wells in Pennsylvania, which said plaintiff (Pearson) at that time, unless suffering from acute lunacy, must have known was a nonsensical lying fake.

On or about February 13, 1946, the said plaintiff (Pearson) broadcast that Hon. James A. Farley had virtually forced Cardinal Spellman to take said Farley with him to visit the Vatican. The said publication was a fake and a lie and was retracted as such on March 12, 1946.

The said plaintiff (Pearson) published in 1945 a statement that British policies in Greece were motivated by the fact that the Hambros Bank of London, which was interested in the Greek situation and was the chief British creditor of Greece, had bailed Winston Churchill out of bankruptcy in 1912. The statement was a fake and a lie, as plaintiff (Pearson) then and there well knew, and the republication thereof by innocent reputable publishers caused them in the British courts to pay the sum of $25,200, and tender an abject apology and retraction.

* * * * *

The said plaintiff (Pearson) in the course of the recent war broadcast that General Patton would never again be permitted to command troops at a time prior to all the greatest victories won by General Patton and his armies on behalf of the United States. At the time of said publication said plaintiff (Pearson) knew that he had no sources of information whatever as to the future status of General Patton, and his reckless unfounded statement was a fake and a lie.

* * * * *

The broadcast of said plaintiff (Pearson) has consisted for a long time of cheap gossip, partisan propaganda, sneaking innuendo, and malicious, baseless accusations. When such material consisted of other than outright lies and fabrications, it consisted of half-truths and was broadcast in such a manner and with such expression as to convey damaging imputations against those to whom for any reason said plaintiff (Pearson) had conceived malice. Such malice, on numerous occasions, was incurred by persons who declined to furnish said plaintiff (Pearson) with sensational revelations and by those who were frank in the expression of their opinion that said plaintiff was a worthless dishonest scoundrel.

* * * * *

Not trusting my memory or even my old notes, when Pearson charged Forrestal with deserting his wife in the hands of gunmen, I called on Herman Stichman, the chairman of the New York State Housing Authority, who had handled the prosecution in November 1940. Mr. Stichman said there was absolutely no excuse to impugn Forrestal's conduct because he was asleep inside the house at 27 Beekman Place, when the stickup took place on the street outside at about 2 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Forrestal had spent the evening at the Persian Room at the Hotel Plaza with several friends. About 1:45 she and her escort, Richard B. W. Hall, got into Mr. Hall's car, driven by his chauffeur, and drove to Beekman Place. When they pulled up at the curb, Mrs. Forrestal said, "Instead of the chauffeur opening the door, a man jumped in the car in the back with us. He said, 'This is no joke; it's a stickup.' I told him it was a silly way to make a living. He had a gun. The gun was pushed up at Mr. Hall. There was another man with the chauffeur. At one point there were two men in the back of the car. Both had guns."

After they got Mrs. Forrestal's jewelry, valued at more than $100,000, the men ran to a car that was parked just ahead, leaped in and got away. Mrs. Forrestal saw four men altogether. When they had left, she rushed into the house, notified her husband, and called the police.

Mrs. Forrestal had been "fingered" by a woman named Dorothy Stirrat, alias Dolly Turner, a criminal known as "The Lady Finger." With her own escort, a member of the gang, "The Lady Finger," left the Plaza when Mrs. Forrestal and Hall left, followed the Hall car in her car, pointed it out to the gunmen who were waiting in another car close by, and wished them luck as they took out after the quarry. The stickup was so quiet that, far from awakening Jim Forrestal, it escaped the notice of a special watchman for the block who, for the moment, chanced to be conversing with a taxi man out of sight around the corner.

"The Lady Finger" got 10 to 20 years; Lomars, 10 to 20 years, and Joseph Weiss, alias Morris Seitchick, 30 to 60 years. Lomars held a union meeting and passed a resolution appropriating $5,000 for his defense on the ground that he was a labor spokesman and a victim of a Wall Street plot.

The Forrestal house is on the east side of Beekman Place. There is no alley through or behind the block through which Forrestal could have fled if he had been the coward that Pearson said he was.

Only a man as diabolically clever as Pearson could continue to maintain his huge reading and listening audience after being so completely and thoroughly labeled an unprincipled liar and a fake.

It is impossible for me to understand how so many reputable newspapermen can buy the writings of this twisted, perverted mentality which so cleverly sugar-coats and disguises his fiendishly clever, long-range attempts to discredit and destroy in the minds of the American people all of the institutions which make up the very heart of this Republic.

It is difficult beyond words to understand how reputable publishers and editors with such a deep obligation to their readers allow the streams of information to be polluted and poisoned by a man so thoroughly labeled and known to be a prostitute of the great profession of journalism.

So much for Pearson's disregard for truth and honesty and decency. Let us proceed briefly on to the even more dangerous part of this picture.

The heads of any of our intelligence agencies will testify that one of the principal aims of the Communist Party is to gain control of our lines of communication; that is, newspapers, radio, television, motion pictures, and so forth. It, of course, would be a miracle if they had not recognized in Pearson the ideal man for them—an unprincipled, greedy degenerate liar—but with a tremendous audience both in newspapers and on the air waves * * * a man who has been able to sugar-coat his wares so well that he has been able to fool vast numbers of people with his fake piety and his false loyalty.

Pearson has long had working for him—part of the time officially on his payroll, and part of the time in a slightly different status—one David Karr. The relationship is such that it is difficult to know who is the master and who is the servant. I may say that just what his status is is difficult to know, except that they are still working together today. I will give the Senate a complete picture of Karr's function in a minute.

To give you a picture of this man David Karr, let me quote Martin Dies, head of the Un-American Activities Committee, on page 512 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for February 1, 1943.

This link between Pearson and Karr is the important link:

Here is the case of David Karr who is assistant chief of the foreign-language division of the Office of War Information at a salary of $4,600. That was Lattimore's division. For 2 years, Karr was on the staff of the Communist Party's official newspaper, the Daily Worker. There is not the slightest doubt that all members of the Daily Worker staff were required to be members of the Communist Party. Karr was a writer for the Communist-front publication, Equality, whose editorial council was composed largely of well-known Communists and Communist fellow travelers.

David Karr was also public-relations director of the American League for Peace and Democracy, one of the Communist fronts which Attorney General Biddle branded as subversive. Karr was a frequent writer for the league's magazine, Fight.

I also quote from a statement made by Congressman DONDERO on the floor of the House, page 9702 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of October 10, 1945.

The ink was hardly dry on the Japanese surrender when a barrage of vilification and slander was launched against General MacArthur, led by the Communist Daily Worker, PM, and Drew Pearson, who is the voice of David Karr, formerly with the Daily Worker. For more complete information on this subject, I refer you to the story in the Washington Daily News of October 8, 1945. Even Dean Acheson, our own Acting Secretary of State, participated in that hue and cry, and it was echoed in London by Soviet Commissar Molotov. It has reached a climax in the Russian proposal to hamstring MacArthur with a four-power control board, the fruition of a well-synchronized and thought-out plan to sacrifice American interests to those of the Soviet Union.

Incidentally, while under questioning by Dr. Matthews before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Karr admitted under oath that he knew the American League for Peace and Democracy, whose publicity he was handling, was a Communist-controlled organization. Some of the testimony is set forth on page A876 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for February 18, 1944.

I have discussed this man Pearson with practically every former member of the Communist Party whom I have met during my recent and present investigation of Communists in Government. Almost to a man, they were agreed on a number of things: No. 1: That Pearson's all-important job, which he did for the party without fail, under the directions of David Karr, was to lead the character assassination of any man who was a threat to international communism. No. 2: That he did that job so well that he was the most valuable of all radio commentators and writers from the standpoint of the Communist Party. No. 3: In order to maintain his value, it was necessary that he occasionally throw pebbles at communism and Communists generally, so as to have a false reputation of being anti-Communist.

It appears that Pearson never actually signed up as a member of the Communist Party and never paid dues. However, that has not in any way affected his value to the party; nor has it affected his willingness to follow the orders of David Karr, who, of course, is a most active member of the party, and who carries instructions and orders to Pearson.

I ask those who are skeptical as to whether Pearson actually has been doing a job for the Communist Party to stop and review Pearson's record over the past 10 years. You will find that he has always gone all-out to attack anyone who is attempting to expose individual and dangerous Communists, while at the same time he goes through the fakery of criticizing communism and Communists generally. The heads of the House Un-American Activities Committee have always been his targets.

You will find also that he has always consistently and without fail launched a campaign of personal smear and vilification against any man in public life who has stood against any plan of socialization in this country, no matter how good or how bad the plan might be.

One of Pearson's extremely important tasks, assigned him by the Communist Party, through David Karr, was the destruction in the eyes of the American people of Chiang Kai-shek. That was one of his No. 1 jobs. There is, of course, no secret about the fact that one of the major aims of international communism was to create a Red China. As Lenin said:

He who controls China, controls the world.

It has never been a secret that Communist imperialistic Russia has always realized that the first step toward the creation of a Communist world was the creation of a Red China, then the creation of an entire Red Asia, and then the creation of a Red Pacific which would wash our western shores. But before the Communists could take over China, the American people had to be fooled into believing that the man who controlled the anti-Communist forces in China was corrupt and wicked to the extent that he should not receive our aid, and that the Russian-directed Chinese Communists were fine people, agrarian reformers, interested only in the welfare of China.

Pearson was assigned the job of leading the cabal of left-wing mocking birds in the destruction of Chiang Kai-shek. He did the job well.

His next major task was to destroy James Forrestal. Forrestal, as we recall, was the originator of the Truman doctrine for Greece and Turkey. It was the direct opposite of the Acheson-Marshall plan for Europe. The Forrestal plan, which Truman adopted, was to provide the necessary sinews of war to Greece and Turkey, so that they could withstand the pressure of imperialistic communism. In Europe, of course, the plan was to give economic aid and fatten the goose, in effect, with but little thought to military aid.

So Forrestal had to be destroyed, or Truman might apply the Forrestal plan to Europe. So again, Pearson was assigned the task—assigned it by the Communist Party, through David Karr. Again Pearson and his cabal did the job well—hounding Forrestal to death. He and the Communist Party murdered James Forrestal in just as cold blood as though they had machine-gunned him.

The next intended victim on the Communist Party list is Gen. Douglas MacArthur. As all of us know Douglas MacArthur is the one man who, above all others, has stood in the way of Communist domination of all of Asia and the islands of the Pacific. So MacArthur must go. MacArthur must be destroyed.

Again Pearson is assigned the job by the Communist Party, through David Karr; and Pearson is setting about that job with the same fervor, the same malice, the same disloyalty to America, the same degeneracy, as he set about the task of destroying Chiang Kai-shek and destroying James Forrestal.

It is up to the American people—and above all, up to the newspaper men who are buying Pearson's column and the radio stations that are carrying his broadcasts—to see that this voice of international communism is stilled.

If the loyal American newspaper editors and publishers and radio station owners refuse to buy this disguised, sugar-coated voice of Russia, the mocking birds who have followed the Pearson line will disappear from the scene like chaff before the wind. The American people can do much to accomplish this result. They can notify their newspapers that they do not want this Moscow-directed character assassin being brought into their homes to poison the well of information at which their children drink. They can notify the Adam Hat Co., by actions, what they think of their sponsoring of this man. It should be remembered that anyone who buys an Adam hat, any store that stocks an Adam hat, anyone who buys from a store that stocks an Adam hat, is unknowingly and innocently contributing at least something to the cause of international communism by keeping this Communist spokesman on the air.

In that connection I should like to quote briefly from the December 12 radio broadcast of Earl Godwin:

> And you know, or do you know, that there is no one so timid about America as the average businessman. He wants to stand up and cheer if someone will be the cheer leader * * * but I've known only one stand out in front and attack Communists since I have been on the air who really would and communism * * * One department store sponsor was induced to let me go by a few letters from silly Georgetown pinkos who declared that as long as I was on the air under that sponsorship, they would never enter the store. In fact, none of them ever had entered it. But I take this opportunity to call attention to the flimsy pretext of patriotism that many timid Americans have today * * *

I say to the 150,000,000 normal people of America, the chips are down. They are truly down. The time has come for action. It is up to the American people, through their actions, to notify the sponsors of the voices of communism that have been polluting the airwaves and the newspapers, that they, the American people, are through paying for the soapboxes for those who preach the Communist Party line. I know there will be a great scream that I am trying to impair the freedom of the press, the freedom of these men to speak. I say let them speak where and when they will, but the American people do not have to buy the soap boxes from which they speak. If the American people take action and refuse to continue paying for the Pearson cabal, the Communist Party in the United States will have suffered a death blow.

Some of my colleagues in the Senate and the House who have been working with me on this matter may wonder why I have not touched upon one other important phase of this case. I want to assure them that it is not being neglected; and when all of the details of the documentation are completed, it will be presented to the Senate in detail.

Mr. President, I assume that Mr. Pearson will complain because this documentation is presented under congressional immunity. I think we can take care of that for him all right. If Mr. Pearson wants to waive his own special, self-created kind of immunity—for as Senators know, most of his property has been conveyed away to his wife, I assume, so that it is not subject to judgments for libel or slander—and will take legal action to provide that the property which he has been conveying out of his own name will at all times be subject to judgments for libel and slander, I shall be glad to repeat this, if he will submit the request in writing—and will tell me where and when he wants this repeated off the floor of the Senate.

ORDER FOR RECESS TO MONDAY

During the delivery of Mr. McCARTHY's address,

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCLELLAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield for a question.

Mr. HOLLAND. No, I do not wish to ask a question. I desire to propound a unanimous-consent request. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Wisconsin may yield to me for that purpose without losing the floor. The request has been agreed to by the minority leader and the acting majority leader.

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, because of the fact that a party conference is due to be under way shortly, and also because several Senators desire to be elsewhere, I ask unanimous consent that upon the completion of the remarks of the Senator who has the floor, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. McCARTHY], the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I shall be obliged to object to the request in that form.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, I ask that the Senator amend the request to include the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HENDRICKSON]; so that after I shall have concluded my address and the Senator from New Jersey shall have concluded his address, the Senate then take a recess as suggested.

Mr. HOLLAND. I am very happy to amend the request accordingly.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I wish to inform the Senator from Florida that included in the unanimous-consent agreement entered into earlier today was the privilege for me to make an address.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I have so amended the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands. The Chair understands that the Senator from Florida has amended his request accordingly.

Mr. HOLLAND. I amend my request at the suggestion of the two Senators so as to include the remarks of the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none; and it is so ordered.

CONFIDENCE IN CRISES

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a speech which I have prepared, entitled "Confidence in Crises."

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONFIDENCE IN CRISES

On VJ-day we had great dreams of a long period of pease. We were instrumental in creating the peace machinery which took the form of the United Nations Organization, in the hope that it might put an end to war in the reasonable future It is now evident after only five short years that our dream house was built on quicksand, for the dream was turned suddenly into the nightmare of Korea. This so-called police action by the UN, despite our refusal to face the fact, is actually an undeclared war, for the hard truth is that it has already cost the United States in casualties more than the Revolutionary War; more than the War of 1812; more than the Mexican War; and more than the Spanish-American War. Where the end may be, we cannot foretell.

As our dream of peace has turned into a rude awakening to war, we have discovered that expensive as war has always been, it can become even more costly. The cost of military preparedness and military measures has been inflated, along with the cost of living. One of the reasons for this increase is apparent when we consider that we are now spending approximately 75 cents of every Federal tax dollar in paying the cost of past wars or preparing for the next one.

Our situation in Korea is certainly critical—how critical we do not yet know. It is impossible at this time to say whether our efforts to keep the fighting localized there will be successful, or whether it will spread into all-out war with China and possibly even into a general, all-out world war. If this is the beginning of the world war III we have all been fearing, our opponent has chosen wisely, for both the time and place could hardly have been selected with greater advantage to him or greater disadvantage to us. The military defeats he has inflicted are the most humiliating in our history.

But humiliating as is our defeat and fearful as is the length of our casualty list, here in the Senate today a primary problem is the even more fearful loss of confidence by the American people in their leadership. The cause of this loss of confidence is not easy to determine. In checking your mail and in following the papers and radio, you will find, as I have found, that some place the blame on the failure or bad judgment of our leadership in the field. Others lay the blame at the door of our leaders here at home.

Regardless of where the fault may lie, the fact remains that confidence in American leadership has, at a most critical time, suffered greatly. The seriousness of this loss cannot be overestimated. It can have disastrous aftereffects unless it is restored and restored quickly. There are many suggestions as to how it may be restored. Some extreme voices suggest the use of the atom bomb, either on the enemy in Korea; on the people in Manchuria and China proper; or on the Kremlin itself. Senators, I know, will agree that this is not the answer. We were shocked recently to learn that the use of the atom bomb alone will not be necessarily decisive. As a matter of fact, we are told by our experts that the conventional type of high explosives are more effective on dispersed forces in uneven terrain. In any event it is now clear that we can no longer rely for our security on our atomic secrets—even if we still have any of those secrets left.

There are others who in their horror of war suggest appeasement as the answer. We have come to loathe the term "appeasement" since tasting the fruit of the seeds sown at Munich. Senators will agree, I'm sure, that appeasement is not the answer.

There are still others who hold to the hope that the UN Organization can still prove to be the instrument for solving our dilemma and thus become the medium through which public confidence can be restored.

Here we come nearer to what seems to me to be the answer. The UN Organization has done a great deal of good. It has not proved adequate in security measures because of indiscriminate Russian vetoes but it has given us a degree of cooperation in many important fields, and, properly used, may still divert the newest plunge of the world into war. The difficulty is that preserving, as it does, complete national, sovereign independence of action has not proved sufficiently powerful to prevent Communist China from intervening; neither will it prove adequate to prevent the intervention of the Soviet Union, there or elsewhere.

We have learned the hard way that aggressor nations may be restrained only by the greater strength of free people. This was clearly demonstrated when the United States joined other free people in fighting the forces of aggression to win World War I. A like result was achieved when the free people of the world joined together earlier in the conflict to win the even greater struggle in World War II. The strength of free people can still avert world war III, or at least win it if it does start.

Mr. President, our present perilous situation has one basic cause—one which has not been given adequate attention. It is clearly there for us all to see, though apparently too few of us have seen it except in shadowy outline.

The Communists have, for all practical purposes, unified the foreign policy and the military policy of the entire Communist world, except for the defection of Tito. It is true that this unity has been brought about by methods we cannot emulate. It is true that it results from the establishment of totalitarian control by a small clique in the Kremlin, through the mechanism of an international Communist movement which unerringly follows the policy line laid down in Moscow. But the fact is that this unity exists, and, as far as foreign and military policy are concerned, it permits the Kremlin to dispose of the manpower and resources of a third of the world.

We have seen the consequences of this enforced unity. The Kremlin pushed the button and the Chinese marched. Tens of thousands of Chinese soldiers have died in Korea to serve the ends of the Russian dictators. The Kremlin has the capability now, of stopping this war and of unleashing new wars at a dozen other points in Asia and Europe.

As unity creates strength, disunity preserves weakness. The democracies possess 80 percent of the industry and most of the resources of the world, but they cannot employ them effectively for their common security because they are disunited.

Our steps toward a unified defense cannot be classified by even the most optimistic as more than partial. Progress toward that end is exceedingly slow. Steps toward a unified foreign policy are yet to be taken. The democracies continue to blunder along and nullify their potential collective strength by seeking to synchronize 12 separate foreign policies by the inadequate methods of diplomacy.

We can certainly increase our collective strength by collective rearmament. But we cannot create a collective situation of strength which will deter further Communist aggression unless we can create, by agreement, a unity of foreign policy and defense comparable to that which the Communists have already created.

Mr. President, I have a suggestion to make. It is not new. For nearly 2 years many of us in Congress, both Democrats and Republicans, have urged the President, the State Department, and the Congress to begin an exploration of the benefits of democratic union in the Atlantic community.

Those of us who support the principle of federation anticipated the day when circumstances would require a unity of purpose and concert of action by the world's free people. Our pleas fell on deaf ears. Our pleas fell on deaf ears not only in the Executive Department, but in Congress as well. Now we find ourselves confronted with an immensely more critical situation than we faced then.

The American people yearn and cry out for a strong policy and for strong leadership in following that policy. It is high time their yearning is satisfied and their cries are heeded.

Recent events in Korea serve to accentuate the urgent necessity for careful consideration of extending without further delay the American principle of federation to all people who practice our free way of life.

While it is true that we could not foresee Korea as the locale of attack, we felt an attack would occur somewhere, sometime, unless the free people were so strong that no aggressor would dare move against us.

It would have been far better and far wiser to have worked out our unification in the calm of peacetime. The situation now, however, leaves us no alternative. We must build now with all possible speed toward at least a minimum joinder of our foreign and military policies with those of our democratic allies.

Time is precious, because we cannot afford the loss of the productive skills, the resources, and the manpower of Western Europe; because we dare not risk the possibility of standing alone against the then prodigious power of the enemy in a showdown.

At the risk of becoming repetitious, may I again remind the Senate that it is time which kills us. This was never more true than now.

There are three steps which should be taken and taken at once if we are successfully to meet the challenge confronting us.

Here at home we should have immediate complete mobilization. Our fighting strength must be brought as quickly as possible to its maximum. Economic controls should be applied on everything straight across the board. This should have been done, in my judgment, on the same Sunday when the UN Security Council determined to resist aggression in South Korea.

Then, in concert with other free people, we should convoke a convention to explore and apply where feasible now, the principle of federation of free people, beginning with the sponsors of the Atlantic Pact. Anything less than a solid merger into a permanent partnership of the free will be only a snare and a delusion. The hard facts today deny us the luxury of further delusions. To fail now to move toward such an organic union with other free peoples is to face the future with tools totally inadequate to assure our security. It is to allow by default the continuance of the present trend toward world war III, with all its horrible consequences. I, for one, am not willing to bear this responsibility.

These three steps will restore the confidence of our own people. They will also renew the confidence of other free people throughout the world who look to America for decisive action in meeting the present crisis.

The first two steps will give us our maximum strength in a minimum of time. They will also give renewed confidence and courage to our allies and enable them better to build their own strength. Only by providing a proper example for them to follow can we properly exercise our leadership.

The third step will reassure them as to our permanent dedication to the preservation of freedom. Our past history causes them to doubt the permanence of our willingness to lead the free world. The inexorable march of history forced this unsolicited role upon us. We have no choice but to accept and having accepted, we dare not fail.

ATTAINMENT OF ECONOMY THROUGH TRANSFER OF EMPLOYEES

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, on September 5 last, I introduced for appropriate reference, a resolution which was later specifically designated Senate Resolution 342.

The basic purpose of this resolution was the attainment of economies through a proper transfer of Federal employees, wherever such transfers are possible.

For the purpose of the RECORD, I now ask unanimous consent that the resolution in question be inserted in the body of the RECORD at this point, as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 342) was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) in carrying out the provisions of section 607 (b) of the Federal Employees Pay Act of 1945, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget should so determine the numbers of full-time civilian employees, and the full-time equivalent of part-time employment, on the basis of the relative needs of the various departments, establishments, and agencies of the Government for personnel, that the aggregate number of such civilian employees (including the full-time equivalent of part-time employment) will not exceed the aggregate number of such employees (including the full-time equivalent of part-time employment) on June 30, 1950;

(2) vacancies authorized to be filled in the Department of Defense may be filled by the transfer of personnel from other departments, establishments, and agencies of the Government.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Mr. President, I conceded at the time this resolution was offered that it was far from perfect, but that it certainly was a move forward and in the right direction; and I then expressed the hope, as I express the hope now, that the committee to which this resolution has been referred, namely, the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, will carefully consider the worthy objectives behind this legislation, and that as a result of their studies, the resolution will be perfected to that degree where our great Government, in these perilous times, may be able to save some of its valuable dollars, in terms of millions, without impairing the efficiency of any of our operations and functions.

In this connection I was tremendously impressed with an editorial which appeared in the Tuesday, December 12 issue of the Washington Post, entitled "Essential Trimming."

In this editorial the author convincingly argues that a good many billions of dollars can be saved by eliminating, reducing, or postponing contemplated outlays without inflicting undue hardship on the civilian population.

Again for the record, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the copy of this editorial be incorporated in the body of the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ESSENTIAL TRIMMING

Elmer B. Staats, assistant director of the Federal Budget Bureau, recently forecast that the Presidential budget message will recommend elimination of all Federal grants to housing authorities for any purpose except the purchase of sites. Half of the $150,000,000 appropriated for hospital construction, he said, has been placed in reserve and will not be available. These cutbacks are necessary not only because the Federal Government is faced with huge military expenditures but also because the construction of new housing and hospitals increases demands for scarce materials and labor. Since our productive resources are limited, the needs of national defense are a compelling reason for deferring work on slum clearance and nonessential housing projects.

For the same reason drastic reductions in public works expenditures are essential. To be sure, primary highways are as essential to national security as steel mills, but many road projects contribute nothing to national defense. That is also true of many reclamation and electrification projects that help to swell the Government's budgeted expenses.

Substantial cuts can be made in other spending activities. The cost of CCC price-support operations, for instance, has been greatly reduced owing to the rise of farm prices and actual shortages of many basic farm products. Sharp reductions in the economic foreign-aid program are in order in view of the progress made by ECA countries and the introduction of military aid. Federal educational and relief grants can also be trimmed, since booming business insures full employment and enables State and local governments to extract more revenue from the income stream. Regional shifts of population resulting from expansion of defense industries will relieve school and housing shortages in some places and increase them elsewhere. Federal aid on a selective basis may be the solution of this problem.

As the Committee for Economic Development warns, "many expenditures of the Federal Government that are classified as 'nonmilitary' are essential to the national security; they cannot be reduced and may even have to be expanded. The situation does not call for indiscriminate slashes, in Government or elsewhere." Nevertheless, it is quite evident that a good many billions of dollars can be saved by eliminating, reducing or postponing contemplated outlays without inflicting undue hardship on the civilian population. The sacrifices entailed will be compensated for by a shrinkage of Federal deficits, reduced pressure on prices, and a speedup of defense production that would otherwise be impeded by civilian competition for manpower and strategic materials.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. Of course, I make no claim that the editorial to which reference has just been made in any way directly supports my humble effort to bring an end to excessive political patronage, payroll padding and expediency based upon purely political considerations, but any honest effort to attain the highly important objectives urged in the editorial certainly must recognize the ever-increasing need for an over-all study of Federal payrolls both here in Washington and throughout the country to the end that all governmental functions and the employees required to efficiently and effectively administer those functions, may be put in balance.

Senate Resolution 342 was designed specifically to initiate such a movement, and here and now, Mr. President, I appeal to the chairman and the members of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee to use Senate Resolution 342 or some counterpart thereof to enable us to determine just how far safety will permit us to effect those economies which can be invoked in this field.

Certainly we must find a way to check flagrant abuses of gross overstaffing as they have been reported in the Coast Guard, the field services, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and other Departments and divisions of Government, even if it means charges and dismissals of those who are directly responsible for that overstaffing.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I am sure the Senator realizes, does he not, that some of the legislation which has been passed in an effort to give us a sound civil-service system has made it very difficult to reduce the number of unnecessary persons on the payroll. For example, if we were to go into a department and find an employee occupying a desk where very little work was being done, we could not merely dismiss that employee and thereby save that much money; for that person, in turn, would insist on his rights, and he would bump somebody out of his job further on down the line. The person who would lose his job would insist on his rights and would exercise his seniority. So it becomes a very complicated process merely to reduce the payroll by one person whose services might be unnecessary, in many cases.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I quite understand the problem. I had the privilege of serving on the Post Office and Civil Service Committee of the Senate, and I know something of the tremendous problems which confront that committee.

Mr. LONG. I join the Senator also in feeling that our first interest should be economy for the Government and the taxpayers, even though in some cases it might work a hardship on an individual employee.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Perhaps this is the cure, Mr. President, but whatever the remedy may be, it is clearly our responsibility to prescribe an appropriate antidote which will give the patient relief.

I fully realize that the task I would assign is extensive—that it will be time-consuming and by the same token, I am mindful that the Eighty-first Congress is fast approaching its sunset, so I shall not urge the impossible. However, I shall most certainly say that this is a matter which should have the immediate attention of the Eighty-second Congress and I here and now serve notice that my voice will not be stilled on this subject until I begin to see positive and effective action in the new Congress.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I gladly yield to the distinguished Senator from Florida.

Mr. HOLLAND. I desire to commend strongly the position taken by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, and I should like to ask him, at some place in his argument, if he has not intended to do so, to dwell upon the point, which it seems to me is highly important, that this is the best time we shall ever have to accomplish needed reductions in personnel.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I, of course, agree with the Senator.

Mr. HOLLAND. There are two reasons for that; first, the fact that we are so critically in need of the funds which are being so used, and we are going to be so heavily pressed in the defense effort; and, second, that we do no injustice to anyone, because we are rapidly reaching the time of an acute manpower shortage, and there is certainly opportunity for gainful employment open to anyone who wants to work. So it seems to me that from both standpoints this is the best time the Nation will ever have, as well as the most necessitous time, for accomplishing the reduction in staff along the lines suggested by the able Senator.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I, of course, agree with the distinguished Senator from Florida, and I shall deal with the subject matter he has just discussed.

I hope that despite the lateness of the hour in the current session, the wheels for that action may be set in motion by the appropriate committee forthwith, even though I say I know it is late.

Mr. President, while ever increasing and excessive Federal payrolls standing alone constitute a serious threat to our National economy, this is not the only field where we can show real sanity by "trimming our sails" to meet the "ill winds" which are ahead for us, as the Senator from Florida has indicated.

The Washington Post editorial points generally to the whole field of nonessential spending and because the members of the Senate of the United States must be familiar with the major functions of Government which fall into this category, I shall avoid cluttering the record with details.

I do want to emphasize, however, that it is the clear duty of the Congress in this critical moment when our whole way of life is swaying in the balance, to save our resources and to save our tax dollars wherever possible by (1) eliminating in some instances and (2) reducing in others and (3) postponing those outlays which can be curtailed without imposing unnecessary burdens and inflicting undue hardships upon the people of a country which is already carrying an unjust share of the burdens of so-called free nations of the world who claim they want to be free.

I now turn back for a moment to the motive which prompted the introduction of Senate Resolution 342 which was, as I have said, primarily to afford savings through curtailment of employment in some instances, reassignment of employees in others, and to bring an end to overstaffing wherever it exists.

To those who would charge that this effort on my part is political in nature and an aim to discredit certain of the executive and administrative branches of Government I would point to parts 1, 2, and 3 of the preliminary report of the House Subcommittee on Overstaffing in the Executive Departments and Agencies, created pursuant to House Resolution 114 of the Eighty-first Congress.

To minimize the printing costs I shall not ask to include these reports in the RECORD, although they deserve a place there; but so that they may be available to any Member of the Senate who is sufficiently interested in this subject, I shall prepare to supply them by mail.

However, because these careful studies so thoroughly support the ultimate objectives of Senate Resolution 342, I think it appropriate that we have a few quotations in the RECORD at this point.

In part I of the preliminary report, which had to do primarily with the Federal Security Agency, we find under the caption "Relationships," on page 12, the following observations:

In pursuing the relationships between fiscal management and the housekeeping functions down through the various levels of agency organization, an effort was made to determine the extent of monetary control over organization, personnel classification, procurement, travel, duplicating, automotive transportation, and other service functions, insofar as overstaffing is concerned. The picture is one of frustration. In theory, fiscal management has authority to review and make recommendations on any changes in organization, function, or personnel actions. Actually, this authority is on paper only due to the domination of the program operators over administrative officers throughout the agency. The fiscal officers, in most cases, know where the "fat" exists in both the administrative and program offices. They are, however, helpless to do anything about it as long as the program executives control appropriations.

Then, again, under the caption "General conditions," on page 13, we note the following:

There are 14 separate and distinct program appropriations made to the divisions in the Bureau of State Services from which money for administration is donated to the office of the bureau chief by his operating divisions. In such a complex arrangement, is it any wonder that a high percentage of budget and accounting personnel is required?

One interesting observation in part I of the report, which does not deal with payrolls, is that captioned "Procurement," from which I quote:

The data presented in table VI, average number of employees and relative cost of purchasing operations during fiscal year 1949, illustrate the extent of overstaffing in the procurement process in the Agency. It will be noted that of 121,014 purchase orders issued in fiscal 1949, half—50 percent—of them were for amounts of less than $20. Yet the average cost of issuing each order amounted to $5. In the Food and Drug Administration and the Office of Education, the proportion of orders under $20 was more than 60 percent and the average cost of issuing each order was in excess of $10. It cost the Office of Education $10,293 to spend $31,148 for an overhead of 33 percent. It should also be noted that the average work load for each of the 197 persons engaged in processing procurement orders was less than 3 per day—2.4—and half of them were for items costing less than $20.

But back to the subject of overstaffing, on pages 20 and 21, under the caption "Areas of unsatisfactory staffing," we note the following comments:

In evaluating the quality of administration in the Federal Security Agency, there are three organizational units which require careful scrutiny. They appear to be examples of gross overstaffing. They are (1) the Office of Education, (2) the Division of Management Planning and Services in the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, in Baltimore, and (3) the field-service units throughout the Agency.

1. The Office of Education numbers 355 employees. Of that number, 155 are in positions above grade GS–11. There are 102 secretarial employees representing 28.7 percent of the total work force in the office. The Division of Central and Auxiliary Services in this office numbers 98 employees.

2. Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Social Security Administration headquarters in Baltimore, Md.: The Division of Management Planning and Services in this headquarters has a personnel complement of 240 employees assigned in branches as follows:

Office of the Chief	3
Fiscal Management Branch	71
Administrative Management Branch	26
Management Services Branch	140
Total	240

Considering that this unit serves only at the bureau level and in view of the duplication of similar effort at other levels throughout the administration, this unit appears to be unreasonably large. In 1948 the Social Security headquarters office was reduced in conformance with the provisions of the Labor-Federal Security Agency Appropriations Act of 1949. The majority of the headquarters staff was moved from Washington to Baltimore at that time. It is clear that these additional units were not properly realined with the staff already existing at the new location. At any rate, as now constituted, this Division presents a fertile area for reorganization and reduction of employees.

3. Field service offices: One of the most unique characteristics of the Federal Security Agency is the existence of field service offices attached to almost every part of the organization. In fact, there are no less than 30 of these offices dispersed through the various bureaus and divisions, many of them duplicating efforts assigned elsewhere in the Agency. In many instances, their existence does not follow any acceptable organizational pattern. At least some of the key officials interviewed attempt to justify their existence as a vital part of the Agency's public-relations program. Employees in these units were described as the people who make speeches and acquire radio time to promote the Agency's program. Documentary evidence secured in the Agency reveals that some of the field service employees feel that a disproportionate part of their time is spent in public relations. This evidence is reproduced herein as exhibit 3 of the appendix.

Mr. President, I cannot recommend too strongly that the whole of part I of this report be given careful study by all Members of the Senate who either claim to be or are economy-minded.

Mr. President, I turn to part II of the report that it might highlight the record with but a single quotation—a quotation captioned "Conclusions":

The subcommittee finds that a substantial part of the $1,000,000 initially appropriated for the revision of the Consumer Price Index by this division was dissipated through gross overstaffing, inferior planning, untrained supervision, and improvident administration. The subcommittee believes that the supervision prevalent in this division has been inept, poorly qualified, and without the proper concept of the taxpayers' interest in the responsibility it has assumed. The subcommittee concludes that the allegations made by the employees who appeared voluntarily before it are justified and that these employees rendered a distinct public service in bringing these conditions to the attention of the subcommittee.

This clearly indicates that in one division, a division of the Labor Department alone, there is a chance to recapture a substantial part of a million dollars annually. Mr. President, I know that a million dollars is "peanuts" as we spend money today, but like the little drops of water and the little grains of sand, they make a mighty ocean and a mighty land. I cannot forget that a loving and devoted mother once told me that if I would take care of the pennies, the dollars would take care of themselves, and I find that principle to be so true, so dependable. I say if it is true in the family life, Mr. President, it is true in the community life, it is true at State levels of government and, of course, it cannot help but to be true at the national level, for a Nation is only the composite expression of its people.

Only to again stimulate an interest in this study, I quote from part III of the Preliminary Report of the House Subcommittee to Investigate Overstaffing in the Executive Departments and Agencies. With one exception, this survey deals exclusively with the administrative management of the Treasury Department, and that exception is a survey of fiscal accounting in the Government as it points up in the Treasury Department. I will only labor the Senate with one citation from that document, and that falls under a series of suggestions for improvement in the utilization of personnel at page 91. It is entitled "Effect Upon Staffing":

It is estimated that full acceptance of the suggestions outlined above would make it possible for the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department to operate with 1,575 fewer employees. Table 12 shows the present and proposed staffing for the Fiscal Service, Department of the Treasury. In addition, the suggested realinement of functions in the Treasury Department could reduce related activities in other departments and agencies in a corresponding degree.

I am very much impressed, Mr. President, by the careful estimate of the subcommittee that the full acceptance of its suggestions would make it possible for the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department to operate with 1,575 fewer employees.

I want to take this opportunity, Mr. President, to commend the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and its able subcommittee for these preliminary but no less enlightening studies. They should go far to prove to the Congress that there is a sizable waste of manpower in the Federal Government, and we cannot afford to waste manpower at a time when manpower is needed to man our national defenses in both industrial and military functions. Mr. President, I hold that it is our bounden duty in the Senate to supplement these splendid House studies and contribute some of our effort to the enlightenment of the whole Congress through appropriate studies in the Senate. In this connection I want to point out that there should be no overlapping.

We already have, through the Byrd committee and the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, very valuable sources of information, but I do feel that we should consolidate in one committee the job of ascertaining with complete accuracy just where we can cut payrolls and to what extent, just where we can transfer employees from one department to another with resulting advantages to both departments, just where we can dispense entirely with functions which are obsolete and without value to the operations with which they are connected.

Mr. President, it must be crystal clear to the Senate that I am simply urging more serious and concentrated attention to the grave dangers which flow from the lack of a scientific approach to our ever-mounting public payrolls. It is dangerous, not only to the personnel involved but it also adds unduly to the well-nigh back-breaking burdens which will be squarely on our people in the next few months directly as the result of the current world crisis.

Mr. President, within a few days the Senate of the United States will be in the process of debating an extremely controversial new tax bill. No matter what stand we may take individually on that bill when the roll is called, we must all certainly be conscious of the fact that we will be imposing terrific new burdens on the people of America; and whether we call the bill by the name of excess-profits tax or by some other name, the ultimate cost will come from the pocket of Mr. Average Citizen. He is the one who pays and pays and pays always.

In addition to the tax bill, we are going to be called upon, in a matter of hours now, to act upon a staggering new emergency appropriation to supplement our military needs. Here again, no matter how essential this action may be, we will be giving new impetus to the runaway cost of Government which was unleashed some 18 years ago. Mr. President, we must face that fact.

It is only natural that as we confront these costly programs, we cannot help but be forcefully reminded that we are engaged in a tragic and costly war. Moreover, I cannot, as I think of that war and those boys as precious to their families here at home, fail for one minute to remember that those boys expect their Government to meet its obligations here on the home front.

Many of those heroic lads do not know precisely what our domestic obligations are, but you can be sure, Mr. President, that they expect us to know, and, sir, I say we should know or else we should yield our time-honored offices to others who do know and are fully prepared to take the consequences for what they do as they adequately meet all of our domestic obligations. Mr. President, can anyone deny that one of our primary domestic obligations is to keep our economy sound?. Let me say, sir, that a majority of those boys out in the Far East are prepared to answer that question and answer it quickly, and their answer would be emphatically "No."

O, Mr. President, as we undertake to fully meet, with fortitude and courage, all of our sworn obligations to the people of America, and particularly in this dark hour, to those youngsters who are carrying our burdens abroad, we should take stock carefully here at home. If we do this, we cannot fail to review some of the great lessons of history. Mighty nations before us, possessing superb defenses and heroic armies, failed totally and completely because the leaders of those nations, in time of great crisis, either overlooked completely or dared to defy simple economic principles which were as sound then as they are today. They too took calculated risks and with terrific and shattering consequences. So without belaboring the Senate with the many examples which history spells out for us in respect to the problem of sound fiscal controls and simple and sane economies, I shall only sum up with this observation, namely, that in my humble judgment, the Senate has a new call upon it as it treats with appropriations, taxes, and expenditures. It is apparent from history that the Congress has to learn again and again and always the hard way the value of the tax dollar, of which it is the sole custodian.

But on this occasion, Mr. President, in the midst of the horrible blood-letting in Asia, which in the flick of an eye can burst forth into another global war, we must see to it not only that first things come first, but also that first things are put first. So it follows that having acted to put our military defenses in order, we must distinguished clearly between essential and nonessential expenditures and this we must do so effectively that we do not impede in any manner our military and industrial mobilization.

These programs must be on a scale sufficiently strong and sufficiently broad to make aggressor nations in the world look always hereafter to the advantages of negotiating peace before they undertake again to move against America, the patient and long-suffering friend of mankind. So well must we balance our economic, industrial, and military strength that the bully and aggressor of tomorrow will shrink and cringe at the mere thought of moving against a mighty and united Nation which has only peace under well-ordered law as its objective.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator has been talking about economy in government. He has made a very constructive address. However, I have not heard it all. The Senator has also been talking about our mighty united Government. He has been talking about a global war, which might be upon us at any moment. I am wondering if the Senator knows that this afternoon the majority of Republicans in a Republican conference in the House of Representatives voted to ask for the immediate ouster of the Secretary of State, Mr. Acheson.

Mr. HENDRICKSON. I did not know that. I have been busily engaged on the floor all afternoon with the calendar. At the conclusion of the call of the calendar I waited patiently to get my place on the floor. I know only what has happened in this Chamber this afternoon.

